Thirty Make 'Who's Who' From East Carolina Campus

Excellence, Sincerity In Service To School Basis For Selections

Thirty student leaders at East Carolina college will be included in the publication "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges" for 1951-1952. The work, which is issued annually, contains biographical sketches of outstanding students from colleges and universities throughout the nation. The East Carolina representatives for the current volume were selected by a committee of students and faculty members. Choice of those to be included was made on the basis of excellence and sincerity in scholarship, leadership and participation in extracurricular and academic activities, citizenship and service to the school and promise of future usefulness to business and society.

East Carolina students who will be included in "Who's Who" for the present school year are Robert K. Baker, Kelford; Annie L. Butts, Angers; Evelyn Dowdy Hardy, La Grange; Albert L. Harrington, Burlington; Sara Jo Hege, Winston-Salem; Alec J. Hurst, Arthur H. Johnson, and Charles Self, Greensboro; Catherine L. Johnson, Neuse; David E. Jones Jr., Greenville; John Robert Rutz, Dudley; and James D. McLellan, Winterville.

Vocalist

Handsome Bill Raymond will be a featured vocalist with the Tex Benne orchestra when the music group plays for a warehouse dance here Thursday night. Raymond, 23, is happily unmarried. The dance is being sponsored by the Greenville Lions club.

Zinn Gives Talk To Wesley Group On Good Manners

"Good manners is simply the Golden Rule spruced up a bit," stated Miss Edith Zinn, assistant dean of women, as she spoke before approximately thirty members of the Wesley foundation of the Methodist Student center recently.

"The purpose of etiquette is to make social situations pleasant, comfortable and interesting," stated Miss Zinn. "You can be well-mannered or crude, friendly or unfriendly, useful or useless, happy or unhappy, a guest or a pest," the speaker pointed out. Miss Zinn further stated that a graciousness or true courtesy is acquired by trying always to put the other person at ease, to make the other person comfortable.

All rules of etiquette may be divided into two classes—the superficial and the fundamental—stated Miss Zinn, and it was the speaker's opinion that good manners may be obtained by imitation and practice. "People, like mahogany, may be improved by polish," Miss Zinn concluded.

English Professor Speaks In Raleigh At Teachers Meet

Edward J. Rutan, faculty member of the department of English at East Carolina college, has accepted an invitation to speak on "Oral and Written Language" at a meeting of teachers in the Raleigh schools on November 15. The program is scheduled for 6:30 in the evening at the Broughton school.

Rutan is the author of "Successful Devices in Written English" and of a workbook in composition published by Harper and Brothers. During the past several years he has acted as consultant to various public school faculties in Eastern North Carolina in setting up programs of remedial reading in their schools. He is a member of the Commission on Curriculum of the National Council of English Teachers and will represent the North Carolina English Teachers association at the national convention of the NCTE in Cincinnati November 21-24.

Dramatics Group To Conduct Class In Acting Tonight

Members of the Teachers playhouse, dramatics club at East Carolina college, will conduct a class in acting and interpretation tonight at 7 o'clock in the Austin auditorium. Those interested in the drama, especially in play production, are invited to be present. The program will be presented as an event of the Workshop series of dramas given weekly by the group.

Scheduled for the evening are a series of pantomime exercises by ten student actors and a series of brief scenes from well-known plays, with casts chosen from members of the Teachers playhouse. Among these dramas will be Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" and Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." Dr. Lucile H. Charles, director of dramatic art in the department of English at the college, will be faculty director of the program. Following the scenes from dramas, an evaluation of the program will be made by Lloyd Whitfield of Kinston, president of the Teachers playhouse; Bobbie Caldwell of Wadesville, student director of the Workshop series; and Ralph Rives of Enfield, student manager of the College theatre. Others participating in the program will include Wade Jordan of Edenton, lighting director, and Myrtle Manning of Robersonville, organist.

AFROTC Announces Changes In Work Of Training Program

Major Lomax L. May, professor of Air Science and Tactics at East Carolina, has announced a new change in the curriculum of the training program now used by the unit.

This change will benefit the officer candidate who enters ROTC during his sophomore or junior year, as it will permit him to take courses in both the basic and advanced classes at the same time.

Major May states, "In cases where necessary to do so in order that the student may finish the entire AF-ROTC course by graduation date, concurrent enrollment in Air Science II and Air Science III will be permitted. Air Science II students will be interpreted as all students who have completed any three quarters of the basic course. All cases arising will be considered individually." No commutation of subsistence (90 cents daily) will be paid the student until he completes the basic course and is under contract in the advanced course. Neither will a uniform be purchased for the student until such time, but he will continue to be furnished the basic course uniform.

on a survey of 203 men and women now majoring in business education at East Carolina. He will report results of the investigation Friday, November 9, at the annual meeting of the North Carolina College conference in Greensboro. The survey was conducted by Dr. Browning as a member of the Research committee of the College conference and has been approved by the committee.

Business Education Director Takes Survey Of 203 Students

The typical business education student at East Carolina college, according to a survey by Dr. E. R. Browning, director of the business education department at the college, is a North Carolinian living in a rural area. A paved road leads to his home, which is lighted by electricity and equipped with a telephone. His family has an average income of $5,385. His father is a home owner, and his mother a housewife. He is a Protestant, more than likely a Baptist or a Methodist. He plans to work in North Carolina after he leaves college, either as a teacher or in business.

Science Students To Sponsor Sadie Hawkins Day Hop

The annual Sadie Hawkins day celebration sponsored by the Science club will be held Saturday, Nov. 17. For the first time, since Sadie Hawkins day has been a red-letter day at East Carolina, there will be a race just like Lil' Abner struggles through each year. The race will begin at 3:30 Saturday afternoon and anybody can enter the race.

A square dance will be held Saturday night in the Wright building beginning at 8:15 and ending at 11:45 with music provided by a five-piece string band. During intermission a shotgun wedding, with Maryin' Sam performing the ceremony, will be the main attraction. The prizes will be awarded to the best Daisy Mae and Lil' Abner also. The gym will be decorated in typical Dogpatch style with assistance from Al Capp himself! Everyone is urged to go in costume dressed like some Dogpatch character.

