Motorcycle Accident Fatal To East Carolina Student

Lavene W. Midgett, Jr. Suffers Concussion, Companion Is Injured

Lavene W. Midgett, Jr., a native of Raleigh on the Outer Banks, died at two o'clock Friday morning, April 27, after suffering a brain concussion when he was thrown off his motorcycle on the curve in front of Greenwood cemetery about seven o'clock the previous evening.

William Harris, Goldston, who was riding with Midgett, suffered a compound fracture of the lower right leg. Both students were taken immediately to Pitt Memorial hospital. Authorities at the hospital described Harris' condition as fair.

An eyewitness account of the accident stated Midgett's vehicle struck a depression in the shoulder of the road, throwing both him and Harris into the air and the motorcycle coming to a halt near the end of the cemetery wall.

Jack Gray, also a college student, from Boston near Midgett's hometown, stated he was driving east on a street when the motorcycle passed him. It ran off the road just at the cemetery, he said, struck a small hole in the shoulder and threw both boys off. Midgett landed in a hole beyond the cemetery wall and Harris landed about 40 feet beyond.

Midgett was a sophomore at East Carolina and was a veteran of the Coast Guard. His father, who for 35 years has been officer in charge of the Roanoke lifeboat station, came to Greenville to take his son's body home. Midgett was the family's only son. He is survived by two sisters, Lieutenants M. E. Corbett and Herbert Women of the police department.

Bob Maness Wins Soph Presidency In Run-Off Race

In a run-off election held Wednesday, April 18, Bob Maness of Greensboro defeated Mitchell Saleed of Greensboro in a close race for the top office of the Sophomore class. Maness, a business education major, also holds membership in the Air Force ROTC Cadet Officers' club, the Commerce club and the Veterans club.

In the contest for the vice-presidency, Donna Jean Yancey from Oxford edged out Wilson Lovett, Robert Sears of Norfolk, Va., topped Horace Dixon and Lou Yates for the office of treasurer and Kitty Geringer of Draer defeated Gale Dorsey in the secretary race.

Goldsboro's Anne Butler will represent the sophomore class in the Student legislature. She won over Betsy Holgood and Lois Simpson. The reporter elected for next year was Evelyn Davis from Warsaw. Her opponents were Ann Crumpler and John Mandy.

In the first election, Pat White from Lenoir won over four other candidates for "Tecno" publicity chairman.

Over fifty per cent of the entire Freshman class turned out to cast their votes in the run-off election.

Awards Day Plans Near Completion Starling Claims

Plans for the annual Awards Day are well under way, according to Leonard B. Starling, chairman of the Awards committee. Tentative date for the event has been set by the committee for next Thursday, May 3.

At the Awards Day ceremony, certificates will be awarded to students outstanding in academic work, to members of the Student legislature, members of the publications staffs, and students elected to "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

Two students, one man and one woman, will receive an "Outstanding Citizen" award. The results of an election in the Student legislature which determined the recipients of the award will not be released until presentation of the certificates. Twelve students will receive Departmental awards as the outstanding senior students in their respective departments.

Dr. John D. Messick will present the awards.

New Course Set In Homemaking For Summer Term

The department of home economics at East Carolina college will offer a workshop called "Adult Education in Homemaking" during the first summer session of 1951, according to an announcement by Dean Leo W. Jenkins, director of the college summer school. Dates for the course have been set for June 25-July 6. Dr. Bessie McNeil, director of the department of home economics at East Carolina, will serve as coordinator.

Various aspects of the home and homemaking will be studied in the workshop, according to Dr. McNeil. A week's work will be devoted primarily to the following: the development of the child from infancy, through preschool and school years, and into adolescence. The development and training of the exceptional, or handicapped, child will also be discussed. Religion, recreation, mental health, and finances will be considered as they apply to the family and to home life.

Films illustrative of the principles of family life education have been obtained for use during the workshop. A number of off-campus speakers will participate in class meetings. Among social events now being arranged are a luncheon and a picnic for those attending the workshop.

"Adult Education in Homemaking," says Dr. McNeil, has been planned so as to be of special help and interest to parents, teachers, school administrators, upperclassmen majoring in home economics, and others.

The workshop will carry three quarter hours of credit. It will meet during its ten-day schedule from 9:00 to 12:00 each morning in the Flanagan building on the campus.

Six Representatives Of ACE Attend State Meeting In Greensboro

Six student representatives of the East Carolina college branch of the Association for Childhood Education attended the state convention of the organization held in Greensboro Saturday, April 21. Also present for the meeting were several representatives of the Greenville city branch of the ACE.

Doris Pleasant of Angier, president of the college branch; Dowdy Hardy of La Grange, president-elect; June Pritchard of Montclair, N. J.; Peggy Harper of Kinston; Jean Jackson of Angier; and Anita Gullidge of Raeford represented the East Carolina ACE at the state convention. They were accompanied to Greensboro by Dora E. Coates, faculty advisor of the group.

Mrs. Ellen Carroll, Mrs. Sally Klingenschmitt, and Elisabeth Hyman of the faculty of the campus Training school, and Annie Mae Murray, director of the East Carolina kindergarten were delegates from the city ACE chapter.

College Commerce Club Installs New Officers

The installation of new officers of the Commerce club of East Carolina college took place Tuesday evening, April 17.

New Officers of the club are as follows: Alfred L. Smith, Greenville, president; Donald H. Cox, Kinston, vice-president; Maggie Gatlin, Ernal, secretary; Paul D. Weeks, Whitakers, treasurer; and Annie Lou Butts, Angier, and Helen Grace Baker, Kenansville, publicity.

Possible projects for the club for the coming year were discussed at the meeting. A project will be voted on at the next meeting.

Senior Musicians Appear In Recital In Austin Building

Boyd Elliott of Thomasville, trombonist, and Lee Rogers of Rocky Mount, trumpeter, appeared in their senior recital Monday evening, April 23, in the Austin auditorium. The recital was sponsored by the college department of music.

