Student Self Help Wages Here Rises To 50 Cents An Hour

Employees Receive More Pay, Work Less Hours, Duncan Says

Student help rate has been raised to 50 cents an hour effective this quarter, F. D. Duncan, college treasurer, announced this week.

There will be less working hours and more pay for the self help students, he added. Students will be working 15 hours less and earning 50 cents per quarter than they did last year.

A full time self help student will work 180 hours a quarter and receive compensation of $80. Last year students received $75 for 175 hours work per quarter. The rate was then about 45 cents per hour.

A half-time self help student will work 90 hours per quarter and receive compensation of $40.

Full time self help students may receive a maximum of $75 in meal money against their anticipated earnings and half-time self help students may receive a maximum of $35 in meal money. The student will, of course, receive in cash at the end of the quarter the amount earned minus meal books issued to him.

"We were able to get more funds from the state this year," Mr. Duncan said as one of the reasons for making the increase possible.

Prices on food in the cafeteria will be slightly increased, but not very much, he added. "As I have said before, the college cafeteria is self-supporting without the aid of state funds, therefore, it must make compensation when they increase their costs."

Student Supply stores, consisting of the soda shop, book and stationery stores, probably will not increase prices on their merchandise, Mr. Duncan said.

Last April Mr. Duncan was asked to address students at a meeting of the Student Government Association and he answered some questions of an "East Carolinian" staff member. He stated at that time that he was working out some figures to boost the self help rate to 10 to 15 per cent sometime in the near future.

Questions were also raised then on why the University of North Carolina gave a 75-cent rate and some other state schools that were paying a slightly higher rate than East Carolina. Mr. Duncan compared the costs of dorm rooms and dining hall prices. Dorm rooms at UNC run up to $45 per quarter whereas East Carolina charges $20 and $23 per quarter. Cafeteria prices are also higher at Carolina.

Treasurer Opens Student Budget Office Friday

Today is the opening date of the Student Budget office, Billy Laughlin, treasurer of the Student Government Association, announced.

Hours will be posted sometime during the day on the door of the office which is located in the basement of Austin. The office will be able to operate three hours a day, an hour longer than last year. This was made possible by an addition to the budget staff which was approved in the Student Legislature last spring. Billy now has three staff workers.

Serving on the Budget office staff with Billy are Ann Bynum, first assistant treasurer; Milton Foley, second assistant treasurer; and Howard Brooks, third assistant.

The Budget office handles student deposits and cashes checks on any bank with the requirement of placing the address at college on the check. It also takes care of identification cards which are for college athletics and entertainments. There is no charge for the services rendered by the office to the students, Billy stated.

In addition the office handles SGA funds and Student Government sponsored organizations funds.

$100 EC Scholarships Provide 29 Students Financial Aid

Efforts of the East Carolina student body and college officials to develop a method of assisting outstanding boys and girls to attend college, who lack the necessary money to do so, are showing up in a big fashion on the campus this fall, Dr. Clinton R. Prewett, director of Student Personnel, said this week.

The first students to be granted scholarships from the accrued profits of the Book Store are entering East Carolina this quarter. Also, the $100 scholarships awarded to students already enrolled in college at East Carolina are receiving assistance for the first time. There are 29 of these scholarship students.

These scholarships were awarded by a committee headed by Dr. Prewett, on the basis of scholastic record, participation in school affairs, character, personality and qualities indicating success in college work.

Dr. Prewett has proclaimed these scholarships as "Operation Investment in Youth."

All contestants were chosen by popular vote of the student body and included Joyce Branch of Greenville; Harriette Burnette of Tarboro; Anise Kelley of Mt. Olive; and Pat Medlin of Virginia Beach, Va., the latter a runner-up in the final selection.

Students losing or finding articles on campus may report them to the Alumni Office in Austin, room 127, or to the dean of men's office in the Administration building, Dr. Clinton R. Prewett, dean of men and director of student affairs, announced this week.

One loss was reported Tuesday afternoon to Dean Prewett. Elizabeth Ann Jackson lost her wallet containing $50 in Wright auditorium while she was registering. If anyone finds her wallet they may place it in the care of the mentioned offices.

Twenty New Members Join College Faculty

Twenty new members join the East Carolina college faculty at the opening of the 1953-1954 term, announces President John D. Messick.

Ten of these are additions to the present faculty; others replace faculty members who resigned or who are on leave of absence during 1953-1954; 12 of the new staff members hold the doctor's degree.

Dr. Carl V. Harris becomes East Carolina's new director of religious activities, replacing Dr. Robert L. Holt, who resigned to accept a position at Mars Hill college. A graduate of Mars Hill, Wake Forest, and Yale, Dr. Harris holds the doctor's degree from Duke university. During 1947-1950 he was a faculty member at Mars Hill. That fall he worked at the Eastern State hospital at Williamsburg, Va., primarily with patients receiving insulin and electric shock therapies. Last year he was connected with the Division of Corrections of the State Department of Welfare and Institutions in Richmond, Va.

