EC Seniors Get 'Who's Who' Annual Honors

Dr. James H. Tucker, Director of Student Personnel and Placement, announced yesterday that thirty-eight ECC seniors have been chosen for "Who's Who In American Colleges and Universities."

Others are: Jane Gidden, Tom Hopkins, M. Kathryn Johnson, Nancy Keith, Bobbie Kennedy, James Laughlinhouse, Betty McCauley, Dorothy McEwen, Tony Mallard, Dempsey Mielke.

Remaining in the list are: Sybil Swindell, James Trice, Derry Walker, Loretta Walters, Dallas Wells, Dan Williams, and William Wilson.

Wells Announces Book Exchange

SGA President Dallas Wells announces that a non-profit book exchange which is to be located in Austin Building will be open to all students. This function will start Winter Quarter and will be headed by the Veteran's Club as a service project to the school.

The book exchange will work in the following manner: Students should carry any used books to the centrally located office in Austin, leave the book, pick up stub, and return in several days to receive money for the book sold. If the used book is not sold, the student must reclaim the book as the exchange will not handle it if not sold within a three-day period. Any book not reclaimed after the specified period will become the property of the exchange. Also, the new exchange will be open several days at the end of the quarter to cater to those students unable to use extra books during the quarter.

A small fee will be charged to pay expenses such as having stub printed, materials, etc. The fee will be ten cents for books up to $3.00. Five per cent of the total cost will be charged for books selling for more than $4.00.

Wells, whose platform proposed a used-book exchange, "urges everyone to use these new facilities" and "take advantage of the central location provided for convenience of the students."

If there are any questions concerning the book exchange, please come by the Student Government office.

Pindell To Play Sunday Recital

Jack Pindell, a senior trombone student of Mr. James Parnell, will give his Senior Honor Recital Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in McGinnis auditorium. Pindell will be accompanied by Lamar Hadley, and will be assisted by the Sinfonia Brass Quartet, comprised of the following members of the Phi Mu Alpha National Music Fraternity: Charles Myers and Thomas Spry, trumpets, and Jerry Liles, trombone.

Pindell will present "Sonata in F Major," by Corelli; "Recitative and Prayer," from Grand Symphony For Band, by Berlioz; "Ballade," by Eugene Bozza and "Three Hymns" by Palestrina. Other numbers he will perform are: "Morgenmusik," by Paul Hindemith; "Andante Cantabile," by Walther Schroder and "Chorale, Variations, and Finale," by James H. Parnell, a member of the East Carolina Music Faculty, and the teacher of Mr. Pindell.

Pindell, a graduate of Needham Broughton High School in Raleigh, is president of the East Carolina College Student Chapter of the Music Educators National Conference, and is a past president of the college band. This honor recital is open to the public and is free of charge.

Colorful Costumes From 'My Three Angels'

Outstanding Tenor To Appear In Concert Series

The East Carolina College Concert Series, sponsored by the SGA, will present Giuseppe Campora, leading tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Association, November 9, at 8:15 in Wright Auditorium.

Campora, handsome young leading tenor of the Metropolitan Opera and La Scala, Milan, made his operatic debut as Rodolfo in "La Boheme" at the Teatro Lirico in Bari, Italy, when he was only 22 years old. Since then he has sung leading roles in the principal opera houses of Rome, Naples, Bologna, Florence, and Milan as well as Havana, Mexico, Puerto Rico, Barcelona, Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Caracas, and Santiago.

Campora made his Metropolitan Opera debut in January, 1955, again in the role of Rodolfo, and has been a leading member of the company ever since. In the past two seasons he has also appeared with the opera companies of New Orleans, Miami, San Francisco, Montreal, and Toronto. Mr. Campora's voice has been heard in two Italian movies Radames in "Aida" and Pinkerton in "Madame Butterfly," both of which are still international art theatre successes.

A regular guest artist on the Firestone Hour on ABC-TV, Mr. Campora recently starred in a CBS-TV production of Tosca in Toronto. Next season, in addition to his appearances as leading tenor at the "Met," he will be heard in opera and concert throughout this country and Canada.

Other attractions in the series are Vittorio Giannini, composer-conductor, who will conduct his symphony and the East Carolina College Orchestra in concert, December 6; Festival of Norway, Singers, Dancers, Orchestra, January 20; New York City Ballet Company, February 8; Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians, March 2; U.S. Navy Band, March 16; Duke Ellington and His Orchestra in Concert, March 19; and Carlos Montoya, guitarist, April 8.

All students will be admitted free upon presentation of identification cards.

'Angels' Begins Playing Tonight

"My costume's too small!" "Ed Marclift, will you please stop stealing MY scene!" "But Mr. Brewer, I can't possibly say that line with a straight face."

All of these comments dart back and forth as the ECC Playhouse puts the finishing touches on "My Three Angels" which will open tonight and run Friday and Saturday nights at 8 o'clock at McGinnis Auditorium.

The play concerns three convicts played by Jim Roper, Ed Barclif, and Jim Brewer, who are employed to do odd jobs for Monsieur Felex Duocet played by Dan Yanchin, his wife played by Lynne Glassford, and the daughter Marie Louise played by Leigh Dobson.

During their stay with the Duocets, the convicts manage to get in and out of numerous hilarious, complex situations. Adding to the merriment are Uncle Henri Trochard, played by Bill Faulkner; his son, Paul, played by Bill Bowen; a scatterbrained old woman, played by Jane Berryman, and a young lieutenant, played by Ken Harris.

Mr. Brewer, who is directing the play, is also doing the part of Joseph, one of the convicts.

About the play, Mr. Brewer says, "I want to express my thanks to a very hard working cast of talented students and an efficient technical crew. I sincerely believe that "My Three Angels" will be an enjoyable evening of theater for all who attend. We've had a lot of fun working on it. I hope the audience enjoys it as much as we have."

Whichard Name Closely Identifies With School Progress

By DERRY WALKER

David Julian Whichard, like his father, the late David Jordan Whichard, has for a lifetime been instrumental in the progress of East Carolina College. Last week, Whichard, the publisher of the Greenville Daily Reflector, was honored for his services to the college when the board of trustees announced that the new music building was named for him.

The motion was made by President John D. Messick and passed unanimously.

"I was agreeably surprised when I learned that the building had been named for me," the mellow newspaperman commented, "and I certainly appreciate it."

The Whichard name has been closely associated with East Carolina College since it was established. "My father," said Mr. Whichard, "helped to bring about the creation of the college, and worked hard to see it established in Greenville. He helped build interest in the school, and tried to make people see the need for it."