Betty Sue Whitfield of Hurdle Mills, pianist, was accompanist for Elliott on the program for the evening; and Dolores Matthews of Henderson, pianist, for Rogers.

The two musicians played solo compositions on their instruments at the recital. Elliott's numbers included Guilman's "Moreau Symphonique," "Concert Piece No. 5" by Blazewitch, and "Sonia in E flat" by Sanders. Rogers played two airs for the trumpet from Purcell's opera "Bonduca," "Sonatina" by Schantz and other selections.

Both seniors scheduled for graduation in May, Elliott and Rogers have participated in many of the music activities on the campus. They are members of the College choir, the College band, the College dance band, the Collegians, the Brass ensemble, and the Music Education club. Elliott has served as publicity manager for the College band. Rogers has been president of the Music Education club and the College band, business manager of the Collegians, and assistant business manager of the College choir.

Camp Leach Scene Of Annual Retreat Of Canterbury Club

The Canterbury club, Episcopal student organization at East Carolina college, is holding its annual retreat at Camp Leach this week end. During the retreat, plans will be made for next year's work, and a service of Holy Communion will be celebrated by the Reverend Ernest H. Williams, rector of St. Paul's church, Greenville.

The schedule of activities for the retreat includes athletic events, boating, fishing and a camp fire song feast, in addition to the service of Holy Communion.

David Jones of Greenville is to serve as president of the club for the coming year. Other officers recently elected are: Carl Willis, Jr., Wilmington, vice-president; Mary Sue Bagley, Elizabeth City, secretary; Dorothy Bradshaw, Elizabeth City, treasurer; and Robert Selby, Dudley, representative to the Inter-Religious council at East Carolina.

During the past year the Canterbury club has been headed by Olivia White of Scotland Neck and Al Livesay, college worker for the Diocese of East Carolina.

Architecture Students Study Colonial Works In Williamsburg Visit

Six students of architecture at East Carolina college studied the Colonial period buildings at first hand when they visited historical Williamsburg, Va., Saturday and Sunday, April 14-15.

They are students of the architectural drawing class of the industrial arts department. Students making the trip were: Elizabeth Hunt, Gastonia; Philip Gorham, Battleboro; Kenneth Casey, Goldsboro; Fenner Spivey, Louisiana; Robert A. Robinson, Franklin Springs, Ga.; and Robert W. Wechter, Stumpy Point. Mr. Paul Powell, class instructor, accompanied the group.

Students Will Miss But Not Forget 'Midge'

by Ophelia Kirven

Words are always inadequate to express our deepest experiences. Especially is this so when we speak of a cherished friendship. Lavene W. Midgett Jr., known to us as "Midge," was a much-loved member of our group and an active member of our Wesley foundation. There was seldom a day passed that he did not spend some time at the Student center, which he so often said "is more like home to me than any place on campus." Every evening found him at the Student center, entering into the fun and fellowship.

His frank expression of his opinions and convictions with due regard to the rights of others, his readiness to listen and his sympathetic understanding of another's problem, his sincere and unobtrusive desire to be of help, his attitude of charity toward the faults of his friends and associates, his frank admission of his own weaknesses—all endeared him to the members of our group.

