costumes

re of 1321 nd, in the n. When e held at lation, or d States. 's of The we are all losed, has rist which he are cut trimmed. iy be that he hoods intancy

'ie official 1 over the rocession gold if the

ry degrees iged in the ift of past nhuries an jody. sity mace ited cage. design is il weapon intation of of the East 'niversity create a 'aining the ised in the 1 Book of and quill, mess. The e two bulf o educate

COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

Tinsley E. Yarbrough Professor of Political Science, East Carolina University

A native of Decatur, Alabama, Professor Yarbrough is a 1963 Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Alabama and received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University in 1965 and 1967 respectively. While at the University, he was a recipient of Woodrow Wilson (1963) and National Defense Education Act (1963-66) fellowships. Professor Yarbrough has taught at the University of Virginia and has been a member of the East Carolina University faculty since 1967. He served as acting chair and chairman of East Carolina's Department of Political Science, 1979-84, and on several occasions has been recognized for outstanding teaching.

Professor Yarbrough's principal teaching and research fields are public law and judicial politics. He is the author of A Passion for Justice: J. Waties Waring and Civil Rights (Oxford, 1987), The Heagan Administration and Human Rights (editor and contributor, Praeger, 1985), Judge Frank Johnson and Human Rights in Alabama (Alabama, 1981), and Mr. Justice Black and his Critics (Duke, forthcoming). In 1982, his biography of Judge Johnson received a Silver Cavel Award from the American Bar Association and the Alabama Authors Award for Non-fiction from the Alabama Library Association. His more than twenty-five articles in public law and judicial politics have appeared in such forums as the Virginia Law Review, Duke Law Journal, Vanderbilt Law Review, Texas Law Review, Washington and Lee Law Review, American Journal of Criminal Law, Harvard Journal of Policy Analysis and Management, Public Administration Review, North Carolina Law Review, Alabama Law Review, Justice Systems Journal, and Journal of Political Science. He has also delivered papers at nicctings of the American, Southern, Western, Midwest, and North Carolina political science associations and in a seminar conducted at the United States Supreme Court. During the celebration of the bicentennial of the Constitution, he has given lectures in more than twenty forums, including seminars conducted at Clemson University and The Citadel. He is the recipient of research grants, moreover, from the National Endowment for the Humanities, Southern Regional Education Board, and East Carolina University Rescarch Committee.