When asked what he thought of the school's progress, Mr. Whichard said: "I always dreamed the college would reach its present size, but never actually expected it. Right now the school is at its peak, but I think it will continue to grow in several areas."

"I think that Dr. Messick has contributed much to the growth of the school," Mr. Whichard commented, "and I hate to see him go. It is difficult to replace him."

SGA Endorses Jenkins For School President

By MIKE KATSIAS

Student government placed its representative support overwhelmingly in favor of endorsing Dr. Leo W. Jenkins for the presidency of East Carolina College, at a special called meeting Monday night, by a vote of 26 to 5.

The meeting lasted for a half-hour and was dominated by spirited debate. Arguments for and against the resolution reflected concern on the part of student leaders as to the selection of a new college president.

Barney West, Junior senator, commended Jenkins for his outstanding record as vice president of the College. "His proven ability to handle administrative matters during the past 12 years are solid personal endorsements which speak for themselves," said West.

When asked to comment on the passage of the resolution, SGA President Dallas Wells said, "I'm very pleased with the debate—it was indicative of the interest our students are placing in issues affecting the college. I was personally in favor of the resolution. Now that we have shown our feelings, we will eagerly await the decision of the Board of Trustees."

The following is the complete text of the resolution:

Resolved, that we, the students of East Carolina College, express our deep regret that Dr. J. D. Messick, the president of our College, is resigning January 6.

We feel that his work has been outstanding and that our College and State owe him a debt of sincere gratitude for his twelve years of service.

His policies and philosophy of education have won for him a historic place in the educational program of North Carolina and his efforts to promote them have won him a place of real meaning in the lives of all East Carolina students, both past and present.

Also, we feel that his policies and philosophy should be carried on and that the work he has begun for the growth and prestige of East Carolina College should be continued.

We feel that Dr. Leo W. Jenkins is both qualified and able to fill the vacancy created by Dr. Messick's resignation. As Dean of the College for the past twelve years, his own contribution has been solid and real; we believe as President of East Carolina College he will guide it through a new and historic era of educational progress. We therefore endorse Dr. Jenkins for the presidency of East Carolina College.

On behalf of the students of East Carolina College, we the members of the Student Senate do adopt this resolution.

DR. LEO W. JENKINS . . . candidate for ECC presidency.

Larson Speaks On World Law Theories; Says Time Is Right

"Law is known all over the world to be the familiar, the only alternative of force," said Dr. Arthur Larson, director of the World Rule of Law Center at Duke University. In his Monday evening lecture in Joyner Library Auditorium, Dr. Larson, who appeared as a Danforth Lecturer, told his audience that present times were becoming more and more favorable for the installation of international law.

"It is time for world law to replace world force," Dr. Larson declared, "but some needs must be supplied first." Continuing in the theme of his lecture, "World Rule of Law: An Idea Whose Time Has Come," the Duke official cited several of the needs.

(1) Body of law to apply. Laws, rules and regulations must be drawn up and found generally agreeable and acceptable to the world nations in documented forms.

(2) Machinery to enforce law. Similar to domestic law standards, a means of enforcing world law must be established and made efficient and readily operable.

(3) Acceptance of law. The laws must be drawn from principles that are generally acceptable by all nations.

(4) Plans for decision. There must be a system of courts. Third party decisions would be made on the basis of world law.

"International law is, on the whole, better than domestic law," Dr. Larson commented, and continued by explaining that there is little discrepancy in major laws in nations around the globe.

"International law is already partly in effect," he said, "but there are two major reasons by which people deny the reality of it. One is that there is no legislative body passing international law, and the other is that there are no policemen to enforce the law."

Dr. Larson continued his lecture by enumerating several methods by which international law would be made worthwhile. He told his listeners that the law must be made usable, mainly by publishing the laws so that they might be referred to quickly and easily.

"We need an entirely new concept," he continued, "thus, the name World Law was chosen." According to the lawyer-professor-government official, the center at Duke, which he directs, is involved in solving the many problems in the way of international law. "The general principles of law, recognized by all nations," he said, "are the things we are seeking."

Dr. Larson concluded his lecture by mentioning some of the major principles by which nations would have to abide before World Law could be made efficient. "Aggression would have to cease," he said, "nations must submit to third party judgments, and agreements among world nations would have to be kept."

After his lecture, Dr. Larson and his wife were entertained in the "Y" hut, where coffee was served.

Choir Plans Annual Messiah

Auditions for soloists for the annual Messiah, to be presented in Wright Auditorium on December 13, will be held November 6 at 7:00-9:00 in the new choir room, in the Music Hall.

Rehearsals are now underway for the production, but anyone who would like to sing in the Messiah may come to Austin Auditorium on Thursday evenings at 6:15 for rehearsal. No auditions are necessary.

The EC Choir will take a short tour November 8, and they plan to sing at the Kenansville Baptist Church at 11:15, Sunday morning. At 3:30 the Choir will sing at the Baptist Church in Wallace, and their evening program will be presented at St. Marks Methodist Church in Kinston, at 7:00. Following their program they will return to the campus.

Several such tours are being planned for the Choir this year. They also plan to sing with a large group of college students on December 1, at Raleigh. There, accompanied by the N. C. Symphony Orchestra, they will present the Messiah.

EC Opera Begins New Rehearsals

The East Carolina Opera Theater, student organization sponsored by the Music Department, has begun rehearsals on this year's opera production, Gian Carlo Menotti's "The Medium." Production dates are February 15 and 16.

Paul Hickfang, Opera Theater director, has announced that the East Carolina College Orchestra will play for this year's opera under the direction of Donald Hayes of the Music Department. John Gordon of the Art Department will design the set. The dramatic directorship has been accepted by Dr. Robert Rickert of the English Department.

The cast will include Martha Bradner, Jane Murray, Allison Moss, Ann Darden, James Gillikin, Carolyn Elam, Ronald Knouse, Jesseamine Hiatt, Jeanne Peterson, Mary Leo Lawrence, Kenneth Ginn, Robert Tilley, and Ashlyn Maulden.

Spring Teachers Must Apply Soon

Candidates for student teaching, Spring Quarter, may file applications with their college departmental supervisors of student teaching during the week of pre-registration, November 9-14, and thereafter, until the "close out" date, 4:30 p.m., December 7.

Senate Commended For Their Selections

We heartily commend the student Senate for their selection of the three new members-at-large on the Publications Board. Two of the men selected, Tom Jackson and Jim Trice, have worked on campus publications since their freshman year. The third, Merle Sommers, did publications work previous to his entrance to E.C.C.

All have expressed interest in the work of publications on this campus and each has ideas for the expansion of publications work in the near future.

Several students ran for the posts on the Publications Board. The senators seemed genuinely interested in electing qualified persons to the job. And they did not let us down; they succeeded.

