BEEF AND TURKEY.

Comparative Value and Economy of the Two as Food.

Discussing the comparative food value of roast beef and turkey, the Lancet says: First, it may be said that weight for weight the flesh of the turkey is more nourishing than that of beef, but the latter is, generally speaking, cheaper than the former. The amount present in the flesh of the turkey, and the latter contains a better percentage of protein, or flesh forming substance. In either case the percentage of moisture is seldom less than 70 per cent. In beef the amount of fat is much the same as in a not too well fed turkey, but it must be pointed out that the flesh of poultry differs from that of beef in that it is not having its muscular fibers permeated by fat and, moreover, the fibers in the flesh of beef are short and round, while in the disintegrating action of the digestive processes, a large amount of fat in either case is apt to have force with the digestibility of the meat. The fat of beef is more digestible than the fat of the turkey. The fat of birds, in fact, is harder and owing to its tendency to become rancid is unsuitable for the dyspeptic patient.

Perhaps the most important difference, however, from a dietetic point of view between beef and turkey is that whereas beef contains a high percentage of extractive matters, turkey contains hardly any at all. The extractive matters in beef account largely for its peculiar and marked flavor, and owing to their absence in poultry generally, and in the pheasant and partridge the flavor of these meats is delicate. But there is no doubt that the extractives of beef as well as of mutton are valuable, for not only are they flavoring agents, but they also act as perhaps the most powerful stimulants to gastric action.

Soothed to Rest.

The story is told of a man whose wife had arranged an "authors' evening" and persuaded her reluctant husband to remain at home and help her receive the fifty guests who were asked to partake of this intellectual feast.

The first author was dull enough, but the second was still duller. The rooms were intolerably warm, and on pretense of letting in some cool air the unfortunate host escaped to the hall, where he found the footman comfortably asleep on the carved oak settle.

"Wake up!" he said sternly in the man's ear. "Wake up, I say! You must have been listening at the key-hole!"

A Pointed Question.

Nell is a little girl who is allowed to join the diners at her house when there are guests on the stipulation that she shall keep very quiet.

On several occasions the little girl was refused dessert on the ground that "it was not good for her."

Recently, when there was not a few guests at dinner at the house in question, the youngster, having obtained permission to speak, naively asked:

"Mother, will the dessert hurt me, or is there enough to go around?"—Collier's.

A Contest in Gluttony.

"You do occasionally remind us in Table Talk," a correspondent writes, "that civilization does not go very deep in spite of our boasting. I am surprised that you have not noted the case reported from Brentford, where six men competed to see which of them could eat a pound of plum pudding in the shortest time with his hands tied behind him. The winner took four minutes. This was done to amuse 300 people."—London News.

No Deception. "No," said the old gentleman sternly, "I will not do it. Never have I sold anything by false representations, and I will not begin now."

For a moment he was silent, and the clerk who stood before him could see that the better nature of his employer was fighting strongly for the right.

"No," the old man cried again, "I will not do it! It is an inferior grade of shoe, and I will never pass it off as anything better. Mark it. 'A shoe fit for a queen,' and put it in the window. A queen does not have to do much walking."—London Telegraph.

Women With Beards.

Two German doctors have been looking into the question of bearded women, and they have discovered that out of every 1,000 sane females 290 are bearded.

Of these 290 have only a slight down, 40 have a very visible beard and 10 are unmistakably adorned with this fierce appendage. Of 1,000 insane women examined, 481 had slight beards, while 519 had beards well grown.

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

How Hank Sullivan Put a Faro Bank Out of Business.

