Judgment Was Entered Against His Bondsmen. Tarboro, N. C., Sept. 14.—Robert V. Wingate the young whiteman of Rocky Mount, who is charged with an attempted criminal assault upon the person of Mrs. Joseph Knight of this place some weeks ago and who was removed to Raleigh from his place of incarceration in the county jail here through the fear of being lynched and was subsequently released through habeas corpus proceedings, failed to make his appearance at court when his cases were called and judgments nisi were entered against his bondsmen in each case; Wingate was in Tarboro Tuesday and Wednesday and is said to have gone to Rocky Mount preparatory to retraining for trial Thursday. It is surmised his nerve failed him after missing the early morning train and much surprise was occasioned by his failure to appear.

SUPERIOR COURT.

September Term in Session. The September term of Pitt Superior court began this morning with Judge K. B. Jones, of Winston, presiding and Solicitor L. I. Moore representing the state.

In calling over the list of jurors every man but one answered to his name and he had not been summoned. More of the business men of the town than usual were on the list, and several excuses were asked for.

Two of those wanting to be excused were cotton buyers, who one of the lawyers said were needed on the street to make as much competition as possible on the price of cotton.

Judge Jones told them to go push cotton to 11 cents and he would excuse them. Another who is in the horse sales business made an excuse, and was told to go and trade horses for two days and be back in court Wednesday morning.

One from the country had a sick mother-to-law and was told he could go home. A very busy insurance agent was also let off, and this ended the excuses.

The grand jury as selected and sworn is composed of the following: J. C. Lanier, foreman, T. H. Williams, C. M. Tucker, R. R. Whitehurst, J. F. Cox, Henry Harris, W. H. Kilpatrick, David Stokes, Joe. V. Cox, Oscar Tucker, S. G. Forbes, C. S. Forbes, S. B. Hardee, Richard Harris, S. I. Fleming, M. L. Turnage, J. R. Flake and W. C. Hines.

W. H. Smith is officer of the grand jury and L. W. Lawrence is court clerk. The court room was crowded during the time Judge Jones delivered his charge to the grand jury, and such good attention was given that only once did the sheriff call for quiet.

The people learn much of common law by listening to charges from learned judges, and they were amply repaid in following closely all that Judge Jones said.

Judge Jones said there are two kinds of crimes—those of omission and of commission—and men are alike guilty when they fail to do what the law says shall be done as they are when they do what the law says shall not be done.

Then under six divisions he discussed the violations that should have the attention of the grand body of inquires. These were of: offences against person, offences against property, offences against peace and order, offences against public justice, offences against health, offences against public morals. These were discussed clearly and practically, now and then with emphasis.

On carrying concealed weapons he said that the man who kept the law was left at the mercy of the man who failed to keep it, and this was a violation that should be rigidly enforced. The most frequent offences were by negroes who carry razors to the parties and carve up their best friends before they leave; or the young who think it takes a pistol in one pocket, a bottle in the other and a pack of cigarettes to make them grown.

Referring to lynching Judge Jones said he had already told the grand jury what murder in the first degree was, and that is what he thinks men commit when they band together, premeditate the deed, select leaders to demand the jail keys, enter the prison, take out a human being, hang him to a limb and fill his body with lead. It is murder, and there is no excuse for it in North Carolina.

Abandonment and the double lives some men lead were referred to under offences against public morals, and the effect of these upon

A community were strongly emphasized. Gambling was also given a good shaking up when he said the white man who deals in cotton futures is just as guilty as the negro who deals in craps.

Judge Jones said so many good things in his charge that we wish all of them could be referred to, but space will not permit. This is his first visit to Pitt county and at the outset he convinces the people that he is a good judge.

DEATH OF MISS MYRTLE WILSON.

Popular Young Lady Summoned From Earth. Though she had lingered at death's door for several days and the end was not unexpected, the announcement this morning that Miss Myrtle Wilson was dead brought sadness to many hearts.

She passed away about a quarter past three o'clock this morning, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Wilson, on Dickenson avenue.

