MEMORANDUM

To: Faculty Senate

FROM: Brian L. Harris, Chair, Committee on Committees

DATE: 8 February 1994

SUBJECT: recommended revisions to the committees of the Faculty

Senate

You have before you the current Faculty Senate committee charges and the revised charges we are submitting for your consideration. We urge you to compare carefully the original committee descriptions with the changes we propose.

Early last fall the Committee on Committees took on a task that had been carried over from 1992-93: the evaluation of committee functions and membership to ascertain if the number of committees can be reduced or membership can be decreased to facilitate staffing committees. In carrying out this review, we have sought also to develop a standard format and standard language for committee descriptions, and to suggest various editorial changes that would help clarify committee charges. Our goal has been throughout to help clarify what the committees do, and how, when, and in what context the committees act.

The Committee on Committees has succeeded in recommending smaller elected and ex officio memberships for a few committees. We also recommend that specific committees be refocussed and redefined in light of emerging and projected responsibilities and workloads. Moreover, we suggest that a Faculty Grievance Committee be formed. This committee would absorb grievance functions from the current Faculty Affairs and Governance committees, with governance policy matters to become the responsibility of a refocussed Governance Committee. We recommend that the current Faculty Affairs Committee be deleted. In addition, we suggest that the Research/Creative Activity Committee be divided along functional lines into two new committees: Research/Creative Activity Grants and Research/Creative Activity Policies, the former to manage the demanding workload of grant proposal evaluation, the latter to consider matters of policy and to recommend recipients of the recently established Research Awards.

We on the Committee on Committees hope that the changes we are recommending will help make committees of the Faculty Senate more efficient and effective, and service on them more attractive and rewarding. Please contact me or any member of the committee if you have recommendations or suggestions.

Sincerely,

Brian L. Harris, Chair Committee on Committees

ADMISSIONS AND RECRUITMENT COMMITTEE CHARGE

- 1. Name: Admissions and Recruitment Committee

PART I. PREFACE

East Carolina University's program of general education is mandated by the Board of Governors' mission statement, Strategic Directions statement, and Strategies statement for the University of North Carolina, and by the Board of Governors' mission statement for East Carolina University. The sections of The General Mission of the University of North Carolina (Long-Range Planning: The University of North Carolina Board of Governors, adopted November 13, 1992) directly addressing general education are reproduced below:

1) UNC Statement of Mission

... to discover, create, transmit, and apply knowledge to address the needs of individuals and society. This mission is accomplished through instruction, which communicates the knowledge and values and imparts the skills necessary for individuals to lead responsible, productive, and personally satisfying lives . . . (p. 19)

I. Instruction

Through instruction, an institution communicates existing knowledge and values and imparts skills to successive generations of students. Instruction includes all of those teaching and related scholarly activities that define the primary purpose of each of the constituent institutions of the University of North Carolina. . .

The basic contributions of colleges and universities to the state and to the nation are made through students by their individual contributions through life as citizens. Through instruction in the basic arts and sciences, social sciences, fine arts, and a broad range of professional disciplines, the University prepares students to lead rewarding lives and to function effectively in the work force and as responsible members of society. Thus, teaching and learning constitute the primary service the University renders to society. (p. 20)

2) UNC Strategic Directions

IV.B. Improve the quality of undergraduate education

One of the basic objectives assigned to the Board of Governors by statute is to improve the quality of education. . .

Educational quality is also determined by the breadth and coherence of the general education, or core curriculum, and by the quality of the programs that constitute academic majors . . .

3) UNC Strategies

Strengthen undergraduate degree programs.

* Urge institutions to establish goals for their general education or core curricula and to review these curricula periodically to ensure their breadth, coherence, and importance to the overall undergraduate degree program.

4) General Statement of Educational Mission, East Carolina University (Long-Range Planning: The University of North Carolina Board of Governors, adopted November 13, 1992, p. 52):

. . . The fundamental educational goal of the university is to provide students with a substantive general education and to enable students and other constituents to secure specialized and multidisciplinary knowledge. . .

The following excerpts from East Carolina University's mission statement, basic goals statements, priorities for action, and strategy statements contained in Strategies for Distinction: University Directions (East Carolina University, 1990-1995) address and implement those portions of the UNC Board of Governors' mission statement, strategic directions statement, and strategies statement that address East Carolina University's general education responsibilities:

1) Educational Mission

The fundamental educational goal of the University is to provide students with a substantive general education and to enable students and other constituents to secure specialized and multidisciplinary knowledge. Through instruction and other educational activities, the University is committed to developing each student's ability to discover, evaluate, and communicate knowledge; to make informed decisions; and to recognize a decision's ethical dimensions. The University is committed to imparting a sense of responsible citizenship, nourishing an understanding of the interdependencies of humankind and the environment, enhancing individual potential, and fostering a lifelong commitment to learning, self-discipline, and human well-being. The University strives to serve all who can benefit from these commitments and to address the educational needs of the mid-Atlantic region.

