When Jowett Smoked. Dr. Jowett, the great master of Baliol college, Oxford, hated tobacco, but he smoked a cigarette once under the following circumstances There had been a little quarrel be tween the master and the other Baltol dons, and Jowett celebrated their reconciliation by dining in hall on the following Sunday. Aft er dinner he noticed a certain awkwardness and guessed its cause. So he said, "I think I should like a cigarette." Every one joyfully lit up at once, and Jowett gently blew down his cigarette until enough was consumed to save appearances.

Funny.

The stranger paused before the hall and smiled. The great shricks and screams of laughter that came from within were contagious. The billboard announced an ama