At the recent Science club meeting committees were appointed. They are as follows: concessions, Robert Linderoth, advised by Dr. Harold C. Jones; music, Alex Mackie, advised by R. M. Helms; door, Ernest Sylvania, advised by J. O. Derrick; booths, Pete Jones, advised by Dr. T. H. Eaton; race, Bill Rowland; publicity, Dolores Eisele and Dolores Gregory, advised by Mrs. R.M. Helms; and decorations, Peggy Barnhill, advised by C. A. Scruggs.

Peedin Addresses YWCA Gathering At Regular Meet

Sarah Peedin, chairman of the Women's judiciary, addressed the YWCA at its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday of this week. Stressing the importance of living a Christian life, she suggested to the group an individual motto: "God first, others second, self last." Also taking part on the program were Alice Jackson who conducted the devotional service and Alice McKenzie, soloist, accompanied by Margie Smith.

Meeting in the "Y" Hut, the members of the YWCA heard various committee reports. Plans to help the administration with registration were discussed, and a program committee, headed by Mildred Rouse, was appointed. Personnel chairman, Jean Bunn, submitted her resignation, and Marilyn Watkins was appointed to keep the "Y" committee on the WAA. Reported developments in the WAA were discussed, and a "Y" sponsored meeting in the square dance room was planned for next week.

History Professor Gets $1000 Award For Achievements

Dr. Richard C. Todd, associate professor of history at East Carolina college, was awarded this week in Asheville the Mrs. Simon Baruch University Prize of $1,000 offered biennially by the United Daughters of the Confederacy for an unpublished monograph or essay of high merit in the field of Southern history.

Dr. Todd's "A History of Confederate Finance" was chosen for the honor because of its contribution to the history of the Confederacy and of the War between the States. Selection of the prize-winning work was made on the basis of "effectiveness of research, originality of thought, accuracy of statement and excellence of style."

Ceremony In Asheville
Mrs. Oscar McKenzie of Montezuma, Ga., chairman of the Mrs. Simon Baruch University Prize committee, made the award to the East Carolina college professor at an evening ceremony conducted in the George Vanderbilt hotel during the National convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in Asheville.

The study of Confederate finance, Dr. Todd stated here this week, deals with the various financial expedients used by the Confederacy in meeting its obligations at home and abroad. It also focuses attention upon the "organization and personnel responsible for carrying out the financial measures of the Government and on the numerous problems confronting their operation."

"Federal specie located in the mints and customhouses of the South was confiscated," Dr. Todd states in the work. "Property of alien enemies was sequestered and military supplies were impressed; duties were placed on exports and imports; direct taxes were levied; donations and gifts were cheerfully accepted and gratefully acknowledged and Treasury notes flooded the market while loans were floated in an attempt to stabilize the redundant currency and offer a basis for foreign exchange."

History Written At Duke
Dr. Todd's history was written as a doctoral dissertation at Duke university. A native of Lancaster, Pa., he received his education at State Teachers college, Millersville, Pa.; Pennsylvania State college; and Duke university, from which he holds the doctor's degree.

Before coming to North Carolina he taught at various high schools in Pennsylvania. At Duke he held graduate assistantship in 1940 and was awarded a fellowship in 1947-1948. He then taught at High Point college, High Point, joining the faculty of East Carolina college.

Russell Speaks Before Members Of Circle K

The Rev. Leon Russell, pastor of the Methodist church in Greenville, in a talk to the K club of East Carolina college Tuesday evening gave impressions of his trip to various countries. The guest speaker, a member of the branch of the Circle K club in Greenville, gave the meeting a home-like atmosphere.

Chairman Cathrine Williams presented developments in the WAA, and a "Y" sponsored meeting in the square dance room was planned for next week. Margie Smith, soloist, accompanied by Mildred Rouse, was appointed. Personnel chairman, Jean Bunn, submitted her resignation, and Marilyn Watkins was appointed to keep the "Y" committee on the WAA. Reported developments in the WAA were discussed, and a "Y" sponsored meeting in the square dance room was planned for next week.

Music Professor Talks At Jones County Meet

Dr. Kenneth Cuthbert, director of the department of music at East Carolina college, spoke at a meeting of Jones county Home Demonstration club Wednesday evening, November 7. His talk was given at the County Court House in Trenton. Dr. Cuthbert's topic for the county-wide meeting was "Music and Children's Mental Health."

Ye Editor's Say

Say
 by Tommie Lupton

The Fall quarter at East Carolina is rapidly drawing to a close, as can be seen very readily when you go looking for a seat in the college library. Students are just holding their breaths and hoping that they do not have to prepare themselves to take every exam on the same day. We think this would be terrible, but we advise everyone to be getting prepared for having tests all on the same day, for it is evident at the present time that that is just what will be happening to many.

Winter is here at last, and as everyone trods into those dreadful 8 o'clock classes one even recognizes the fact more rapidly. For a while it seemed that we were going to have warm weather all winter, but those who were at the football game Saturday night will vouch for us that ole man winter has finally moved in. Yes, it really gives us something to talk about, but we will not be able to do anything about it . . . not even those 8 o'clock classes, for they are oftentimes unavoidable.

A certain group of English 112a students are trying to get a Faerie Queene club started, or we have heard rumors to that effect. The charming piece of English literature, "The Faerie Queene," was enjoyed so much by the class that they are having a hard time trying to forget it. Students interested in joining the club should contact some of the members of the class to find out the qualifications, and maybe then they will change their minds.

The Beacon, University of Rhode Island, threw a stock question at assorted students: What do you think about studying in the library? Answers included: "I go there because I like to meet people, and you never can tell who you will find underneath the tables." Another student commented, "The heavy reference books make good pants pressers." A third scholar stated, "After studying for fifteen years, it is too hard to concentrate with no noise." We would think that you might find very similar comments if such a poll were taken concerning the East Carolina library. It is awfully hard to sit near the door and not look up when someone enters. A good suggestion would be to get in the back of the room.