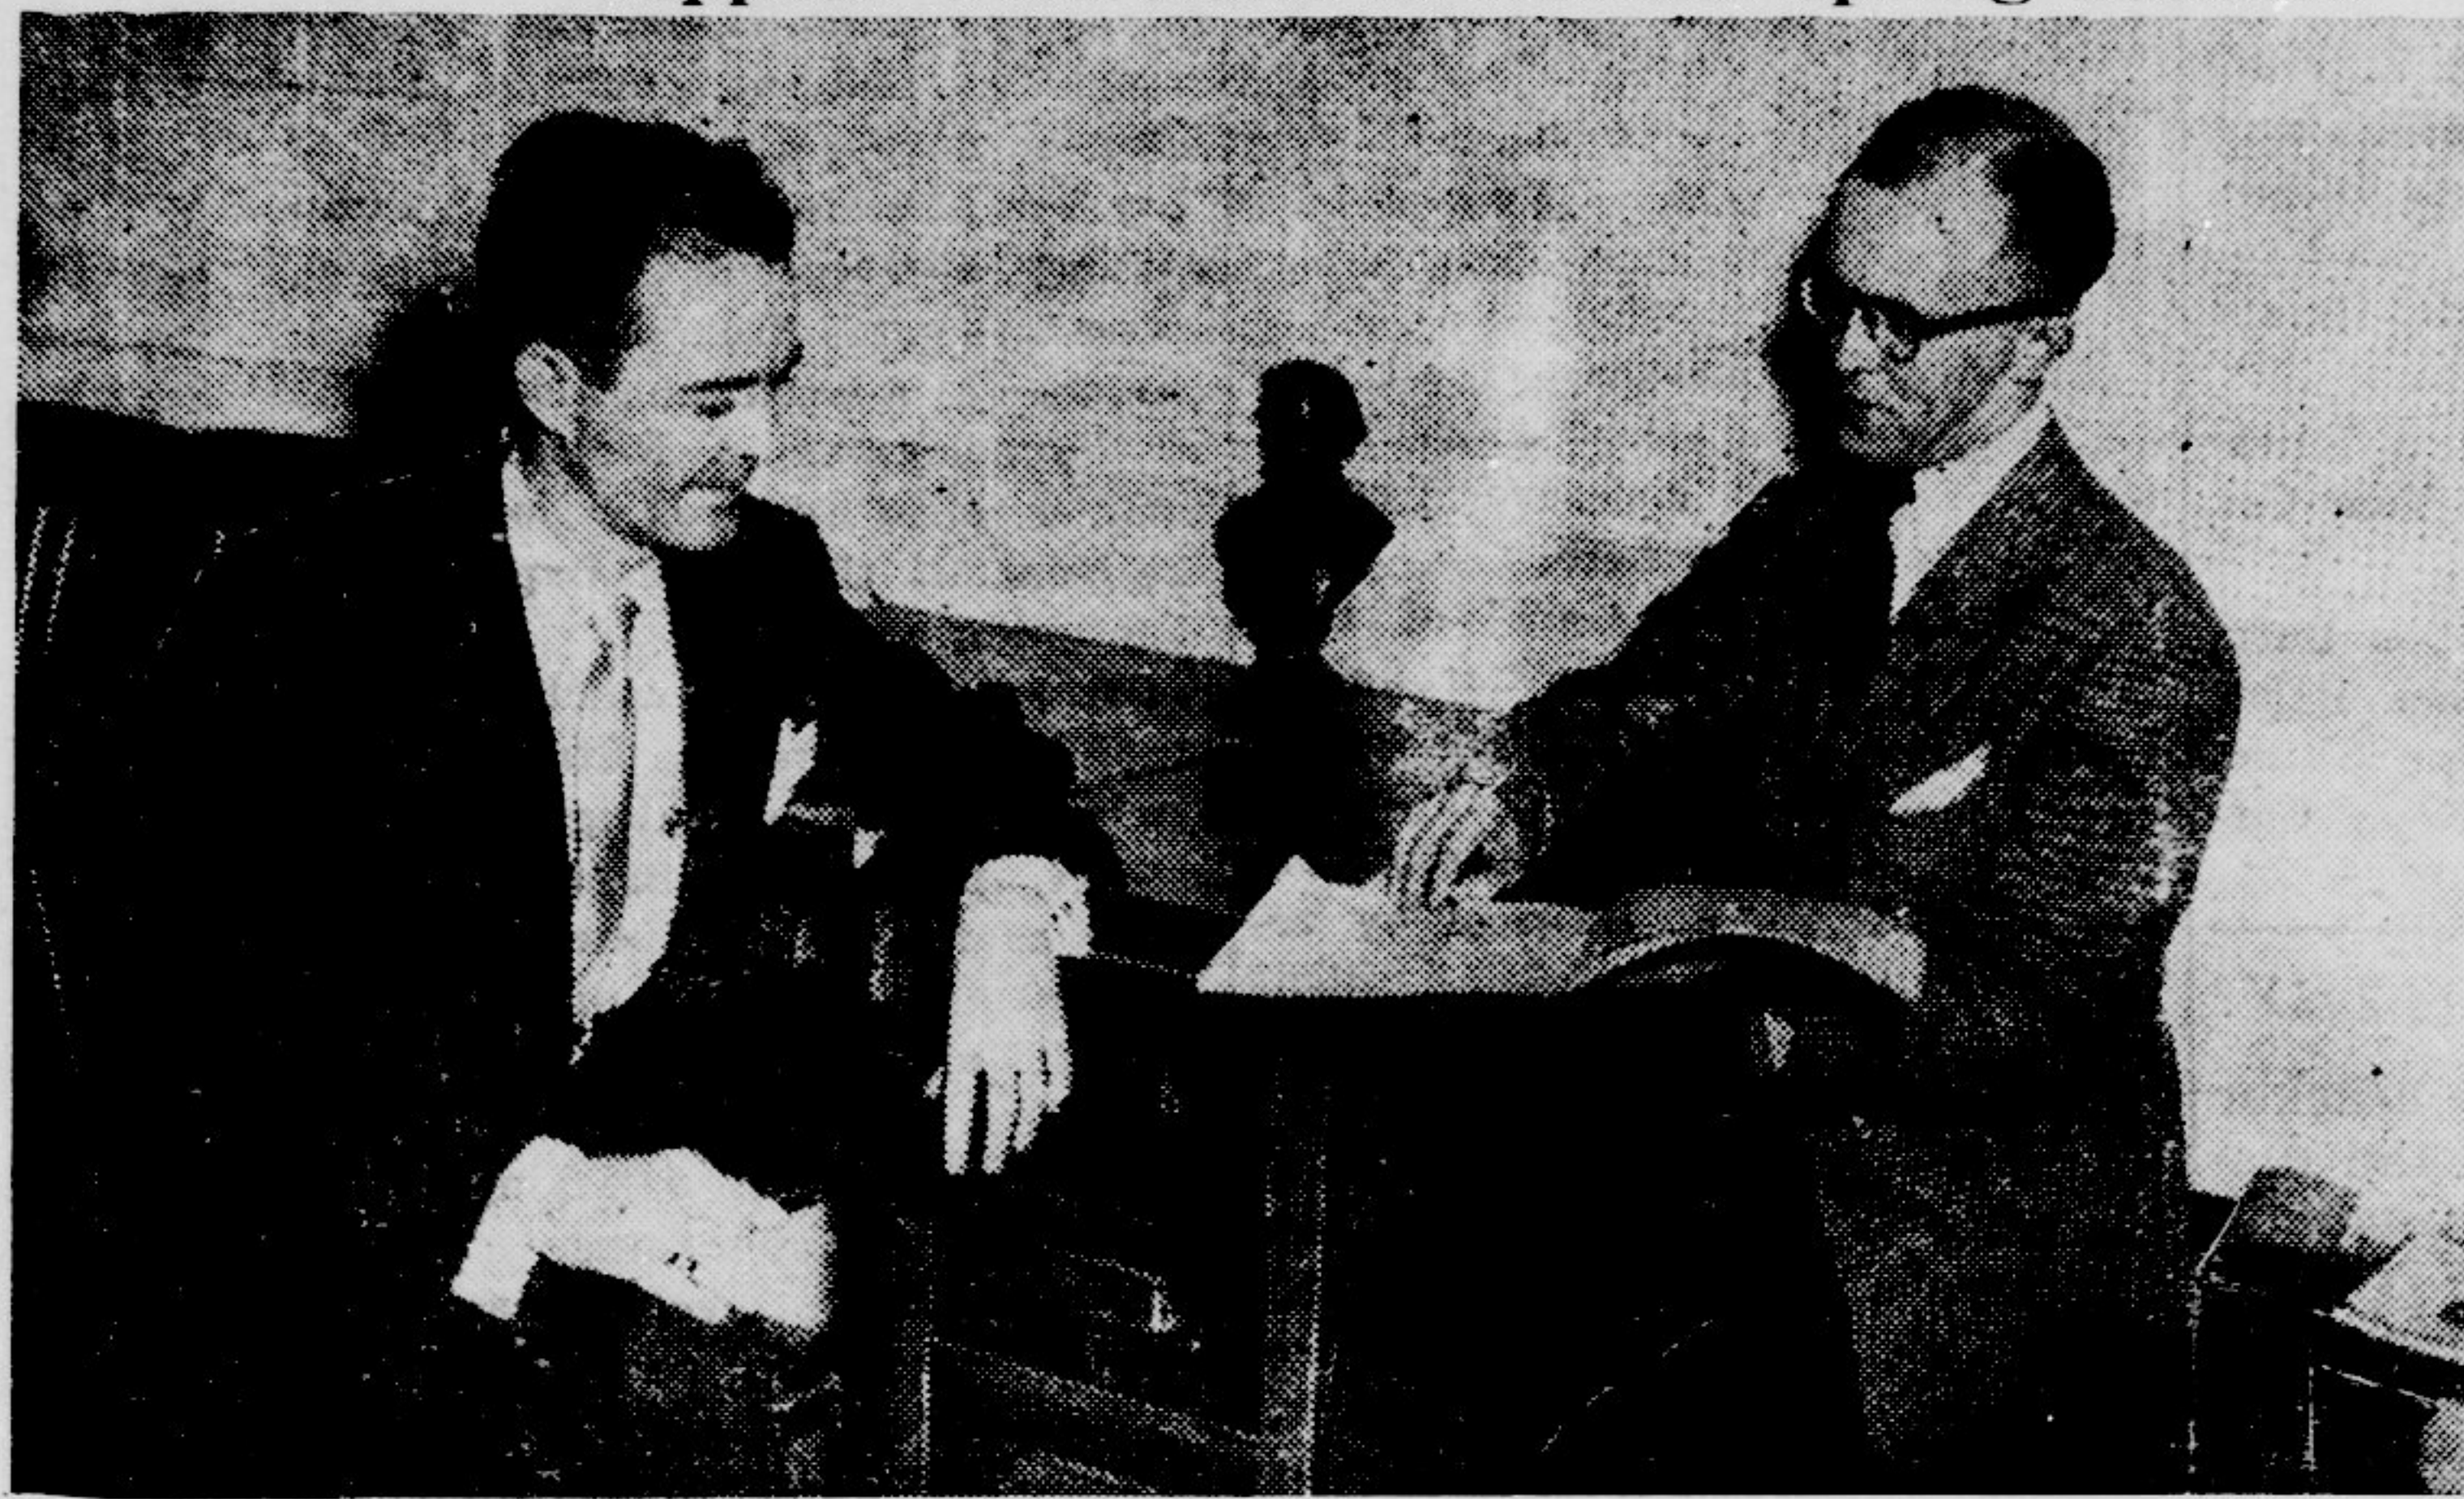

None of us will ever forget his "Now don't get panicky," in the midst of a strenuously contested game, and his "I'll never tell," whenever questioned in an unfavorable discussion of situation. We will cherish the memory of his stories of the sea and his dearly-loved island home, told to a small group of us around the kitchen table; his frank enjoyment of hillbilly music and the quiet moments when he listened appreciatively to recordings of the classics.

He gave a friendly greeting to everyone who came into the Student center and had the rare quality of fitting in with any group. He was one of the last to leave the center when closing time came at night, and would often stay for a quiet talk and "just one more cup of coffee."

We miss "Midge." We shall think of him often with a warmth of genuine affection and appreciation. Our comfort in this sudden bereavement is our faith—and his—that this our friend, who so endeared himself to the members of our Wesley foundation group, is living on, not just in our memory and in the contribution to our lives, but in the life more abundant, of which this human life is but a part.

East Carolina Set To Welcome Spring With May Day Festival

Appear With Band In Annual Spring Concert

With Herbert L. Carter of the music faculty as conductor, the Concert band of East Carolina college gave its annual spring concert last evening in the College theatre. George E. Perry, pianist, also a member of the department of music, appeared with the band as guest soloist and played a group of numbers, including George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Carter and Perry are shown here going over the score of one of the selections included in the program. Officers of the Concert band who participated in planning the concert are Lee Rogers of Rocky Mount, president; Robert Robinson of Franklin Springs, Ga., vice-president; and Nell Dean Owen of Asheville, secretary-treasurer.