Nine weeks ago Miss Myrtle came home from Virginia Beach sick with typhoid, and through most of the time of her illness her condition was serious. Nothing that love or skill could perform for her restoration was left undone, but death conquered in the battle and claimed her for a victim, leaving the hearts of parents and relatives rent in grief, and friends bowed in sorrow.

Miss Myrtle Wilson was one of our most estimable young ladies and was popular with every one. She chose teaching for her life work and was more devoted to duty. Whenever she taught she was loved both by pupils and parents. She was a member of the Baptist church and ever faithful to her Christian duties.

Besides the parents she leaves three brothers and three sisters to mourn their loss. These are W. R. Frank and Eugene Wilson, Miss Olean Warren, Jr., and Misses Nannie and Lillie Wilson.

The funeral will take place Wednesday, services being held in the Baptist church and the interment in Cherry Hill cemetery. Daily Reflector 19.

In Honor of Miss Margaret Blow.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Blow on the corner of Pitt and Fourth streets, Monday, a delightful evening was spent by the many friends of Miss Margaret Blow.

One of the amusements of the evening was a guessing contest. Percy Forbes and Miss Jane Bryan tried for the prize and the former drew it.

The prize was a nice box of candy which was very highly appreciated. Delightful refreshments were served. It was Miss Margaret's birthday and she was the recipient of many beautiful presents.

Just So It's a Picture. "Where ignorance is bliss" it makes no difference. The colored woman here at court, Monday, who was wearing a last year's Parker campaign button for a brostepin, was just as happy over it as any of the rest of her set.

His Night Off. One of the attachées of the Ten Nights in a Bar Room company tried to take the whole ten nights in one after the play, Saturday night, and was not in shape to find his way to the car to get off with the troupe Sunday morning. He played his part (the both) too long.

Had Large Crowd. A very large crowd gathered under the tent of the Frank E. Griswold company, Saturday night to witness "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." Some of the characters in the play were very good and the performance as a whole was much enjoyed.

Trains Don't Connect. No use of mailing letters in the afternoon now, or going to the evening train with the expectation of making connection at Kinston. That thing is done for now, and it is wait until next day.

Federal Court Jurors. A term of Federal court will be held in New Bern beginning Oct. 23rd. The jurors drawn from Pitt county are Elias Dail, W. J. Fleming, L. B. Mewborne, W. H. Edwards and S. A. Stocks.

Brain and Hand Education. The demands of the times have, and are constantly, demonstrating that the education of the boy and girl of today must be along lines not so much in book learning, as in a manual training which shall equip the youth and make them able to cope with modern requirements, and so be capable of earning an independence in both the mental and physical world.

The equipment of today for those who mould success in life, is one through which the brain culture shall offset the hand culture, each trained, developed and brought into a close fellowship of action. Routine learning, which school and college may give the youth, the teaching of the purely mental, without the hand and eye receiving their rightful share of education, cannot but lead to a generation which shall fail to be self-supporting, therefore become a burden upon the community. What the youth can do is the essential thing, and the ability to do depends upon previous practical training and experience, which can be gained in the technical and manual schools. The educational equipment of the boy and girl calls for one that gives independence, which means the ability and strength to produce, to earn a livelihood, to come into active life and assume positions of trust and character, an honor to themselves and a factor in their community's development. The necessities of today, emphasizes the urgency of a brain and hand education, one that is co-operative, each assisting and promoting the success of the other, and if each be proportionally educated to meet the requirements of the other, there will be a balance secured which makes the gifts of each most available to the other, producing an individual, equipped to meet every requirement of the day, and meeting the world, to take from it those things which the youth most seeks, fame, wealth, high position.—New Bern Journal.

BESSEMER'S DEVICE.

His Reward For It Came When He No Longer Wanted Money.

In an autobiography of Sir Henry Bessemer is told how, in 1833, when he was a youth of twenty, he learned that the British government was losing about $500,000 a year through the use of forged stamps. He set about finding a remedy. In nine months he discovered how to forge government stamps with the greatest ease. This was a risky bit of knowledge for a struggling young man who wanted money wherewith to get married to the girl of his choice. But young Bessemer, having invented forthwith the perforated stamp that is now known everywhere, went gladly to the government officials with the forgery in his pocket to ask if they were genuine. When Sir Charles Presley passed them as genuine Bessemer remarked that he knew they were forgeries—"simply because I forged them myself." Then he suggested a remedy. It was accepted. Bessemer was offered the post of superintendent of stamps—for plant and staff must be reorganized—at $3,000 to $4,000 a year.

