Orchestra Composed of Fourteen Pieces, Representing Nine Nationalities.

The Little Philharmonic Orchestra held the interest of the audience throughout an evening of excellent entertainment as the melodious tones of the various instruments blended together in perfect harmony under the superb direction of their leader, George H. Shapiro.

As the orchestra played familiar pieces from Brahms, MacDowell, and Strauss, the audience sat enraptured, allowing themselves to be carried off into a land of beautiful melody. So much did they enjoy the program that, reluctant to even! allow the musicians a short intermission, they demanded an encore, which was given—"The Flight of which was given-"The Flight of the Bumble Bee" by Rimsky-Karsikoff-before the masters of music left the platform for a few short minutes of rest.

The unusual, the extravagant, the extraordinary, are the words to describe Thomas Wilfred, who will present his unique program to the student body here, April 8. According to a bulletin released, it is "a recital—an artist at a keyboard-yet not a sound is heard, but as he touches the keys of the strange instrument in the darkened hall the white screen comes to life and opens up vistas of fantastic forms in such graceful movements and gorgeous colors as no pen can describe."