Dr. Paul D. Running replaces Dora Ciriot as head of the East Carolina department of art. He received his education at St. Olaf college in Minnesota and the State University of Iowa, from which he holds the master's and the doctor's degrees. He has taught at Marquette, Mich., and as a graduate assistant at the University of Iowa.

Two new members of the health and physical education department joined the East Carolina coaching staff. James Mallory, formerly head football and baseball coach at Elon, replaces Clyde Biggers, assistant football coach, who resigned to accept a position as head coach at Catawba college. Mallory holds the master's degree from the University of North Carolina. Earl Smith, an East Carolina alumnus who received both the bachelor's and master's degrees there, will teach in the health and physical education department and have coaching duties in major sports.

Enrollment Begins

Here are some of the approximately 540 women freshmen and transfer students who registered in Wright auditorium Tuesday. About 400 new men students registered Wednesday, comprising an estimated total of 940 new students. Enrollment for this year is anticipated at 2,200, a record breaking figure for East Carolina College. (Photo by Norwood Elliot)

Chapel Services Begin In Austin Tuesday Morning

The first regular chapel service will be held on Tuesday, September 15, in Austin auditorium, at 12 noon. Dr. Carl V. Harris, director of religious activities, announced.

Dr. Harris will lead the service of worship. The service will last approximately 20 minutes, beginning promptly at noon.

The chimes will play for five minutes before the beginning of the chapel service. These short stimulating meetings are held each Tuesday and offer spiritual relaxation during a busy day, he said.

Friday night, September 11, church receptions will be held at the various churches. There will be a special welcome for the Freshmen and everyone is urged to attend.

On Thursday evening, September 10, at 6:30 p. m. vestpers were held in the "Y" hut followed by open house. At 7:30 p. m. freshmen students assembled in the Austin auditorium for a church welcome by Dr. Harris. Representatives from Greenville churches were introduced and later held separate meetings with the various denominational groups. In the separate group meetings the student workers also presented their programs to the members present.

Telephone Switchboard Here Serves Sixty More Offices

Approximately 60 more telephones will be in service on the campus with the installation of a private branch of exchange, F. D. Duncan, business manager, announced this week.

These phones should be in service within a week or ten days, Mr. Duncan said.

The exchange office will be in Austin building, room 127, which is currently occupied by the Alumni Association. The Alumni office will be moved to the old Home Management building soon.

All phones on the campus will be on the PBX system with the exception of the pay phones in the dormitories, he added.

Explaining how the PBX operated, Mr. Duncan said that all calls within the campus and all outgoing calls will go through the automatic exchange. In other words local numbers may be dialed direct. Long distance calls will be handled by the college operator.

All incoming calls will come through the operator in charge of the exchange here. The college will then have only one number listed in the phone directory which will be "East Carolina College." Callers outside the campus will dial the number and ask the campus operator for their party.

Each department head will have a phone installed in his office, Mr.

Duncan said, in addition to the Student Supply stores. Distribution of the remaining phones will be decided at a later date.

An operator will be on duty probably from 8 to 5 o'clock, he added, on nights and weekends there will be several "trunk-line" phones which will be available for calls off the campus. They will be in such places as the infirmary, office of the dean of women, cafeteria and gymnasium.

Register Cars, Too

It will be necessary for all students to register their cars with the office of the Director of Student Personnel. Each student will receive a sticker to put on his car at the time of registration. It is very important that all students register their cars during the registration period.

Over 900 Frosh, Transfers Start Here Tuesday

Approximately 900 freshmen and transfer students had their first experiences of campus life at East Carolina College Tuesday as the 25th Annual Orientation program began. This group makes up the largest number of new students ever to report for work at the college.

Special events included in the Orientation Program will extend through Saturday of this week. A series of varied activities has been scheduled to acquaint the student participants with college life and to help them begin their work auspiciously.

More than 1,200 men and women applied for admission to the college as new students this fall, President John D. Messick announced Monday at a faculty meeting and of these, 1,152 were accepted as eligible to enter East Carolina. From this number an estimated 900 have arrived at the college to enroll for classes during the fall quarter.

Lack of sufficient dormitory facilities on the campus, Dr. Messick explained, was a major reason why a large number of these applicants were unable to enter the college for the 1953-1954 term. Two new dormitories are now being planned, he said.

In numbers the present freshman class is expected to top all previous first-year classes at the college. In September, 1952, freshmen registered for the fall quarter included 797 men and women. The 1951 enrollment for the same period was 605.

Total enrollment of students who will take courses on the campus this fall is estimated at 2,200. The previous high was reached in September, 1952, when 2,061 students registered for work.