Young Bessemer went away happily to tell his good luck to the girl of his choice. He explained to her the situation, how old stamps had been picked up and used again and how he had invented an elaborate plan to remedy this. "But surely," said the young lady, "if all the stamps had a date put on them they could not at a future time be used without detection." This rather startled young Bessemer. But he devised a simple method of marking the date. The British government was delighted. The device was accepted. And, as no change of machinery or staff was needed, Bessemer was informed that no superintendent of stamps would be appointed. Thus he had deprived himself of a job.

Forty-five years later, after he had invented the "Bessemer process" of preparing iron and had made a great fortune, Bessemer wrote to Lord Beaconsfield, then prime minister, pointing out that he had saved the country millions without the reward of a penny. He no longer wanted money, but the government acknowledged the debt and paid it with a knighthood.

The Ideal Teacher. Before all other qualifications the teacher's character is the fundamental requisite. That must be above reproach in all things. Milton's words about the poetic power are especially true in regard to the power to teach. "He who would not be frustrated," said the great poet, "of his hope to write well hereafter in laudable things must himself be a true poet."

Why She Wanted Work. "There are a lot of queer people in this world," said the man in charge of the book department of a large store yesterday. "This morning a young woman came in and applied for a position selling books. I explained that there was nothing I could give her. Then I said pleasantly: "I'm awfully sorry." "Oh," she said, turning to go, "you needn't be sorry. I really don't need the money. I simply wanted to work here so I could read the books."—Kansas City Times.

A Classical Encounter. "Here I have been a supplicant at the throne of your heart for weeks," said the lovesick young man of Shakespearean tastes, who had been trying to win the affection of a Muscovite young woman, "and what boots it?" he concluded, with desperation.

"I do," roared the young woman's irate father as he raised the young man on the top of his No. 12 gentry but firmly to the curbstone below.—Kansas City Journal.

A Little Bull. It was an Irishman of course, though he had shed his accent from having been in this country for two generations. "By George," he exclaimed, looking at a well known electrical sign on Canal street the other day. "If I were in the center of Africa and saw that sign I'd know at once I was in New Orleans!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

HOW MOROS MAKE FIRE.

Bamboo Stick, Bit of China and Tinder Their Apparatus.

The match has been said to be the greatest civilization of the world, but it has not yet completed its work. There are still tribes of barbarous and semibarbarous people who use nature's means for producing fire, either by friction with or without apparatus or the contact of two substances which produce a spark, as flint and steel.

The Moros use a method distinctive from other savage races and of interest not only for its uniqueness, but as showing the effect of environment on invention. This apparatus consists of a bamboo stick, a bit of china and tinder. Cylindrical cases are also part of the device, one being a case for tobacco and the other a case for the china and tinder. The whole, connected with cord, is worn at the belt. To use the apparatus the native takes the bamboo firmly in his left hand and in his right holds the bit of china by the finger and thumb and on the thumb side pinches a bit of tinder. The edge of the china is then struck sharply down and along the bamboo, producing a bright and long spark, which catches in the tinder and ignites it. Very little practice is required to enable a novice to light a fire by this means. Obviously, when the apparatus was first devised, no china was available, and doubtless some sharp stone took its place. Now, however, bits of broken china such as are found in cheap eating houses are regarded as best for the purpose and universally used.

The thoughtful reader will at once draw an analogy between this means of fire making and the flint and steel of our own ancestors. In the eastern tropics, however, bamboo is the commonest of woods and so was doubtless observed many times to make a bright spark when struck against flint, in contact with metal, was seen once. In consequence after the first bright thinker had devised this way of using the spark the method held its popularity and obtains to this day, although the flint and steel is so much simpler, easier and more portable.

