Dean Tabor

It is with the utmost respect and appreciation that the College accepts the oil painting of the late Dean Tabor, whose memory lives as strongly on this campus as it would had he been with us only yesterday. His name stands for excellence and greatness in his field, and also to think of him is to admire again the Ben Miller is another who has been generous with his car. At outstanding qualities that branded him a kind and understanding individual in the profession that calls so loudly for such characteristics-the teaching profession. Dean Tabor was not Ben said it was worth it Three times. only a good teacher; he was a good friend. He always had a kind word for the student, and his association with the students he taught certainly inspired those students to a plane that would ambitious self, completely revised the music setup at the college and led the erstwhile dormant music department from the shadows of unimportance to the shining path of recognition. He accomplished all of this in the very few years that he was head of his department, and his fine work started the E. C. T. C. music department on the road of achievement. Since his death, Mr. Dittmer, who gained valuable experience by being fortunate if the printer uses such clean paper? But you can drop a card, enough to work under such a leader as Mr. Tabor, has carried on the work of his predecessor in such a way that Mr. Tabor's efforts were not in vain. The present music department is rapidly expanding and will undoubtedly rank with the majority of colleges in the state in the near future.

To the family of Mr. Tabor, we say "thank you" from the bottom of our hearts. The painting will take a place of prominence among our pictures, and the very presence of his likeness in our halls of learning will be as a guiding star of accomplishment for those who knew him and those who will learn of him.

Last Friday morning two car loads of enthusiastic Young Democrats left dear old ECTC for points North. Meaning, of course, Raleigh to attend the Legislature. Well, frankly, I didn't know exactly what to expect, so I couldn't have been disappointed. After what seemed to have been days of traveling we reach-Dancing is considered such an activity on this campus and so we ed our destination. Parting at the Capitol to find places more comfortable than park benches on which to sleep (in case we couldn't find anything else to do) we said we would meet in a half hour to go get something to eat. Everybody found a place to hang his clothes, or at least we Saturday night at the Junior-Freshman dance, things were thought they had, and we were back in front of the Capitol at suddenly changed from a dancing good time to a boxing match. the designated time. Capitol and climbed the stairs to the House and Senate. To my hosts and to the guests-or maybe we skipped that passage of great surprise and dismay (?) I beheld a hall full of boys, all shape, sizes and colors. The start seemed well enough, but alas . . there were other hopeful females on the scene. After receiving a tag, that labeled you as to your name, school, and where you more of East Carolina because it allows fighting at college would be, we went to a "pep" meeting. There was really no pep there. Wake Forest had all the elections sewed up, and everything went off with little thunder. It turned out to be the newly elected speaker of the House. Davis informed me that she had had her eye on him since last vear. And did I blame her? I did Not! Our group split up to go to the different assemblies. Ruby Grant, Mildred Beverly and Janie Eakes went to the Senate. There it is reported that they really did things true to E. C. T. C. form. (Cornering the cutest boys, and doing a good job of talking). Slater, Miller, Doris Brock, Cordell, Davis and I remained in the House and kept the "Home fires burning." Hours and Hours passed while hot debates took place on such bills as the impeachment of Senator Reynolds, Neutrality, ficing real values. Short and Long term Foreign Policys.

But wait—someday you'll really love And then you'll begin to pay. For the hearts you've broken will give you no rest-Through your work, your dreams, and your play.

Just wait till you fall in love With a girl so wonderously fair Then you'll remember all the girls vo ve kissed And begin to doubt that she's square.

When you kiss the lips of the girl that you love And leave her at her door. You'll begin to wonder in spite of yourself If she's been kissed that way before.

You'll never think she's doing you right Though she tries and does her best. You'll be jealous of every man you see And think that she loves him best.

Remember this, my dear young man. Or many days shall you rue The things you do to another man's girl-Another man to your girl can do. __borrowed

Social activities are considered a vital part of any students' college life if they are the kind of activities that are beneficial from the standpoint of health, relaxation, and entertainment. are given that privilege, as long as it is beneficial to our social needs both adept at the manly art of self defense and had they both been sober, in the ring, and properly refereed, perhaps the fight would have been very interesting. But fighting at a college dance with many guests to witness the skirmish doesn't seem quite right to us. To begin with, it was rude and impolite both to the Emily Posts that says fighting is perfectly permissible and in excellent taste when one is a guest at a dance. And then too, we're very sure that the outsiders who attended will think so much dances.

Perhaps you say there was just cause to fight. Well, maybe play one's pugnacious art. If you have to fight, why pick the dance floor for it?

If the students of East Carolina Teachers College enjoy the privilege of having dances, they should not abuse it by staging brawls at their dances. It's up to the student body to see that the privilege is not lost. And the best way we know to keep that privilege is to give it only to those who will conform to the rules.

Probably nothing will be done about removing the dancing privileges from the student body this time, but the administration might not overlook another incident like that of Saturday night, for it casts a bad light on the college.

The students should protect their privileges. Just because a few persons refuse to cooperate, should the students tolerate it and lose their own privileges and lower their college in the eyes of the public? Well, they are going to do just that if they continue to give social privileges to those who don't deserve them.