Air Force Procurement Team Visits Campus April 26-27

Interview Students, Administer Exams For Cadet Training

A two-man Air Force cadet procurement team headed by Capt. Ralph J. Ferree, aviation cadet project officer for North Carolina, was on the East Carolina college campus yesterday and today to interview and administer qualifying examinations for cadet pilot and navigator training.

Capt. Ferree and M-Sgt. Elmer C. Suter of the North Carolina Military district made their headquarters in the board of trustees room in the Administration building. Hours will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Applicants for aviation cadet training must be single, between 19½ and 26½ years of age, and have completed at least two years of college or its equivalent (60 semester hours or 90 quarter hours). Candidates must also be of high moral, and physical standing.

Reserves May Apply Under existing regulations members of any armed forces reserve components who have not been alerted for active duty may apply. Students holding selective service classifications of IA-P may also apply, providing they are currently pursuing their course of instruction satisfactorily and have not received their notice of induction.

About Capt. Ferree A veteran of World War II, Capt. Ferree served as a B-24 pilot with American Air Force units furnishing aerial support for British Eighth army troops in Palestine, Egypt and Libya during the Middle East and African campaigns. After completing 42 combat missions, he was returned to this country and assigned as operations officer at Boise Air Force base, Boise, Idaho.

Among decorations and awards won by the Air Force captain are the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal with two clusters, Army Commendation Ribbon, Medal for Humane Action, American Defense Service Medal, American Theater of Operations Ribbon, European Theater of Operation Ribbon with four battle stars, Victory Medal, and the German Occupation Ribbon with air-lift device.