The philosophy of the device will at once be apparent. The sharp edge of the china scrapes off a bit of bamboo—not much, because the wood is hard and the outside has quite a glaze—but enough to be made incandescent by the friction of the stroke. The tinder catches this spark, and the desired flame is the result.—Scientific American.

Story of Adolph and Anna. Adolph, an Austrian artisan, adored Anna, an aristocrat. And Anna adored Adolph. Another aristocrat, Alfred, an ambassador, adored Anna. Anna adored Alfred. Alfred addressed Anna, admitting admiration. Anna assumed amusement. Alfred abjured Anna. Anna admonished Alfred. Alfred adopted aggressiveness. Alfred's audacity alarmed Anna. Rest After Meals. "After dinner sit awhile," is a time honored saying. It is also a very true and physiologically correct one, for when our food is undergoing digestion our body is doing a great deal of important work. If, therefore, we persist in taking exercise after food we are really "burning the candle at both ends" and giving our body double work to do, with the result that indigestion sooner or later attacks us. We should therefore rest after meals, and before them as well, and the feeling of restfulness and indisposition to work just after a meal is a natural warning and indication that we should seek repose at that time—not necessarily sleep, but quietness and rest.

A Lawyer's Satire. Lord Chancellor Eldon pronounced the word "lien" as if written lion. Sir Arthur Pigott, a distinguished chancery lawyer, maintained that "lien" was to be pronounced like lean, and one day each made a stand in court for his favorite pronunciation, whereupon Jekyll, a witty lawyer, perpetrated this thyming pun, which alludes to the parsimonious arrangements of the chancellor's kitchen: "Sir Arthur, Sir Arthur, why, what do you mean by saying the chancellor's lion is lean?" "Dye think that his kitchen's had as a lot that."

EMINENT EDUCATOR'S ENDORSEMENT.

The North Carolina STATE NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL COLLEGE

Presidents Office.
Greensboro, N. C., August 24, 1905.

Greensboro Life Insurance Company,
Greensboro, N. C.

Gentlemen: Enclosed you will find a remittance for the full annual premium on my policy in your company, and with it I wish to send my congratulations upon the extraordinary record of the company during the first month of its life.

I have taken out this policy for three reasons:

1. Because I believe in the substantial business men who are backing the company.

2. Because I like the form of the Income Indemnity Policy.

3. Because I desire very much to encourage, so far as I am able to do so, the building up of strong insurance companies in North Carolina, in order that we may send less of our capital through insurance companies to build up other sections of the country instead of our own.

Very truly yours,
CHARLES D. McIVER,

RETIRED IN GOOD ORDER

But it Took Twenty Five and Costs.

There is lots of business being done at this time of court, but now and then it is spiced with a bit of good humor enough to make it interesting for the spectators.

It was Tuesday that a gentleman of color was upon the charge of carrying concealed weapons. The state had put on one witness—the police officer of Grifton who started to arrest the negro for disorderly conduct and saw him drop a pistol in his flight out of town—and rested the case.

Knowing that the affair took place last Christmas eve two years ago, counsel for the defense brought forward testimony, but arose to plead statute of limitation.

"When was this indictment begun, Mr. Solicitor?" was asked the prosecuting officer.

"Presentation was made at September term, 1904," was the prompt answer.

"That settles your client," remarked the court addressing the defendant's counsel. Then, after producing a character witness, the attorney offered some extenuation, stating that it was Christmas and his client was merely feeling the spirit inebriated to the occasion.

"But I don't like the way you feel as you fill up on spirits and try to take possession of these smart towns," interrupted the court.

"Beg your Honor's pardon, but was not taking possession but was evacuating," rejoined the counsel.

"Then he should have retired in good order," replied the court, "and I think it would be in order to let him try road service for 30 days."

"I hope your Honor will not give him so severe a penalty for his first offense," pleaded the counsel.

"Then let him pay a fine of $25 and costs, and see if he can retire in good order under that," was the judgment of the court.

AN OLD PAPER.

One That is Genuine and not a Reprint.