2) Basic Goals

Goal 1: Achieve distinction in undergraduate education

East Carolina University is committed to distinction in undergraduate education as the primary goal for the university. . .

H. Develop a general studies program that provides (1) a substantial and coherent core of studies in the liberal arts, mathematics, and sciences and (2) strict limits on the use of general studies courses as part of requirements for academic majors.

3) Division of Health Sciences Unit Plan: Priorities for Action

- 1. Achieve distinction in undergraduate education
 - d. Ensure that health professional students have appropriate general education.

4) Division of Academic Affairs Unit Plan: Priorities for Action

- 1. Achieve distinction in undergraduate education
 - In cooperation with appropriate committees, review and implement appropriate changes in general education requirements to ensure a substantial and coherent core of studies in humanities, fine arts, social studies, mathematics, and sciences.

PART II. GENERAL EDUCATIONAL EXPECTATIONS

East Carolina University's general education goals and objectives address and satisfy the UNC Board of Governors' general statement that East Carolina University shall provide students with a substantive general education.

Currently, the course-specific expected educational results are stated in the official course syllabi for the departments offering general education courses. The following are the generic general educational expectations that apply to all general education courses:

General Educational Expectations for All Students Taking General Education Courses:

- a. Acquire experience in scientific and conceptual methods of critical analysis.
- b. Acquire experience in creative, imaginative, and intuitive artistic processes.
- c. Achieve a basic understanding of one or more of the disciplines within each of the following categories: natural sciences and mathematics, social sciences, humanities and fine arts.

- d. Acquire knowledge of the foundations of Western and other civilizations and cultures.
- e. Acquire the knowledge and abilities that constitute the objectives stated in syllabi for general education courses.

PART III. PROPOSED GENERAL EDUCATION COURSE GOALS AND OBJECTIVES English Composition Component

The curriculum focuses on student aptitudes rather than on a particular content because composing is a recursive process that depends not on specific knowledge but on fluent, flexible, creative thinking. To concentrate on the essentials of composing, the program explicitly treats stages of the process (discovery, drafting, etc.). It concentrates on exposition and argument as the modes most useful for the student and citizen. It teaches students how to use library resources so that students may expand their access to knowledge essential for informed discourse. The program emphasizes critical thinking as well as traditional rhetorical skills because only insight can generate substance for the writer's craft to shape. In order to meet the East Carolina University general educational goals, students will develop the following aptitudes:

Goal 1. Students should be able to use various heuristic and planning tactics in preparing a written composition. In drafting and revising, they should choose words carefully, exploit English syntax fully, and ensure coherence. They should edit for standard written English usage, punctuation and spelling. They should also become competent in using the computer to perform these processes.

Component Rationale: The ability to engage in the writing process--discovering subjects; exploring subjects; and drafting, revising, and editing manuscripts is an aptitude fundamental to academic achievement and to a full civic life.

Goal 2. Students should grow increasingly able to read in order to understand literally, to infer, to recognize ideological bias', and to evaluate. They should deepen their sensitivities to connections and differences among texts. They should also increase their capacities for reflecting on experience, analyzing, and solving problems creatively.

Component Rationale: The ability to engage in reading and thinking critically is an aptitude fundamental to academic achievement and to a full civic life.

Goal 3. Students should understand the aims and means of the expositor and the advocate and should be able to write, to inform, and to persuade these rhetorical roles.

Component Rationale: The ability to write clear expository and argumentative compositions is an aptitude fundamental to academic achievement and to a full civic life.

Goal 4. Students should be able to formulate research questions, identify and search both print and electronic bibliographic indexes, locate resources in the library, and read widely for selected kinds of information. They should be able to incorporate information gained from the library and other sources into their compositions, citing documents appropriately.

Component Rationale: The ability to conduct bibliographic research and use library resources effectively in written compositions is an aptitude fundamental to academic achievement and to a full civic life.

Natural Sciences Component

In order to meet the East Carolina University general educational goals, students of natural sciences will develop the following aptitudes:

Goal 1. Develop, refine, and apply the observational, analytical and quantitative thinking skills necessary for scientific inquiry.

