

March 19, 1991

Whereas the University calendar is significantly controlled by the procedures required for students who have flunked out but wish to appear before the readmission appeal committee. This procedure involves a typical separation of 26 days from the end of the fall semester exams to the beginning of the spring semester. Thus a small group of students have forced us to an extended separation between the end of the spring semester until the start of the 2nd semester.

Whereas all students seeking readmission have received at least 3 previous notices about poor academic performance. Thus the affected students have already received advanced warning.

Be it resolved that the credits committee investigate a change in readmission policies designed to reduce the separation between fall semester and spring semester. Consideration should be given to utilizing this time to delay the start of the fall semester.