Truth in Reference to Fiction

GREENVILLE, PITT COUNTY, N. C., Tuesday Oct. 24 1935.

Hold your cotton, farmers. Hold it tight. Hold 'til there's eleven cents in sight.

Once in a while cotton takes a spurt as if it wanted to go to eleven cents, but it falls by the way.

They were so full of the president or something else, that Raleigh papers all ran the track Thursday.

Maybe this is the reason: Those people who wait so long to go to the theatre are more anxious to be seen than to see the play.

As was expected of North Carolina she did herself proud in her greetings to the president on his visit to and through the state.

That North Carolina was the best and the president will get a better idea of North Carolina. Trust his honor will be disappointed.

The Reflector is not getting big, but will inform the brethren that we are ahead of them in one respect. King Edward has become a subscriber to this paper.

The travelling man who fought each other to look with pistols, over a game of cards in a Mississippi town, saved the society the trouble and expense of a murder trial.

North Carolina here a good man in the death of Gen. James D. Glenn, which occurred in Raleigh Tuesday night. He was brother and private secretary of Governor Glenn. He had served his state well.

The dispatching of several war ships to Matanzas, in the French West Indies, to deal with the Venezuelan trouble, looks like something we are doing there if Castro does not come down from his high horse.

They are now saying that the presents given to Miss Alice Roosevelt on her trip abroad are counterfeited, the jewels being only imitations, and that the loose diamonds given by the Sultan of Sulu could be duplicated in this country for $50. That will cut down the big customs duty.

The graft business strikes down South occasionally. A former book keeper and confidential clerk in the office of the state treasurer of South Carolina has been arrested on a warrant charging him with the theft of bonds to the amount of $12,500. He should be given a job in the penitentiary.

An Asheville doctor makes visits to his patients in a stylish automobile. A less pretentious country brother will roller ride behind a mule. The automobile and mule met in the road, and not liking each other there was trouble. The mule bucked and backed the buggy into a ditch, much to the injury of the country doctor who occupied the vehicle, and in consequence a suit for $10,000 has been instituted against the owner of the automobile.

Those who did not get to see the president could console themselves by looking at his picture.