Students Lack Maturity

It appears evident that individuals, presumably connected with East Carolina College as members of the student body, have failed to obtain from their college experiences one vital quality, maturity. This seems so, due to the recent hanging in effigy of East Carolina football coach, Jack Boone.

These individuals seem to have either the idea that they are judge, jury, and executor, or that they know enough about the business of coaching a football team to criticize a coach.

So East Carolina didn't win over Appalachian. Everybody was disappointed, of course. Anybody that even knows what a football looks like, should realize by now that that is just the way the breaks in the game occur.

If somebody wants to criticize anybody on this campus, he should have the decency and just plain "juts" to come out openly and do it, not sneak out some dark night with a dummy and sign and hang it up in a tree. But, why not, no one will ever find out who was responsible and the person or persons who did it always get a great big chuckle out of it.

It's hard to say what makes a football team win or lose. It could be the weather, morale, injuries, or just about most anything. East Carolina's Pirates have done themselves proud this season. So far, they have had a good season. They have lost only one home game. Does this warrant the despicable action deemed necessary by some supposedly college-age people?

This act was childish, uncalled for, and in extremely bad taste. We sincerely hope that the individuals behind it are very proud of themselves and realize the shame that they have created in members of the student body who had no part in it.—J.R.M.

Campaign Needs Help

It seems that SGA President Dallas Wells is receiving little cooperation in the campus-wide clean-up campaign he began recently. The first time he brought up the idea for such a campaign in the Senate, he could get no volunteers for a committee.

At the next meeting of the Senate a committee was formed and work has begun. But the committee cannot do the work alone. Every person on this campus must be a part of the committee for Wells' project to succeed. No matter how hard he and other committee members work, this fine project will be of no value unless we all work for a clean campus.

Trash litters our grounds, our buildings, and our two ponds on campus. Maintenance men cannot collect the trash as fast as it is deposited.

We urge the campus population to work with Wells. Help keep our beautiful campus clean, not just during the especially designated week, but at all times. We have a campus of which we can be proud. Let's all help keep it that way.

Kay McLawhon Wins District Award From North Carolina Poetry Association

By PAT HARVEY

Kinston residents remember this recent award winner as "Kolarful Kay Kasual," but at East Carolina she calls herself Kay McLawhon. Kay's poem, "The Masses," recently won the Second Congressional District award from the North Carolina Poetry Association. "Surprised?" Kay exclaimed, "I was breathless." When asked what kind of poem "The Masses" is, she said, "The reader must find his own interpretation."

The Rebel, ECC literary magazine, is printing Kay's poem in the next issue, destined to be released after the holidays.

Winning an award for poetry is not a new experience for Kay, as she has won other awards for literary achievements, such as the Lenora H. Watts Loving Cup in the Kinston high school. "I started writing when I was old enough to hold a pencil," stated Miss McLawhon, when questioned about the beginning of her poetry career.

In her slightly dilapidated portfolio, Kay has a number of literary works including many poems. But "I never name my poems because I can never think of a title," Kay continued.

The Kinston native not only writes poetry, but she has also written plays, music and, more recently, short stories. "My writing is now under Ovid Pierce," announced Kay as she continued discussion concerning her literature expansions. Her latest short story, "Pine Street," is a convincing story about the people, their dreams and life, in a typical section of the South.

While at Kinston high school Kay wrote the senior class musical, "Paradise Island." Jim McDaniel, last year's Miss Homecoming, claimed a starring role in this production. Kay also served as feature editor and cartoonist with the Kinston high school paper. As a junior Kay even tried her skill in dramatics and performed in her class play, "Pink Magic."

During her senior year Kay won the DAR cup for the best historical scrapbook on the Revolutionary period. She was also the "un-named" poet Laureate because "whenever there was any occasion that called for a poem, I was installed to perform the necessary task," stated Miss McLawhon.

She also sang with the Granger High Singers, under the direction of James Hall, and journeyed to Atlantic City where the group sang at the International Kiwanis Club convention. Kay spent her freshman year at Woman's College, and while there she was appointed to the office of class cheerleader.

"At WC I wrote a few songs," said Kay, "A friend of mine played them on the electric guitar and I accompanied her with my singing."

Besides concentrating her activities in the fields of English and social studies, Kay writes for the East Carolinian and the Rebel.

As far as her future plans are concerned, Kay announced, "As in everything, the future is indefinite."

Campus Conversation Concerns Selection Of Next College Head

By MIKE KATSIAS

Now that the shock impact of the Messick resignation is beginning to subside, a new condition has become the "conversation gem of the hour" who will ascend to the college presidency?

After pondering over conceivable ways of illustrating a personal opinion, we would like to go on record favoring Dr. Leo W. Jenkins.

Quite a few critics have expressed their views on the possible selection of Jenkins. They usually center around the following questions: How much influence would he have in state political circles? Do you think he has the "presidential carriage" required for the job?

A look at the record will show that the Raleigh visitations of recent years on the part of the East Carolina administration have been a team effort. Leo Jenkins has been an important member of that team.

It's hard to label a clear definition for the term, "presidential carriage"—everyone has a personal opinion. A long line of candidates will be proposed, but one will have to search for a long time before finding a person possessing such outstanding qualifications for the job.

The suggestion was made that what we need is a fresh face, perhaps some great name to lend prestige to the institution. Another source was busy on campus spouting the needs for a man with a great intellectual concept.

It's time for a deeper self-examination as to the actual needs of the college. There are a lot of undercurrents as the pressure for selecting a new president continues. They are heard and seen from such places as Raleigh, Chapel Hill, and other "rival camps" too numerous to mention.

There is no veil of secrecy regarding the reason why so many students, faculty, and alumni want to see this man follow in the footsteps of Dr. Messick. A vice president in any college receives quite a bit of grooming with ever-present possibility that he may one day have to serve as president.

A record of accomplishment as an administrator, educator, civic leader, and student champion deserves attention.

Leo W. Jenkins is the man for the job!

Campus Official Discusses Career

By BETTY MAYNOR

Located in the Alumni Building is the office of a man who does so many things for so many different people, that he has become a permanent fixture during his eight years at East Carolina. Dr. James W. Butler, better known to students as "Uncle Jim," is at present assistant director of public relations and as such is in contact daily with many of the campus citizenry.

Dr. Butler, native North Carolinian and an alumnus of East Carolina College, was born in Pilot Mountain, N.C., and received his public school education in Kinston and Falcon. Later he attended East Carolina Teachers College and George Washington University. He holds the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters.