Emily Faircloth Wins Position At Workshop

Burlington Soph Named New Prexy Of Phi Sigma Pi

Albert L. Harrington of Burlington, sophomore at East Carolina college, has been chosen by members of the Tau chapter of Phi Sigma Pi, national honorary education fraternity for men students, as president of the organization for the 1951-1952 school term.

Harrington has participated this year in various campus activities, including the work of the college radio studio. He has appeared weekly on the program broadcast from the campus studio under the sponsorship of the college News bureau.

Dr. Richard C. Todd of the department of social studies will serve next year as faculty sponsor of the fraternity. He succeeds the late Dr. Beecher Flanagan who organized the chapter fifteen years ago and guided its activities until his death on April 7 of this year.

In addition to Harrington, other student officers who will be active in the work of the fraternity during 1951-1952 are Robert D. Bass, Jr., Seaboard, vice-president; Alec James Furst, Jr., Greensboro, secretary; John R. Klutts, Dudley, assistant secretary; Arthur P. Johnson, Greensboro, treasurer; Lloyd Whitfield, Kinston, historian; and Albert B. Auerbeck, Portsmouth, Va., and Dennis R. Smith, Chocowinity, sergeants-at-arms.

Workshop Stages Selected Scenes Of Broadway Hit

Selected scenes from the Broadway hit, "The Heiress," will be presented tonight night at 7:30 o'clock in Flanagan auditorium with Catherine Stevenson, sophomore from Willow Springs, and Floyd Williams, junior from Wilmington, playing the leading roles in the workshop production.

"The Heiress," adapted from the novel "Washington Square," was selected by Burns-Mantle as one of the outstanding plays of the 1947-48 theatre season. As a moving picture produced by Paramount Film studios, it received national acclaim, and Olivia de Havilland, who played the Heiress, was presented the academy award as the best actress of the year 1949.

The college production is being presented by the Teachers Playhouse through special arrangements made with the publishers.

Ralph H. Rives, junior from Enfield, is serving as director of the play. Other students scheduled to appear in the play include Joan Edwards, Jeannette Riggs, Gene Hart and Mildred Stapleford.

Activities Include Singing, Dancing May Court, Play

Students of East Carolina college will officially welcome spring with the May Day Festival to be held next Tuesday, May 1, at 5 p. m. in the College stadium, Mrs. W. E. Dole, chairman of the May Day committee, has announced. In case of inclement weather the program will be given in Wright auditorium at the same time.

Included in the festivities will be the Queen of May and her court, dancing, music and a play "The Knave of Hearts."

The Queen, whose identity is being kept a secret, will be crowned in a Coronation ceremony by Al Livesay, retiring Student Government association president.

14 In Queen's Court In the Queen's court will be 14 girls dressed in gowns of identical designs in soft spring shades. The members of the court are: Juniors—Elizabeth Hedegreth, June Pritchard, Jeannette Tillett, Gail Hines, Dorothy Jennings and Sarah Peedin; Seniors—Ramona Hobgood, Becky Hughes, Norma Hughes, Lois Johnson, Ann Oakley, Thelma Russ, Ramona Sawyer and Marie Stoddard.

Anne Osborne and Betty Loughlin will serve as pages. The children are: Jane Reynolds, flower girl; Buddy Murray, crown bearer; and Jimmy Jenkins, train bearer.

The Coronation will be accompanied by Dolores Matthews at the piano and the Brass Ensemble directed by Mr. Herbert Carter of the East Carolina music department.

Ballet May Pole In Pastels Taking part in the Ballet May Pole in Pastels will be 12 freshman and sophomore girls. They are: Lou Adams, Evelyn Davis, Jane Cornwell, Janet Tyson, Drusilla Bain, Kitty Geringer, Myrna Cooper, Glenna Thomas, Jean Crumpler, Janet Shore, Mona Moore, and Barbara Williamson. Accompanist for the Ballet is Emily Faircloth.

For Her Majesty the Queen of May, students of the modern dance at East Carolina will conduct a puppet show, "The Knave of Hearts." In the play Lady Violetta, lovely but lacking in domestic ability, played by Hilda Grace Moye, before becoming the Queen of Hearts must prove her worth as a pastry cook. Should she fail, she cannot marry the king, but will be sent home riding a mule. Violetta fails, but the hero, the Knave of Hearts, thinks of a plan and saves the lady.

Others taking part in the play are: Clark White as Pompebile, the stateley king; Carl Willis, grumpy advisor to the king; Mattie Lou Bland, knave without a care in the world; and Hilda Lee as Ursula, devoted servant to her lady.

Others In Minor Roles Several other students have minor roles as heralds and pages. They are: Carolyn Corey, Rachel Wallace, Linda Brown, Lena Sanderson, Audrey Beaman, Alyce Marshburne, Vivian Thomas, Edith Rogerson and Majorie Perry. Members of the College choir will furnish vocal entertainment.

The May Day Festival is being sponsored by the Student legislature and there will be no admission charge. A committee of six has assisted Mrs. Dole with the planning of the Festival. They are: Bob Robinson, staging; Cecil Winslow, publicity; Linda Brown, drama; Anne Osborne, court; Dr. Elizabeth Utterback, drama; and Mr. Herbert Carter, music.

YWCA, YMCA Present Modern Morality Play To State College Group

Dwight Shoe of Salisbury, sophomore at East Carolina college, will serve as president of the YMCA of the college during 1951-1952. He succeeds Gene Hart of Kinston. Shoe, who has taken an active part in the college athletic program, is a member of the East Carolina Pirates football and baseball teams.

Also elected as new YMCA officers are Charles Cherry of Stokes, vice-president; Mark H. Moore of Bath, secretary; and Carl Willis of Wilmington, treasurer.

COLLEGE—HAVEN FOR THE WEALTHY?

Newspapers and old men around cracker barrels all over the country are cussin' and discussin' the current policy toward college students by the Selective Service. Selective Service is planning to give a test to college students which will defer them from the draft if they make a passing score and as long as they stay in college.