From Texas Christian university come these rules for dormitory bridge: "A deck of cards and four people are helpful, but not absolutely necessary. If you can't find a fourth, get a fifth."

The Daily Californian, University of California, decided recently to join the race for survival. In every copy of the paper they inserted a short message about what to do in case an atom bomb blew up in the vicinity of the campus. About mid-day sirens began blowing. People called the fire department, but there was no fire. They called the police, but the cops had no explanation. Still, the sirens kept up the racket. It finally became known that the sirens were just an air raid practice warning. City officials wondered if it was effective. "Durn effective," students said.

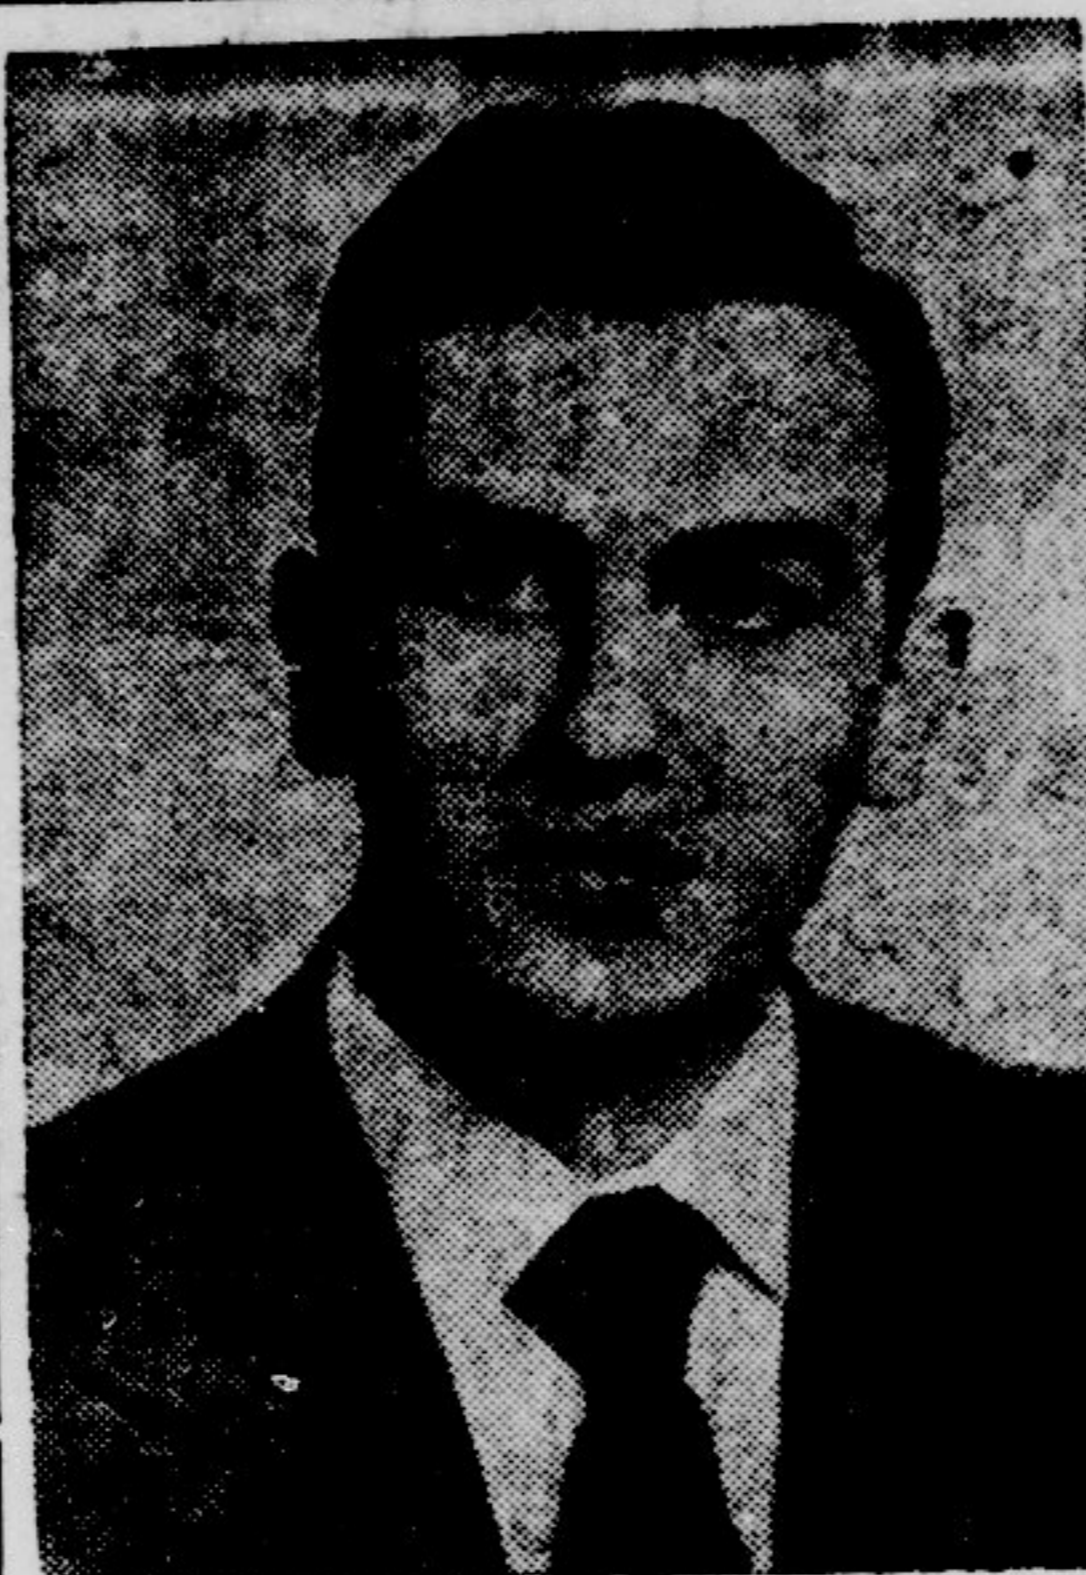

The first program in the Entertainment series was reeled off last night in the form of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra. The next program on schedule is slated for December 8, "Rodgers and Hammerstein Nights," an evening of show tunes by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II. It will be made up of favorite numbers from such hits as "Oklahoma," "Carousel" and "South Pacific."