"I used to hate a quarrelsome man like pizen," said Hank Sullivan, one of the leading crowd in "Wicked Mike" Hogan's saloon, "but I don't do it no more. One o' thet kind saved me from losin' all the dust I'd dug in three years, an' I kain't never forget it. How'd it happen? This way: I was down to the Silver King in Denver playin' faro bank to beat the band. I'd been back in the mountains fer nigh on to three years an' was full o' gold dust an' the desire for excitement. Bill Jennings, the quarrelsomest man I ever saw, was with me. Well, luck was against me, an' pretty soon I see myself down to the cloth. Seven thousand dollars of good, hard yellow gold dust gone across the table to the house! As the last chip I had on the earth was raked in I had a hunch to play the ace open. I knew it would come. I felt it was a certainty, but my money was out. I was about to rise an' go out an' blow my head off or somethin' of thet sort when I happened to glance at Bill Jennings. Thet look sayed me. Bill was always carryin' a chip on his shoulder, an' put it on the ace. It was an' from that minute Hank turned off my way. In a week's play I had the faro bank dealer sellin' wienerswurst on a corner. Cleaned him clear out! An' that's why I've sorter got a weakness for a quarrelsome man."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Double Loss.

Mrs. Rankin, an emigrant herself to the states and sentimental cook by interested inquiries after the cook's numerous relatives, and the answers she received often compensated her amply for the time she thus spent. "Has your cousin Colin married the last of June, as she expected to be?" asked Mrs. Rankin on her return to town one autumn, and the cook's face changed from cheerfulness to gloom in a moment.

"She was not," poor Colin! she said mournfully. "He was took off sudden wid a fever. It was to her a double loss. There was the loss av a man, and there was the loss av the marriage."

He Gave His Address.

An Englishman, a temperance lecturer, was invited to speak on total abstinence. Being nobody in particular, he was placed last on the list of speakers.

The chairman also introduced several speakers whose names were not on the list, and the audience was tired out when he said, "Mr. Bailey will now give us his address."

"My address," said Mr. Bailey, rising, "is 45 Loughborough park, Brixton road, and I wish you all good night."

PAPOOSE POPCORN

A New and Discovery for

FORAGE, POULTRY, POPPING

A subscriber to the Southern Agriculturist secured the original seed from an old Indian in Northwest Texas. After sowing it with it, he wrote that paper: "I sowed good ground and care it will make from 50 to 100 bushels to the acre, and planted this and cut stalk and all it will make more feed and better feed than anything I ever saw. The old Indian said he never had the seed. I have not lost a bushel of seed since I have been in Texas. It is a new discovery. That's what I know. I'll maintain that with me. 33 cents. Tea or Tally-ho!"—Dr. J. B. Storer.

MRS. MALONE TUCKER

Contributed to Reflector.

On the morning of the 29th of March, 1905, at 8 o'clock, the messenger of death came and bore away to her eternal home "maid the numberless stars of the beautiful sky" the spirit of my beloved wife, Mrs. Malone Tucker. She was 30 years of age and had been a patient sufferer for several months.

She leaves a husband, three children, a father and mother, sisters and brother, besides a host of friends to mourn their loss. At 17 years of age she confessed her faith in Christ at her father's church. In her latter days of such intense suffering her faith grew stronger and stronger, and for many weeks before she left us, knew she must go and was willing to submit to His will. She was kind hearted and impulsive, always thoughtful of others even "till the last."

It was sad to say good bye but the Lord giveth and He taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord.

Her remains were taken to the family burying ground and there laid to rest by the side of her sister, who preceded her to the grave only 10 months ago. Burial services were conducted by her uncle, Eld. Fred McLawhorn.

Dearest wife, you have left me here in this world alone, but I pray to my Redeemer that I may meet around His throne.

Sigh not, sweet wife, 'twas not by chance You came on earth to bloom; 'Twas God's own will that placed you here.

To breathe your sweet perfume. There I bethold with delight The blessed three in one; And strong affections fix my sight On God's incarnate Son.

His promise stands forever firm, His grace shall never depart; He binds my name upon His arm And seals it on His heart.

North Carolina at Appomattox.

Next Sunday is the fortieth anniversary of the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia at Appomattox Court House and the collapse of the Southern Confederacy. The 9th of April, 1865, was on Sunday just as is the 9th of April, 1905, and because this anniversary is on Sunday the exercises attending the unveiling of North Carolina's monument will be held next day, on the 10th. This monument is the first and only one thus far erected at so historic a place, and it is eminently right and proper that North Carolina should have erected the first monument or memorial. Without disparaging the bravery of any other Confederate soldiers (for they were all brave) North Carolina proudly boasts that she was the "Last at Appomattox" because:

1. A North Carolinian, Major-General Bryan Grimes, planned the last battle fought there and commanded the infantry engaged there in the greater part of which were North Carolina troops.

