CHAPTER REPORTS

Charlotte Chapter—Miss Martha Moseley, Viola Jones, Ed Walters and Mrs. Helen Jones, Ed Walters were hostesses to the November 10th chapter which met on November 10th at the business meeting. Mr. Baxter Ridenhour presided during the business meeting at which time plans were made for the Christmas party.

Greenville Chapter—Mrs. Lucille Stokes) Mrs. Tom Foley (Lucille Stokes) was made Chairman of Everyday and Christmas Party Sale.

The report of the Executive Board meeting which was held in Raleigh was well received.

Theresa Thomas, a new member was introduced and welcomed into the 28 alumni present.

Miss Lessie Cogdell is president of the chapter.

Chandler (Mildred Liverman), treasurer and Mrs. P. P. Wilson (Rosa Van Hooke) reporter.

Mrs. Jenkins writes, "We have enjoyed our two meetings. You should hear us talking about the 'good old days'."

Both meetings have been held at Harvey's Cafeteria.

Raleigh—Plans for a party for Raleigh and Wake County Alumni were made at the second fall meeting of the Raleigh Chapter which was held at the home of Mrs. J. C. Holland (Alla May Jordan) on Whitaker Drive. After the business meeting, cake, ice cream, coffee and nuts were served to the 28 alumni present.

Miss Lessie Cogdell is president of the chapter.

WEDDINGS

It is quite a job to keep up with the alumnae for they are always changing their names and are moving about. Ten girls have married recently in formal ceremonies. They are:

Mary Rachel Teel (Mrs. Hugh Cornelius Winslow), Greenville.

Mary Louise Hester (Mrs. James R. Fawcett), Asheville.

Katie Lou Jones (Mrs. Russell Arthur Doirler).

Hettie Marie Braswell (Mrs. George Aubrey Mohern), Enfield.

Vivian Yelverton (Mrs. John Edwin Frinch).

Elizabeth Turner (Mrs. Melvin Jackson), Shiloh.

Nancy Hargett Harris (Mrs. Norman Earl Warren), Greenville.

VETERANS

Miss M. E. H. unclassified student.

Miss M. Hart from Ayden was a student on this campus for three years before entering the service at Fort Bragg August 11, 1941. He became Master Sergeant and Crew Chief in the AAF. Lill spent 26 months overseas at Casablanca, Africa, and in Foggia, Italy. He was discharged this year and plans to attend college.

Miss M. E. H. entered the Navy December 1941 at Raleigh, and was assigned to Norfolk, Va. After the North Atlantic campaign he transferred to the USS Intrepid, and served with the USS Intrepid, Philippines, Okinawa and was 40 miles from Japan at the time. After serving for 33 months he received his discharge and plans to graduate in the near future.

Miss M. E. H. Kellebrew recently elected president of the newly organized World War II Veterans' club, who have been Greenboro, entered the Army Air Corps May, 1942 at Fort Jackson. He received his basic training at McDill Field, Tampa, Florida and at Lake Charles, La. He went overseas May 25, 1943 and served 15 months in the European Theatre. After returning to the states August 10, 1944, he was stationed at Langley Field until he received his discharge on May 19, 1945.

Earl Sawyer from Jamesville says his army career was short, but not short enough. He entered the army April 17, 1944 and received his training in the Infantry at Camp Blanding, Florida. Earl received his discharge September 12.

Leslie Earl Sadler of Winterville, entered the Coast Guards in June 1942. During his 39 months in the Coast Guards he was stationed on a Coast Guard Cutter around Greenland with the North American Patrol. Before entering the service he had a program with WGTC and held a position with the Pitt County Agriculture Department. He was discharged in September and is majoring in English and Journalism.

Garlan F. Bailey from Thomasville, a Sophomore, is not discharged from the service completely, but is out on a Reserve Commission. He entered the AAF August 8, 1942, and after receiving his training for a bombardier, he was commissioned a

Whitehurst Heads Dramatics Club

Mary Whitehurst was elected president of the Chi Pi Players at their regular meeting, Charlotte Robertson, vice-president, Charlotte Carr, secretary, and Margaret Shields, treasurer.

Plans were made at subsequent meetings for a chapel play to be presented this quarter and for Chi Pi productions of plays in the winter and spring terms. Committees were appointed to take care of the Green Room, select a play, and to revise the constitution.