Doing What Is Right

"How do you tactfully suggest going to a rest room when you are on a date?"
 Either the boy or the girl may make the suggestion to be excused. If you are the girl, you may simply say, "I'd like to stop in the ladies' lounge a few minutes." If you are the boy, you could say, "Would you like to stop in the ladies' lounge? I can take you over there and then be back to meet you in a few minutes."
 If you remember that your partner would probably appreciate the opportunity as well as you, it may make it easier for you to suggest it.

Who's Who At East Carolina

by Janice Hardison

Mark Moore

Those of you who think teachers only teach would do well to note what Mark H. Moore Jr. has to say of the profession: "I want to teach because it is one of the best ways there is to keep on learning."

Any person with the zest for learning that Mark seems to have will readily understand why he will be a teacher. Since he entered East Carolina in the fall of 1949, Mark has made either the Dean's list or Honor roll every quarter, except the very first one. Mark will receive his B.S. degree in May, and he will be equipped with a major in both English and business education. His ambition is to become a college professor of English, so his formal education will not be completed then.

Respects Grammar

"I have a great respect for grammar," says Mark, explaining that he would prefer teaching it to high school seniors rather than younger students. He likes to work with young people, and has some very definite ideas about their relations to literature. He will get a chance to share his love of literature with a less enthusiastic group when he does his practice teaching next spring. "I'm looking forward to that," he comments.

In the meantime Mark is very much occupied with his studies, his work in the news bureau and other extra-curricular activities. This year he is secretary and program chairman for the English club, secretary of the YMCA and treasurer of Pi Omega Pi, a national honorary business fraternity. Last year he was treasurer of the Teachers playhouse and reporter for the International Relations club. He got in the swing of campus activities early, joining the Teachers playhouse and the staff of the TECO ECHO as a freshman.

Active In High School

His experience in high school had qualified Mark for various positions before he ever came here. He was chief marshal as a senior, president of his senior class, editor of the Bath high school paper, vice president of the Beta club and valedictorian of his graduating class. If all these accomplishments seem extraordinary for one young man, remind yourself that this Mark is an extraordinary fellow. Mark has been active in the work of the Teachers playhouse during his entire college career, having been a member of the original cast of "You Can't Take It With You," presented when he was a freshman. He was the Knave of Hearts in "Alice In Wonderland" last spring and business manager for the production of "Our Town."

This Bath boy loves movies almost as well as plays. "I do select them, but I enjoy almost any musical comedy," he comments, adding further that he thoroughly enjoys good mysteries. He also likes to read "both for entertainment and for information," as he puts it.

Enjoys Dancing

In case you have decided that Mark's interest and abilities are all intellectual, you will be interested to know that he loves dancing, especially the Charleston, and plays quite a good game of tennis.

An easy-going, friendly fellow with a knack for getting along with people, this East Carolina senior is perfectly at ease in any situation. He says that his two years as assistant to Miss Mary Greene in the news bureau have been most pleasant, and no sooner does one hear him say so, than it becomes apparent that he is the kind of person who can make any situation pleasant.

Mark our words! East Carolina will surely miss one Mark Moore when graduation rolls around.

HERE And THERE

by Tom Cox

The young Bucs dropped another close one Saturday night, but showed a lot of heart and a lot of fight in a great third quarter rally that saw them shave a 24-point Appalachian margin down to a scant four points. Fighting hearts can not take the place of experience, but when mixed with it, they form a combination that is hard to stop. Last Saturday night, the Pirates proved that they have the heart and the fight. By next year they will have had some experience, and this mixture promises to spell a lot of trouble for Buccaneer opposition. Wait and see!

Most people don't realize the extent to which Coach Dole has been forced to depend upon freshmen and inexperienced sophomores this year, and the problems and headaches that such a situation brings about for each. He is doing a mighty fine job with the material he has to work with. By this statement, we do not mean to underrate the boys, either. They have what it takes. They have shown it time and again. The fact remains, however, that nothing but experience can take the place of experience.

So far as the Appalachian game is concerned, the Bears simply were not to be denied. They were out to "win one for Gerald," their first-string tackle whom they left in a Tampa, Florida, hospital. He was injured the previous week in a game with Tampa university, and was listening to our game by way of a special telephone arrangement that the citizens of Tampa provided for him. Gerald must have suffered a near relapse in that blazing third quarter, when the Pirates scored 20 points! When we spoke with him briefly during a fourth-quarter lull, however, he insisted that he was "getting along pretty good, now," so we'll just take his word for it and hope so.

Football Gets Kicked Around

Allen Jackson was a first-string guard at the University of Michigan. He won his letter on three championship teams and played in the Rose Bowl.

His football and college career ended, Jackson took a long, penetrating look backwards, and decided that football these days is hardly worth the effort. In this month's Atlantic Monthly he states his case.

Jackson estimates he spent about 1350 hours on the football field in his four years at Michigan. By contrast, he spent about half that much time studying for and attending history classes. He also finds fault with the "bigotry" in football: "At Michigan one of those bigotry-fostering, tradition-conscious pre-game speeches which were impressive to sophomores but tiresome to seniors was to this effect:

"The men whom we were about to play would be battling Michigan; they would as a result be intimidated; and we should take advantage of this fine opportunity to dominate them."

But just in case Michigan doesn't win, there is a slogan to fit the occasion: "When Michigan loses, someone has to pay."

"This slogan," says Jackson, "not only implies that Michigan shouldn't have lost, but it also suggests that the loss was caused by something wrong somewhere—perhaps something shady on the part of the other team."

"The point of view suggested by this slogan becomes positively unchristian in its implication that revenge will be sought at the expense of next week's opponent."