Administrative Duties
In 1951, Dr. Butler joined the college staff as alumni secretary and since that time has been director of sports publicity at the college, and chairman of the Entertainment Committee. At present, he is business manager and host chairman of the Entertainment Committee in addition to his position as assistant director of public relations.

During his years on the college staff, East Carolina has expanded and progressed in every way. In commenting on these factors, Dr. Butler said, "The expansion of the curriculum and enlargement of the faculty have combined to attract more students and thus have raised the level of academic achievement on campus. With the enlarged enrollment, naturally our facilities have been improved and added to. This I consider the most significant outgrowth of the last decade at East Carolina."

In further commenting on this progress, Dr. Butler explained the reasons he believed to be responsible, "I feel this has been a vision of the college administration with Dr. Messick and his staff and faculty working to implement it."

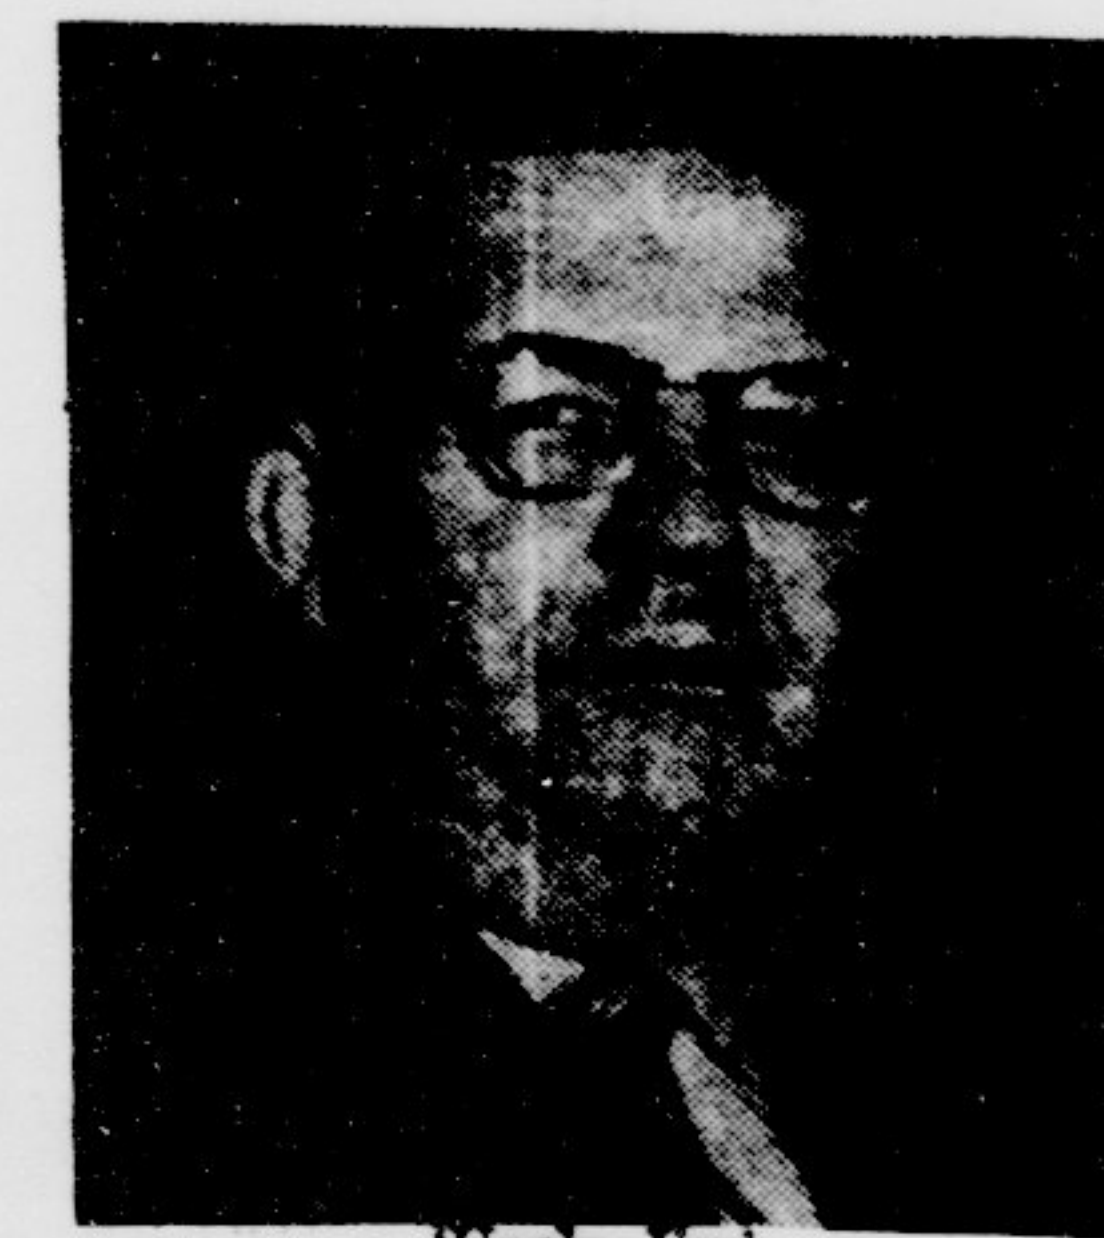

Campus Activities
In addition to his duties in public relations, Dr. Butler has time for affiliation with campus organizations and church groups. During homecoming festivities, he served as chairman of the Homecoming Committee which included working with the parade, the ball game, dinners, and the dance, at which he presented several trophies.

Since the chartering of Kappa Epsilon chapter of Alpha Phi Omega on campus more than six years ago, Dr. Butler has been chairman of the advisory committee of this service fraternity.

Civic Affiliations
In the area of civic organizations, Dr. Butler is an active member of the Rotary Club. He is past governor of District 773 of Rotary International and is a member of the Greenville Rotary Club. He is a past director and present chairman of the Committee on Education of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce. He is chairman of the Salvation Army Advisory Board in Greenville and a vice-president and director of the North Carolina Society for Crippled Children and Adults.

Honors Received
In recognition of his services rendered to young people, Dr. Butler has received the East Carolina Boy Scout Council Silver Beaver and Compass Awards and the Pitt District Green Band for service to youth. In June of 1955 he was selected "Tarheel of the Week" by the Raleigh News and Observer, and just recently was selected as one of nineteen North Carolinians to be listed in a 1959 publication, Who's Who In Public Relations.

Retrospect
In looking back over the years before he came to East Carolina, Dr. Butler commented on his journalistic career, as editor of The Sampson News, The Duplin Herald and as a member of the editorial staff of The Goldsboro News-Argus, and the influence it has had on his past and present positions. "I feel the background I had in journalism has been of greater value to me in my associations with different people, and in the recognition of problems and their solutions. My work with the Chamber of Commerce enabled me to see community needs and to help set up committees for educational, industrial, social, recreational, and religious activities."