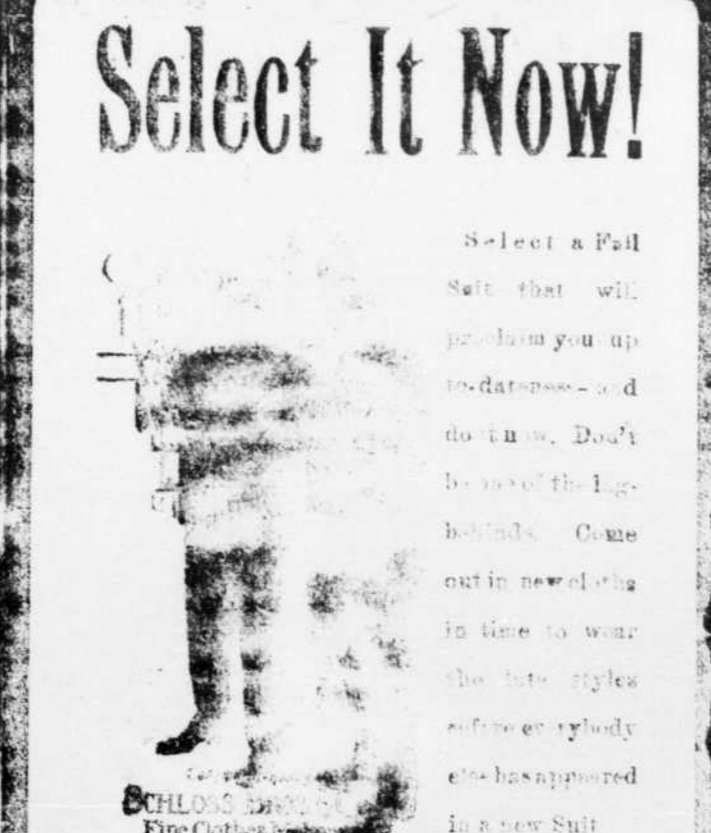

The biggest day in the history of Raleigh was Thursday. Knowing that the president would be there had attracted immense crowds even before the day of his arrival and the fair was in full blast. Early Thursday the throng of people became the wonder of the day. Owing to the fact that Glenn the program had to be very much modified from what had been planned. Breakfast on the program had to be dispensed with. The presidential party took breakfast on their train and arrived in Raleigh at the union depot promptly at 10 o'clock, a. m. They were met here by Lieut. Gen. (Gov. Roy) W. Wilson, followed by Governor Glenn, the state officers, members, committee and a vast crowd of people. The procession made its way to the capitol where the president presented the cup offered by the Historical Society. He was introduced by ex-Governor Aycock in a manner which is peculiar to Aycock alone. The procession then headed for the fair grounds along Hillsboro street. Never such a procession passed along a street in Raleigh before. Arriving at the fair grounds the president reviewed the men in the military organization present. The bandstand during the procession was the appearance of the boys from the A. M. College formed into five companies. The president spoke from a platform in front of the grand stand and was heard by hundreds of people. His speech like the one of the day before at Richmond was pleasing. In fact the president seems to have somewhat for making speeches down South. He probably never spoke to a more orderly and attentive crowd considering the size than the one he addressed Thursday. North Carolina was pleased with him and with his visit and it was an epoch in the history of the fair. He spoke also at Durham, High Point, Salisbury and Charlotte.

The death of Gen. James D. Glenn is a real cause of regret. A most admirable, chivalrous, splendid gentleman. As adjutant of the North Carolina troops he was beloved. In truth and fact as all round man. His death occurring at this particular hour, is a sad, sad calamity. The people of North Carolina expected and had a right to expect something of Gov. Glenn, brother of Gen. Glenn, today, something that he will never have an opportunity to perform again. And Gov. Glenn realized and appreciated the expectation, was equal to the occasion and would have done the honor of the occasion of the visit of President Roosevelt and wife to the state fair in such a manner as all North Carolina would have said well done, and been proud of her chief executive. The visit of President Roosevelt and his wife as the guests of the governor representing so brilliantly as he does, the betterment of the country, would have been an event in the state's history as future generations would have pointed to with pleasurable pride. But God's ways are not our ways, and His ways are just fluding out. The mantle of sorrow and mourning will hang upon the page of history today will record. It is one of the mysteries of God's providence.

Mrs. John Cade, of Leavenworth county, Kansas, owns a fine peach orchard. Last spring her neighbors sprayed their peach trees as usual, but while they sprayed, Mrs. Cade prayed. Mrs. Cade made a fine crop of peaches, while those of her neighbors were almost complete failures.

INCOME INDEMNITY POLICIES FOR SALARY H. A. White, Insurance, Greenville, N. C.

Most things in this world cast their shadows ahead. For years it has been a standing joke though it is a serious matter with the parties involved—that what a jury does for a corporation is a plenty, especially if the corporation is rich and powerful. Jurors are not so much to blame, after all, for they do not have the same chance of judging and knowing, and the attorneys in the case appeal to their prejudice from every standpoint. It has grown to that pass that it looks like people have an idea it is not wrong to steal from a corporation. In any event they are doing it by not, just fleeing them worse than a three card monte gambler. The disclosures made and being made in regard to the big insurance companies in New York show that either the gentlemen do not know it is wrong to steal from them, or the status of the morals is very low. When one man sees an other steal with impunity it emboldens him to try it; it spreads and spreads until some of them are sent to the penitentiary, yet it is no easy matter to get one safely inside.—Greensboro Record.

It has ever been true, at least since the days of the Master, that the fickle populace, which one day shouts "Hosanna" is as likely as not the next to cry "Crucify him!" Komura has found it so. When he left Japan to negotiate with the plenipotentiaries of Russia he was acclaimed by all the people. When he arrived at Tokyo Monday, it was found necessary to guard the streets through which he passed by troops, police and gendarmes, to protect him from the wrath of the people. The incident was not new in its kind, but whenever one of the kind occurs it is suggestive.—Charlotte Observer.