Jackson says that the idea of team spirit has been perverted by bigtime football. He blames this in increasing specialization, too much publicity and fierce competition for individual berths on the team.

"So," concludes Jackson, "after four years of seeing everything there is to see in bigtime college football . . . of being known as a 'football player' rather than a human being . . . of having my natural desire for physical exercise corrupted and commercialized, I have decided that bigtime football is a poor bargain for those who play the game."

Difficult But Interesting

The Park Stylus, Park college, Mo., last week did a bit of philosophizing on a subject rarely mentioned in the college press: namely, the college press. It declared:

"As we are all probably aware a college newspaper occupies a very difficult but interesting position. This is true for several reasons: primarily, though, (because) a college paper must constantly print material that is no longer news."

"In an attempt to remedy this situation other alternatives must present themselves. The most appealing of these alternatives is that of having the paper present opinions on the issues that constantly arise on the average campus."

"The attempt to strike the middle of the road has always had two results: (a) the reporter had nothing to say or (b) the facts were twisted to suit the occasions as the writer saw fit."

"... Therefore, a paper must obviously pick sides. Regardless of how undemocratic this may sound it is a necessary step. If a newspaper is to be a voice that is heard in the dark, it must of necessity be someone's voice."

"... This means that some people will disagree; however, in our competitive society this is not only good but necessary. Thought, as such, is not the results of agreement with everything and everybody, but of disagreement."

"... Moderation implies among other things mediocrity, the common man in the street's sort of approach. If one wishes this sort of a life it is perhaps very fine; however, the impression has been that the extraordinary can be more desirable."

"... Any newspaper that wishes in any manner to be read must express the opinions of its staff."

ROUND THE CAMPUS

by Jean Head

The typical Greenville weather has arrived—drizzle and drab, raincoats, boots and umbrellas scurry from one class to the other, but we have had variety this quarter anyway—heat, cold, rain, etc.

We believe that the most talked-about thing that has happened this quarter is council check. Anyone who happened to pass by second floor of Austin Monday night might have thought the building was going up in smoke. One could feel the tension and a nervous chatter filled the air. The Women's judiciary was holding its regular Monday night meeting, and was doing a "whale of a business." "How many did you get?" "What did you do?" Pretty familiar questions, huh?

The students seem to have forgotten the Pirates den. Alec Hurst says that it will be better organized next quarter, with more people to help operate. But it's a fine place to play cards and dance, and Charlie Huffman was getting his arm in shape for his famous "hook," playing darts, which was all well and good for Charlie, but a pretty dangerous sport for the other occupants.

We have heard that the girls in Jarvis hall may get that sought after drink box soon. It certainly sounds good; we are not sure to whom or to what the credit for this deed goes, but the girls are very much obliged to "it," and are hoping to have some of those "soft drinks" in Jarvis soon.

Tex Beneke and his "in the mood" music will be in Greenville next week. We don't have any dope on whether the girls will be given permission to go or not, but we are hoping that it will be arranged.

Post Scripts:
 The Bugle Corps presented a fine performance at the game, along with the band, Saturday night.

The football team showed that "old fight" in the last home game of the year. Oh, for a first half like the last!

Congrats to the students chosen for Who's Who.

Luck to the football team when they meet the Marines tomorrow.

The Home Ec department's bazaar seems to have turned out very well.

Pingel Shows Know How In Many Undertakings

Since 1948 there has been listed in "Who's Who in American Education" a name familiar to many students here. The name—Martha M. Pingel—suggests to the less informed one thing—teacher, but there is far more to be said about this entry in "Who's Who."

In the very few years behind her, young Dr. Pingel has achieved more than most people could in Methuselah's lifetime.

Born in New York, Dr. Pingel was off to a quick start in education when she became one of an experimental group of school children who completed high school in three years after only two years in junior high. Upon her accelerated graduation she entered Hunter college as an English major, with a double minor in philosophy and psychology.

While in college, Dr. Pingel volunteered for Red Cross special service and as a Grey lady taught and visited in hospitals. From Hunter college Dr. Pingel went to Columbia university where she received both her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in philosophy.

Her first teaching was done at Paul Smith's college at a summer-winter resort in the Adirondack mountains.

She joined the English department at East Carolina in 1947 and in a short time her first book, "An American Utilitarian, Richard Heldrich as a Philosopher," was published.

Incidentally, Dr. Pingel's literary reputation is growing rapidly. "The Catalyst," her second book, a volume of poems, appeared in July, 1951, and won her honorary membership in the International Mark Twain society. She has written a sequel to this volume entitled "Out of a Dark Corridor," which is to be published later. Her latest work should be of much interest to students here because it is an outgrowth of her work here on the East Carolina campus, especially with classes in advanced composition. The book, a textbook entitled "Self Expression," is a psychological approach to writing which Dr. Pingel says will be published later. Dr. Pingel is secretary of the North Carolina Philosophical society, a position to which she was elected last May.

Studies Music

Though she has been busy achieving recognition as an author, poet and educator, Dr. Pingel has found time to study music extensively. Having studied for ten years, Dr. Pingel plays both piano and accordion, and was at one time choir director at the Fort Washington Presbyterian church in New York. Though she knows her music, Dr. Pingel considers it strictly a hobby. Her only professional approach to music was in connection with her Red Cross work with mental patients, when the Red Cross was beginning a study of music and its effect on mental patients. She also toured hospitals with groups of entertainers.

Are you beginning to wonder just what her chief interest is—music, poetry, philosophy or psychology? Brace yourself, every guess is wrong. Dr. Pingel's chief interest is plain ordinary people from any standpoint. She is one who has a great deal of confidence in people, one of those who still believes in humanity. Dr. Pingel's associates, especially her students, sense her genuine interest in them, and even her classroom lectures "sound like she understands young people," as one young man expressed it. Her life has thus far been one contribution after another to people—those she teaches and those who read her works.

