Too Much Politics.

Not only names but state politics and the names of prospective candidates for the higher offices are being discussed. In some quarters even gubernatorial candidates for 1908 have been named. Here are some of them: Ex-Congressman Bellamy, of New Hanover; Judge Cook, of Franklin; Congressman Pugh, of Johnston; Congressman T. W. Mason, of Northampton. All these are good men, but it is too early to bring out candidates for our next governor. Governor Glenn has more than three years to serve yet. And right here we wish to say that the people of North Carolina talk politics too much for their own good. An election is hardly over before they begin to discuss the question as to who shall be candidates for the offices at the next election. The candidates themselves are largely responsible for this. There is one man in Moore county who has about reared a family in office, who begins to work for his own re-election by the time the ballots are counted out. The citizens of the county should discourage such business as this. It is injurious to our best interests. Too much political agitation upsets business and keeps things in a turmoil.—Sanford Express.

Fear of Doctors.

The ignorance of some of the people of the lower classes in New Orleans has had its effect in making difficult the full application of the rules and regulations in the yellow fever epidemic. One physician, for example, was almost mobbed by some Indians to whom he endeavored to give some hypodermic injections. He only saved his life by giving himself this same treatment. This fear of the doctors appears in every such panic. When smallpox is prevalent there is no way to get people to be vaccinated except by compulsion. People who turn bath tubs into receptacles for coal are not easily induced to undergo treatment which is new and mysterious. Their fear arises through superstition and ignorance. They must be cured against their will.—Boston Herald.

It is estimated that by January 1 next there will be 300 generals on the retired list of the American army, or about one general for every 2,000 men in the ranks. In an emergency it might be possible to work up the list of retired generals to a number equalling one for every company of privates in the army.

WINNING HIS NAME.

An Indian Boy's Battle With a Wolf in Old Newfoundland.

With the following somewhat gory scene Theodore Roberts opens his story of old Newfoundland, "Brothers of Peril." The boy struck again with his knife, and the grey wolf tore at his shoulder. The eyes of the boy were fierce as those of the beast. Neither wavered. Neither showed any signs of pain. The dark spruces stood above them, with the half shadows of night in their branches, and the western sky was stained red where the sun had been. Twice the wolf dropped his antagonist's shoulder in a vain attempt to grip the throat. The boy, pressed to the ground, flung himself about like a dog and repeatedly drove his clumsy weapon into the wolf's shaggy side. At last the fight ended. The great timber wolf lay stretched dead in awful passiveness. His fangs gleamed like ivory between his scarlet jaws and black lips. A shimmer of white gleamed from the wolf's closed eyes. "For a moment the boy lay still, with the fingers of his left hand buried in the wolf's mane and his right hand a blot of red against the wolf's side. Presently, staggering on bent legs, he went down to the river and washed his mangled arm and shoulder in the cool water. The shock of it cleared his brain and steadied his eyes. He washed into the current to his middle, stooped to the racing surface and drank unstintingly. Strength flooded back to blood and muscle and the slender limbs regained their lightness.

"By this time a few pale stars gleamed on the paler background of the eastern sky. A long finger streak of red, low down on the hillslope, still lightened the west. The boy saw nothing of the changing beauty of the sky. He returned to the dead wolf and set about skinning it with his rude blade. He worked with skill and speed. Soon head and pelt were clear of the red carcass, and he flung the prize across his shoulder and started along a faint trail through the spruces.

"After walking rapidly for nearly an hour the boy came out on a small meadow bright with fires. Nineteen or twenty conical wigwams made of birch poles, bark and caribou hides stood about the meadow. Two women who were broiling meat at the fire looked from the shaggy blood stained pelt to the stalwart stripling. They cried to him softly in tones of love and admiration. 'Now give me my man name,' demanded the boy.

"A stalwart man, the chief of the village, strode from the dark interior of the nearest wigwam. His eyes gleamed at the sight of his son's torn arm and the white teeth of the wolf. 'Wolf Slayer!' he cried. He turned to the women. 'Wolf Slayer,' he repeated. 'Let this be his man name—Wolf Slayer.'

The Law of It.
The old back in the story who dropped a sovereign in the plate at church, mistaking it for a penny, could get no great satisfaction out of the sexton, as will be recalled, but he was not the old back to give up easily.

Accordingly he sought legal advice, with a view of instituting a suit at law.
But the lawyer whom he consulted was one of those rare and gifted souls who would rather be witty than rich, or almost anything else, for that matter.