Some of the arguments advanced against the plan are legitimate, but what burns up is the premise that all college students are rich, that all men in our nation's institutions of higher learning were put there by wealthy parents so that they might become schooled in the manners of polite society, aloof from the peasantry of the country, and escape service to their country.

Such an opinion is outrageous to the large majority of students in our nation's colleges and universities who come from average, middle-class, wage-earning families who struggle along and do without to send their kids to college. Such an attitude is disgusting also to a large number of students who have no outside help at all in their attempts to better themselves, but through their own efforts are making a go of it.

Perhaps years ago it could have been said that, in general, college students were from the wealthy families, how many years ago we don't know, but anyone who has the intellectual ability today, regardless of the financial standing of his parents, can go to college somewhere. In very few cases would the financial standing of parents keep a hard working, ambitious young man out of college. If he wants to go, he can go.

These people who are blowing off that colleges under the draft deferment test will become a haven for the sons of rich parents should look more closely into the financial situation of students now in college. Take East Carolina for instance. We doubt very seriously if there are many men on this campus who are so rich they don't have to borrow a few bucks once in a while.

A large number of the ones who are setting up this howl that the Selective Service is being unfair are those who didn't have the brains, the inclination or the guts to enter college—and a lot of them had the money. Why can't they at least have the decency to appreciate the thousands of college men who have the ability, who are ambitious enough to try to get an honest education and who are doing so with meagre or no help at all from home?

"A ROSE BY ANY OTHER NAME . . ."

Now that the name of the college has been changed, students on the East Carolina campus may be having another struggle over their hands in the near future. The TECO ECHO wants to change its name.

At a recent meeting of members of the staff it was voted that the name of the college weekly be changed, and two names, which the members of the staff thought would be appropriate, were chosen to be presented to the Publications board for its consideration. That body may then make recommendations to the Student legislature.

Why have the staff members of the twenty-five-year-old TECO ECHO decided to take such action? Following are several reasons which have been put forward:

(1) "TECO" is a coined word from Teachers College, and since "Teachers" has been taken out of the name of the college, it should not be in the name of the college newspaper;

(2) Many students on the campus do not know what "TECO" means;

(3) Students of other colleges and universities, and high school students, who read the paper through the exchange do not know the meaning of "TECO";

(4) The name is, often as not, misspelled "TECHO" by students on the campus, faculty and administration, and outsiders;

(5) The name is mispronounced "TEE-CO," it should be pronounced "TEE-CO";

(6) Coined names for college papers are not "high schoolish";

(7) A more standard and professional name would be "The East Carolina";

(8) The name "East Carolina" were included in a name change, the college would greatly benefit.

It is felt that the name "East Carolina" is of the utmost importance to the college and its students.

It is felt that the name "East Carolina" is of the utmost importance to the college and its students.

ETAOIN and SHRDLU

by Rexford E. Piner

The Men Day Students' room is in the process of getting a new face lifting. Looks pretty good, too. This year has seen quite a bit of interest among officers of the men day students to improve the lot of the students they represent. They have done the most they could with the least possible and have succeeded to a large degree. We are always glad to see people make the most of a poor situation.

Many college newspapers all over the country published "April Fool" editions this month and several copies arrived on our desk here.

The "Maroon and Gold" of Elon college and the "Western Carolinian" of Western Carolina Teachers college based their subtle humor on sports "fixes." In addition, the "Maroon and Gold" poked fun at Hadaool by revealing the discovery of an illicit Hadaool distillery on the campus, while at Western Carolina the editor and photographer of the yearbook were exposed on morals charges for printing obscene sex literature.

"No one could stand the stench of the bribery case," said the Elon paper, which was described as making the Madison Square Garden case "smell like the roses of Picardy." Furthermore girls are taking over all varsity sports at Elon. Some fun!

Miss Lois Grigsby of the East Carolina English department has returned to the campus from Bull's Gap, Tennessee. Friends of Miss Grigsby were sorry to hear of the death of her mother, Mrs. J. A. Grigsby Sr., which occurred recently.

Now that the tennis season is underway we are beginning to wonder if and when stands will be set up beside the courts where spectators may pass a little time in relaxation. The stands there last year were enjoyed very much by a large number of students and would certainly be appreciated again this year.

Members of the Science club made a trip to Morehead last Saturday.

The organization of a Young Republicans club on the East Carolina campus is causing quite a bit of undercurrent in certain other quarters. Some say they are glad of it as they discuss it. Others "cuss" it. But the general consensus of opinion seems to be "we're all for it—as long as we outnumber them."

If the new political organization proves as active as the Young Democratic club has been in bringing speakers to the campus and arousing interest in our two-party system of government, then we are in favor of it. Every college student should become a member of one of these organizations.

Dean Jenkins has stressed the importance of the men students taking the initiative themselves concerning the Selective Service draft deferment test. Students must obtain an application blank from any local draft board. This application must be filled out and mailed immediately. Tickets of admission will be mailed to applicants designating the time and place they may take the test. Scoring will be done by machines at the headquarters of the Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J. Scores will be mailed to the draft boards.

Under the present plan anyone who makes a score of 70 or above on the test, or who is rated by his professors as in the upper half of his class if a freshman, the upper two-thirds of his class if a sophomore, or the upper three-fourths if a junior, will be eligible for draft deferment as long as he stays in college. The test can get you a deferment even if your professors rate you at the bottom of your class, so you see, it may be a test worth taking. Need we say more?

Seems T' Me

Received a personal questionnaire A day or so ago. . . It all boiled down to "petting," And "how far girls should go." Now I'm no connoisseur of love, And I don't "pet" too much; But . . . seems t' me our family trees Were fertilized by such.

How far to go? . . . and when to stop, Body out with Gin and Joyce? I must confess I never stop To make an honest choice.

I don't hold that couples should spend their evenings "pecking," I see a balanced date "pecking."

Who's Who At East Carolina

by Anne Jones

Versatile, sincere, and friendly—these words may be used to picture the personality of Doris Edwards of Selma, North Carolina, who is a senior here at East Carolina. Miss Edwards has shown an active interest in the activities of the student body here, and she has contributed greatly to our campus life.

