American Album Of Music Here Monday By Entertainment Series

Popular Radio Group
Opens Concert 8:30
In Wright Auditorium

The American Album of Familiar Music, for more than ten years one of this country's top radio programs in the field, will present the "Music America Loves Best" at East Carolina College Monday, December 14, at 8:30 p. m. in the Wright auditorium.

The concert in Greenville by the American Album will round out the first personal-appearance tour made by the soloists, chorus, and orchestra of the popular group. The program here will be the first attraction offered during the winter quarter by the College Entertainment Committee, of which James W. Butler, alumni secretary, is chairman.

A well rounded program of the kind of music the public loves to sing and to dance to—from Broadway, Hollywood, radio, TV and the concert and opera stages—will be presented at East Carolina by Musical Director Gustav Haenchen, the orchestra, the chorus and three soloists.

Heading the list of soloists will be the popular and beautiful soprano, Vivian Della Chiesa. She will be the only woman in the company, which includes an orchestra of 23 men, all top instrumentalists, and an all-male chorus.

Earl William, tenor, and Michael Rogers, baritone, will also be featured soloists. Instrumentalists from the orchestra will be heard at the concert in popular classics, such as the "Warsaw Concerto."

Foreign Language Frat Chooses 16

Sixteen students of foreign languages at East Carolina College received membership certificates in the campus chapter of the national honor fraternity Sigma Pi Alpha Tuesday of this week. They were chosen as members because of high scholastic standing in the department of foreign languages.

Ralph C. Doal of Greenville retired East Carolina professor and former director of the college foreign language department, presented the certificates at a fraternity meeting in the Austin building.

Recipients were Peggy Creech, Smithfield; Robert Moyer, Snow Hill; Cherry, Williamston; Betty Huffman, Betty Ralston, Washington; Peggy Salisbury; Sabra Numalee, Currie; Maxine Case, Roanoke Rapids; Joyce McNeely, Rocky Mount; Alma Faulkner, LaGrange; Elsie Lawson, Orrum; Sylvia Wyrick, Gibsonville; Shirley Moore, Salisbury; Richard Siler, Siler City; William Waters, Bath; Laura Crede, New Holland; and Ruby Edwards, Greenville.

Dr. Paul Murray Of ECC Presents Connor Award During Raleigh Meeting

Dr. Paul Murray of the East Carolina College social studies department participated in the program offered Friday by the State Literary and Historical Association in Raleigh. He presented the R.D.W. Connor Award, which was offered this year for the first time.

The 53rd Annual Meeting of the Association was held Friday morning in the Virginia Dare Ballroom of the Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh. Others from East Carolina who will attend include Dr. Lawrence F. Brewster and Dr. Richard Todd, both of the social studies department.

The R.D.W. Connor Award is set up to give recognition annually to the college student in North Carolina who submits the best article published during the year in the North Carolina Historical Review. The award honors Dr. Connor, who was a historian, a professor at the University of North Carolina and U.S. Archivist.

Mother Dies

Mrs. W. P. Greene, the mother of Miss Mary H. Greene of the East Carolina College English department, died Tuesday night at her home in Abbeville, S. C. Miss Greene will return here Monday.

Principals In Entertainment

On the left is Gustav Haenchen, who heads the orchestra of the American Album of Familiar Music which will be on campus Monday night at 8:30 in Wright auditorium. Soprano Vivian Della Chiesa, right, is the only woman in the company.

Spiritual Emphasis Week Date Set January 18-21

Spiritual Emphasis Week will be held on East Carolina campus January 18 through 21, 1954, sponsored by the Interreligious Council in cooperation with the National Conference of Christians and Jews, according to W. Parker Marks, chairman of the Interreligious Council.

A visiting team of five national figures in religious work will be here on campus during the week. They are Rabbi Nathan Herschfeld, Dr. James G. Huggin, Harry S. Jones, Dr. Gordon W. Lovejoy, and Louis Radelet. Three of them are Protestant, one is Catholic and the other is Jewish.

Plans for the activities to be carried out during this week of spiritual emphasis are now underway, states Marks. The general theme is "This Nation Under God . . . Our Moral and Spiritual Heritage."

A mass meeting of the 11 committees with their chairmen was held in Austin 209 on Tuesday night of this week. About 70 students are to perform various duties in cooperation with Dr. Carl V. Harris, director of Religious Education here. The executive committee has released an outline of its plans which are in early formation now. The program will begin with an opening convocation for all in Wright auditorium on Monday, January 18, at 10 a. m. Each evening through January 21 there will be a principal address in Austin auditorium followed by an Open Forum between the speaker and the students and faculty.

Worship services are being planned for both Protestant and Catholic students.

Further announcements will be made on the activities as the plans become more complete. Each student is urged to watch for these announcements and to plan to participate to make Spiritual Emphasis Week an outstanding and memorable week for East Carolina, Dr. Harris said.

Student Budget Office Announces Hours

The Student Budget office will be open three hours a day again this quarter. Treasurer Billy Laughinghouse announced. Students may get checks cashed, make deposits and report the loss of student identification cards from 10 to 10:50 a. m., 12 to 12:50 p. m. and 2 to 2:50 p. m., Monday through Friday, in the office.

Billy reminds students who have lost their idea cards that they may obtain a ticket for each athletic and entertainment event at the office two days prior to the event. For example, he said, if there is a ball game on Saturday, these tickets will be available Thursday and Friday. Tickets and idea cards will be checked at the gates this quarter in order that the person will not possess more than one pass to the event. Billy stated. If a person is guilty of such offense, his ticket will be confiscated.

As yet there are no student guest cards available this quarter, Billy said. Last quarter these cards were available for $1.00, limited one per student.

Playhouse Makes Winter Plans To Produce 'John Loves Mary'

The Teachers Playhouse, student dramatic club at East Carolina College, will give "John Loves Mary," comedy hit by Norman Krasna, as a major production of the winter quarter at the college, President Percy Wilkins of Benson has announced. Carolyn Clapp of Greenville will direct the play, which is scheduled for February 10, 11 and 12.

