It is 8 guificant that the great religions of the world have come out of silence and not out of noise, as a rule, in seclusion-not necessarily apart from men nor in solitary places, but away from the tumult and away from distracting sounds. It is in silence alone that we come into possession of ourselves. The noises of life disturb us as a the eye and the sky. There ought to be a cuit for the practice of silence -a body of men and women committed to the preservation of the integrity of their souls by neither hearing nor making speech for certain periods, pledged to the

It is one of the few counties in the State that hasn't a railroad within its borders, and some sections of it are the best and most fertile lands in the State. The new extension will be a model road in all respects, it is to be laid with new 65 pound steel rails and will probably be completed this ar .- Raleigh News and Observer.

How Is Your Heart?

Is your pulse weak, too slow too fast, or does it skip a beat? Do you have shortness of breath, weak or hungry spells, fainting, smothering or choking spells, palpitation, fluttering, pains around the heart, in side and shoulder; or hurt when lying on left side?

If you have any of these

One of the many churches of Spain bears the strange name of "The Church of the Cup of Cold Water." This is its history: A certain good hearted but very poor priest, living in a little village not far from the mountains, was startled one day by two or three sol-diers entering his house, carrying with them a bleeding brigand with a broken arm. The priest hastened to bind up the wounded arm, though the captors seemed to care little whether or not their prisoner lived. The injured man, who bore his sufferings without a groan, then begged for a drink of water, and as he raised himself to receive it, encouraged by the priest's kind man-ner, he whispered that his two chil-dren were left friendless on the edge of the wooded hills. When the prisoner had been dragged away the cure went in search of the poor children, found these crying and hungry and brought them to his numble home. Then, poor as he was, he sent the boy to school and the girl to a neighboring convent and, by much self denial and in spite of many remarks on his folly, provided for their support.
Years passed away, and the chil dren were almost grown up when one day a magnificent carriage stopped at the door of the humble par sonage. A fine looking man in un form, his breast covered with decorations, stepped out. He explained that he was the wounded brigand, that he had escaped and in one o the many Spanish revolutions had chanced to be of the winning party, now held a high office and had re when he had affectionately greeted them he asked permission of the good old priest that he might build him a new church in place of the shabby little mountain chapel and call it "The Church of the Cup of