President Messick made an informal talk to new students at an assembly held Tuesday morning as an opening event of the orientation program. He spoke to them as members of a "cooperative community" and urged each student to follow a planned program in developing a purpose for his life's work.

Freshman registration began Tuesday and was completed Wednesday. An extensive testing program, conducted by approximately 60 members of the faculty, is now being administered. Medical examinations of new students was completed at the college infirmary. Dr. Messick said freshmen have received their orientation in the use of the campus.

Other events scheduled for Wednesday night include a social hour by Mitchell... president of the Student Government Association, and a meeting of the Student Government Association.

Dr. Messick said the college is pleased to have the largest number of freshmen in its history. He said the college is a place where students can receive a liberal education and where they can develop their individuality.

Movie On Campus Tuesday

A new picture, "Oiltown," will be shown Monday and Tuesday, September 14 and 15 at the auditorium, at 7:30 p.m. All tickets are free. The picture is a gripping story of one man's search for his God stars Col. Townsend Evans, Paul Power and Robert Clarke.

Freshman Girl Voices Opinion Of First Days

by Marilyn Scott
Dear Mom,
I'm a full-fledged freshman again. That's the horrible part of going to college after being a great big high school senior just a few short months ago. I certainly do feel small.
I've lost count of the times the buildings up here have moved around so that my dormitory seems to be in a different direction every time I return from points far distant (or even close by) on the campus.
You remember how the furniture in my room was scattered from one end to the other. We've rearranged it five times to date and at present the arrangement more closely resembles the ECC Pirates' forward wall about to crash into Elon's line than anything else. It's all strung out with a six-foot-plus chest hemming in each end, two bedside tables at guard, the beds ready in the tackle positions and the desk holds my typewriter at center. We have plenty of floor space for the backfield (formed by our shoes and the wastebasket at fullback).
I just can't wait for football season to start, though my blue and white high school football wardrobe will have to be replaced by some purple and gold duds so I'll be patriotically costumed at the games.
The food's just wonderful and we're so much hungrier for it after waiting in line several hours. No, I'm just kidding. I haven't had to wait over an hour—yet.
I thought it was rather a difficult task to figure out what I should take, when, and under what professor, but it was only after I had sweated over my registration for two hours that I discovered that you can get a faculty advisor to help you figure out such minor details as what classes you should attend, when and where.
The freshman testing program so thoughtfully provided the college to test our aptitude, our mentality and our personality was lots of fun, at least for those of us so morbidly inclined as to get enjoyment from matching up weird figures, symbols and letters and arriving at brilliant conclusions from the results.
The upperclassmen already here on campus certainly are helpful to us little freshmen. Why, one boy even offered to go along and lead me by the hand to some distant building. Wasn't that self-sacrificing of him when he was no doubt getting some much needed rest out in the middle of the campus?
All in all I'm sure I'm going to like college life even if I do have to get up at seven o'clock every morning if I want any breakfast.
I must close, but please forward by the next mail some money, the box of clothes I left behind accidentally and my toothbrush.
Lovingly,
Your little daughter

Who's Who At East Carolina

by Emily Boyce

Billy Laughinghouse

For this first edition of the "East Carolinian" our choice of "Who's Who" is a fellow whom we all know. He is quite a familiar figure around the campus and is said to practically live in the basement of Austin Building. One person summed him up in these terms, "That Billy Laughinghouse is smart, and he's a great guy, too!"
Billy is Greenville born and bred and chose East Carolina College simply because "it's the greatest!" He attended Greenville High School and there became interested in student government work and his major now, social studies. Although Billy is a social studies major and an English minor keeps him busy, he has found time during his three years in college to develop quite a record in student government work. He is also a member of a number of campus organizations and takes an active interest in each of them.
Active Worker
During Billy's freshman and sophomore years he served as a member of the Day Students At Large. Taking quite an interest in the ROTC program, he played with the drum and bugle corps for three years and enjoyed every minute of it (so he says).
The Circle "K" Club is made up of men who are considered to have the qualities of leadership, scholarship, and citizenship at East Carolina. Billy has been a member of the Circle "K" for two years and has helped the club put on a number of campus activities. Our Greenville boy position includes such duties as taking charge of all fees collected by the Student Government Association, being in charge of the Budget office, serving as chairman of the budget committee and having a seat on the executive council. Even with all the important duties he fills, Billy doesn't neglect his work on his first love, social studies.