2. A North Carolina Brigade, commanded by General W. R. Cox, made the last charge and fired the last volley of any organized body of Confederates immediately preceding the surrender.

3. A detachment of North Carolina troops from the 4th and 14th regiments did the last fighting of any infantry after the withdrawal of the main body of the infantry.

4. North Carolina troops (Robert's Brigade of cavalry) captured the last cannon that was captured by the Army of Northern Virginia.

These four facts, which have been fully proved, make it most appropriate for North Carolina to be the first State to commemorate and perpetuate with an monument the heroism and unshaken fidelity with which her sons remained faithful to the end, even after all hope of success had vanished.—Pittsboro Record, April 6th.

In driving through L. C. Arthur's truck farm, just south of town, we noticed that his potatoes are coming up nicely.

Loafing Boys.

One does not have to go far to see boys loafing away their time rather than being engaged in some helpful and wholesome employment.

It matters not what their financial or social standing is, every boy is wise to give his boys some regular duties, some kind of employment. It is worth much to the boy and is a most excellent example for others. In some respects it seems that the old time idea of regular employment for boys has passed out. There never has been conceived a truer saying than that "An idle brain is the devil's workshop," and if fathers and mothers would have their boys trained in the best way, they will give them work of some kind. To be sure, they ought not to be treated as slaves, but it is well for every boy to meet stern duty and the way to do it is to make out some duties and see that he meets them. One sometimes feels that the go-go plan of life is taking too strong a hold upon the people of this time. Isn't life becoming too easy, anyway?—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

Barca Elects Officers.

At the regular meeting of the Barca class last Sunday the following new officers were elected: President, C. P. Vandyke; Vice-President, C. E. Brodley; Secretary, Hugh S. Sheppard; Assistant Secretary, E. B. Thomas; Treasurer, H. R. Tripp; Press Reporter, C. F. Copeland; Musical Committee, C. F. Copeland, K. F. Betts, E. H. Thomas, Asa Parham, W. P. Edwards.

The Barca class is doing a great work in Greenville, it having been organized only two months and has a membership of thirty-three with an average attendance of twenty, and now that the weather has begun to get warmer it is expected and earnestly hoped that our membership will increase to possibly fifty.

The Greenville Barca is already one of the largest in the State, however it is the desire of each member that we make it the largest class in the State. So we invite every young man in Greenville to come out Sunday morning, and join with us in this great work. Barca class meets each Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

Dr. Bryan returned Thursday from Raleigh where he has been attending the Barca convention as a delegate from Greenville. He has great things to tell the class Sunday morning and each member is urged to be present.

Sing Me to Sleep

By AGNES G. HERBERTSON

"I have come to fetch Margot home," he said quietly.

There was a silence. "Do you hear, Margot?" said Jane Greet.

The other woman did not reply. But for the moving needle she might have been carved from stone.

The old woman looked from the girl to her son, from one dark face to the other. They were curiously alike, those two faces, both showing the impress of a strong and stubborn will. They were curiously unlike, too, the varying lines in the girl's eyes leaping out to meet a sober practicality and steadfastness in those of the man.

"Margot, are you ready?" said David.

He waited again, and again the needle went in and out, his only reply.

"After a pause, 'She says she is not going back to you,' said Jane Greet unwillingly.

"She has said that to me, too," said David Greet—"that is to say, she has written it. She wrote it in a hard, cruel letter, which she left for me to read when I came in."

In spite of himself his voice shook. He paused for a moment to steady it. "I shall not believe that letter, Margot. It was unworthy of you. I shall not believe that you mean to do anything so cruel and wicked!"

The words came with a jerk. "Margot, I am waiting to take you home."

She would not answer. With a quick stride he crossed the room. "You shall speak to me," he cried. "I am not a dog that I do not deserve a word—though you are not a woman, but a stone, or you would not sit there and refuse to utter a word. Speak! Are you or are you not coming home?"

Without raising her eyes, "I am not coming," said Margot Greet.