The guest speaker for the evening was Miss Elizabeth Walker, assistant librarian. Since this is book week, Miss Walker was invited to speak on the topic, "Reading for Pleasure". She spoke very interestingly and entertainingly on this subject. She mentioned books of different types and different subjects, including Home Economics, Science, Novels, Biographies, and Poetry. From some of these books, she read passages which aroused the interest of everyone.

The members and guests were invited into the reception room where delicious iced fruit juice and cookies were served by members of the refreshment committee.

Home Ec Club Installs Members By Candle Light

The Home Economics Club held its regularly monthly meeting on Tuesday night, November 13, in the auditorium of the Classroom Building with over 100 in attendance.

An impressive candle-light installation service for new members was one of the high-lights of the meeting. At the beginning of the service, approximately 50 old members escorted the new members to their seats. During the ensuing ceremony the new members lighted their candle, signifying their pledge of loyalty and service to the club.

During the business meeting, the chairman of the various committees gave reports on the work done by their committees since the last club meeting. These committees have already made good plans to be carried out this year, and these will help greatly to further the progress of the club.

The club has chosen "Learning More About the High School Home Economics Club" as its project for the year. As one phase of carrying out this project, the club has decided to be co-sponsor with the Greenville High School Club for the District High School Rally Day, which is to be held next spring here at the college.

Preparation For Tough Cage Schedule Started By Pirates

As the opening game of the 1945 ECTC Five sees a long, tough road ahead of them. There will be several long trips during the season which will take our team up in the Mid Western section of North Carolina to meet old and new rivals. The team is showing earnest interest in the 1945-46 season by practicing each afternoon after the classroom day has been finished.

To the present schedule, there should be many additions and a few changes in the games now slated. The boys roll into action in a pre-Christmas game December 14 when they entertain in the Wright Building Campbell College from Buies Creek, N. C. This game should prove to be very interesting since the ECTC boys will be determined to show the public that they are definitely ready for collegiate competition. Buies Creek usually has a much smaller squad than the Pirates but what they lack in height, they make up in skill and speed as ECTC well knows. Campbell plays host to the Pirates on January 8, 1946.

Our lads also have a tentative game scheduled with the Kinston Marines that is to be played in Kinston on the night of December 4. Should this game come about, it will help iron out the pre-season kinks which always turns up in early season games.

After the holidays, the team is going to have just four or five days to whip itself into shape because the Kinston Marines plays a return game here on January 4.

January 11 sees our boys on a road trip where they play the Greensboro ORD base in Greensboro, N. C. Should the ORD team have as much basketball material as they had Football, they should give any college team a fit. The Pirate Five will go on West to Thomasville where they are entertained by the Thomasville Lions Club Semipro basketball team. The Lions have acquired several of the best high school and college stars of the Piedmont section of N. C. for their team. Many of the boys are former stars in the old Thomasville Industrial League.

Back in Greenville on Sunday, January 15, the cagers take a one day break before motoring over to Wilson and a game with Atlantic Christian College. It is to be remembered that Atlantic Christian is East Carolina Teachers College's most earnest rival and in the years preceding, a very close race has been staged for the honor of holding the Old Oaken Bucket. After four year layoff, the ECTC boys are going to make a bid to receive and keep the container. February 12 will give the students a chance to see the struggle in the ECTC gym.

January 18 should prove very interesting for many a lassie on campus because the Camp LeJune Ma-

WAA To Sponsor Chapel Program In December

The Women's Athletic Association held its monthly meeting on Thursday night, November 8. Carolyn Jessup was elected head of softball to replace Rachel Lee, and Mary Ruth Baker was elected to replace Carolyn Lowe as head of individual sports. It was suggested that posters be made and put up to advertise soccer tournaments which as yet have not been attended.

Volleyball games started Monday, November 11, and are going to be played every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights at 7:30. Field hockey started last week, also, and will be played every Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 4:00 o'clock.

The WAA is going to give a chapel program the first of December. The theme of the program is to be folk dances of different countries. Julian Ann Hancock, Evelyn Peele, and Carolyn Register are to be in charge of the program.

It has been decided to have a certain night of the month for its meetings and have games afterwards. The monthly meeting are to be on the fourth Thursday night of each month. Attendance is urged at these meetings.

The gym is still open from 4:00 to 5:30 every afternoon Monday through Friday. Those wishing to play ping pong, volley, badminton, etc. may come in and get equipment from the office and play in the gym.