Now retiring president of the Baptist Student union, she has represented this organization and, in turn, our student body at a number of conferences during the past year. Last July she attended the Baptist World Alliance conference in Cleveland, Ohio, where delegates from 52 nations assembled for a week. She also was one of the delegates at Ridgercrest last summer. Miss Edwards is social vice-president of the State Baptist Student union council.

Other conferences which she has taken part in are the State Baptist convention held in Raleigh last November, the National Baptist Student union conference, an interracial gathering held at Shaw university in Raleigh, and the spring retreat of the State convention held in High Point, the last two taking place during the present month.

Miss Edwards loves to associate with people and to work with them. She has worked in the dean of women's office for three years here and she liked it fine because she had the opportunity thereby to know lots of the girls and to learn their names. But Miss Edwards has not limited her extra-curricular activities just to the work of the Baptist Student union. Last year she served as vice-president of the Junior class and she became acting president upon the graduation of Gilbert Carroll at the end of winter quarter. Also, she has been a member of the Home Economics club and the Science club for four years. During the current school year she held the office of secretary of the Home Economics club, while she was director of public relations of the Science club in her junior year. A home economics major and a science minor, Miss Edwards did her practice teaching during the winter quarter in Scotland Neck. She commented that those twelve weeks were "quite an experience." Last fall quarter she lived in the home management house, and so when she returned to the campus this spring from her stay in Scotland Neck, she had the chance to stay in the home management house for the rest of the school year so she took it. Now let us look at the future of her attractive brunette: Her plans are a little indefinite. At first she planned to teach, but the home economics field is such a broad one she thinks she will probably go into some phase of dietetic work. As for this summer, however, she will do religious work under the auspices of the Baptist State convention. She will start this work in June.

Now for those off-hours when Miss Edwards forgets all school work and relaxes: She likes to do everything or just about everything, anyway. She is keeping a scrapbook of all her college activities. She possesses a love for animals, especially cats and dogs. At her home she has an aquarium of which she is quite proud and on which she spends a great deal of her time.

Let it never be said that she does not have a variety of interests, because she does, as anyone can see. Here is another one to add to the list: her flare for dramatics. She has participated in three productions at the church here in Greenville and in one workshop production of the Teachers Playhouse.

As a member of the Senior class of 1951, Miss Edwards was selected by her fellow class members as one of the class superlatives. In this respect, the honor of being the most dependable went to her.

Let us go back a few years and say a word about her high school life: Miss Edwards attended Selma High school. While a senior there she served as class historian.

Possessing a good sense of humor, Doris Edwards has won many friends here at East Carolina.

TRADE BITS

by Tommie Lupton

The Discipline committee at Washington State college was alarmed at the widespread cheating going on during exams. Admitting that the problem could not be solved immediately, the committee nevertheless made several recommendations, bordering on stringent measures. Some of these were: Avoid repetition of the same tests year after year; use larger classrooms; use two forms of the same examination (there are students on the East Carolina campus who can tell you about giving the same class two different exams on the same day by giving one row one set of questions and the next a different set). The committee then came up with the greatest recommendation of them all: "Development of frank and friendly relations between professor and student."

At the Phi Delta Theta fraternity house, University of Wisconsin, the long distance phone bill was staggering. It seemed that whenever the boys imbibed a little too much beer, they would call up some girl friends in distant cities. The phone bill was getting out of hand. To stem the tide, the fraternity asked the Bell Telephone company to fix the phone dial so no long distance calls could be made. The company said this was preposterous. Meanwhile the house manager is trying to run down long distance calls. The house was "stuck" last year with $275 in uncollected bills. Members of the fraternity could not be reached at their house for comment. Their phone was busy.

From The Collegian, Greensboro college: Tact is making your guests feel at home when you wish they were. . . . Knowing that you do not know much is knowing more than most.

Liberal arts students at the University of Michigan think their teachers are doing a good job—better than the textbook writers are doing—according to a recent poll. Students ranked as highest the teachers' approachability and general willingness to assist. The value of the texts got the lowest rating. "It appears," said Dean Hayward Keniston, "that in the opinion of the students our teaching is better than our courses." Students generally agree that a class without a textbook is usually more interesting. Could it be that there are not as many outside assignments?

Last week in this column there appeared something about the criticism received concerning campus humor magazines. We got hold of a copy of the Tarnation at Carolina. The jokes were pretty good. We do not print shady jokes, but we like to end this column with something funny, so we picked out one of the nicer jokes. Here 'tix:

"George," said the young coed in a nervous whisper as she pushed him away, "you will have to give me some time; you will have to wait."

"How much?" asked the youth. "A week a month, or even a year?"

"Do not get impatient," answered the coed. "only wait until the moon gets behind the cloud."

Did You Know That---

by Bob Robinson

--- we now have two "factions" (political, that is) here on campus? Tuesday night of last week the Young Republicans club met in an organizational session and elected its officers for the coming year. Rudolph Alexander was chosen to head the group. We think this is a good thing and should create more interest in state and national politics on our campus—and we noticed the YDC perked up a little, too.

--- our college choir journeyed to Richmond, Va., last week to appear in a concert? This should help keep the name of East Carolina in the news and also give us a little publicity in the Cavalier state—and as the saying goes a little publicity never hurt any school, if it's the right kind.

--- the Circle K is sending several delegates to the Kiwanis International convention this summer? More publicity for our alma mater. This convention is to be held in St. Louis, Mo., June 18-21. The Circle K is planning to organize on a national scale and there is a possibility that one of our delegates will be elected to an office on the national board, as we are the only campus group in the two Carolinas at the present time. Keep your eyes open for results of the meeting.

--- a between sessions class in "camp counseling" is being offered by East Carolina this year? The administration has made plans to hold this class between the end of spring quarter and the beginning of the first summer session. The course will be ten days long. It is to be held under the jurisdiction of the PE department and will be held at a camp site just outside of Raleigh. If you are interested at all, contact the registrar as soon as possible for further information.