A series of workshop plays, presented informally and directed by student members of the group, will also make up part of the activities of the Teachers Playhouse for the quarter. Plays chosen for the series include original dramas by faculty members at the college, the first successful comedy of manners by an American author, a play with musical background and others.

Two workshop plays will begin Thursday of this week, December 10, with "How To Propose," a one-act farce comedy by Conrad Seiler, and two radio plays. Thomas Pierce of Rocky Mount will direct the comedy; and Wilkins, the radio plays.

Scenes from Royall Tyler's "The Contrast" and Edna St. Vincent Millay's "The King's Henchman" will be given February 14. Tyler's play, based on differences in English and American character and manners, was a success of 1787 and an important landmark in the development of the drama in this country. "The King's Henchman" is a verse drama by the distinguished modern American poet.

Got Talent? Here's Chance To Show It

Talent is wanted by the "East Carolinian" for their second annual talent show which will be presented Monday, January 11, at 7:30 p. m. in Austin auditorium.

Persons with any type of talent may give their name and talent to any member of the newspaper staff or at the office in the basement of Austin.

Gifts will be presented to each of the participants in the talent show.

Admission will be 25 cents.

Women's Society Accepts EC Grads For Membership

East Carolina College has been placed on the approved list of the American Association of University Women, largest organization of university women in the world; and graduates of the college holding the AB or the BS degree are now eligible as members of chapters throughout the nation.

Dr. Anna Ousler, representative of the AAUW and faculty member of Oklahoma A and M College at Stillwater, was a recent visitor of the Greenville Branch of the association and of East Carolina College. During her stay on the campus here she conducted an inquiry into work done at East Carolina and then recommended to the national AAUW Committee on Standards and Recognition that the college be approved by the organization.

East Carolina President John D. Messick has just received from Dr. Dorothy Woodward, chairman of this committee, notification that the recommendation has been accepted. "I congratulate you," she said, "on the approval by the AAUW, for our standards of approval are high."

East Carolina College will become a corporate member of the AAUW. This type of membership, which applies only to approved institutions, carries such privileges as representation by a voting delegate at national conventions, representation at regional and state meetings, and the consultative service of the association.

Jarvis Forensic Attends Florida Debate Contest

Members of the Jarvis Forensic Club at East Carolina College have begun their winter-quarter program of activities, which includes a number of discussion meetings held on the campus and participation in the Third Annual Florida Invitational Debate Tournament at the University of Florida at Gainesville.

Faye Sermons of Greenville, college sophomore, served last Thursday as leader at a discussion meeting on alcoholism and its problems. After defining the term alcoholism, she talked briefly on causes, effects and cures. In a question-and-answer period, members present for the meeting gave 100 percent participation in the discussion of the topic.

Debaters who will represent the college at the Florida tournament December 9-11 are H. Gerald Adcock, Durham; Betty Lou Small, Greenville; Royce Jordan, Washington; and Robert C. Bright, Macleesfield. Dr. Meredith N. Posey, faculty advisor of the Jarvis Forensic Club, will accompany the students to Florida.

Workshop Productions Tryouts Monday Night

The Teachers' Playhouse plans to present two original one-act plays written by members of the English faculty here as a workshop program January 14. Dr. J. A. Withey, director of dramatic arts, announced. Tryouts for students for the casts will be held Monday at 4 p. m. in Austin, room 14.

The two plays are "The Washing Machine" by Dr. Ed Hirshberg and "Fair Is the Morning" by Dr. Elizabeth Utterback.

Purpose Is To Give Clearer Interpretation; To Bring Up-To-Date

SGA Revises By-Laws

Revision of the constitution in the Student Handbook were viewed by members of the Student Legislature Wednesday night. They discussed each change and will come to a final vote next Wednesday.

President Mitchell Sauced stated, "For some time there has been a definite need to study and rework the SGA by-laws which concern the Honor Code and student regulations." He further added, "I sincerely believe that these changes in the by-laws will improve the present situation of confusion by clarifying various penalties, striking away out-dated sections, interpreting the laws and also organizing more advantageously the by-laws."

Meetings will be held next week for the purpose of forming a uniform interpretation of rules regarding social conduct. All members of dormitory house committees, which is composed of students, and the Women's Judiciary will meet to settle any other interpretations. A special meeting of dorm counselors, Administration members and representatives of the SGA has been set to further review policies and interpretations of the handbook.

Consider Revision

Revisions under consideration of the Legislature puts more emphasis on the Honor Code. It also puts interpretations of penalties rendered within respective house committees and the Men's and Women's Judiciary committees.

There is also a section dedicated to the explanation of the Disciplinary committee. "Council check" is defined with clauses, to the effect of how it is to be administered.

More emphasis was put on women's dormitory orderliness. It was recommended by the body that "reasonable orderliness" be kept in dorms until 11 p. m. during week nights and until 12 midnight on Saturdays. After that time extreme quietness should be observed.

It was also emphasized that there should be no loitering between men and women students on the back steps of the women's dorms during the day. This policy regards to night-time also which is already stated in the handbook.

No smoking on campus for girls was emphasized. This regulation is in the handbook also.

In addition another change was brought up for consideration. For every major case handled, the judiciary are to fill out necessary blanks to write the decisions, to interpret the penalties and to send them to those concerned.

President Sauced announced that he hopes a general student assembly can be held sometime during the first of January to present the revisions to the students "for clearer interpretation and better understanding."

Other Business

The body passed a resolution to request representatives to inform their organizations of the Legislature's actions and to ask their members for discussion. It was the general feeling of the SGA that this would give more students a voice in the legislature.

A motion was passed that no graduate or special student should receive benefit of student activities unless he pays the $11 activity fee.

Treasurer Billy Laughinghouse submitted the Budget committee's report on appropriations for the winter quarter which was accepted by the SGA. A number of organizations requested additional funds for the quarter but only three received appropriations. The SGA received $300; "Buccanner," $500; and Productions Committee, $100. The body also passed to contribute $75 to the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association to be taken from the Community Chest fund.