Component Rationale: Providing students with the ability to make, communicate, and implement informed and responsible decisions in those areas of life involving science, mathematics and technology requires that students develop their observational, analytical and quantitative thinking skills, as well as develop an understanding of the critical role of experimentation in differentiating among various scientific hypotheses and in distinguishing scientific theories from those of pseudo-science.

Goal 2. Develop knowledge of scientific concepts and theories and of techniques and approaches useful in the process of scientific inquiry.

Component Rationale: Developing students' ability to evaluate scientific information requires exposure to the principles and practices of one or more of the physical, chemical, biological and geological sciences.

Goal 3. Enhance human potential and foster human well-being through the understanding of science.

Component Rationale: Developing students' awareness and knowledge of the natural sciences is essential to enhancing students' understanding of the environmental, ethical, political, socioeconomic, and technological issues of our global society and thus is essential to enhancing human potential and fostering a life-long commitment to human well-being.

Goal 4. Develop the ability to recognize the ethical dimensions of research and a sense of responsible citizenship.

Component Rationale: Imparting to students an appreciation for and an understanding of past, present, and potential future impact of science on society is essential to their understanding of the ethical dimensions of science and their ability to become responsible citizens.

Mathematics Component

In order to meet the East Carolina University general educational goals, students of mathematics will develop the following aptitudes:

Goal 1. Utilize mathematical techniques and procedures in problem-solving activities.

Component Rationale: Developing students' problem-solving skills in the area of mathematics most appropriate to their major course of study--including college algebra, business-oriented mathematics, or number systems--will empower students with the knowledge to succeed in their technological and quantitative studies. Problem-solving skills requiring basic mathematical procedures will be important attributes for obtaining employment in the workplace of the near future.

Goal 2. Develop the ability to recognize and use the words and symbols of mathematics.

Component Rationale: This is a technological and scientific age, and mathematics is the language of technology and science. Developing students' facility with the language of mathematics will provide a basic foundation for understanding and contributing to the solution of many social and environmental problems.

Goal 3. Utilize logical reasoning and critical thinking skills in analyzing mathematical problems and models.

Component Rationale: Developing the students' ability to think critically and reason logically is a precondition for obtaining the other goals listed. Mathematical problems and models are widely recognized as effective in simulating real world situations which require logical and critical thought processes.

Social Sciences Component

The social sciences study the past and present activities of individuals, groups and cultures from different theoretical, analytical and methodological perspectives. In order to meet the East Carolina University general educational goals, students of social sciences will develop the following aptitudes:

Goal 1. Develop a basic understanding of theories, concepts and scientific approaches employed in the social sciences.

Component Rationale: The diversity of the social sciences should enrich students' understanding of theoretical, analytical and methodological perspectives for appreciating behavior and social interaction.

Goal 2. Acquire a basic understanding of the ethical questions and values associated with the social sciences.

Component Rationale: Students should understand that the study of social science and the applications of research have a moral as well as a scientific dimension.

Goal 3. Achieve a basic understanding of the historical and cultural developments that underlie society.

Component Rationale: Students should understand that groups and societies exist and evolve within both a cultural and historical context.

Goal 4. Think critically, communicate effectively and use scientific and conceptual methods in studying social science subject matters.

Component Rationale: Students should have experience in critically evaluating social science findings and in communicating those findings using appropriate terminology.

Humanities and Fine Arts Component

In order to meet the East Carolina University general educational goals, students of humanities and fine arts will develop the following aptitudes:

Goal 1. Develop the critical reading, writing, and thinking skills necessary to make, communicate and implement informed decisions.

Component Rationale: Providing students with the ability to make, communicate, and implement informed, responsible, and ethical decisions in any area of life--public or private-requires that students develop their critical reading, writing, and thinking skills, preconditions for achieving the remaining goals on this list.

Goal 2. Develop the ability to discover, evaluate, and communicate knowledge and to foster a lifelong commitment to learning.

Component Rationale: Developing students' ability to discover, evaluate, and communicate knowledge and fostering students' lifelong commitment to learning require that students learn to understand and implement the activities and methods that create and critically respond to the world's art, drama, literature, music and philosophy.

Goal 3. Enhance human potential and foster an appreciation of the humanities and fine arts.

Component Rationale: Enhancing human potential and fostering an appreciation of the humanities and fine arts require students to develop a commitment to aesthetic, historical, theoretical and other dimensions of the world's art, drama, literature, music, and philosophy.

Goal 4. Develop the ability to recognize a decision's ethical dimensions and to impart a sense of responsible citizenship.

Component Rationale: Providing students with the ability to recognize and respond to the ethical dimensions present in decisions in all areas of life and fostering in students a sense of responsible citizenship require that students develop an understanding of basic ethical theories and methods and that students develop their ability to recognize and critically evaluate the philosophical foundations and the ethical considerations basic to academic disciplines and to the human condition generally.