"Sir," said he at once, "you have no case. You were guilty of contributory negligence."—Pack.
The Credulity of Women.
There are notable exceptions to the rule, if this is really the rule, but the statistics of the St. Louis postoffice are an astonishing confirmation of the case with which thousands of women all over the country can be induced to mail hard earned money, running up finally to a total of millions for "keep ing" by men of whom they know nothing except through the appeal of the incredible made by circular.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

SHREWD SCHEMES.

Those Devised by Shoplifters Keep Detectives Guessing.

To detect the female shoplifter used to be the easiest thing in the world. Nowadays her wiles call out the keen eyed vigilance of lady detectives, says London Answers. They are in all our big drapery and furnishing emporiums—and they have a busy time.

The shoplifter, bear in mind, is not, as a rule, the homeless creature in rags. She is a fashionable butterfly, who flutters about the most expensive stalls. She has a condescending smile, a patronizing air and the majestic grace of a newly presented debutante. And she sweeps along—choosing crowds—wearing a bag skirt and a belt of fish hooks.

This fish hook device is ingenious. The shoplifter wears them level with the knee underneath her loose and flowing skirts. They are spaced just far enough apart to keep them from becoming entangled. To the inner side of the underskirt a wide band of oiled silk is sewn. This, with similar bands around the knees, saves both the thief and her skirts from being hooked and permits the hooks themselves to hang free.

The thief who wears these fish hooks wears also two little spurlike projections at the back of the French heels of her shoes. With these she picks up handkerchiefs, gloves, silk and other materials of a like nature and raises them beneath her skirts to the other hooks. All this can be done by an expert in the most unobtrusive manner possible, even beneath the eyes of the detective, without giving that individual the slightest intimation of what is being done.

Another thief uses a large hook and heavy sinker, these being suspended beneath the skirts and capable of being raised or lowered by means of a small red cord. The thief keeps the article to be stolen off the counter as if by accident and stands over it. With one hand she calmly proceeds to lower the hook until it touches the floor and catches the blouse or piece of silk there. Then up comes the hook with the stolen goods, and the shoplifter walks quietly away.

A Defect in the Hands.
A good story is told of an English lawyer who, having succeeded in making a litigious of every farmer in his county, having grown rich at their expense and thus established a valid claim to their consideration, consented to sit for his portrait, which was to adorn the courtroom of the county town. The picture was duly painted by a London artist, and previously to being hung was submitted to a private view. "Most uncommonlike, to be sure," was the general verdict. But one old chap, regarding the canvas critically, departed from the prevailing opinion as follows: "That be somewhat like his face, but it ain't the man. This man has got his hand in his own pocket, you see. Now, I have known him for five and thirty years, and all that time he's had his hand in somebody else's pocket. This chap ain't him."

Yet He Had to Serve.
A Kansas City young man had an unusual but excellent reason for complaining when he was imprisoned for jury duty. He was waiting in the hall outside the courtroom and worrying over the problem of how he was to be excused. He looked so dejected that finally another juror asked him what was wrong. "Well," he summoned here on the jury was the reply, "and I don't see how I can possibly serve."

"Because," said the worried young man, "I've got an engagement to take a young lady riding this afternoon, and if I don't keep it she'll never look at me again. Darn it!" But the young man was kept on the jury panel.

A Fair Proposal.
A story is related of a man who, on a visit to Scotland, went to the Kirk on the "Sabbath." Feeling very drowsy, he succumbed entirely after the first sentence or so of the sermon. An elderly man, who had been watching with rising wrath some of the obviously "irreligious" attitude of the stranger, bent forward, shook him and whispered in his ear: "Give the man a chance. Wait till he gets along a bit, and then if he's not worth listening to go to sleep, but don't gang before he gets commenced."

Ancient Surgical Instruments.
Over forty different kinds of surgical instruments were found in the house of a surgeon at Pompeii. Some resembled the instruments now in use, while others were completely different from anything of the kind now employed, their use is entirely conjectural. All were inclosed in brass or hexwood cases, and some even retained the exquisite polish that they had when buried.

POOR FART

GREENVILLE DISCRIMINATED AGAINST

THE REFLECTOR has often wondered why Greenville and her business interests should be treated worse than other towns, or in other words why the Atlantic Coast Line should be more niggardly towards its patrons than other railroads are. Take the Atlantic & North Carolina for instance: That road is already operating double daily passenger trains between Morehead City and Goldsboro, and the Kingston Free Press says another train will be put on at an early day. The purpose of this additional train is to make such connections at Goldsboro as will enable people along the A. & N. C. to go to Norfolk and return the same day.

Just think of that—people from Morehead City, New Bern and Kingston being able to go to Norfolk and return the same day, a distance twice as far as from Greenville to Norfolk, while our people cannot get to any point of importance and return the same day.