Christmas Assembly

President J. D. Messick will speak to the faculty and students of East Carolina College at the annual all-college Christmas assembly in Wright Auditorium on Friday, December 18, at 10 a. m.

The program will include selections by the band, Woman's Chorus, Varsity Glee Club and Mrs. Gladys White.

Funeral Services Held For Senior From Burlington

Funeral services were held Tuesday for Robert Lewis (Bobby) Richmond, a 21-year-old East Carolina senior, at the Webb Avenue Methodist Church in Burlington. Burial was in Pinetops Cemetery, Pinetops. The Rev. W. L. Clegg and the Rev. O. L. Hathaway officiated.

Bobby was found dead in the Memorial Gym Saturday at about 5:10 p. m. He had dropped out last quarter because of ill health.

He was living in the gym with two other boys and was employed as a self-help student there taking care of the gym proper and the swimming pool.

Upon graduation from high school, Bobby was awarded the first scholarship given by the Burlington-Alamance Alumni Chapter on the basis of excellence in scholarship and outstanding civic leadership.

His scholastic achievements at the college was "above average." He was a physical ed major and a social studies minor.

Students and college officials termed Bobby as one of the most popular boys on campus and said he was very friendly, cooperative and conscientious.

Surviving are his parents, the Rev. and Mrs. I. S. Richmond; and a sister, Mrs. Charles Edwards of Greenville. Mrs. Richmond is an ECC alumnae of the 1917 class and is the former Nannie Brown. Mrs. Edwards is an alumnae also of the 1951 class and is the former Elda Richmond.

EC Chorus Presents Messiah Here Sunday Afternoon

Seven soloist and a chorus of 125 members will participate in the annual presentation of Handel's "The Messiah" at East Carolina College Sunday, December 13.

The event, sponsored by the college department of music, will take place at 4 p. m. in the Wright auditorium. The public is invited to be present.

This year, for the first time, the performance will be a college-community project. Both soloists and those in the chorus have been chosen from students and faculty members at East Carolina College and from the city of Greenville.

Dr. Elwood Keister of the college faculty will conduct the group in the performance of the popular and inspiring oratorio. George E. Perry of the college department of music will be organist; and Mrs. Gloria Keister of Greenville, pianist.

Students of music at East Carolina who will appear as soloists are Monteen Winstead of Tabor City, soprano; Patsy Papendick of Elizabeth City, alto; Ellen Sprinkle of Asheville, alto; and Gerald Murphy of China Grove, tenor. Mrs. Allison Hearne Moss, soprano, and Ed Parkinson, bass, both of Greenville, and Dr. Keister, tenor, will also have solo parts in the performance.

Pre-Christmas performances of the Messiah for the past several years at East Carolina have attracted large audiences, coming to the campus from various localities in eastern North Carolina. This year's program is the most ambitious yet planned at the college and will present Dr. Keister for the first time as conductor. A newcomer on the college faculty.

Circle K Hears Speaker On Iran

Dr. Charles F. Miller, associate director of the extension division of the University of North Carolina, spoke Tuesday night to members of the East Carolina Circle K Club and their guests at a "Ladies Night" program held at the Greenville Country Club.

Dr. Miller spoke for the evening was 1949 when he recently spent several months teaching in the University of Tehran under the auspices of the U. S. State Department. A specialist in audio-visual education he has prepared slides on the life of the country to illustrate his remarks.

Mrs. Miller and a number of local businessmen were guests of the East Carolina Circle K Club, a student branch of Kiwanis International.

Circle K Speaker

Dr. Elizabeth Utterback of the college English department will present a Christmas program to members of the Circle K Tuesday night at their meeting at Respass-James.

Dr. Elwood Keister

Christmas Dance On Tap Thursday Night By

The Student Social Committee will sponsor a Christmas dance to be held Thursday, December 17, at 8:30 p. m. in Wright Auditorium.

Admission to the dance will be $1.00 per drag. Tickets can be purchased from any member of the committee and will be on sale in the dining hall lobby starting Monday. Music will be furnished by the Collegians and the dance will be semi-formal. Refreshments will be served to the tables by Negro waiters. Charlie Wents is general chairman of the dance.

Pirates Den Moved

During the time that the basement of Wright building is being renovated into a Student Union the Student Social Committee will have the use of room 115 in the basement of Austin for a temporary Pirates Den.

Edgar Tadlock, chairman of the Student Social Committee, states that the usual activities of the Pirates Den will be offered and urges the students to avail themselves of this opportunity to participate in their favorite games.

The temporary Pirates Den is open Monday through Friday from 7 p. m. until 9:30 p. m., except on nights when there is a special college function or a basketball game.

Revisions: Sign Of Progress

Revision of the constitution regarding student regulations is now under consideration of the Student Legislature and of other bodies. This revision does not make any major changes, but several minor ones which have been long needed. SGA President Mitchell Saied pointed out.

For a number of years the constitution of the East Carolina students went unrevised. During those years the nation was at war, leaving only a handful of males among over 1,000 females. At the close of that war, veterans in large numbers returned to the campus, unbalancing the college female population. Still there were no revisions.

Times have changed a lot. Our enrollment figures in the past several years has more than doubled. We have outgrown the smaller East Carolina College of ten years ago. The college, like a child, outgrew its clothes. Hence, an increase of faculty and facilities, building expansion and other items were necessary.

It is now necessary to make revisions in the out-dated student handbook to keep pace with the college's growth. These proposed revisions will better fit our present day situations. In addition they will better organize the constitution, making by-laws and the like found much easier in the pages of the handbook. They will also give a clearer interpretation of the rules and regulations; that is, they can be interpreted alike by students and governing and judicial bodies.

These revisions have been and still are under careful consideration of the Student Government Association and the Administration. They will present the final outcome sometime next week. We sincerely believe that these new changes are a great step forward and students will accept and appreciate them.