Loves Philosophy

Whether her interest in people accounts for her love of philosophy or not, it is there. "Philosophy is the foundation of culture. Persons without background in the field are lacking in something that could be very vital," Dr. Pingel says of her favorite subject. She hopes to see courses developed here, and provision made for more thorough study of philosophy simply to improve life. "People make poor grades because of the way they reason," she says, adding that the remedy is in sound logic.

At any rate, one who has accomplished so much in such a short time should be a safe example to follow. It may be that those in Dr. Martha Pingel's classes are learning more than the whys and wherefores of

by Shirley Melton

Pity the foreign students who come to study at our American universities! Having studiously memorized idioms from English text books, they find themselves sounding mechanically medieval. They are confronted with a new language. People are invited to "drop dead" by their best friends. The friends cheerfully replies with DDT (drop dead twice), and life is very confusing.

"Hot rods" tear around the campus. Otherwise humble personalities depart with a conceited "see me later." "You know it too?" is the only token of agreement the bewildered stranger receives, and he soon learns that a "drip" does not always concern the faucet. Just as he masters the fact that "TM" means "tender moment" and that a "hen party" is a girls' club, he finds that these expressions have gone the way of "33 skidoo" and "huba huba." Suddenly they are no more, and he sorrowfully realizes that he must learn to say "that ain't so worse," instead of "Oh, it'll pass." Poor fellow, his life in America will be spent in a vain attempt to conquer the marvelous campus slang.

VERSE OF THE WEEK

He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.—II Cor. 9:6

Need For "Talking Machines"

Do you have trouble when you try to find a telephone to use? If you do not have difficulty in finding one, we would certainly like to know why, for there certainly is a lack of them on the campus. There are several places on the East Carolina campus where the deficit is more noticeable than others, but where one is able to find out the need very rapidly is in the Austin building.

There are approximately thirty telephones on campus. When we say thirty we mean lines, because there is only one line in Austin, but there are three phones. There is only one telephone listed in the Flanagan building, however the need for more "talking boxes" is not as great there as elsewhere. In the Austin building alone there are several offices that need a telephone. The college news bureau could certainly use a phone of its own. At the present time employees have to run down the hall to make calls outside the building.

There is one group of offices on the third floor of the Austin building, namely the offices of the Air Force ROTC unit, where there are ten personnel working during all the school hours. If a need for a telephone comes up, a call has to be made downstairs via a field telephone. This takes more time to put the call through and it takes time for someone downstairs to make the connections for the field telephone.

These few mentioned needs for a more efficient telephone system on the campus are only a small number as seen by us, but the fact that there is a need for a better system is probably apparent to everyone.

How can we remedy the need? Everyone realizes that it would take money to enlarge the system, but the college is growing, spending hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly for improvements. If the college were to install a switchboard for the entire campus, the costs would be very small in comparison with the other improvements that are being made, and it is indeed a step that would help faculty and students alike. We hope that sometime in the future that the college will be able to have a switchboard installed, because the need is great.

We Extend Our Congratulations

The names of thirty East Carolina student leaders were released this week as being selected to the 1952 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges." These students were in our opinion very deserving of the honor, and we sincerely congratulate each and everyone of them, for the honor is truly one of the highest that a college student can obtain.

The task of choosing the select thirty was indeed a difficult one for the committee, for there are many deserving students who had to be left off the list because there were those who in the sight of the committee were a little more deserving. The committee that chose the students for the list started off with seventy-five names and had to narrow the number down to thirty.

Those chosen by a special committee of students and faculty members are students who have outstanding records in scholarship, leadership and participation in extra-curricular activities and who give indication of future usefulness to business and society. Each honored person will receive a certificate of recognition awarded by the organization and presented here. To be eligible the distinction you must be at least a member.

We wish to extend our congratulations with a regret is that we wish that we had had out by the final thirty

SPORTS ECHO

BY LLOYD WHITFIELD

How about this? Elon's Bob Lewis has been declared ineligible, and we wonder just how many of you knew or had read in any of the papers about it. Did you notice how the publicity on the whole incident was kept to a absolute minimum? Well, the sports staff of this paper did, and we intend to let the students hear our opinion, for had it happened at our college, or at another of the North State schools, our guess is that it would have received a sixty-point banner headline.

Because Lewis happened to be an Elon player is why the incident was kept under cover. The Greensboro Daily News, the paper which so highly publicizes the North State conference, has as its North State reporter Moses Crutchfield, and he is a graduate of Elon college. What he writes about the North State loop is taken by other newspapers, and his articles are used as the chief source for North State news.

Crutchfield Covers Up

We believe that Crutchfield did a splendid job in covering up the unfortunate incident for Elon and Jim Mallory. It was only mentioned in his column a couple of times and this was used very briefly so as to add color to his article. Why not bring this issue out into the open and let North State fans know the whole story?

Here it is straight from the cuff: Three years ago Lewis transferred to Elon from Wilmington Junior college and was used by their coach in a junior varsity game against Catawba college. Last season he performed as a regular for Coach Jim Mallory and again this year, which has been a good one for he was rated one of the best flankmen in the state. Lewis was not eligible for competition this season due to a transfer ruling the North State conference has in effect.

Catawba's coach, Joe Kirkland, realized this, remembering Lewis from the Jayvee contest, and filed a protest to conference officials three days before the Elon-Catawba football clash. Mallory immediately benched Lewis, which was a smart thing to do. However, if Catawba's Kirkland remembers Lewis and doubts his eligibility, it seems certain that his own coach, Jim Mallory, should have known that he could not use him this year.

Ruling Too Loose

Here is where the dust comes into the picture: The North State conference has a ruling which states that a team does not have to forfeit its games if the ineligible player is being used unknowingly. To smooth things over, all the Elon officials have to do is say that they failed to realize Lewis' status, but—a record is kept of all players, and all they had to do was look on the record sheet and see that Lewis could not play football this year. It was right there before their eyes, and even if they did not take the trouble to check on every player's eligibility (a must for most coaches just to play it safe), there is still no reason why Lewis' coach did not know he was not eligible. After all, Kirkland realized it.