Hobby Economics
Billy's real hobby is the study of economics. He takes all the courses possible in that field and says he likes every word of it. Billy's schedule doesn't leave him much time to devote to sports, but he's on the front row at every football game.
Billy will graduate in May and after that, who knows? Uncle Sam will probably call on Billy's talents for a few years, but Billy says he has to practice teach first. According to Billy his practice teaching holds no real fears for him. The idea of being called Mr. Laughinghouse really doesn't appeal to him, but he says he will certainly get used to it.
As many of us are, Billy is impressed with the rapid growth of his college. He says he can tell a great deal of difference since his freshman year and this year. Billy is proud of the changes and improvements which have been made in his school since he's even been here. The satisfaction of doing well at East Carolina is an achievement to be proud of. And Billy Laughinghouse, you have done well during your years here and we are proud of you. Best of luck during your senior year.

From The Dean Of Men

Dear Student:
All of us at East Carolina College extend a most cordial welcome to you. We feel that you have taken a very important step forward in your efforts to better prepare yourselves for adequate living in today's world.
Your first few weeks at East Carolina will be your most trying ones. The people best qualified to assist you during this first quarter should be called upon whenever you feel you need help. If you do not know to whom to take your problems for assistance, please come to my office on the second floor of the Administration building.
Remember to get started "on the right foot" and you will have a most profitable and enjoyable college career.
Yours very truly,
Clinton R. Prewett,
Director of Student Personnel

From The Dean Of Women

It is indeed a pleasure to welcome you at this, the beginning of a new school year, I, and the members of my staff, are interested in helping you to obtain the best possible development and happiness from being a member of our big, happy family. We would like to help you with your problems, so please do not hesitate to come to us with them.
While here I hope that you will acquire many friends and have many interests. Take advantage of the many opportunities for self-development that East Carolina has to offer. If you are a new student remember that you have a newly acquired independence and new responsibilities in a new environment, which you must learn to use and carry successfully.
Through participation and association in group living you will discover capacities in yourselves of which you may have been unaware, so enter into the social and extra-curricular program, and enjoy the experiences which will enable you to meet situations with a poised adequacy.
Each person is an individual but let us keep in mind that college students are judged as a group. One who is boisterous, ill-mannered or uncouth is reflecting upon the good name of East Carolina. Polite group behavior is, as you know, nothing more than each practicing good manners.
Cordially yours,
Ruth White,
Dean of Women

From The Alumni Secretary

Dear Members of the Class of 1957:
You enter a new phase of life as you begin your student days at East Carolina. This is a brief welcome to you, many of whom are daughters and sons of alumni or the friends of alumni of East Carolina College. We are glad you are here.
As you become a part of the student group which represents a wide geographical area, you become a part of a student body where good citizenship and good sportsmanship are encouraged by and through an active student government. You belong to us and are a part of a growing family.
We hope you will come by the Alumni Office, now in room 127 in Austin building, especially if you have relatives who have attended East Carolina College. And remember we are yours to serve in any manner in which you feel we may help you.
Cordially,
James W. Butler
Alumni Secretary

TIMELY TOPICS

by Bob Hilldrup
It often seems to us that college students might substitute the start of the fall term each year for New Year's as a time to make resolutions.
In a way perhaps they do—at least so it sounds at East Carolina when everyone returns to the campus in the fall vowing that the mistakes they made last year with regard to their studies will happen no more.
The only trouble is that these things never last.
Why is it that the rosy ambition of September fades to bitter later in the year? Somewhere, somehow, something must go wrong. And what happens to those students that so earnestly made those promises?
Some adopt the attitude of the Brooklyn Dodgers (wait'll next year—we'll moider dem!) and some fall into a class loosely defined as pseudo-intellectuals.
Of the two classifications the latter seems to us to be the more dangerous to the welfare of the student. At least it can be said that the former philosophy has some small promise but the latter is a pitfall that can ruin a student's entire attitude toward education.
Perhaps pseudo-intellectualism can best be defined as a defense mechanism which causes students, in an attempt to cover up their plain laziness, to adopt a deep, philosophical air, an air which seems to say, "Why should I concern myself with the trivial subjects on my schedule when the problems of the world are to be pondered?"
Fortunately, there seem to be few pseudo-intellectuals on the East Carolina campus. Too often, however, many persons outside of campus life judge a college unfairly because of the number of these creatures on its rolls. It is students such as these that make the person unacquainted with college life wonder just what our educational institutions are coming to.

Cadet Relates Summer ROTC Camp Experiences

by Tommie Lupton

The loud shriek of a whistle at 4 o'clock started the morning off for approximately 100 East Carolina Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps cadets who were enrolled at one of three summer encampments for one month during the summer.
At the dreaded sound of the whistle, all the cadets would by some sought out force manager to roll over in their sun-kissed bunks and pry their eyelids open. A few moments of just staring into space usually followed, and then everyone finally managed to arise and begin the day's headaches.
Rushing to the latrine, everyone washed the sleep from their still weary eyes and tried to say "good morning" to a few of their friends. Then came the time to make beds, wash and dust woodwork, scrub floors, polish shoes, line up the clothing in the closets, and other small technicalities.
If the cadet was lucky, he had all the little necessities completed by 4:50 a.m. and was dressed and ready to fall in for the first formation. Most of the cadets felt more like falling out than in, for at 4:50 in the morning it was still dark, believe it or not.
Such early hours as the ones being described above were unheard of at Tyndall and Brookley Air Force Bases, but the boys who survived Moody Air Force Base in the heart of Okefenokee Swamp near Valdosta, Ga., know all about marching in the dark and not being able to see the men on the end of a line. There were days when all the cadets of a certain group would play softball, swim, or engage in a volley ball game at the wee hours of the morning. Some of the future officers were complaining about their needing to be lights up, but their gripes were unheard.