Bowling scores will be put in the TECO ECHO if bowlers will write their whole names on the bowling sheets.

Coach Has Record One Dreams About

Upon leaving ECTC, Coach Smith has compiled a record of which all coaches dream about. He moved from Greenville to La Grange, N. C., from La Grange to Littleton, from Littleton, to Burlington. From Burlington, he entered the Navy and served as athletic director of the Coast Guard Air Station in Elizabeth City, N. C. for two years until he received a discharge because of an old leg injury which he picked up while playing ball for ECTC. Out of the Navy, Smith moved to Gastonia, N. C. where he coached at that class A school in Western North Carolina. Between school terms he was in charge of the American Legion baseball club of Gastonia. His last move before coming to ECTC was to Marian, N. C. in the mountains, where he was employed as athletic Recreation director of the Marian Mfg. Company.

As a coach for these places, he has a won and lost record which is hard to beat. Out of 146 basketball games, his teams lost only 27 leaving 119 in the win column. Forty of his 51 football games were on the winning side. His baseball teams won about four fifths of their games with 73 won and 27 lost.

Coach Smith's banner year came with his football team in Gastonia in the fall of '44. The team bowled over all opponents for eight straight wins needing only a win or tie from Charlotte Central to win the Western Class A Conference title. As any good team is likely to do, they lost the game 20 to 7 which put them into a two way tie with Greensboro for the crown. They were also on the tail end of the score of the play off game between Gastonia and Greensboro, played in Salisbury. This knocked them out of the race.

Experience Soph Says Don't Study

By Ruth Whitfield

Freshmen, I now and hereby aim to set forth as plain and simply as I can, and yet retain the facts, my reasons for advising you not to study. Nope, it isn't a typographical error so go ahead and gasp. It's only natural that you would stare in amazement at that phrase — not to study. After all that wisdom and counsel dished out by Mama, Papa, Aunt Lucy, and then by Dr. Frank, Dr. Slay and Miss Morton it is quite logical that you by now think there is no other alternative under the sun but to study.

That's the very reason why I've waited this long to give you my simple, yet tremendously important, little message. By now you've had time to try out those far-fetched and impractical ideas of Pop's and to draw your own conclusions. You've had just enough experience and background to show sympathy and understanding when I tell you of my own woeful experiences as a freshman so that you may profit by my mistakes.

Although I am now an old and callous sophomore, I once was a sweet and innocent and tender freshman like you. I, too, was full of ambitions and determined to live up to grandma's expectations. I, too, fell the victim of all those do's and don'ts, must's and mustn't's of all the omniscient. And likewise I consequently went right to work—studying just as you have been doing.

Why, each night I would gobble down my food, hurry home and get my five pounds of ancient history and rush over to the library where I would dig away until 9:30. Then I would dash back to third floor of Cotten, get out my chemistry book and stare at the first page (my conscience won't permit me to say study) until twelve. I would then take five minutes (that was all the time I could spare) and weep bitterly because lights had to be out at twelve. But at any rate I knew that history, and the next morning I walked to class with confidence and a feeling of satisfaction from a job well done.

With that wicked little twinkle in his eyes, Dr. Hollar casually announced that we would do a "little written work" for the first part of the period. "Oh, well, when you are prepared as I am, you don't mind a pop." I thought, as I got out an extra sheet of paper with the intention of giving elaborate and detailed answers. When he asked the first question I didn't seem to understand, so I asked if he would repeat the statement. After a pensive frown and scratch of the head, I ventured to ask if he weren't taking the question from the wrong chapter. "They are from chapter three. Isn't that the one you had for today?" That's the chapter he had assigned all right but where the heck did he get that stuff? I gulped and stared in bewilderment till the period was up and resolved to make a better show in chemistry.

Oh yes, freshmen, I remember yet that first chemistry class, especially. How I was filled with apprehension and trepidation (shohomoric terms for fear and trembling) as I entered that big solemn room! The bell rang, awfully loud it seemed, and in bustled Mrs. Pic who immediately proceeded to fill the blackboard with queer-looking little designs and structures. "Jeepers, I thought, this is going to be easy; that looks like first grade stuff". But just at that moment she started explaining (huh, did I say explaining?) those peculiar lines called chemical formulas, equations, etc. You wouldn't believe a person could talk 60 m. p.h. until you try taking notes in long-hand on what she is saying.