This additional train on the A. & N. C. will give that road three passenger trains each way a day, while the branch of the A. C. L. from Kingston to Weldon, about the same number of miles in length, has only one passenger train each way a day. The people of Greenville and other towns along this road have long been asking for another train—one leaving Weldon for Kingston in the morning and return in the afternoon—but so far their petitions have been denied. It is not to say the patronage of the road will not justify the additional train, for it is well known that this portion of the Atlantic Coast Line is about the best paying branch of its length on the whole system.

We can only think this failure of the A. C. L. to put another daily train on this road is due to a lack of interest in its patrons and a want of appreciation of the large business this section gives the road. As for Greenville, there is not a more important town in Eastern North Carolina, and the large business interests here deserve better treatment on the part of the railroad officials. Our transportation facilities are inadequate and should be improved.

This is one of the things that Greenville ought to have a board of trade to be looking after.

Atlanta's mayor has not resigned yet, but he ought to.

Mayor Woodward acknowledges the beer but not the corn.

Now they are running up against the hitches in the peace terms.

Mayor Woodward is not the first man who could not stand water.

The light of the Daily Tarheel at Greensboro seems to have been snuffed out.

All the other centers of sensation will please keep quiet until Durham gets through.

As a successful spellbinder and a "whooper up," Ben Tillman, is a success, but as a high-toned orator he is a signal failure.

Bishop Potter's subway tavern in New York has met failure and gone back to a common saloon. Another verification of the statement that religion and whiskey won't mix.

The petition to the Raleigh board of aldermen for another election on the saloon question failed, as it should have done. On the petition were many names of persons who were not entitled to vote in an election.

Two foremen of the government printing office have been dismissed for giving testimony adverse to their superiors whose acts were being investigated. That is usually the way it, shut off the light as much as possible.

The number of attempts recently made to wreck trains on the Southern railway has a serious aspect and is likely to make people feel fearful when they travel. If the parties attempting these wrecks can be caught they will make good subjects for a hemp necktie.

Charlotte is the most active building and loan city in the state. As a result there are now 317 buildings in course of construction in that city. It has been a desire of THE REFLECTOR for many years that Greenville have a good building and loan association, and we yet hope to see that hope realized.

Marshall Field pays tax on $40,000,000 and does not make any kick. Well, we would not kick either if we had that much money.

Raleigh is preparing an elaborate reception for President Roosevelt when he comes Oct. 19th, and the whole state will help her in it.

Mayor Woodward says if he was drunk in Toledo, he did not know it. It might have been that he was so drunk he could not remember it.

Every now and then a lot of cotton goes up in smoke. At Johnston, S. C., a warehouse containing a thousand bales was destroyed by fire.

This idea of assaulting the judge if you cannot get the jury packed to suit you, is a new one in North Carolina. It should be nipped in the bud.

If much rivalry springs up between Carnegie and Rockefeller as to which can give away the most money, they may succeed in dying poor.

There will be lamentation among the little folks now, the ruling of the postoffice having cut the funny page supplement out of the Sunday papers.

One great trouble with the young men of this country today is that too many of them wait for opportunities when they ought to be making opportunities.

North Carolinians take a high stand everywhere. Capt. J. C. McNeill, of Fayetteville, has again been elected president of the National Firemen's Association.

With yellow fever already existing on the South, and cholera breaking out in Germany and threatening the North, it looks like Uncle Sam is beset with evils on both sides.

In Cabarrus county a guard has been fined $25 for punishing a convict. We are glad to hear of this. Convicts should be treated humane, and all guards who fail to realize this fact should be severely punished themselves.

WINTERVILLE DEPARTMENT

This department is in charge of who is authorized to represent the Eastern Reflector in Winterville and territory.

WINTERVILLE, N. C., Sept. 6. Mr. and Mrs. Daugherty spent Sunday night with relatives in Kingston, returning home Monday. A. W. Ange & Co., are selling shoes cheap. They sell a pretty shoe for 99 cents. G. G. Fineman spent Monday night in town. The A. G. Cox Manufacturing Company are making some of the best and most comfortable desks on the market, which they will sell at a very low price. We hope many of the committee-men of the county will avail themselves of this opportunity to make their school rooms comfortable and pleasant before the opening of the schools.

Miss Vivian Robinson, of Gold Point, was a welcome visitor Monday night. She came with one of her friends who entered school here.

2,000 yards standard calicoes at 4c per yard, Harrington, Barber & Co.

A. P. McKeel, one of the most prosperous farmers of Spaight's Bridge section, came down Monday and placed his daughter and two nieces in school.

