

WE have again the pleasure of presenting you with an Album Card,—the seventh of our series. It is a reduced copy of a characteristic Scotch picture,

“O NANNIE, WILT THOU GANG WI' ME?”

(literally, “Popping the Question,”) painted by the celebrated artist, Faed. The original is a very pleasing picture of recognized merit, and we trust our little copy will be received with as much favor as any of the series preceding it. As before stated, our purpose in issuing these cards is to afford gratification to those who receive them, and at the same time to again respectfully yet earnestly invite your attention to our Dr. Jayne's Expectorant, as the most certain and valuable remedy for Coughs and Colds, and for all forms of Lung, Throat and Bronchial Affections. It is not a Cure-all, but probably no remedy has ever had such an extended trial, and none that has so triumphantly maintained its reputation as the very best of curatives for the diseases named. Would it not be well, therefore, to remember this, and to keep a bottle by you, ready to promptly arrest a Cold when first contracted, and thus save yourself, or any member of your family, no little danger and suffering? It will also serve you efficiently in any Asthmatic Affection, Pleurisy, and Inflammation of the Lungs; while in Consumption it will relieve the Cough, and ameliorate most of the symptoms. For the relief of Whooping-Cough it is invaluable, and for Croup, where prompt treatment is usually essential, we believe there is no remedy so generally effective.

AS A LIVER PILL, Jayne's Sanative Pills are exceedingly useful, promptly exciting that organ into healthy action, and thus relieving the thousand-and-one disorders to which its torpidity, or unhealthy secretions give rise. In this way Biliousness, Depression of Spirits, Sick-Headaches, Back-aches, Dizziness, Hysteria, &c., are relieved, and Jaundice and Chronic Liver Complaint averted. For Constipation, or whenever a mild purgative is required, if taken at bed-time, they act with little or no inconvenience to the patient. For Impurity of the Blood, as evidenced by Boils, and Eruptions on the Skin, they will be found very efficient.