Accused Negro Killed

Will The Chosen Jury Remember Written Law?

By DERRY WALKER

Mack Charles Parker, a Negro truck driver accused of raping a white woman in Poplarville, Mississippi, was dragged from his cell last spring by a band of masked men who shot him and dumped his corpse into a muddy river.

Shortly after his body was found, local authorities in the sleepy southern town announced that they had no idea who the members of the lynching party were. Sentiment rose among civic leaders and they pressured ranking officials for action, until the latter called on the F.B.I. for aid.

The F.B.I. went to work in May of last year and this month they submitted a report. Their findings may cause a few heads to roll, and again, they may not.

It will be interesting to watch the action that will now follow. The Poplarville citizens don't have much to say about the whole mess. They go on living, watching quietly. No one knows for sure whose names will turn up in the F.B.I. report, but speculation runs high. Maybe a next door neighbor; maybe a well-known downtown merchant; maybe anyone in Poplarville.

It will be interesting to note the action of the jury. Will its members be able to detach themselves from all memories of the crime the Negro was said to have committed; will they be able to remember only the written law they are sworn to uphold, or will they deny it and free those whom some speculators believe will be indicted?

There may see an intense human episode unfold, like a story from a book, except the people will be real, the facts valid, the decision complex.

Whose law will be upheld, and by what authority?

We hear people talk about the unwritten law, but we have also seen it rejected by the majority of Americans. The American people long ago grew weary of the vigilantes and the Ku Klux Klan. Still, there are some people who don't find enough justice in the written law, thus Mack Charles Parker was hurled bleeding into a river.

It will be the duty of the jury to forget the rape that Parker committed, and try the lynching party for murder, but the murder was prompted by Parker's crime, and the jurors will have a difficult time erasing it from memory. We watch to see what will be done with our written law upon which all order in our nation depends. The jury must forget much of human nature in order to remember justice, as defined by principle.

Laugh It Off

Views Change; Battles Lost

By TOM JACKSON

The recent resignation of Dr. J. D. Messick and the following controversy over his successor has attracted statewide attention in the past week.

In addition to pointing out misunderstandings over the issue on the part of both factions of the controversy, the incident has also brought to light another interesting fact. East Carolina is being noticed by the rest of the state. No kidding, they're really watching us. Never before in the history of the school have so many people in prominent positions shown concern over East Carolina's welfare.

This week a well known columnist in one of the state's widely circulated newspapers made several interesting comments about the school. This columnist, known for his satire (and locally known even more for the role he played in East Carolina's "Old Yellow" incident), commented that ECC had many obstacles to overcome.

In this particular column, which was printed Monday, he seemed to take an attitude which is a little off his "beaten path." Now this is a pretty radical change for this guy, (who, we understand, is usually pretty loyal to dear old UNC) and seems to point out even more the growing importance of East Carolina in state education. A lot of people seem to have taken an "about face" on their views of ECC lately.

Almost everyone has his own view of who is winning the age old battle of male versus female. How we males must admit that at times we are pretty much at a loss for weapons other than the old reliable one, "Rationalization."

This week, however, we saw the battle and the respective positions of the two factions epitomized. Over in the administration building there are two prominent offices on the second floor which almost parallel each other in their functions. The offices of the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women are those we have in mind.

In one there is only a cold, bare tile floor which is very ordinary looking while the other one has very subtly added to its majesty with a soft grey carpet. You guess which one has the carpet!! ... wonder if that extra rib could be the secret weapon!

AFROTC Drill Team In Action

AFROTC Drill Team Continues To Actively Demonstrate Precision Marching Technique

The East Carolina College Honor Guard Drill Team, under the command of Cadet Captain Robert L. Needs, is entering its fourth year of active work.

Although the Drill Team is under the jurisdiction of the Air Force ROTC, it is a separate unit with its own uniforms, constitution, and officers. The members are chosen by competitive application from the AF ROTC ranks.

In addition to Cadet Captain Robert L. Needs, the other officers are Assistant Commander Harry P. Bailey; Secretary Robert E. Taylor; Treasurer Edward J. Farrell; Ser-jeant-at-Arms Robert C. Bown; and Historians Earl Scofield and Ron Oates.

In past years, the Drill Team has placed twelfth in national competition at Washington, D. C. Also, it performed at the Ground-Breaking Ceremony at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, in 1957. Among the parades in which the Honor Guard Drill Team has performed are the Greenville Christmas parade, the United Fund parade, and the East Carolina Homecoming parade. The Drill Team performs at one East Carolina football game each year.

The Drill Team specializes in trick drill and precision movements. The precision movements are taken from the Air Force manual and original ideas of the Drill Team members.

News In Brief

Guadalupe To Speak

The Canterbury Club will present Rt. Reverend Jose Guadalupe Saucedo, Missionary Bishop of Mexico, in a special address at St. Pauls Church tonight at 7:30.

Bishop Guadalupe, who is a Mexican, was ordained in 1954 and was concentrated bishop in 1958. He is one of the youngest bishops in the Episcopal Church.

Clyde Matthew is president of Canterbury Club and Reverend Richard N. Ottaway is Chaplain to Episcopal students.

Psychology Club Organizes

Approximately twenty psychology majors and minors met recently to organize for the first time on campus a Psychology Club. Directing the meeting were Drs. Elsie Dotson and Charles Harris of the Psychology Department.

A committee, headed by Charles Dyson and appointed to draw up plans for the formal organization of the club. Other members are Jack Colley, Sam Hudson, Douglas Morgan, Anita Carter, and Francis Harris.

At the next meeting of the club, November 4, these plans will be presented and officers and advisors of the club will be selected. The meeting is open to all students interested in psychology.

National Officers Visit Sorority

Gamma Phi Chapter of Alpha Xi Delta sorority recently was visited by Lydia Michael and Peggy Green, national officers of the sorority.

Mrs. Michael is a member at large on the national council and is in charge of expansion. Mrs. Green is advisor for Xi Province to which the local chapter belongs.

The ladies held conferences with each of the chapter's officers and advised each concerning her duties. At a special called meeting, the national officers were introduced to each of the new pledges. Reports of the plans and progress of the chapter were given.

Playhouse To Meet

There will be an important meeting of the East Carolina Playhouse November 11 at 6:30 p.m. in the Greenroom. All members should plan to attend this meeting.

Frat Observes Founders Day

Lambda Chi Alpha observed Founders Day with a weekend of activities which included attending church as a group Sunday and a dinner Monday night.