I went to chemistry class about three weeks before I learned enough to ask a question or even knew enough to get mixed up." Suddenly one day I happened to recognize an equation on the board although I didn't understand the reaction. Instantly thrilled over my discovery, I exclaimed, "Why, gosh, I'm beginning to see the light! I mean I'm beginning to learn enough to get confused! I mean..." Mrs. Pic looked at me in alarm and asked one of the girls near the side to raise a couple of windows after which she resumed her confusing. I mean her explaining! (L'il Abner would call this amusing but oh, so confounding!)

I don't seem to be getting anywhere with my chemistry; so let's go to French. But this is getting monotonous 'cause it's the same story all over again. I studied like heck over those verbs and conjugations and actually learned the rules concerning the position of the definite article, but when I got to class that little upturn as of a teacher started barking French sentences at me so fast I just sit there and stared at her about the way Fido does when he sees a squirrel. Feeling kind of ashamed of my ignorance, I modestly told her after class that I didn't get around to studying my lesson. She did wonders to my morale when she came back with "L'm awfully glad to hear that, for I'd hate to know you had studied it and couldn't answer those questions any better than you did!"

So, you see, freshmen what's the use? Take the advice of a sophomore ("soph" comes from Latin meaning wise; never mind what "more" means) and lay down your books. Go to the campus building every night and do all the other things you'd like to. For lo, it is written, knowledge is the root of all evils, and behold; ignorance is bliss!!!

UNVEILING

tor of the State Department of Archives and History welcomed the guests and presided over the meeting.

Miss Nina Cleve, of New York City, niece of the late governor, presented the portrait, while her daughter, Miss Florence Jarvis Cleve, unveiled it.

The portrait was painted by Mrs. Frances Silvester Packard and has been in the family for some time.

In accepting the portrait on behalf of the State, Governor Cherry declared: "Governor Jarvis served as a soldier in the War between the States; as a member of the General Assembly; as a lawyer; and as lieutenant governor and Governor of North Carolina during the State's most tragic era. On this Armistice Day of 1945, I am honored to have the privilege of accepting for North Carolina the portrait of a Governor who did so much for the State, particularly in education."

Mr. Sugg, in paying tribute to Governor Jarvis, gave a full review of his life. He made the following statement: "It can be truly said of Governor Thomas Jordan Jarvis, that if his soul was turned inside out there would not be dark spot on it".

Informal Teas Are Enjoyed At Meth. Student Center

The days are beginning to get cool and a cup of hot tea serves as a delightful stimulant. A cookie or a cracker does no harm either. This fall the Wesley Foundation has been extending an invitation to different faculty members and any student who wished to visit the Student Center on Sunday afternoon to come and have a cup of tea and talk over the "affairs of the universe". They have good discussions, too. After coming once they have been sure to come again. This has helped the students and teachers to see each other as persons and all seem to forget their classroom manner, which we like for them to do. Everyone has enjoyed these informal afternoons together, and they hope to have more of them. Will you have a cup of tea?

Two Strange Ladies Share Suite In Science Lab

By Mary Whitehurst

Two charming ladies on the campus, Ephigeniah and Rosalie, are strangers to most of the students. They have come quite a distance, all the way from Arkansas. Ephigeniah has lived in North Carolina for three years, while Rosalie is a newcomer this fall.

In appearance they cannot compete with our campus beauties, but to some they are quite appealing. Dr. Christine Wilton is one of those who appreciate their beauty. The ladies are very small as compared to the college girls but they are very large as compared to others of their status. Actually, each would about cover the bottom of one of the dining hall coffee cups. Their color is warm brown, brown all over, and they are as fuzzy as caterpillars.

Their manners are quite good, for they neither bite nor try to run away. They appear to be quite happy on their diet of flies and insects, such as crickets, and so lead normal lives, to be in a new habitat, at their home in the Biology laboratory. What is their classification? No, not freshman or seniors, but SPIDERS.

If you run into Dr. Wilton while roaming around the Science building as I was, I am quite sure she will be glad to introduce you to her friends, which she assures me are ladies (in gender). A word of caution—do not call the ladies "insects". All biologists know an insect has only six legs and I am sure you want to be above reproach in such matters.

Perhaps you will agree with me after you visit Dr. Wilton's spiders that there are many striking comparisons between these ladies and our fellow-students. One of the examples which come to my mind while looking at the ladies is the likeness to them of sprawling students, especially while studying.