Health and Physical Education Component

The health and physical education component of the general education requirements enables students to develop knowledge and skills related to the healthful functioning of the human body, thereby fostering a commitment to human well-being. The goals of health education and of physical education are closely related and interdependent. In order to meet the East Carolina University general educational goals, students of health and physical education will develop the following aptitudes:

Goal 1. Develop an understanding of the physical, psychological, and sociocultural factors and human behaviors that influence human well-being and affect the major health problems in our society.

Goal 2. Develop an understanding of the role of knowledge and personal responsibility in fostering a commitment to personal health and well-being.

Goal 3. Develop an understanding of the components of health-related physical fitness and their relationship to personal health and well-being.

Goal 4. Develop or enhance physical fitness or life-time sport psychomotor skills.

Component Rationale: Enhancing human potential and fostering a commitment to human well-being requires that each student develop knowledge and skills related to factors affecting his or her personal health. In order for students to make informed decisions about how to lead healthy, productive lives, they must have an understanding of the various dimensions of health, and recognize behaviors and develop skills that will have a positive impact on their well-being. Exercise and physical fitness contribute to longevity, wellness, and productivity, thereby enhancing human potential.

TEACHING EFFECTIVENESS COMMITTEE REPORT

PARKING PRIVILEGES FOR RECIPIENTS OF TEACHING EXCELLENCE AWARDS

The Teaching Effectiveness Committee recommends that the recipients of the Robert and Lina Mays and Robert L. Jones Alumni Teaching Excellence Awards be allowed to identify parking spaces of their choice, to be reserved for their exclusive use, with signs to that effect erected at the chosen parking spaces for the duration of the academic year following the bestowal of the awards.

AD HOC COMMITTEE TO REVIEW ADMINISTRATIVE EVALUATIONS REPORT

COMMITTEE REPORT ON DEPARTMENT CHAIR EVALUATIONS

Summary

The Ad Hoc Committee on Administrator Evaluations is composed of Linda Allred, Joe Ciechalski, Helen Grove, Jeff Johnson, Havva Meric, and Carmine Scavo. The committee was charged by the Faculty Senate with reviewing the subject of faculty ratings of administrator performance. The committee broke this subject into two--faculty ratings of their respective department chairs; and faculty ratings of administrators at levels higher than their individual departments. We have studied both questions and are recommending the use of the DECAD, as developed by Kansas State University, for the rating of department chairs by their respective faculty. At a later time, we will return with a recommendation for faculty ratings of other administrators.

The DECAD would be combined with other sources of information to compose a complete department chair evaluation by higher level administrators. Our reasons for recommending the DECAD are given below, and unresolved issues needing Faculty Senate action are described.

In recommending the DECAD, we emphasize that the rating of department chairs by faculty should be only part of a larger department chair evaluation scheme that is not, at the current time, formally specified.

Charge of the Committee

This committee was charged with reviewing the subject of faculty ratings of administrator performance and making recommendations about continuing the use of the current form or replacing it with a new form.

ECU currently uses a form for faculty rating of department chair performance that was developed in house many years ago. The same form is used for faculty ratings of department chairs as for faculty ratings of higher level administrators. While the current form does have certain attractive features (i.e., simplicity, low cost), there is a high level of dissatisfaction with its continued use. This committee thinks that the current form should be discontinued for two reasons. First, many of the questions are not valid indicators of the underlying concepts the form is intended to measure; and second, the roles of department chairs and higher level administrators are different enough within the university to warrant separate faculty rating forms for these positions.

The committee considered whether to develop a new form in house or to use a commercially available form. Given that a well developed form is available commercially and at an affordable cost, the committee is recommending adoption of this form. We recommend the DECAD (see attachments) a form specifically designed to solicit faculty ratings of department chairs, be adopted for use as the faculty evaluation portion of the department chair evaluation process. This form is recommended for the following reasons:

First and foremost, the DECAD is specifically tailored for ascertaining faculty ratings of department chair performance. While department chairs are administrators, they are also faculty. While department chairs have important links to deans, vice chancellors, etc., they also have important links to members of their own departments. While department chairs often are required to communicate university policies to their departments, they are also required to communicate departmental needs to the university administration. This mixing of roles is difficult for more generic forms of evaluation to tap.

AD HOC COMMITTEE TO REVIEW ADMINISTRATIVE EVALUATIONS REPORT COMMITTEE REPORT ON DEPARTMENT CHAIR EVALUATIONS (2) attachment 12 (continued).