True Meaning Of Christmas

by Joyce Smith

Now that Christmas is just around the corner, let each of us stop and ask ourselves this question, "What does Christmas mean to me?"

Is it just a season of gaiety? The true meaning of Christmas is so very often lost. A minister once used the following verse for his text: "And they came with haste and found Mary and Joseph and the babe lying in a manger." (Luke 2:16) The point that he brought out was that people often just come "with haste" and fail to find anyone. People are in such a hurry that the whole meaning is missed.

Christmas is without question the most beautiful time of the year. Its beauty and significance are not dependent upon scenery.

It is at Christmas time that we listen more closely to the word of God and we are drawn closer to Him. We should meet this Christmas with much gratitude. The birth of Christ should be kept closely in mind. Christ is the source of genuine love.

Many years ago when God sent His only son into the world, He made a gift that was the expression of love. Let each of us keep the Christmas meaning in mind. Do not think of Christmas as just a season of beautifully decorated trees, Santa Claus and gifts. Keep in mind that Christmas signifies the birth of Christ for love for the world.

Peace? Do we really know? It seems to me that every one in this world thinks that the only way to have peace is by power. Webster's Reference Dictionary says that peace means: "rest or tranquility; calm; freedom from disturbance; spiritual content." Will we have peace? Will we get it if we rely on power? Will it give you the answer?

Ye Editor's Say

by T. Parker Maddrey

Friday night we put on a coat and tie and were hurrying from the dorm to the Country Club for a dinner meeting of the Eastern North Carolina Press Association when we were stopped and asked, "Where ya going so dressed up?"

"To a press meeting," we said. "Oh, does your father run a press-pressing club?"

During the week end the association held its fall convention on campus. ECC President J. D. Messick and Dean Leo Jenkins gave short salutations at the meetings and Alumni Secretary James Butler served as toastmaster of the luncheon here Saturday.

New Dean of the School of Journalism at UNC, Dr. Neil Luxon, addressed the group, stressing the need for more education in journalism. There were workshops on different phases of newspaper work conducted on Saturday.

Just having published the Fall Quarter Magazine Section, we are now looking toward the Winter Quarter section. Contributors may begin turning in their material again to Bob Hilldrup, Dr. Donald Murray or Dr. James Poindexter or mail it to Magazine Section, Box 990, c-o "East Carolinian."

There will be no issue of the "East Carolinian" next Friday. However, there will be an issue January 8, the week we return from the holidays.

Without further ado, the staff and we wish you a very MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Book Review

A SORT OF A SAGA—An autobiography by Bill Mauldin, noted cartoonist and novelist during World War II.
Reviewed by Philip Jordan

An autobiography is usually written in middle or old age by the author after he has lived a full life. The author is most often a great writer, scientist or philosopher who is well known in the country in which he lives. He might be a great statesman like Benjamin Franklin or an experienced writer like Jesse Stuart.

Bill Mauldin is none of these. He is a better than average cartoonist and an inexperienced writer. In 1944 Mauldin decided to write a book about his war experiences and to use many of the hundreds of cartoons he did for "Stars and Strips" the official newspaper of the U. S. Army, as illustrations. He had very little literary experience at the time. He was, however, an excellent cartoonist, he had also won the Pulitzer, a feat no other 22-year-old person has ever accomplished.

When "Up Front," his first book, was published in 1945, Mauldin found himself a celebrity overnight. "Up Front" was a Book-of-the-Month selection and sold at a terrific rate. Bill Mauldin followed "Up Front" with another very successful book called "Back Home". This book was a very bitter attack on conditions awaiting the veterans when they returned to America. It also was illustrated with many humorous cartoons.

The author waited three years before putting his magical pen to paper again. This time he really wrote a book. He has written a book that will appeal to everyone.

"A Sort of A Saga" was written solely to entertain and it is a masterpiece of perfection to that end. Mauldin has written the story of his life in such a way that the reader is held spellbound while reading what otherwise would be just ordinary passages.

Incidental happenings in the Mauldin family become vivid pictures in the reader's mind. "A Sort of A Saga" is not an orthodox autobiography. It does not cover the author's life completely because Mauldin was only 29 when he wrote the book. It does, however, give a most complete record of his life up until his enlistment in the Army. This writer feels no fear of contradiction when he says that no more humorous an autobiography has been written than "A Sort of A Saga." It contains all the essentials of a good autobiography: accuracy, adequate information and entertainment.

"A Sort of A Saga" is a worthy piece of Americana. No doubt generations to come will read it to learn what it was like to be a boy in a family who lived in New Mexico in the mid-twenties and who always managed to be broke.

Who's Who Among Students At East Carolina

by Kay Johnston

Is she an artist? Is she a music major? Or is she a photographer? After reading this interview one could easily become confused as to just what Miriam Dempsey's pet interest really is. However, as a matter of surprise, she is a primary major. Miriam, who is from Fayetteville, transferred from Bob Jones University in South Carolina, and entered East Carolina fall quarter of 1962. Since then she has won many friends as well as admiration for her outstanding personality and varied talents, which she so generously shares with others.

Miriam Dempsey

Miriam graduates this spring quarter and plans to teach in the third grade. "I already have my school picked out," Miriam says. "I certainly hope I can get the position." Last quarter she tutored a third grader who had missed a few weeks of school because of illness. Miriam enjoys working with children and is looking forward to teaching.

Polio Victim
She was a victim of polio when she was two years old. Her record speaks for itself in that she has never let herself be handicapped in any way.

A lover of music in any form,

Miriam herself is a performer on the accordion. She has given performances on various occasions and plays often at the Veterans Hospital at Fort Bragg.

Also a very talented artist, she is often called upon to make posters for floats and different organizations. "It's really not a job to me," Miriam states, "because I enjoy it so much. Photography is really one of my favorite hobbies. There's nothing I had rather do than to go to a photography shop and just listen to the expert." Miriam also has her own darkroom and develops her own pictures.