All the aforementioned work and exercise was done on an empty stomach, for chow was not until about 6:45 and as late as 7:30 for some of the unfortunate souls. When the cadets finally reached the mess hall, there was always food aplenty, and any cadet who dined at camp can truthfully tell anyone about the quantity of food consumed by everyone.
Excluding having to stand in line in the 90-plus temperature in the mess hall and the swarms of gnats flying all over the place, the food was good on the whole. However, there were times when one would wonder how perfectly good food could be cooked to taste so terrible. But everyone lived, and many cadets gained weight.
There was quite a bit of work done at the various encampments. All the rooms in the barracks were inspected one, and sometimes two or three times daily, and at mail call nearly everyone received a slip telling how many demerits were given for the inspection.
None of the cadets were free of demerits, for the technical officers did not wish for anyone to feel slighted. Therefore, demerits were given to everyone, though there were some who received them in greater quantity.
For those unfortunate souls who received the quantity, there were tours to be marched off on Saturday afternoon. Boys walking tours at Moody had to walk 20 minutes for each demerit over ten. The first weekend there were about 100 cadets of the 231 in camp assembled on the drill field walking off demerits under the commands of the Officer of the Day.

Demerits were sometimes given out for doing what you were supposed to be doing, according to some of the cadets. All the boys will readily agree that life at summer camp was strictly cadet in every respect.
Classroom sessions of the various phases of the work of the Air Force were attended from the hours of 0800 through 1700, with an hour off for show and an hour for mail call and "free time." That "free time" was a joke with all the boys for the first couple of weeks.
At "free time" such chores as policing the grounds, scrubbing down the latrine, washing windows, and cleaning the ventilators in the hall were done. Some of the barracks were even restricted at night, and all had to stay close to do various duties.
After hours were usually spent in the sack, at the day room, or at the Officers' Club. Girls at East Carolina think they have it bad. Well, get these restrictions: (1) Lights were out every night at 9 o'clock. (2) Bed check was held at 10:30 every evening, and the officers meant for the cadets to be in bed. (3) If any cadet went off the base at night, he had to be signed in before 10 o'clock. (Yes, everyone had to sign in and out every time they went anywhere, or just about.)
The one bright spot about the camp was the weekends. If there was no duty for a cadet, he could leave the base at noon on Saturday and stay off post until 10 p.m. Sunday evening. Of course, though, the first weekend had to be spent on the base, as did every evening the first week of the camp.
Camp was not really all work and no play, for after 1800 hours (6 p.m.) there was intrabarracks competition in softball, swimming, basketball, volleyball and tennis. A cadet newspaper and annual were published at the Moody AFB camp. The day room had a pool table and a shuffle board, which the cadets were welcomed to use, and the boys had certain Officers' Club privileges.
Each cadet had an opportunity to show his leadership ability as an officer, for the cadet officers were changed rather frequently. East Carolina can boast several of the cadet colonels during the period.
On the final day of camp at the "big" review there were some of the East Carolina cadets who were given their commissions as second lieutenants. These boys were those who only needed to complete their summer encampment period.
The final days of camp saw everyone getting ready to leave for home. Most of the cadets agreed that the camp was profitable in gaining experience of what the military life will hold in store for them and in making many new acquaintances from all sections of the country.
Camp was fun.
(Editor's note: The writer of this story attended camp at Moody, but the two other programs were very similar.)