David turned away, breathing heavily. "There's the weakness of strength and the weakness of weakness," he said. "You can give in to a woman because you're stronger than her, and that's the way I went about it with Margot. But she thought it was the other kind of way, the weak way, and she's had to learn different. There are times when a man must show himself a man if he's to remain one."

He strode away, and Jane Greet brushed the tears from her eyes. "Well, she's with me—his mother—anyway. Folks can't talk to us like that, but I'll tell it up, and with a curiously impatient gesture, set it away in old Jane's drawer.

"That's finished with," said she. Yet the sewing was not nearly done. Afterward she put on her hat, and the shawl which she usually put over her head when she ran out she crossed upon her arm. She cast one look around the little room and toward the staircase where Jane had disappeared. Then she opened the door and went into the street.

That was curiously quiet, and there was a fog. It was but one short year since Margot Greet had quarreled with her husband and gone away.

She found her way through the streets and around the corners just as surely as he had done, but she was not unconscious of the way she wound. The consciousness of that shook her through and through and would have shaken her still more had she but had a heart left with which to feel.

David's pen made a little disk of light, which greeted her kindly, yet it hurt, for it reminded her of the yellow gold in her breast.

But he was singing, this time in the light, and she paused to hear: Sing me to sleep and let me rest; I will sleep, I will sleep, I will sleep. Nothing is faithful, nothing true; In heaven or earth but God and you.

It was not true, that song of David's. She had not been true to him or faithful, but she would be now. Tears came into her eyes, and as they ran down her cheeks something broke in her breast and melted away.

David's light smiled kindly at her as she opened the door and stepped into it, leaving the fog and gloom.

"David," she said simply, "I have come."—Black and White.

Asking and Answering Questions.

Mrs. Henpeck (to Mr. H., who is reading)—Your little son just asked you a question, and you didn't even notice him. You ought to be ashamed of yourself, and I shall—

Mrs. Henpeck—I didn't hear him. Mrs. H.—Oh, no, you never hear when a member of your family speaks to you. You are deaf to the very ones you should love and cherish, deaf to them.

Mr. H.—What does he want to know?

Mrs. H.—He asked you what a hermit was.

Mr. H.—A hermit, my son, is a man who lives in peace and quiet.—London Tit-Bits.

last only to go back to his mother's house.

He was gone long, and Margot grew pale and thin, but she uttered never a word.

"Girl, you have no heart—you are as cold as a stone!" old Jane burst out passionately one day—that day when news came that David Greet would never return to the little fishing village, but he instead in the lonely sea! Still David's wife would not speak, but at night she stood by her window and looked up at the clear stars with a white face.

"I think I must have a heart, for I can feel it break," she said when there was none to hear her.

But the rumor was a lie, and he came back.

"He has done well and has come back right, Margot," said the old woman. She looked at her daughter-in-law with unconcealed pride. "He could give you fine clothes now and the best looking house in Keston."

Then for the first time was Margot's calm broken, and she was moved to speech. "I will never go back to him," she cried fiercely. She threw down her work and left the room.

How was Jane to know that in that moment her heart was stolen from her, and she felt it in its place, but a lump of heavy gold that tore her breast? Wherever she went she felt it there, and it hurt sorely. When she passed David in the street her fingers shook, but that weight in her breast pressed, and she remembered his gold and passed on. Oh, it was ill to be without a heart and have only a lump of gold that must always stand between herself and the man she loved!

"He is rich now," said Margot, and she was careful that she did not meet him again. She spent much time in planning that her ways might not touch his.

In the evening she sewed still, and she was sewing when Jane Greet came to her with the news which she thought so ill.

"Oh, you were a wise woman, Margot," she said, "to keep away from such a fool. No one but a fool would lose all his money in going security for such a man as John Stanton is. David is a rich man no more. Every penny that he brought back with him is frittered away and all else that he had besides. Be thankful, Margot Greet, that you are not my son's wife in anything but name."

She went away, a red eyed and furious old woman, but Margot sat on like one stunned.

Every farmer should be familiar with the proper proportions of ingredients that go to make the best fertilizer for every kind of crop. FRAUD EXPOSED.