Transfer Student

During the time Miriam was a student at Bob Jones University she was a member of the FTA, the Spanish Club, and art advisor for the Tri Sigma Society. Since enrolling at East Carolina she has become a member of the ACE and the Kappa Delta Pi. The latter is an honorary education society that has as its purpose to encourage high professional and personal standards, and to recognize outstanding contributions to education.

This past summer Miriam was a counselor at Camp Hardy, a Girl Scout camp located on Pamlico Sound. She taught arts and crafts and also had everyone playing at least one tune on the accordion before camp was over!

"In addition to East Carolina being a good school," Miriam says, "I think the instructors are the best that could be found anywhere. They have given me initiative and inspiration as well as understanding and friendship."

Christmas Is Almost Here

What'cha Want From Santa?

by Valeria Shearon

These are the days when the kiddies start thinking wide-eyed about the jolly old man with the snow white whiskers who goes about in a bright red suit with a crammed sack on his back. But the little folks by no means enjoy a priority on this Christmas custom. East Carolinians, though we say we are too old for such, still get a kick out of Santa Claus.

Recently, we engaged in some formal snooping around and asked a few individuals this question: "What do you want Santa Claus to bring you for Christmas?" Here are a few of the answers:
Walter Noona: "A pair of earplugs so I won't hear my roommate snore." (All roommates take heed, your roommate may be wishing for a pair also.)

Betsy Hoggood: "Lessons plans for every day straight on through February." (All practice teachers are wishing for this.)
Jim Fish: "Six good friends." (Hmm)

Nancy Kesler: "Some long fingernails to take the place of the ones I bite off just before every test."
Billy Laughinghouse: "A short blonde will be fine." (Easy to please?)

Leon Padilla, (Honduras): "A trip to New York." (To see the sights?)

Berit Hillesland, (Norway): "Some hills and snow so that I can go skiing." (Sounds like fun.)
Dr. Ed Hirschberg: "A new typewriter so that I won't have to walk down two flights of steps to the newspaper office to use one." (Our various typewriters are always at your service.)

Roy Askew: "To look into my stocking and find Debbie Reynolds." (Doesn't want much, does he?)
O. B. Gilly: "A new Buick with white sidewall tires, a radio, a heater, tinted glass and a built-in television set." (Made to order.)

These are all reasonable requests that we hope to see fulfilled on December 25. There is one more, however, that we think deserves mention because of its unselfish nature. It was requested by a dreamy-eyed campus belle. "I don't want anything for myself, but I do want a son-in-law for mother."

That's all! Merry Christmas, well, and this time was no exception. Bobby raised the can to look at it and you can imagine the results. Yep, blue paint all over his face. After finishing school, Bobby, who is majoring in math, will have to put in two years with the marines. After that he'd like to go into the field of electronics. Sara plans to teach, but says she, "I want to go with Bobby when he goes in service."

(Editor's note: By being named Couple of the Week, Sara and Bobby will each receive a gift from Sallow's Jewelers and a ticket to the Pitt Theatre.)

Couple Of The Week

by Erolyn Blount

This week's couple, Sara Thompson and Bobby Anderson, who both come from Goldsboro, have been going steady since last Christmas. They became engaged June 26, and are planning to get married this summer. Says Sara, "We've known each other all our lives, but never got to really know each other till we came to college." Bobby dated Sara's cousin during high school and recalls Sara, "We couldn't stand the sight of each other then." Times certainly do change, don't they?

Says Sara of their engagement, "The night he gave me my ring I was furious with him. He kept teasing me and asked me if I loved him. I said no. Then he asked me to marry him. I said no again. Then he said, 'Not even if I gave you this ring?' Boy, did I feel like a heel!"

When asked about embarrassing situations, Sara told us this experience. Bobby is in the Marine Reserve and while he was at camp this summer he wrote two letters, one to his mother and one to Sara. Somehow he got the letters mixed up. "We can laugh about it now," says Sara, "but it wasn't so funny then."

Another time Bobby and Sara were painting with one of those spray jobs. Sometimes they don't work so

To The Editor

Well we did it again. We had a wonderful opportunity to get our school some national recognition and muffed it. It would appear that there are only about a hundred students on our campus who care if this school ever gets any recognition or not.

The Philip Morris All-College All-American contest that ended November 30 was a grand flop as far as ECC was concerned. If the students had gotten behind it, as was hoped, we could have not only placed one of our boys on the team but achieved some nationwide publicity for the college. But it would appear that our student body was working so hard that they couldn't find time on such a trivial matter as this. We had a grand total of 183 wrappers in the boxes. And most of these came from boxes placed in town.

We all recognized this as a good publicity angle for the cigarette people, but we could have taken advantage of it to get the college some free nationwide publicity. Some short-sighted students said they could not see what good it would do us anyway. Well, I would like to point out a few: (1) It would have put us in the public eye in the state which would have helped President Messick when he was requesting the legislature to appropriate funds to build dorms. (2) It would have called attention to our college to sports writers in the state. (3) It would have made it easier for our coaches to talk good players into coming to school here, thus building up our athletic department. (4) It might have inspired some of our alumni to give us some funds for scholarships. In other words we really missed the boat.

This is discouraging to those of us who would like to see the "Big Four" changed to read the "Big Five" with ECC as the other college. If we, the student body, can't support and push our school, how can we expect others to do so. In other words don't be one who goes to the games and sits on his hands. YELL, and if you'll excuse the expression, yell like hell! If there's a discussion of schools going on when you are at home, jump in and fight for ECC. This may sound silly to you, but that's what it will take to put East Carolina on top—where it belongs.

Sincerely submitted,
EHM

This Week's Movie

by Faye O'Neal

Elizabeth Taylor portrays a young girl who lives in an earthly paradise but certainly not because of her ability to use her common sense in "Girl Who Had Everything," this week's campus movie.

Liz is cast as the beautiful young daughter of a wealthy lawyer who has all the advantages of life. William Powell is the father and despite all his admirable efforts to guide his impetuous daughter in the paths of dignity, he is outwitted and brought to sorrow along with his daughter. Fernando Lamas is the rogue who upsets the aristocrats. He plays as the head of a gambling syndicate and inspires Liz to wreck her life by falling in love with him.