F. M. Hornaday has shown us a copy of The National Intelligencer, printed in Washington, D. C., and dated April 28th, 1836. It is a genuine old paper, and not a reprint as some of the so-called old papers exhibited in this late day are.

While off on his recent trip Mr. Hornaday visited the old home place of his mother's ancestors in Scotland county, near Laurinburg. This old paper was found in the walls, between weather boarding and plastering, of the "big house" known as "Ballacholish" that was built by her great grandfather. Two other copies of The Intelligencer, one dated 1835 and the other 1841, were found in the same place. They contain notices and speeches by H. Clay, Daniel Webster and other prominent public men of that time. How the old papers got in their hiding place that preserved them all these many years cannot be explained. They were found while recent repairs were being made to the building.

Mr. Hornaday will donate this old copy he has to the Historical Society of Trinity College.

BAD NEGRO WITH GUN.

Shoots and Seriously Wounds a Woman.

On Wednesday afternoon Sam Brown, colored, who has frequently figured in the courts for sundry disorders, went to the house of Flora Blangier, colored, on Cotanch street below King's stables. Sam had tanked up on about enough of bad whiskey to make him a fool. He had some words with the woman about some clothes she had taken to laundry for him, when he drew a pistol and began shooting at her. Four shots were fired, one of them striking the woman in the hip and making a serious wound.

Sam was arrested and placed in jail to await development of the injury caused by the wound.

CAFE OPENS FOR SEASON.

Carolina Club Growing and a Credit to the Town.

The opening of Carolina Club cafe for the season, Friday night, was a very pleasant occasion, both for the members of the club and guests who were present. The occasion was entirely informal and all moved about through the well furnished apartments at will, enjoying the music, reading room and games. An elegant oyster supper was served.

Carolina club has far outgrown the pessimistic predictions some were disposed to make at its organization some over two years ago. It now numbers about eighty members and has always been conducted on so high a plain as to make it creditable to its members and to the town. Its furnishings are modern and in keeping with the best social clubs of the day. Objectable features sometimes prominent in club quarters are not permitted, so that it is not only a place for pleasant gathering but has a good moral influence as well. The members are to be congratulated upon its success.

Watch the Advertisements.

This is the season of the year when people are busy and it will always pay them to watch the advertising columns of THE REFLECTOR, especially when contemplating purchases. It will save time and save money to do this. There are frequent changes in advertisements to which special attention cannot be called in the local column, and every issue of the paper should be read through to be sure that nothing is missed. Our advertisers are up-to-date business men and what they have to say is always worth reading.

Gin House Burned.

About 11 o'clock Thursday night the gin house of J. B. Galloway, in Chicod township, was destroyed by fire, together with about ten bales of seed cotton. The loss is about $3,000. The fire is supposed to have caught in some way from the boiler which had been used while ginning during the day.

"SPOKE THE TRUTH FOR ONCE."

That is What One Lawyer Said About Another.

There was a three cornered case in progress in court, the solicitor prosecuting two defendants each of whom had a lawyer. To make the case appear as good as possible for his client, each lawyer must say as much as he could against the other defendant.

The first lawyer was closing his speech and his finishing sentence was "Gentlemen of the jury, if you consider the evidence carefully you must say that my client is guilty."

Seeing the smile on the faces of the jurors as he was taking his seat, the error flashed to his mind and he turned and said "I mean not guilty."

"He spoke the truth for once," said the next lawyer as he arose to make his speech. "My friend labored hard to convince your gentlemen of the jury to the contrary, but his conscience so hurt him that he had to admit the truth and tell you his client is guilty."

These are some of the little passing shots one hears in court.

TO IMPROVE SERVICE.

Government Orders Rural Mail Boxes Numbered.

Postmaster R. C. Phelan has received an order from the post office authorities requiring the numbering of mail boxes on the rural free delivery routes. This is a requirement of the government to facilitate the handling of mail on the routes, and goes into effect all over the country. The numbering of each route will begin with "No. 1" taking the box nearest the postoffice from which the route is served.

Patrons of the route should cooperate with this movement to improve the service for their benefit. The postmaster will furnish each patron with the official number for his box and the patron must put the number on the box.