From The President

We are happy to welcome every one of you new students.
You, of course, are here for different reasons. Some were sent while others were motivated by various objectives not the least of which is social. I trust you will be with us for four years but if you are, work must begin immediately and continue throughout your college career.
Too many students enter college with the idea of coasting and then regretfully lament their waywardness when notified that they are no longer in good standing. Now, why do I tell you this at the beginning? It is to impress upon you the idea of developing a purpose for your life's work, and in doing this make a schedule of your time that will include a planned program to develop yourselves socially, spiritually, aesthetically, civically, physically and intellectually, including preparation for a profession or vocation.
Your college is interested in helping to motivate you in the development of the principles of honor, strength, service, quality and preparation for earning a living. We desire you to realize that you are one of a cooperative community and that you will give of your best to every worthwhile endeavor. This is your dressing room for the drama that is to follow.
If you haven't already decided upon your life's work be sure to evaluate your aptitudes and interests and then select your curriculum accordingly. Get a vision of what you want to be ten or fifteen years from now and work toward it. There are vast possibilities as elementary teachers, secondary teachers, librarians, special education teachers, social welfare workers, dietitians, home demonstration, medical doctors, dentists, engineers, scientists, architects, etc. However, in the field of secondary teaching, social studies, English and health and physical education, positions are at times pretty difficult to find.
Finally, may I advise that you approach your counselor often as well as your teachers, the deans or anyone else whom you should want to help you, as they will be happy to assist you in any way possible. I, too, shall be very happy to help you in any way I can. But in parting, may I again advise that you alone can assure the results that are necessary for success.
Fraternally,
J. D. Messick,
President

From The SGA President

Fellow Students:
The many "welcomes" you have received cannot adequately express the true feeling of East Carolina College. As the months roll on, we hope you will come to realize that these words of welcome really represent the friendliness and fellowship on our campus of which we are so proud.
By taking an active part in the Student Government Association which is the key to most college activities, you may receive many benefits. Our college clubs, our entertainment series, the annual, newspaper and many others operate through the SGA to the advantage of the student and college.
We feel sure that your love for the college will immeasurably grow during your time here and make you proud to say, you are from East Carolina College.
Sincerely yours,
Mitchell Saeed
SGA President

From The Registrar

Dear Student Body:
I wish to take this opportunity to welcome to our campus all new students, as well as those who have returned for another year's work.
I also wish to commend the entire student body for the cooperation and fine spirit which was displayed during the very busy days of registration. Especially do I want to thank all upperclassmen who so graciously helped the new students complete their registration. I feel that this registration was the best ever, and its success was due largely to your cooperation. If you have any suggestions as to how we might improve our registration period, I would be most happy to talk to you about them.
If you run into difficulties with your curriculum, please feel free to come into my office for advice. I am always glad to help you in any way that I can. However, it is your responsibility to take your problems and difficulties to the Registrar. We will be both enjoyable and helpful.
Sincerely yours,
Marilyn Scott, Registrar

Alumni President's Message To Members

Time for work is here, not only for members of the student body of East Carolina college, but for graduates who are active members of an alumni chapter or members at large of the General Alumni association.
One phase of alumni work will consist of keeping James W. Butler, our alumni secretary, informed of all chapter activities that will be conveyed to other chapters through the "East Carolinian." Whether you are a member of a chapter or not keep the alumni office informed of your activities and those of any other graduate you know. A better informed association will be a more active one.
Getting your chapter meetings going is a major event on the local level for your chapter. But the next major event for the General Association is Homecoming day scheduled for October 10. A big program has been arranged and a big time awaits those who will be here.
And don't forget those dues after your fall membership drives.
Looking ahead to seeing all of you on Homecoming day and wishing for you a successful alumni year,
James L. Whitfield
State President
Alumni Association
A safety sign read—"School—Don't Kill a Child." Beneath this was a childish scrawl, "Wait for a Teacher."
"Can you lend me a hundred dollars?"
"I don't like to do it because lending money leads to breaking up friendships."
"Oh, well, we haven't been close friends."

Honduras Exchange Student Tells Impressions Of Campus

by Emily Boyce

"Why you have everything in such abundance here in America!"
This was one of the first things that impressed Leonor E. Padilla, the foreign exchange student on campus for this year. Leonor is from La Lima, Honduras, Central America, and comes to us under the college offered scholarship through the Institute of International Education. This is her first trip to the United States.
Leonor was impressed with the kindness of the people here. "Everyone is so friendly and polite . . ." She also likes our king size cigarettes.
Our exchange student is 22 years old and holds a teacher's certificate. She has been teaching grades one, two and three for the past two years for the United Fruit Company in Honduras. Leonor arrived in Charleston by boat last Friday and Mrs. Marguerite Perry and James Fleming, of the foreign language department, met her in Wilson Friday evening.
Miss Padilla plans a full schedule for this year. Learning our educational procedures will be one of the main objectives for her. Leonor wants to become familiar with everything possible so she can go back and contribute her knowledge to the educational system of her country. English, education psychology, music, typing, history and swimming are just a few of the courses Leonor wants to take. She considers music her real hobby, and since she plays by ear, her musical education will be extremely interesting to her.

Leonor will help us a great deal this year, for she plans to assist in Spanish conversation in the classroom. According to Mr. Fleming and Mrs. Perry she will also offer valuable aid in English and Spanish word study.
One of Miss Padilla's main interests is the English language. Leonor studied English with a determination to be admired and she speaks it extremely well.
All of East Carolina College welcomes you, Leonor E. Padilla; we know we will like you as much as you like our country and campus. Please don't hesitate to call on any one of us at anytime for anything! Glad to have you with us!