Nevertheless, Elon has gotten out of the whole mess and nothing has been said about it. Lewis has been declared ineligible and to top things off, the Christians do not lose a single game, and things have been smoothed over just as cool as a cucumber. No one bothered to raise the roof about the situation of Elon not having to forfeit games that they won over Appalachian and East Carolina (which, incidentally, makes no difference to the Pirates because it would not change their loop standings). However, if Elon should manage to wrangle a win over Lenoir Rhyne and win the conference championship, Coach Clarence Stasavich of Lenoir Rhyne is going to be mighty mad. In all probability he will have plenty to say about the infallible conference ruling that says games are not to be forfeited if the player is used unknowingly.

Changes Should Be Made

You know, that is a rather stupid ruling to begin with. It needs more teeth in it for other schools could do the same thing. East Carolina could have done it this year by playing Buck Hardie, but Coach Bill Dole chose to do the wiser thing. At the next conference meeting we recommend that this rule be given serious consideration for it is only fair for a school who has used an ineligible player to have to forfeit its games. What if Elon should win the loop title? Do you think, if you were a member of their club, that you could rightfully be proud of the gold football you were wearing?

Incidentally, we pick Lenoir Rhyne over Elon tomorrow night in what should be a rather easy contest for the Bears.

Pirate's Ace Frosh Gridder Charges Against Apps

Paul Gay, a surprise backfield sensation for East Carolina, picks up several yards around right end for the Pirates in last Saturday nights cold and wintry North State contest that saw the visiting Appalachian eleven hold off a Buc rally to win 24-20.

Bucs Stage Brilliant Rally As Apps Win Loop Game 24-20

Second Half Comeback Falls Short For Bucs In Last Home Contest

A second-half rally by the East Carolina Pirates felt one touchdown short as the Appalachian Mountaineers edged past them 24-20 in a North State conference game played in College stadium last Saturday night.

Appalachian's first touchdown came after the Bucs' attempted quick kick had been blocked on their own 13 yard line. From here, it took only four plays to score the touchdown. Jack Groce kicked the extra point and the Apps were ahead, 7-0.

Gabriel Dashes 38 Yards
The Pirates then began a march, but were halted when one of Paul Gay's passes was intercepted and run back to the Appalachian 31. Six plays later, the visitors had a comfortable 14-0 lead. The key play in the 69 yard drive was a 38-yard dash by Steve Gabriel, running from the split T.

Late in the second quarter, the Apps scored their third touchdown. Jack Groce climaxed a 78-yard drive with a three yard smash through the line. Groce again converted to run the score to 21-0.

The Bucs took to the air after receiving the kickoff, but on the second play, the Mountaineers intercepted on the locals' 11-yard line. Two running plays netted but two yards and a pass fell incomplete. Groce then dropped back and calmly place-kicked the ball through the uprights for another three points to run the Apps out front 24-0 at halftime.

The visitors took the second half kickoff but were unable to gain and punted to the Pirates. The Bucs then began a drive which gave them their first touchdown of the game with Siler passing and Gay running, they moved the ball to the Appalachian 31. Jack Britt came into the game and picked up 18 yards and Benzie hit for five more down to the Apps' three. Two plays later Shoe got loose in the end zone and took a pass from Siler for the score. Grissom added the point to make the score 24-7.

Apps Fumble

One of Benzie's punts backed the Mountaineers up against the goal line and resulted in the Pirates' second touchdown. After the punt had rolled dead approximately the length of the ball from the goal line, the Apps went into punt formation. On a trick play they attempted to run the ball, but Jesse Aldridge and Bobby Thomas hit the runner hard and caused him to fumble. On the first play, Gay scored from the one yard line. Grissom again booted the extra point to close the gap to 21-14.

Late in the third period, the Pirates got another drive started which carried them to payday. The march began from the Pirate 43 and covered 57 yards. Siler climaxed the drive on the first play of the fourth quarter when he passed to Jack Benzie from the eight yard line for the touchdown. The extra point try fell short.

Elon's Bob Lewis Ruled Ineligible For NS Loop Play

Elon's star right end and one of the state's top pass catchers has been declared ineligible for further North State conference competition, but the Christians will not have to forfeit loop games that he participated in. Appalachian and East Carolina, two schools that the title seekers defeated.

The question of Lewis' eligibility came up before Elon was scheduled to play Catawba when Joe Kirkland, Indian coach, filed a protest three days before the game, which is in accord with conference rules. Since then Lewis has been benched and has not taken part in any of the games.

Last week the conference decided that he was not eligible. Three years ago he transferred to Elon from Wilmington Junior college and played in a Jayvee game against Catawba. This constituted a year of play for Lewis and then last year he was a regular on Jim Mallory's red hot team. Again this year he was performing for Elon but his eligibility had run out last year.

Pirates Attempt To Break Into Win Column Tomorrow

Christians, Bears Fight For League Laurels Saturday

With the coolness of a winter snow, Elon's Bob Lewis was declared ineligible, but the Christians were not forced to forfeit games that he had participated in, and the stage is set for Jim Mallory's eleven to meet Lenoir Rhyne in Hickory Saturday in a grid test that will settle the North State championship.

Both clubs are undefeated in league play, each having won four games, and when the two power-houses meet tomorrow, one of the state's most colorful grid classics will be witnessed by a large crowd. Outside of the North State the two clubs have dropped only one contest each, Elon going down before Emory and Henry with Tampa university edging the Bears.

The Bruins added their fourth loop victory last Saturday when they smacked a hapless Guilford team 33-0. Fullback Steve Trudnak, a smart choice for little All-American honors, scored three times in the homecoming celebration at Hickory. Elon stepped out of the conference and found the going a little tougher than expected and barely escaped with a 13-12 win over Newberry.

Even if Lenoir Rhyne takes a victory over Elon, they will still have to face rugged Catawba, a club which has taken on two Southern conference teams this season. This battle is scheduled for Thanksgiving day and the Indians figure an upset is in the making during the holidays, for the two clubs are bitter rivals which goes to say anything can happen. However, should Elon manage to beat the Bears they would only have last place Guilford to contend with before taking a clean sweep and top laurels.