The action is fast. The setting is in Kentucky and the scenery is beautiful. Elizabeth Taylor wears clothes that are fashioned to appeal directly to men. We recommend the film for an enjoyable hour and a half away from the actualities of life.

POT POURRI

by Emily S. Boyce

Eugene O'Neill died around two weeks ago. O'Neill as a man was almost forgotten; he had drifted from the personal spotlight due to the influx of others in his field. The raves of the critics concerning his last plays were not favorable. However, his plays and their influence on the American theatre will never be forgotten.

Often called the greatest playwright America has ever produced, he wrote of tragedy in all its phases. During his lifetime O'Neill wrote around 47 plays of death, disappointment and disillusionment. Cases of insanity peppered his works; stories of suicides, murders, pimps and prostitutes all flowed from O'Neill's pen.

The playwright grew up amidst the theatre. During the '80s O'Neill's father pushed his starring role in The Count of Monte Cristo to the limit and afterwards enjoyed a comfortable life. Eugene was sent to boarding schools and finally to Princeton in 1906. Soon after he left Princeton rather abruptly and so his formal education ended. The following years, O'Neill led various lives. Odd jobs, going to sea and working on the rowdy waterfront gave O'Neill material for some of his best plays. Anna Christie and The Long Voyage Home were two of the literary outcomes of O'Neill's bumming. Such a type of existence broke O'Neill's health and for the rest of his life he was handicapped by the condition of his general physical condition.

O'Neill started out to do what no playwright had ever done before; write tragedy. The results: Horizon, Anna Christie and Strange Interlude won the Pulitzer Prize and in 1936 Eugene O'Neill won the Nobel Prize for Literature.

The demand for Christmas stories and poems to be used in classes and by practice teachers is overwhelming these days. Stories on Christmas are numerous and easier to find on the proper reading levels than Christmas poems. The following are a few recommended selections in which Christmas poems may be found: Poems For The Great Days, Clarke; Rhyme Time For Children, E. Poulsson; Our Holidays In Poetry, Harrington and Thomas, compilers; and Poems For Red Letter Days, E. H. Sechrist, compiler.

Brownell Coming South?

by Faye O'Neal

Here in the South where segregation is always such a timely issue, it is little wonder that more people have been reading the papers and listening to their radios in a more alert fashion with the current discussion on the matter that is taking place in Washington now.

Attorney General Brownell stated in a brief that the Supreme Court has the authority to end segregation in the United States. He asserted that the Constitution's 14th Amendment had the purpose of abolishing all legal distinctions based on race.

Without doubt this matter is one of the most important in the nation, particularly in the South where the problem is between the Negro and the whites and in Texas and California where hordes of Mexicans and Chinese still step into the country despite immigration laws. Brownell has taken a stand on one of the controversial issues of today.

The East Carolinian will make no definite stand, but we do see the probability of having to face the issue in the not too distant future, right here at this school.

In a sort of rambling interview we gathered the opinions of several interested persons on whether or not Attorney-General Brownell is right in his statement that the Supreme Court has the authority through the 14th Amendment to end segregation.

Betsy Hoggood, a senior who is chairman of the women's judiciary here, stated that it is her belief that non-segregation in schools can and will eventually work smoothly in the South, but only if the system is worked from the top down. "In other words," says Betsy, "begin non-segregation in college and high school so that the future young parents will become adapted to it, not suddenly in all grades in school which would cause parents who are decidedly against mixing to use their influence through their children to upset the progress which might be made." Betsy believes the Supreme Court has ultimate authority to end segregation.

Agreeing with her is Irving Maynard, an honor student in the social studies department who had experience in military service and in large northern cities with non-segregation. Maynard does not believe that non-segregation is the desire of the masses of Negroes, however. He thinks that they primarily want a system of "parallelism," that is, equality of facilities, not the right to use the same facilities.

Dr. H. A. Coleman, professor of history and economics at East Carolina and a well-known voice of politics, has this to say on the matter. "If this issue could be construed to come within federal jurisdiction, which I do not concede, it would be better to let Congress deal with it. Furthermore, the 14th Amendment was conceived for party advantage and as a punishment for the South and ratified in a most irregular manner. The secession states had to ratify it or remain unrepresented in Congress. It would be sound constitutional law and good race relations if the issues were left to the states for solution."

Charles Hill, a freshman registered in the pre-legal curriculum at East Carolina, agrees with Dr. Coleman that the question is one to be handled by the states. He does believe that the 14th Amendment could be interpreted as the authority to end segregation. The federal government is within its rights if segregation is abolished in government-run schools such as those on military bases, but the state-run public schools are under state jurisdiction, according to Hill.

SPORTS ECHO

by Bob Hilldrup

Both football and basketball share the spotlight at East Carolina as the sports season winds its way into mid-December.

It doesn't seem to be overly optimistic to say that the Pirates seem to be headed for another winning season, what with the performances displayed so far. Since last the "East Carolinian" went to press the Bucs have marched to convincing wins over both Belmont Abbey and Guilford and are favored to do so again tomorrow night against Lenoir Rhyne. It will be interesting to note how Rio Grande College of Ohio and the famous Bevo Francis stack up when they encounter Belmont Abbey later in the season. What a crowd it would draw if Bevo & Co. could be scheduled to meet the Pirates in Memorial Gym!

With two games having been played, Coach Howard Porter still hasn't been able to decide between Don Harris, the freshman sensation, and veteran performer Paul Jones at the forward position. Both boys have exceptional ability and should contribute much toward a victorious season.

At the other four spots the locals have little to worry about. No one can question Bobby Hodges' ability at the center post as his scoring totals and rebound work clearly show. Charlie Huffman, at forward, is perhaps one of the most underrated players in North Carolina today, but if he holds his current pace he certainly should make someone's all-time squad.

Cecil Heath and J. C. Thomas as the guards should give the Pirates two of the best playmakers in the state. Heath, a junior, has already made quite a name for himself with his fine floor play and looping set shots and Thomas, after a fair to middling freshman year, should really come into his own.