Misses Doris Cox and Ethel Carroll left Tuesday morning for the Baptist University to women at Raleigh. The state has few girls in it whose lives have so much of promise.

Just received by R. G. Chapman & Co., a car load of line which they will sell very cheap.

Students, students, both new and old. The attendance of boarders is about 50 percent greater than ever before and still they come on every train. All the counties represented last year are represented and families, Bertie, Washington, Halifax, Wilcox and Orange are represented this week. A large new dormitory was started this morning and will be pushed as rapidly as possible. It will be located between the academy and boys dormitory. The school building and girls dormitory must each be enlarged at once.

A new lot of bed springs, mattresses and furniture at A. W. Ange & Co.

Rev. W. E. Cox spent Monday night in town.

When in need of a good Barrel of Flour see A. W. Ange & Co. They have the old reliable Oblisk.

Miss Daisy Tucker spent Monday with friends and left her brother, Walter, in school.

The outlook for the opening of the Winterville High School grows brighter every day. The school has large dormitories, but if they were twice as large they could easily be filled at the opening.

W. H. Rouse has sold his dwelling near the dormitory to A. G. Cox and is building near the carriage factory. Already a part of his former home is filled with school girls.

Our last mail brought in more orders for Hunsucker buggies.

Samuel Mumford, from near Ayden, and his son, E. F. Mumford, of Morganton, spent Monday with relatives here.

Mrs. Sparks has an excellent line of millinery goods in the depot, which she expects to open up in one of the new stores in a few days.

J. L. Jackson came up Monday with his brother, who entered school. Luke is a former student here and his many friends were glad to see him. He said he could hardly realize how a school could grow so much and make so many improvements as the Winterville High school has in the last two years.

A new lot of furniture cheap at A. W. Ange & Co.

Albert Wingate and Miss Nannie Smith were married Saturday. Listen for another couple soon.

"I have now had a lot of nice straw hats that will now go below cost. Don't fail to see them. We will sell you at some price."—K. G. Chapman & Co.

POOR PH

In Goldsboro last spring some prominent citizens were indicted for gambling. E. L. Edmundson was a member of the grand jury and after the indictment Arnold Borden, a prominent citizen, charged Edmundson with being responsible for the indictments (it subsequently developed that he was not) and attacked him. Edmundson shot Borden and severely wounded him, but Borden recovered.

The Landmark remarked at the time that if Borden attacked Edmundson simply because the latter did his sworn duty as a member of the grand jury, he got what was coming to him when he caught a bullet. The court seems to have taken the same view of the case, for in Wayne Superior court this week Edmundson, who did the shooting, was acquitted, while Borden was convicted.

Justice very often falls down, but this is one case in which it got there with both feet.—Statesville Landmark.

One of the most outrageous occurrences in North Carolina was an assault made by ex-mayor McCown, of Durham, on Judge George Ward, who was holding court in Durham. A negro who had killed a nephew of McCown had been convicted of man slaughter, the verdict of the jury carrying with it a recommendation for mercy. Judge Ward sentenced the negro to fifteen months on the roads. McCown thought the sentence too light and went to the judge's boarding house after court and asked him to change the sentence. Upon Judge Ward declining to do this McCown assaulted him. Judge Ward had McCown arraigned on a bench warrant, citing him to answer for contempt of court. This trial resulted in McCown being sentenced to thirty days in the county jail and fined $200. Things have reached a pretty pass when a judge is assaulted for discharging his duty as he sees it.

There was ice and frost at Blow ing Rock one morning last week. Down this way we were sweating in the heat. Old North Carolina can give you almost any kind of climate desired.

The Supreme court of the state ought to keep hands off the McCown appeal and let him serve out his sentence. Such an assault as he made upon Judge Ward should not be tolerated. Whether the court was actually in session or not at the time of the assault should not shorten the sentence one minute or reduce the fine one penny.

Who says North Carolina is not climbing out? That modern hotel is really under way in Charlotte and street cars have begun running in Salisbury. Next thing you know Greenville will have a chamber of commerce.

A peculiar case is reported found in South Carolina. A man in that state is serving a long term of imprisonment and his wife has set about to secure his pardon. The main point in her appeal is that she committed the crime for which her husband is being punished. The man went to prison rather than have the crime fixed upon his wife.

State Auditor Dixon has completed his preparation of the pension rolls for this year, and they show a total of 14,935 against 13,316 last year. The net increase being 719. Of widows there are 5,069, an increase of 119, and of fourth-class soldiers, 8,044, an increase of 615. In the other classes there is no increase worth mentioning. There are only 87 first class pensioners.