SPORTS ECHO

by Bob Hilldrup

Football season is here once again and the East Carolina Pirates chafe at the gridiron bit while looking toward what should be the most promising season in the history of the school.

Despite the fact that opening day for the Buccaneers is still better than a week away sports writers throughout the state have already tabbed the locals as the team to beat in the race for the title spot in the North State Conference. For example, Moses Crutchfield, of the Greensboro Daily News, was on campus Monday to look over the Pirate squad and was, according to reports, enthusiastically impressed with what he saw.

Although newspaper forecasts are generally accurate, it must be remembered that in a game as erratic as football the old cliché—anything can happen—is often a good bit of advice.

Seating space for patrons of the five home games this fall has been increased by some 1,360, thanks to the Pirates Club. The club, formed in May with a goal of 1,000 charter members, has contributed the money for the new grandstand. With construction of the new seats, College Stadium can now accommodate some 4,700 patrons.

Another addition, badly needed by the East Carolina Athletic Department for many years, is being made ready through the efforts of the EPO "service" fraternity. George Tucker, frat president, has informed us that a trophy case, to be placed in the lobby of Memorial gym, is virtually complete and will be installed within the next several days. The need for a trophy case has grown more and more acute over the past years and a hearty word of commendation should go to those who made this donation possible.

Among the items to be included in the case will be the football jersey of Roger Thrift, generally rated as East Carolina's all-time gridiron great. The basketball jersey of Warren "Sonny" Russell, who as a senior last year led East Carolina to the national tourney at Kansas City, Kansas, will also be included along with the cherished Bohunk Trophy, symbol of rivalry between East Carolina and Atlantic Christian.

Plans For New Squad Under Consideration

Plans are now underway to give East Carolina a second football team.

The athletic department has slated one contest, with Wilmington, for the Pirate "B" team. Other contests may be scheduled for the Baby Buccaneers.

Bucs Prepare For Opening Clash Here

Wilson Teachers Play Here To Inaugurate Buc Schedule

The East Carolina College Pirates, under the tutelage of Head Coach Jack Boone and assistants Jim Malloy and Earl Smith, are undergoing two-a-day practices in preparation for their opening football game Saturday night, September 19, against Wilson Teachers college of Washington, D. C. here.

A squad of 55, including 26 lettermen and 21 frosh, is working out as the Buccaneers look toward a nine-game grid slate. Experts throughout the state have tabbed the Bucs as pre-season favorites to cop the North State conference crown.

Despite the wealth of material on hand for the coming season, Coach Boone faces the job of replacing 14 departed lettermen. Key men gone from last year's squad which posted a 6-2-2 record plus a 13-6 defeat at the hands of Clarion State Teachers college in the Lions bowl are Quarterback Sandy Siler and stellar end Dwight Shoe. Dick Cherry, All-conference quarterback last year as a freshman, will handle the regular post as field general while Bobby Hodges, Al Habit, J. D. Bradford and Larry Rhodes lend assistance at the end positions.

One problem which Boone has in common with other coaches is how to handle the switchback to single platoon football. In an interview with a reporter the Pirates' mentor said, "Actually, the one-platoon rule will require no drastic changeover for us. Last year we played our best boys and that meant some of them saw action both ways. Most of the graduates were boys who played offense."

Although the starting line-up has not definitely been set the locals probably will open with either Louis Hallow or Gaither Cline, a letterman, at center. Guards will come from David Lee, James Faircloth, George Tucker and Donald Burton. Willie Holland leads the tackles and is followed by Johnny Brown, Thurston Callahan and Bobby Thomas.

In the backfield the Bucs have Boyd Webb to fill in for Dick Cherry at quarterback. Paul Gay, Tippy Hayes, Emo Boado and Jack Britt are making the strongest bids for the halfback posts. Claude King, last year's regular on offense, is still working from the fullback post. Teddy Barnes, Carlton Mathews and John Daughtry all will be pushing King for the starting assignment.

Nine-Game Slate Set For Pirates During Grid Play

A nine-game schedule composed of six consecutive North State conference contests and three clashes with out-of-state squads has been arranged for the 1953 East Carolina football team.

A week from tomorrow night the Bucs open their schedule by entertaining Wilson Teachers college, of Washington, D. C. Little is known of the Teachers' strength but local scuttlebutt has already established the Bucs as one to two touchdown favorites.

The evening of September 26 will find the Pirates as hosts to the conference champions Lenoir Rhyne's Bears. In last year's clash the Bears, who posted an undefeated regular season record, edged out the Pirates by 7-6. Graduation hit the champs hard and all signs point to a bitter battle when the two squads collide.