Appalachian's defending conference champions finished league play by holding East Carolina back in the last half to escape the Pirate's den with a 24-20 setback. Jack Groce and Steve Gabriel spearheaded the Mountaineers in the contest that gave the Apps a 3-3 conference mark and enabled them to hold fourth place in the conference.

Meet Rugged Flyers In Afternoon Battle On Marine Gridiron

Play within North Carolina ends tomorrow for Coach Bill Dole's East Carolina Pirates as they journey to Cherry Point for an afternoon contest with a weak but upset hungry Flyer eleven. After Saturday's battle with the Marines, the Bucs have an open date before meeting The Citadel in Charleston November 24 to wind up the current campaign.

Coach Dole's team escaped last week's game with Appalachian with only a few minor injuries, and the Bucs hope to break into the win column against the Flyers after dropping their last two outings. The Pirate coach will probably use plenty of freshmen in tomorrow afternoon's encounter, which is the second daytime battle this season for the locals. In a crimmage this week Dole was using eight freshmen on one eleven as he drilled for a winning combination. Freshmen have been the standouts on the Buccaneer squad this season with such men as Paul Gay, Topsy Hayes, Boyd Webb and Willie Holland paying the way. They have all been impressive in games to date and will be counted on heavily against Cherry Point.

Sandy Siler is expected to quarterback the Pirate club and will probably have Dwight Shoe and Larry Rhodes on the ends to do the pass catching. Jack Benzie, Jack Britt and Claude King will share the running duties with Paul Gay.

Jesse Aldridge, a definite All-conference guard, Willie Holland, Don McKenzie and Bobby Hodges will lead the locals' defense as they attempt to hold back the home team.

The Flyers have not been too impressive in games to date, but they have suffered defeat from the Dolemen for two consecutive years and would like to gain revenge, especially for the 21-12 licking they suffered last season.

Work Continues On New Gym; Might Be In Use By January

"We hope that the new gymnasium will be ready for use by January," stated F. D. Duncan, East Carolina treasurer and business manager, Tuesday.

"We believe that the latter games on the basketball schedule may be played in the new gym," he added. Seating capacity of the gym will be approximately 2200 and it will have a swimming pool, 75 feet by 35 feet, in the basement.

Bids for the new library have been received but contracts have not been let, pending approval from Washington for materials. The building will be located on the present site of the "Y" hut. Tentative plans are to convert the present library into a music building.

The teacher's dormitory, which is now being constructed behind Wilson hall, will be completed, it is hoped, sometime in the spring or early summer, asserted the business manager. The dormitory is being built of brick and steel and will accommodate 42 persons. Every two rooms will have a bath and kitchenette, and each person will occupy a single room. Construction cost, including plumbing, heating and electricity, is estimated at $325,000.

Immediately in front of the teacher's dormitory a site has been cleared for the construction of a new $50,000 home management house.

Contracts have been awarded for the addition of a new wing to Ragsdale hall, but as yet there has been no allocation of materials. After the new teacher's dormitory has been completed and the new wing added to Ragsdale hall, the girls will occupy all of Ragsdale.

Mathematics Club To Hear Schwarz

Dr. Josef Schwarz, visiting professor from Heidelberg, Germany, will be the guest speaker at the Mathematics club meeting to be held Tuesday evening at 6:45 in Austin 126.

The subject of the German professor's talk will be the organization of German schools and the importance that mathematics holds in that system.

Officers of the Math club remind everyone that not only math majors and minors are invited, but that anyone interested in mathematics is encouraged to join the club. There will be a social after the business meeting and refreshments will be served.

Teachers, Patrons Hear Field Service Director Give Talk

Dr. Ed J. Carter, director of the Bureau of Field services at East Carolina college, spoke at Winterville and Atlantic this week before groups of teachers and school patrons.

Developing the topic "Let's Look At Our Schools," Dr. Carter talked to members of the Winterville Parent-Teacher association Tuesday evening at the school building there. He pointed out the characteristics of a good school and suggested ways in which members of the organization might work toward better educational advantages in their community.

Members of the North Carolina Education association in Carteret county heard Dr. Carter Wednesday in a talk on "Twenty Ways To Build A School." Dr. Carter was the guest of Carteret county teachers during the day and worked with them on ideas and projects for school improvement.

Holt Represents College At Meet

Dr. Robert Holt, director of religious activities at East Carolina college, is filling at present a number of speaking engagements in this section of the state and will represent the college department of social studies at the 4th Annual North Carolina conference on Family Life in Asheville November 15-16.

He will be accompanied to the Asheville meeting by several students chosen from a sociology class in family life at the college here. The course is taught by Dr. Holt and Dr. Bessie McNeil, director of the department of home economics.

Dr. Holt will be principal speaker at a Homecoming day celebration held November 8 by the Rosehill Baptist church, of which the Rev. Peyton Royal is pastor.

Workshop Gives Play By Rives

"Just One Dance," a one-act play written and directed by Ralph Rives, senior from Enfield, was presented by the workshop department of the Teachers playhouse last Thursday evening in Austin auditorium on the campus of East Carolina college.

The premier performance of the production was given last fall before the members of the DAR at the Benjamin May chapter house in Farmville.

Students appearing in the production were Marion Chesson as Madame Revier, Percy Wilkens as Captain Jackson, Rives as Lieutenant Smith, Marilyn Watkins as Miss Johnson, an American Red Cross nurse, and Katherine Costin as Sister Cecilia, a Belgian nun.

Immediately following the performance an evaluation was held at which time several people were recognized who gave their evaluation of the production. Among those who spoke

Utterback In New York To Attend Conference At Columbia University

Dr. Elizabeth Utterback of the department of English at East Carolina college has been in New York City this week at a conference at Teachers college, Columbia university, the purpose of which is to discuss ways of improving the teacher-training program at the institution.

Dr. Utterback is one of a number of alumni of Teachers college from various parts of the United States invited by President W. F. Russell of Teachers college to be present at the conference and to give advice and assistance in mapping plans.