- The DECAD not only asks faculty to rate department chairs on a variety of attributes, it also asks faculty and department chairs to evaluate the importance of each of the attributes on which faculty rate the department chair. This procedure has two benefits. First, the department chair's and faculty's importance ratings can be matched, yielding a measure of the degree of consensus between the chair and the department. Second, the overall faculty rating of the department chair is weighted by the relative importance that the faculty attach to the various rating scales.
- The DECAD norms department chair ratings to a national norm group. This allows department chairs at ECU not only to be compared among themselves but also to be compared to a national sample of department chairs at other universities.
- As indicated above, the DECAD gives similar results as the current administrator evaluation form for questions phrased similarly. Importantly, the DECAD also solicits more ratings on a variety of questions that are not asked in the current questionnaire.
 These scores are combined on the DECAD report into several summary scales: personnel management, planning and development, departmental reputation, and a total evaluation score. Each of these are weighted by faculty importance ratings and by the chair's importance ratings. Agreement among faculty on importance of the various factors and agreement between the chair and faculty are also reported.
- The DECAD is relatively inexpensive to administer and process. For a university of ECU's size, Kansas State University would charge $25 per department chair evaluated (assumes 25 or more chairs evaluated per year). The current administrator evaluation has no "real" cost attached to it since all costs (printing of questionnaires, data processing, printing of evaluations, etc.) are covered in house. However, if it were possible to calculate these costs, the DECAD would most likely be in line with the current questionnaire. Possible additional costs for the DECAD include training of individuals on campus who were familiar enough with the DECAD reporting form such that they could act as resource people if there were questions about individual evaluations. Additionally, deans who use the DECAD for deciding on department chair evaluations would need to be trained in DECAD interpretation, as would the individual department chair themselves. This training could be handled in house by the resource people trained by Kansas State University.

In our evaluation of the DECAD, the committee conducted a pilot study in the spring semester, 1993. Seventeen department chairs volunteered to have both the ECU administrator evaluation form and the DECAD distributed in their departments. The ECU evaluation was processed by the Office of Planning and Institutional Research, while the DECAD was processed by Kansas State University. Results were returned to the respective department chairs with a copy (after names and department identifiers were removed) going to the committee. The committee then asked individual department chairs to comment on both forms. The results of this pilot study are summarized below.

- High correlations between questions that are similarly worded indicate that the DECAD and the ECU instrument show high levels of agreement.
- The DECAD measures a significant number of items not measured by the ECU instrument.
- Department chair response to the DECAD was favorable. Six of the seventeen department chairs involved in the pilot study responded to an invitation to provide more in-depth comments on the two evaluation instruments. All six gave qualified support to the DECAD over the ECU instrument. Several chairs made a compelling case that the DECAD needed some sort of open ended component to allow faculty to augment their ratings on the closed ended questions.

AD HOC COMMITTEE TO REVIEW ADMINISTRATIVE EVALUATIONS REPORT COMMITTEE REPORT ON DEPARTMENT CHAIR EVALUATIONS (3) attachment 12 (continued).

Committee Recommendations

- This committee recommends that the DECAD be adopted as instrument to gather faculty input on department chair performance.
- The committee also recommends that an open-ended, semi-structured series of questions be attached to the DECAD such that faculty can augment their ratings of department chairs with more in-depth comments. The responses to this section of the faculty survey would be returned to the department chair for feedback purposes only; individual department chairs could at their own volition forward these responses to their deans, if they so wish.
- The committee suggests that the open-ended questions follow the format used in an early version of the DECAD. These are:
 - 1. Which matters need attention in the department during the next year or two?
 - 2. Identify any departmental policies or procedures which:
 - a) you feel need immediate improvement
 - b) are particularly effective and should be emphasized.
 - 3. What is the most important observation you can make about your department chair's:
 - a) administrative effectiveness?
 - b) administrative style?
 - 4. Other comments:
- Two schools (Art and Social Work) are not organized into departments and thus do not have formal department chairs. Both schools do, however, have associate deans or coordinators, serving under the respective deans, who have many of the same responsibilities of more traditional department chairs. After examining the university organizational chart and consulting with the respective deans, the committee recommends the following:
 - The Associate Deans for Graduate Studies, and Undergraduate Studies, and the Directors of Criminal Justice, and Field Education in the School of Social Work should be rated by faculty on the DECAD since their responsibilities more closely resemble those of department chairs in other schools;
 - 2. Coordinators in the School of Art should not be rated by faculty on the DECAD since:
 - a. their responsibilities are quite different from department chairs in other schools, and;
 - b. the School of Art currently uses an in-house instrument for regularly collecting faculty ratings of these coordinators.
