

personal example to as brave a race of soldiers as ever fought or died for a conviction.

Many a son of old Warren entered that mighty struggle with as unselfish a motive as ever prompted a man to action - with nothing to win and all to lose. Actuated alone by principle, for four long years he suffered all the deprivations and horrors of war, and at the end laid down all but honor and manhood.

The desert of such men are beyond all expression.