Trustees Know Much About ECC From Experience

Both the newly elected chairman and the vice chairman of the Board of Trustees of East Carolina College have had a long association with the college as students, participants in activities of the Alumni Association, and members of the Board of Trustees.

J. Herbert Waldrop, president of the Guarantee Bank and Trust Co. of Greenville, was elected chairman at a meeting of the Board October 5. Robert B. Morgan of Lillington, State Senator from Harnett County, was chosen as vice chairman.

Mr. Waldrop attended East Carolina College as a day student. Serving on the Board of Trustees from 1941 to 1947, he was a member twelve years ago when Dr. John D. Mesick, who recently resigned as president of the college, was elected to the office. In 1957 he again was appointed a trustee of the college and has served on the Board as vice chairman and member of the Executive and the Investment Committee. He became acting chairman of the Board earlier this year, succeeding Arthur L. Tyler of Rocky Mount, whose term expired. Through many years Mr. Waldrop has been a loyal alumnus of the college.

Mr. Morgan entered East Carolina as a student in 1942 and, after serving in the U. S. Navy from 1944 to 1946, he returned to the campus and was graduated in 1947.

He was presented in 1955 the annual award made by the college Alumni Association to an outstanding graduate and in 1957 was elected to a two-year term of office as president of the organization. He became a member of the Board of Trustees in 1958 for a term of office ending in 1965.

Dorm Girls Plan Annual Social

Three hundred invitations for the annual "Harvest Tea" of Wilson Hall Girls have been issued for Sunday November 8th from 3:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Carolyn Miller and Jewel Callihan will greet guests at the door.

The receiving line will be Mrs. Striplin and the house officers — Markie Smith, Adrian Waters, Jean Flake and Evelyn Cooley.

Betty Dunn will pour and Jackie Crutchfield and Carolyn Griffin will serve. The Guest Book will be presided over by Helen Finley while Barbara Galloway and Gray Baggett will guide guests.

Industrial Art Majors Plan Convention Trip

Plans were made during the last bi-monthly meeting of the Industrial Arts Club for all the instructors and any students of the department to attend the North Carolina Industrial Arts Association meeting to be conducted November 7 at the Junior High School in Gastonia, North Carolina. Any student desiring to attend this meeting is requested to contact Dr. Haigwood or Mike Riddick.

Suggestions and ideas were presented for the preparation of High School Day. Members of the department will operate concession stands on campus, guided tours and demonstrations of different phases of Industrial Arts will be given in the department.

As a result of the club's membership drive conducted recently, enrollment increased considerably. Any major or minor in the department is invited to become a member of this organization.

Jackson Specializes In Speech Correction

By MARCELLE VOGEL

Dr. Bernard Jackson, speech therapist and special education teacher, has been a member of the East Carolina faculty for the past three years. "My job here in speech therapy," commented Dr. Jackson, "is to work with people who experience all problems of articulation, stuttering, and the more complex voice problems like a too high or low pitched voice, a hoarse, husky, or nasal voice, and a too fast or too slow speaking voice. We also work with problems associated with hearing loss or deafness, and we train these students to use what hearing remains, or teach them lip reading."

"The speech courses we offer are designed first to give a person the understanding of the area of special education, such as speech, hearing, vision, crippling conditions, and extreme cases of mental development," continued Dr. Jackson. "We offer courses which teach the basic skills necessary in working with the various problems of phonetics, and problems in the basic concepts necessary to diagnosis and problems of hearing. We also offer courses in the development of speech and the nature in the problems of speech, diagnosis and correction," he added.

"This area of speech correction is a relatively new area, and is growing rapidly, but is not growing fast enough to supply the demands for speech correctionists," explained Dr. Jackson. "This is a very challenging field," he added. "We are interested in training a good quality product, and the students are drawn from a number of areas," said Dr. Jackson. "Many take speech or special education as a minor, and then are prepared to be a special teacher."

Reared in Michigan, Dr. Jackson attended what is now Western Michigan University where he majored in speech correction. His undergraduate work was interrupted by nearly four years in the service during World War II. "After completing my undergraduate work under Dr. Van Riper, who is well known in this field," commented Dr. Jackson, "Dr. Van Riper talked me into visiting speech clinics around the country to observe stuttering. Although I had planned a west coast vacation," added Dr. Jackson, "the survey interested me, so in late February, 1949 we took off. I eventually visited about 50 speech clinics and departments including a couple of private clinics throughout the United States."

Dr. Jackson received his masters degree from the university of Denver in 1950. After finishing up the survey he went back to Western Michigan University where he was an assistant to Dr. Van Riper. Leaving there he attended Ohio State where he worked on his Ph.D. and was part time instructor in the department of speech. There he was in charge of stuttering diagnosis and therapy, and occasionally taught a class.

SGA Appoints Committee To Clean Up Campus

The Student Government Association has appointed a committee to head a clean-up project on campus. The committee consists of the following students: Harold Leary, Markie Smith, Charlie Munn, Evelyn Crutchfield, and Marvis Byrd. This committee will propose plans and improvements to beautify Wright Circle and the cafeteria fountain grounds.

Also, this service project will be headed by Lambda Chi, Theta Chi, and Kappa Alpha fraternities. Lambda Chi has posted signs to remind students of the needed co-operation to keep East Carolina's campus clean of debris. Kappa Alpha and Theta Chi will be assigned other services to assist in this project.

Sororities are urged to render their services by painting the lawn benches. Any suggestions from the sororities and other interested students will be appreciated.

SGA President Dallas Wells stated "if we police the campus one day; the next day, litter is all over the campus." He urges every student to take pride in his campus by keeping it neat and beautiful.

Psychology Adds Master's Degree

A recent addition to the rapidly expanding Psychology Department is an academic master's degree which was first offered this fall quarter. The psychology major which was introduced last year now has sixty-five undergraduate participants and the newly established master's degree now has eight graduate participants.

Other additions to the Psychology Department include for the first time a clinical psychologist, Dr. Elsie Dotson, and an experimental psychologist, Dr. Charles Harris.

Part of the new program will be concerned with specialized interests of the candidate. According to Dr. Prewett, head of the Psychology Department, arrangements have been made for a practicum of guided experiences in testing centers, mental hygiene clinics and other available centers. Six new courses are being added to the psychology curriculum and experimental equipment is being obtained to provide experiences on campus for the master's degree candidates.

At present there are eleven full time staff members in the Psychology Department, two part time members, and one student assistant. There are thirty-seven courses offered by this department and during fall quarter there are approximately 1,000 students enrolled in these courses.