Scheduling Morris Harvey for the January 2 Elks Bowl game means that one of the top small college grid clubs from eastern United States will be in Greenville. Elks Club officials expect a capacity crowd for the contest despite the $3-per tariff. Unfortunately, it seems that this price of admission will apply to the student body as well as other spectators.

It's a bit early yet to say how the game will shape up come kick-off time because little information is available concerning the West Virginia club. Comparison of scores, however, shows that Appalachian upset Morris Harvey 18-6 whereas the Pirates whipped the Apps 40-7 just two weeks earlier.

In any event all signs point to a sell-out crowd and a whale of a game come January 2.

Buccaneers Lead Conference Race

Monday morning found the East Carolina Pirates as the only North State Conference basketball squad still unbeaten as the young cage season began to unfold. The Bucs, who had notched two wins in as many starts, were tied with High Point and Western Carolina for the conference lead. Each team had a 1-0 record.

A heavy week's schedule which concludes tomorrow night doubtless has scrambled the standings a bit. Twenty contests were slated to be played by conference members during the week.

The standings as of Monday:

Pirates To Meet Morris Harvey In Bowl

ECC's Hodges, Cherry, Gay Make All-State Grid Team

W. Va. Team Here For Elks Contest January Second

Morris Harvey College of Charleston, W. Va., has accepted an invitation to meet the East Carolina College Pirates in the Elks Bowl football game here January 2.

Plans for the contest were first released November 26 when Erskine Duff of the Greenville Elks Club announced that East Carolina had been invited to participate. Proceeds from the game, which is being sponsored by the local Elks, will go to the Eastern North Carolina Boys Camp.

Bowl action will be nothing new for the visitors. In 1950 and again in 1951 the West Virginians appeared in the Tangerine and Burley Bowls, respectively.

Coached by Eddie King, Morris Harvey will bring to town a squad which was undefeated in West Virginia Athletic Conference play and thereby captured the loop title.

The Pirates, who marched to six successive North State Conference victories and posted an 8-1 overall mark, are scheduled to begin practice Monday. Head Coach Jack Boone has announced that practice sessions will be held daily through the 18th when workouts will terminate for the Christmas holidays. Practice will be resumed the 28th after which time the squad will taper off in preparation for the contest.

It has also been revealed that Morris Harvey was among the schools contacted by local athletic officials in an attempt to schedule a Thanksgiving Day contest. Injuries to the Mountain State club prevented an agreement but now, barring practice mishaps, Coach King is expected to bring a full strength squad to town for the contest.

the record shows that for some years the visitors have been rated as one of the nation's powerhouse small college squads.

The Pirates, too, are expected to be at top strength for the contest. Paul Gay, J. D. Bradford and Thurston Callahan, all of whom suffered late season injuries, are expected to return to the active list. Dick Cherry, the Bucs' honorable mention Little All-America quarterback, has recovered from a knee injury suffered in the seventh game of the season and is also expected to be in top shape. Cherry sparkled the team during the regular season and pitched 17 touchdown passes.

Whether or not the blond quarterback's favorite target, senior end Bobby Hodges will be available for the contest could not immediately be learned. Hodges, who holds down the center slot for Coach Howard Porter's cage squad, may not be able to compete due to the basketball season.

The game will mark East Carolina's second appearance in post-season gridiron play. Last year the Buccaneers dropped a 13-6 decision to Clarion State Teachers College of Pennsylvania in the Lions Bowl at Salisbury.

Appalachian Halfback Most Valuable Player In North State League

Shirley Gabriel of Appalachian State Teachers College has been voted the most valuable player of the North State Conference for his football performance this fall.

Second spot in the balloting was claimed by East Carolina's sophomore quarterback, Dick Cherry, with Bobby Hodges, the Pirates' giant end, taking third.

Gabriel, who hails from Iron Station, N. C., is president of the Appalachian student body and is an "A" student working towards a degree in math.

Lenoir Rhyne Here Tomorrow For NS Conference Contest

East Carolina College's Pirates meet the Lenoir Rhyne Bears here tomorrow night in what should prove to be one of the crucial games of the North State Conference's infant basketball season.

The Pirates, who have captured both their starts this year, will be favored to again display the mastery which brought them the regular season title last year. On the other hand, however, cage experts point to the "dark horse" role of the Bears which means the visitors will be ably capable of staging an upset.

As of Monday the Bears were sporting a 2-1 record with all games having been with out-of-conference opposition. Most convincing of Lenoir Rhyne's triumphs came Saturday when they knocked off Tusculum College of Greeneville, Tenn., 98-66.

Leading the visitors' squad will be Bob Artmyer, Floyd Propst and Roland Barker. Barker especially is expected to give the Pirates trouble. In two East Carolina-Lenoir Rhyne contests last year the senior forward bucketed a total of 50 points.

East Carolina, however, can counter with a scoring punch of its own in the person of Bobby Hodges. The 6' 6" center from Kinston collected 23 points in the Bucs' opening game triumph over Belmont Abbey and followed that up with a 32 point effort against Guilford Saturday. Expected to aid the Pirate cause also will be Cecil Heath, Charlie Huffman, J. C. Thomas, Paul Jones and Don Harris. All except Harris are veterans and members of last year's championship squad.

Guilford Loses To Pirate Five By 92-58 Margin

East Carolina's Pirates made their home debut with an easy 92-58 victory over the helpless Quakers from Guilford in a North State Conference game here Saturday night.

Captain Bobby Hodges with 32 points and Charlie Huffman with 18 set the pace for the Pirates. Little Cecil Heath was the Bucs' outstanding performer on defense along with J. C. Thomas and Don Harris.

Bill Atkins was the spark for the Quakers with 21 points while teammate Bobby Callicutt was the defensive standout.

The Pirates took a permanent lead after a few minutes of play and finished the first quarter with a 21-9 margin. At half-time the Bucs held command by 42-24. In the third quarter the Pirates put the game in the bag by scoring 25 points. At no time during the game did the Quakers threaten the Pirates' lead.