--- when the ROTC doesn't drill on Thursdays it usually meets in the classroom? These "career development" discussions that are held get to be pretty informative and interesting. Why, we've even been known to pick up a few pretty good jokes now and then. The main idea is to discuss activities and conditions on active duty and who knows, it might come in handy!

--- summer time is coming soon? Oh Joy! Oh Rapture! Oh—see ya later.

ROUND THE CAMPUS

by Jean Head

New names, new letters, new-new. The College is having a revolution since the name has officially been changed. Johnny Daughtry displayed his originality this week at a Varsity club meeting when he sketched his idea for the new varsity letter.

A letter was received from Mac Eure recently. He said that he appreciated all the cards and letters received from East Carolina friends, while he is just "lying around." Mac hopes to be back next year.

It was good to see Elsie Harrelson around campus last week, after being confined since she fell and injured her spine during the winter snow.

Here are a few jokes borrowed from the "Watagan." News seems to be scarce at this time of the year, so after looking over some of the articles, here are a few of the few that seemed printable:—

A local tavern keeper, who had a reputation for keeping strong brews, was awakened the other night by some heavy pounding on his front door. Putting his head out the window, he shouted, "Go away. You can't have a drink at this hour."

"Who wants anything to drink," came the answer. "I left here at closing time without my crutches."

Here are some resolutions that were made at the first of the year by a student at State college. Wonder how many of them you would have kept had you written them?

1. Not to sell this quarter's books until this quarter is over.
2. Never to drink another cup of coffee at the cafeteria, because of being allergic to acorns.
3. Never to cut a class.
4. Never to write home for more money.
5. Never to dial the boy friend's or girl friend's telephone number more than once a night.
6. Never to forget Physiology lab.

MILES BEHIND THE MIKE

by Miles Buck

We understand the Playhouse had the opportunity to play in Kinston last week at the Grainger High school but because most of the members of the cast couldn't stand the cuts, the offer was turned down. We also understand most of the members of the cast are pretty battered physically from long, hard rehearsals and six performances. We can sympathize with the cast because we know how punishing one of these plays can be.

It is regrettable, however, that some thought was not given to the possibility of such an offer being made. We think the Playhouse would have been doing the school a service by playing outside the local area.

We also understand that the Playhouse would have been replacing the usual professional group which is brought to Kinston annually. As it stands now, another good opportunity of getting East Carolina before the public has gone by the boards.

Another carrier-frequency station went on the air recently. We understand station WPJC is now operating successfully about four hours a day. This project was undertaken by the Radio club under the direction of Claude Darling, professor of English at the school.

We have agitated for a carrier-frequency set-up here for a long time. We have a class in radio theory which could operate the station. It would serve two purposes; it would give these fellows a chance to put the book knowledge to practical use and it would give the various organizations a chance to display their wares for the benefit of the student body. It would also serve as a feeder for the regular shows which are aired through the local station.

We already have the beginnings for such a set-up and with a few well placed dollars and a little interest by people with technical know-how, and there are plenty of them around, we could have a bang-up carrier section on the campus.

Miss Cirlot has placed several works of Mississippi artists in a number of downtown stores. This was a preview to a showing of Mississippi artists which is being held in Austin building. Miss Cirlot has done a terrific job this year in bringing a number of interesting traveling exhibits to the college in addition to the excellent work her students have been doing in the clay modeling classes. If you don't know where the "mud room" is, just drift into the basement of Austin next to the Men Day Students' room. You can usually find a half dozen or more people up to their elbows in clay there. They tell me it's great fun and really worthwhile. We also understand the men students are more interested than the women. Maybe the guys like to get their hands dirty legally.

Miss Cirlot holds open house most of the time.

More than 80 percent of all accidents last year on our streets and highways involved vehicles going straight.

Athlete Of The Week

Selected as "Athlete of the Week" for this issue is Jim Piner, sophomore righthand hurler...

While in high school, he participated in both baseball and basketball.

It was during his stay in the outfield that Piner was called on to pitch after all the hurlers for the local club...

This is the blond, 156-pound, athlete's first year as a member of the local college ball club...

The only obstacle at present to his baseball future is the possibility of call to the armed services.

LEGISLATURE BRIEFS

Thorton Staples, treasurer of the Student Government association, has asked that all requests for appropriations for the school year 1951-52 be turned into the Budget office by May 10.

Al Smith, chairman of the Civil Defense committee, has reported that there will be no blackout practices and no fire drills here at any time. The committee has been responsible for posting the "What to do in case of atomic attack" notices on the campus. Smith pointed out at the Legislature meeting April 11 the "shocking fact that there are no fire escapes nor fire extinguishers in any of the dormitories."

Dwight Shoe, Robert Butler and Jimmy Mellon have been appointed by SGA President Charles Self to work on the Advisory board of the SGA.

A. Toll were elected to serve as faculty advisors to the Legislature recently.

Anne Osborne has been elected to serve on the Awards committee for next year.

Floyd Williams has been chosen chairman of the Constitutional Change committee and will begin work immediately. Cecil Winslow and George Starling will serve with him. Each class president will appoint one student from his class to serve on this committee also.

Sarah Peedin heads the Handbook committee for next year. Bob Bradley, Bob Williams, Bob Bass, David Jones and Anita Gullede will assist her.

The Legislature has elected seven students to the important Budget committee. They are: Jack Rennie, Arthur Johnson, Robert Wechter, Evelyn Littleton, Jennie Cannon, Priecilla Hynson and Lib Hedgepeth.

Leonard Starling, chairman of the Awards committee, has reported to the Legislature that the annual Awards Day will probably be held the first week in May.

Wesley Foundation Elects Upchurch 1951-52 President

Waylon Upchurch of Sanford has been elected president of the Wesley Foundation for the year 1951-52. He will be the leader of a Council composed of twelve other members, which will be responsible for the program of the Methodist student group for the year.

Other officers elected were Charles Cherry, vice-president; Anne Osborne, secretary; Betty Ann Shaw, treasurer. These officers who were elected by secret ballot chose the following as chairmen of the various commissions: worship, Dorothy Howard; personnel,