In commenting on the work of the Psychology Department, Dr. Prewett said, "We are seriously trying to make it possible for the student to have a variety of experiences with interesting staff members from throughout the world." At present on the staff are Dr. Yung Jun Yu from South Korea who received his Ph.D. from the University of Illinois, and Mr. Eric F. Graf who will receive his Ph.D. from the University of Zurich.

Apps Score 28-0 Win For Second Place In League

By LEONARD LAG
Any and all hopes that the East Carolina football team had for gaining the North State Conference crown were quickly washed down the drain last Saturday night at the hands of a fired-up Mountaineer eleven from Appalachian State Teachers College.

The Apps brought the most experienced and well-balanced club in the school's history to College Stadium which was the scene of a 28-0 Pirate defeat.

The Pirates ground attack was held in check most of the sixty minutes of football. The App line was tough all night and on offense opened holes big enough to drive a Greyhound bus through. A host of backs found it easy going through the big holes and showed the crowd of 4500 some of the best running in College Stadium this season.

Two fumbles and a pair of pass interceptions proved detrimental to the Pirates and stopped almost every drive that quarterbacks Ralph Zehring and Bert Stafford were able to ignite.

After recovering a fumble on their own 39 yard line, All-American Angel Glendenning and fullback Bill Harved staged a drive which carried 61 yards to paydirt. Tommy Wilson carried it over from the three and then passed to Cal Burleson for two more points.

The next time they were in possession of the ball, the Apps drove for another touchdown. Climaxing the 82 yard march was a four yard pass from Wilson to Oval Jaynes. John Walker fought over for two more points and a 16-0 at halftime.

Led by James Speight, Glenn Bass and Sonny Basinger, the Pirates looked ready to show their power in the second half. Bass shook loose for a 31 yard jaunt to spark the drive which carried to the App 27. Bass fumbled on the next play to end the threat.

Appalachian recovered and drove for their third score. Halfback Don Gardner carried the pigskin over from the five to put the Apps out front 22-0.

The Apps scored their final touchdown on a 95 yard drive which was climaxed when halfback Glenwood Wilson scored after racing 67 yards.

East Carolina attempted to break the scoring pace late in the game but a penalty nullified a touchdown and ended a threat.

The visitors were forced to punt on only one occasion and that was the final play of the game.

JV FOOTBALL TEAM LOSES TO FORK UNION MILITARY, 48-6

East Carolina's JV football team dropped their third game of the season, 48-6, to a strong Fork Union Military Academy eleven, at Fork Union last Friday night.

The Baby Bucs bowed to the powerful Fork Union machine, not without registering a lone tally, however. The Pirates are one of the few teams that Fork Union has played this season, which was able to break through the wall-like defense of the Virginia military men to score.

Pirates Face Number Two Club In The Nation

By ROY MARTIN

Lenoir Rhyne's big, bad Bears invade East Carolina's College Stadium this Saturday night in hopes of returning home with the North State Conference championship virtually sewed up.

The Bears, having their usual good season, boast as powerful if not more powerful, a team as they have in past years. Their line averages about 185 pounds and is described as fast and tough. The Bears backfield is also reported as being composed of fleet-footed, rugged performers. In the course of this season's North State Conference race, the Bruins have knocked off most of the loop's top contenders. They have easily beaten Appalachian, and three weeks ago, they dropped West Carolina by a score of 28-7.

Lenoir Rhyne's offense is strictly the single wing with the buck lateral series. Scouts report that the primary element of their offensive attack is All-Conference tailback Lee Farmer. In the West Carolina encounters, Farmer ran and passed for four touchdowns.

Also in the backfield, blocking back Adam Maples also poses a threat to East Carolina's defensive unit. Maples has played effectively for the Bears all season, and should be in top form against the Pirates.

In the line, the Bruins pack a host of strong, fast linemen. Wade Teague, left guard; Hank McCorie, left tackle; and Dick Lage, right end; form the nucleus of the Lenoir Rhyne forward wall. All of these performers are also expected to be ready for the ECC tilt.

East Carolina's Pirates, although snarling from three consecutive defeats at the hands of West Carolina, Newberry, and Appalachian, should be at full strength when they meet Lenoir Rhyne Saturday night.

The Bucs came out of the Appalachian contest with few injuries, and with a high degree of morale still prevailing, they should give the visitors from Hickory a fairly rough time of it this weekend.

Expected to receive the starting nod in the Buc forward wall are Bill

Caine and David Thomas at ends, Ed Emory and Vernon Davis at tackles, Johnny Wike and Wayne Davis at guards, and Lynn Barnett at center.

In the backfield, James Speight has been shifted to fullback, with Glenn Bass and Sonny Basinger running at the halfback slots. Ralph Zehring will be calling signals from the quarterback post.

Speight, a Greenville product, last week, against Appalachian, came within 30 yards of setting a four-year school record for yards gained rushing. Zehring, also against Appalachian came within 89 yards of setting a record for passing yardage gained. Both of these boys are expected to spearhead the Pirate attack against Lenoir Rhyne.

Buc Co-Captain Urges Support Of Students

Dear Student Body,

From the outcome of Saturday night's ball game, the players were not only sick from losing a crucial ball game which we needed and wanted real badly, but we felt that we had lost the confidence, support, loyalty and trust of the student body, fraternity brothers, and friends.

We can not blame anyone for having enthusiasm and desire to have a good ball club to be proud of. We

(the team) have worked since early September and we want to win more than words can express.

What is hard to understand is the fraternities on campus or members of some of these fraternities. They are the ones who have been acting in a way that you might call "bush league." These are the men that could be leaders of our campus and should have the understanding, wisdom, and after thought of what is right and wrong.

Saturday night, I didn't hear one person tell an East Carolina player to throw in the towel or give up football. Instead, they chose to make uncalculated comments to our coaching staff. They didn't lose the game—we did and as a team. Every boy on our squad wanted to win but we didn't play a real good game and the blame can't be placed elsewhere.

I can truthfully say that we were better prepared and better coached than any club we have faced this season. So why not shout at us and not at the men who have done everything possible to give East Carolina College a winning team. The students of this school do not realize how lucky they are to have a coaching staff of the calibre that we have.

We (the team) are behind our staff and believe in them. Dr. Messick has done much for our college and people realize this. Coach Boone has also done more than his share for East Carolina and the game which he loves.

We play Lenoir Rhyne this week and this is going to be a real tough game. I hope that you will give us (the team) and our coaches a fair shake. We want to win as badly as anybody and you can't realize the feeling that it gives you to go out on a field with your student body and even your fraternity brothers not backing you 100 per cent.

Sincerely yours,
Ed Emory, Co-Captain

under water, treading water for one minute and floating for one minute, as well as a minimum age of 16 are further requirements.