Seven Pirate Players Named To Positions On Conference Eleven

Three East Carolina College football players, Bobby Hodges, Dick Cherry and Paul Gay, have been named to the mythical All-State football squad picked annually by the Greensboro Daily News.

In addition, these same three plus Willie Holland, Louis Hallow, James Faircloth and David Lee were selected for the All-Conference squad released recently.

In the All-State selections Duke University, with seven honorees, dominated the squad. Wake Forest and the University of North Carolina, in addition to East Carolina, also placed three men on the squad. The Pirates also placed an additional player, center Louis Hallow, on the honorable mention All-State list.

Hodges, a senior end from Kinston, was named for his standout play on both defense and offense. Cherry, a diminutive (as football players go) quarterback and the only sophomore to be named, won the post largely on his passing which accounted for 17 Pirate scores this fall. Gay, a dazzling broken field runner and one of three juniors selected, accounted for a large part of the yardage picked up by the Bucs this fall.

In the All-North State Conference selections the Buccaneers completely dominated the squad with seven players being named to the first team and two more, end Larry Rhodes and fullback Claude King, receiving honorable mention.

The Pirates captured five out of the seven line positions in the conference balloting plus two of the four backfield posts. Only unanimous choices for the conference squad were Appalachian's star halfback, Shirley Gabriel and Dick Cherry.

Pirates Defeat Crusaders, 76-67

East Carolina College's Pirates, pointing for their second straight top position finish in the North State Conference, trounced Belmont Abbey 76-67 in a non-conference contest December 1 at Belmont. The game was the first of the season for the Bucs.

Big Bobby Hodges, All-Conference senior center, paced the offensive show with 23 points. He also held Johnny Ciol, the Crusaders' 6' 10" center, to a seven point output. Ciol, a transfer from West Virginia University, is being counted on heavily in the Crusaders' bid for national basketball recognition.

Charlie Huffman, Cecil Heath and J. C. Thomas, the other starting members of last year's ball club, also came in for their share of honors. Huffman bucketed 18 points while Thomas and Heath were collecting 14 and 13 respectively.

For Belmont Abbey forward Roger Marcell led the offensive show by collecting seven field goals and three free throws for 17 points.

LATEST COLLEGE SURVEY SHOWS LUCKIES LEAD AGAIN

She hoped that he'd propose by mail, And when she got his letter, All he wrote upon the note, Was: "Luckies taste much better!"

Hyman Levy C. C. N. Y.

Last year a survey of leading colleges throughout the country showed that smokers in those colleges preferred Luckies to any other cigarette.

This year another far more extensive and comprehensive survey—supervised by college professors and based on more than 31,000 actual student interviews—shows that Luckies lead again over all other brands, regular or king size...and by a wide margin! The No. 1 reason: Luckies taste better.

Smoking enjoyment is all a matter of taste, and the fact of the matter is Luckies taste better—first, because L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco. And second, Luckies are made better to taste better. So, Be Happy—Go Lucky!

To make a hit at Christmas time, And really spread good cheer, Give all your friends that smoother smoke—Give Lucky Strike this year.

Dean Jenkins Cites:

Teacher Shortage Continues

Unless counties recruit their own teachers, the present critical shortage of teachers will continue, Dean Leo W. Jenkins of East Carolina College stated in Morehead City Monday night of this week.

Lowering standards is definitely not a solution to the problem, Dean Jenkins maintained, and gave as evidence the fact that states with the highest standards have the least problems in teacher shortage.

"There is a shortage of medical doctors and dentists," he continued, "but no thinking person suggests that we lower the standards in these professions but rather increase facilities for instruction and make scholarships available. This should also be done in the teaching profession."

People who claim that certification is causing the shortage are either unacquainted with high school and college students or they are "throwing up a smoke screen," the East Carolina Dean said. Of the 5,000 college students in North Carolina last year that were surveyed, less than one percent claimed certification requirements as a reason for the teacher shortage, he explained.

"Various counties," he concluded, "should finance a teacher training education for people who plan to return to the county."

Music Department Accepted As New Member Of NASM

East Carolina College's department of music has been accepted as a full member of the National Association of Schools of Music, according to an announcement just made by the Association.

The NASM was founded in 1924 by a small group of leading schools in an effort to solve many of the problems then confronting music educators. Today, its position in the educational field is such that the newly formed National Committee in Accrediting has designated the NASM as the association responsible for the approval of music standards on a national basis.

East Carolina College has been an association member of the NASM since 1951.

COME IN AND SEE OUR FINE SELECTION OF SUITS AND COATS C. HEBER FORBES

Another successful season seems to be in the making for Coach Porter's basketball squad.

The locals have two decisive triumphs under their belt with two weeks of the 1953-54 cage season already history. In their debut against the coming Belmont Abbey Crusaders the Pirates were pushed to the limit. The Crusaders' plans for the bigtime included stepping on the Pirates' toes and for three quarters they did just that.

It was Bobby Hodges' superior ability under the baskets and Charlie Huffman's veteran know-how mixed with scattered portions of Heath, Harris and Thomas that finally drove the host ten into submission, 76-67.

The Belmont Abbey squad boasted three former high school All-Americans in their line-up, Roger Marcell, Frank Harding, and Jack Underwood. Quite a raiment of royalty, we'd say! And many Belmont smiles come forth with the knowledge that all three are freshmen. Give the Crusaders two years and then—move over State College.

Upon arriving at the Abbey it was discovered that Coach Porter had left his regular crimson game attire behind, namely vest and socks. There was some deliberation as to whether or not call the game off or temporarily delay it until the said articles or reasonable facsimile could be obtained.

Jim Wexler, former Syracuse cager, enrolled at East Carolina and stayed three days before departing for Belmont Abbey. It seems Wexler had rather play this year than wait out a year's eligibility to play for the Pirates. Anyway you look at it, the Pirates lost a good prospect.