A few counterfeits have lately been making and trying to sell imitations of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and other medicines, thereby defrauding the public. A sure protection to you is our name on the wrapper, for it is for it, on all Dr. King's, or Bucklen's remedies, as all others are mere imitations. H. E. I was a very feeble for a long time, but in Electric Bitters, I found just what I needed for they quickly relieved and cured me." Best medicine for weak women. Sold under guarantee by J. L. New Spring Goods

ARRIVING DAILY.

There is one thing that we do not claim in our business to do and that is to sell goods cheaper than they can be bought—neither do we want to create the impression that our store is full of shop worn, out of style goods nor by filling our store with show bills and sign boards will we try to impress false ideas in your mind that we are going out of business, but we do wish to succeed that we are receiving daily shipments of the newest things in and kindred materials so desirable with the women folk of Greenville and Pitt county, and we do hope that you will at least favor us with a visit to see these many new things.

R. J. GRIMM, J. W. THOMAS, FORT STATION.

Harry and Charlie, aged five and three respectively, have just been seated at the table for dinner. Harry sees there is but one orange on the table and immediately sets up a wailing that brings his mother to the scene. "Why, Harry, what are you crying for?" she asked. "Because there isn't any orange for Charlie."

When baby Alice first saw a cow with a bell around its neck she thought it so funny that nothing could induce her to leave the spot. She stood watching the cow until it slowly walked away. Then, when the bell began to ring, she turned delightedly to her mother, exclaiming, "Oh, mamma, does the cow ring the bell when she wants the calf to come to supper?"—Little Chronicle.

A Little Politician.

Grover Cleveland once ran across a little girl acquaintance who was fishing and who had no bait on her hook. "You can't catch fish without bait," said Mr. Cleveland. "But I don't like to put the bait on the hook," answered the little girl decidedly; "the worms wiggle so. They won't keep still while I put them on. If you'll put the bait on for me I'll let you have the fish, Mr. Cleveland, if I catch one." "Ha, ha!" laughed the ex-president. "This isn't the first time I've met with such a proposition. Give me your hook, little politician."

Spoiled the Transaction.

A well dressed, gentlemanly looking man entered a car with a little boy of about six years of age. On the conductor coming to collect the fares the man handed the youngster a half dollar, he being nearer the door. The little fellow examined the coin carefully and then gave it to the conductor. Scarcely had the man returned the change when the youngster clapped his hands and, looking at his father, exclaimed triumphantly, "Father, father, he has taken the half dollar!"—Kansas City Independent.

A French Duel.

If the French are prone to challenge each other to fight duels on the smallest provocation they are also prone to bring them to an end with very little fighting.

It is credibly related that on the occasion of a duel between two members of the chamber of deputies one of the combatants was taken with a fit of bleeding at the nose just as they came upon the field. "Blood!" exclaimed one of the seconds of the other man. "Blood has been shed. The honor of my principal has been satisfied."

And the parties and their seconds thereupon gravely left the field.

Reported for Reflector.

On April 7th, the T. J. Jarvis Chapter of the Daughter's of Confederacy was delightfully entertained by Miss Lillian Carr.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Miss Bernice Hornaday.

Several very interesting sketches were read by Misses Leo Brown and Essie Ellington.

After the business part of the meeting was transacted, the hostess had a very interesting contest, to name the flower and gem for each month. Miss Ethel Skinner was awarded the prize, a beautiful bat pin.

We were then invited into the dining room where delightful refreshments were served. After spending a most delightful evening the club adjourned to meet with Mary Shelburn, May 5th, 1905.

LETTER TO HEARNE & CO.

Greenville, N. C.

Dear Sirs: Two houses alike and in same condition, at Delhi, N. Y. Mr. N. Avery owns them. He didn't know which was the better paint, and didn't want to be partial between two dealers.

Painted one house with Devco, the other with—wish we might tell what paint he painted the other house with!

Took six gallons Devco; and 12 of the other.

That's a good paint, that other, as paints go; it's 50 years old and has the courage to own what it's made of. It's made on a theory. Excellent paint it is; we say nothing about the theory.

Go by the name.

Yours truly,