Following the Lenoir Rhyne contest the locals will engage Catawba at Salisbury, Elon here, Western Carolina at Cullowhee, Guilford and Appalachian on the local field and then journey to Florida for two closing contests with Tampa university and Stetson university.

Catawba college promises to offer a real threat to the Pirates' bid for Conference honors. Clyde Biggers, line coach at East Carolina last year, has moved to Salisbury and is well into his program of building a powerhouse for the Indians.

October 10, the date of the Elon game, is slated as Homecoming for the Bucs. Last year an underdog shipload of Pirates came from behind to scuttle Elon's Homecoming festivities by a 25-9 count.

In November the Pirates will desert North Carolina for Florida to play their last two contests. On November 7 Tampa university, a newcomer to Buccaneer athletic cards, will be host to the charges of Coach Boone. The 14th of November will find East Carolina's squad in DeLand, Fla., where they will meet Stetson university's Hatters.

In last year's Stetson-East Carolina contest, the first between the two schools the Pirates gained a 19-19 tie when halfback Paul Gay dashed 88 yards for a touchdown with less than four minutes remaining in the game.

Bucs Preparing To Improve Upon Last Year's Mark

Although the East Carolina Pirates were not undefeated in last year's gridiron play, the Bucs are going to have to pour on the steam to better the 1952 regular season record of 6-2-2.

Last year's squad, co-captained by seniors Doc Smith and Dwight Shoe, finished in a tie for second in the North State Conference.

Seven of the schools that appeared on the Pirates schedule last year will be played again. They are: Lenoir Rhyne, Catawba, Stetson, Elon, Western Carolina, Appalachian and Guilford. Teams, which will not be played this year include Norfolk Navy, Newport News Apprentice School and West Virginia Tech.

The 1952 record:

East Carolina	7	Norfolk Navy	13

College Plans To Construct Dormitories

Preparations are being made for the construction of two new dormitories at East Carolina, F. D. Duncan, business manager, said this week.

Plans are now being drawn for a dormitory for men and one for women. Slay Annex has been moved to the right of Slay Hall in order that the site for the new men's dorm may be cleared for construction.

It will be located between 10th Street and behind Slay Hall. The new women's dorm will be located west of Wilson Hall.

Mr. Duncan said the new dorms would not be ready for occupancy before fall of 1954. They will probably be completed sometime in the late summer of 1954.

The college expects to award contracts for converting Wright building into a student union within two weeks. Bids have already been received for the project, Mr. Duncan said.

The project will probably be completed sometime this spring.

Student supply stores, the post office, lounges and some other student activities will be moved in the renovated Wright building.

The Alumni association is in the process of moving from their offices in Austin to the old Home Management house behind the North dining hall. The telephone office is now being installed in the Alumni office in Austin, room 127. The Alumni will have their equipment moved to their new location probably sometime this fall, Mr. Duncan said.

Work is still underway on the Joyner Library—which was started during the fall of last year. Mr. Duncan said, "We hope to have everything moved in by Christmas."

The new wing on Ragsdale Hall is completed and will be occupied by 60 students this fall.

During this summer the building was painted throughout, new "modern" locks were installed on all doors and new asphalt tile flooring was laid. New plumbing was installed with new copper pipes and new showers, Mr. Duncan stated.

Asphalt tile flooring has also been laid in the corridors of the Training School building and in the front wing of Fleming Hall.

EC's 'Chief' In Retirement After 37 Years Loyal Service

J. Louis Williams Jr. has officially retired as campus police officer at East Carolina college after a tenure of almost 37 years of service. Williams is 68, born Friday, February 13, 1884, two miles from Greenville, and plans to "catch up on some needed rest."

Williams first served as police officer for a short while in 1917, and began a term which had continued unbroken on January 1, 1918, upon appointment of East Carolina's first president Dr. Robert H. Wright. He has served under five presidents, including the current president, Dr. J. D. Messick. There were only five buildings on the campus and a student body of around 300 students when Williams started his career as guardian of life and property at this college. Now there are 25 buildings on the 130-acre campus. Enrollment last year was 2,280 students on the campus.

Only three brief absences due to illness have called for a "time-out" for the veteran officer and few days of vacation leave have been taken by Williams.

College officials have praised Williams for his faithful service and his loyalty to his position. Known by thousands of former students and by professors, he has a wide acquaintance in Eastern North Carolina.

Williams is affectionately known as "The Chief." He said his plans are to stay at home and enjoy the rest of his life with his wife who has spent thousands of nights as a "career widow." Mr. and Mrs. Williams have a daughter, Mrs. George L. Springs, (the former Clara Williams), ECC graduate in the class of 1938, who resides with her husband and young son in Morehead City.

Post Office Opens

Louis Barnes, student employee of the college post office, said that the window of the office would open today. Window hours for the quarter will be posted today also.

The window will be open for selling stamps and postal cards and for presenting parcels too large for the boxes.