The purposes of Senior Life Saving are to teach forms of rescue in addition to life saving as to approach, carries, releases, defenses, artificial respiration, and boat safety. The certificate qualifies the holder to be a life guard, but not to teach, and is good for three years.

Teaching is the purpose of the Water Safety Instructor course, taught on campus each spring quarter. This course requires 30 hours, a Senior Life Saving certificate in good standing, and for the applicant to be 18 years old. This course is usually taught at night.

Coach Roy Martinez, former field service, worker for the Red Cross Water Safety council, Nell Stallings and Dr. Charles DeShaw have taught Instructor courses.

Mr. Martinez and Miss Stallings pointed out that small craft and farm pond accidents account for larger and larger percentages of drownings.

To combat the number of drownings sufficient swimming competence must be demonstrated as a requirement for graduation, and just this year intermediate swimming has been added to the lengthy line of swimming courses.

All eligible students are encouraged by Physical Education personnel to take advantage of the life saving courses.

Riddick Sweeps Fall Tourney

By NORMAN KILPATRICK

The Fall Quarter Men's Singles Table Tennis Tournament, held October 29 in the College Union, saw Ike Riddick sweep to his first championship, with little trouble.

In the finals Riddick's spin defense completely stopped Charles Munn's forehand attack. 21-12, 21-13, and 21-17. In this match Riddick's fast moving attack, consistently hit to Munn's left side, caught the runner-up out of position time after time.

In the semi-finals Riddick had little trouble chopping Tommy Wainwright down, 21-13, 21-10 and 21-12. In this match Wainwright's steady forehand drives just didn't have power enough to pierce Riddick's defense, from 10-15 feet back of the table.

The other semi-final match saw the best play of the tourney, as Munn defeated Novice Champion Charles Holliday, in a very close match, 21-13, 18-21, 21-16, 15-21, and 21-14. In this match Munn's close to the table blocking defense, and forehand slap shots finally wore down Holliday's wristed backhand and forehand drives, although Munn was forced 10 feet back during several volleys, in the fifth game.

Holliday had caused the biggest upset of the tournament, in the second round, when he defeated favored Robert Benton, 21-15, 20-22, and 21-14. Holliday's hard forehand drives and lob defensive returns were able to break through Benton's chop defense and tricky backhand drives.

In this round Riddick dropped his only lost game of the event, when Robert Gilden's powerful forehand kill shots and quick backhand push shots took the second game of their match, 21-19. Riddick's underspin shots stopped Gilden the rest of match, however, as Riddick won his two games 21-8 and 21-7.

Other good matches were Munn's defeat of Albert Davis' forehand drives and backhand blocks, 25-23, 22-20, and Wainwright's defeat of Zouli Bailey's backhand kill shots, 21-17 and 22-20.

The Consolation event was won by Nelson Tugwell over Jerry Shackelford, 21-17, 12-21, 21-14. In this play Tugwell's strong forehand attack overpowered Shackelford's steady chop defense most of the time. Tugwell had lost his first match, to Riddick, in two straight games.

PE Department Offers Life Saving Course

"Every American a swimmer, every swimmer a lifesaver," is the goal of the Red Cross, and the Physical Education Department of ECC intends to contribute to the completion of this goal.

The Red Cross Life Saving program is an entirely voluntary plan, and both instructors and students contribute their time and effort without credit from the college or monetary reward. Red Cross is a nationally recognized standard for aquatic competence.

The Senior Life Saving course at ECC began in 1952, when the pool was added to the campus. Since that time approximately 300 Senior Life Savers and 60 water safety instructors have completed courses here.

Prerequisite requirements of the course are a minimum swimming course of 17 hours, the ability to swim 220 yards (in the pool) continuously using the crawl, side and back strokes, surface dives to depths of 6 feet, swimming two body lengths

WRA News

The WRA held their regular meeting Tuesday night with the primary function being to organize plans for the coming intramural basketball season.

According to intramural officials, all girls will be invited to participate. The schedule and other plans will be released at a later date.

Volleyball got underway Tuesday night with the following teams participating: Slay, Fleming, Pi Kappa, Cotton Hall, Jarvis, East Garrett, and Ragdale.

All representatives of the WRA were urged to attend all meetings.

PIRATE'S DEN

By JOHNNY HUDSON

"Et Tu Brute." This in a nutshell was probably the feeling of Coach Jack Boone and the East Carolina football team Saturday night following their defeat at Appalachian.

A student body that had shown little interest, heretofore, in East Carolina football turned out for only the third home game of the season and acted in the fashion of hypocrits attending a Sunday church service.

Few had followed the Pirates on their away-games. Few knew the problems confronting the East Carolina football team and an even smaller handful had enough self-pride to congratulate the Pirates on their early season winning streak. Yet, last Saturday night they drowned their week-long sorrows and took the rashness to criticize a topic that they knew very little of.

No Apologies For Defeat

Yours truly will not attempt to apologize for our defeat last week. We lost to a good ball club and we didn't look good in losing. But, I can honestly say that I don't know that I would really be enthused over playing before a student body that reacts such as ours.

Before we pursue further, I would like to bring some facts of East Carolina's football history into the light. For the record, East Carolina is the youngest member in the North State Conference. We came apart of it in 1947 and Coach Jack Boone, our present coach, was instrumental in the move.

Boone took over as head coach here in 1952. He took over a club that was in a rebuilding stage, having posted a 4-6 record the previous season and the wins coming over the Apprentice School, Norfolk Navy Station, Guilford, and a weak Cherry Point team. Everybody in the conference—with the exception of Guilford—had soundly trounced the Pirates.

His first season here, 1952, he molded the club into a winner and posted a 6-2-2 mark. The following season, East Carolina won their first North State title under his leadership. Another winner was produced in 1955 and 1956 but a famine of "multiple-problems" set in during 1957 were not erased until last season when ECC posted a 6-4 record.

Although the youngest member of the North State, East Carolina ranks fourth in the over-all winning percentage mark. It is true that we are the largest school in the conference but our growth has been rapid and we have just recently ventured from the stage of a "Teacher's College" with nothing but girls to a strong co-educational institution.

The athletic program has not made the transition period as fast as the growth of the college. Higher standards have been set up by the college—which is good—and this forced Coach Boone to lose at least 50 ball players over a three year span of time. This situation seems to have been corrected now for the most part, but a new championship era can't be produced over night.

The material of this 1959 club is good and the coaches readily admit it. But there is not enough material to field a championship ball club and this should have been evident last Saturday night when Appalachian used a two-platoon system against ECC. This has been the case all season but no one seems to be happy that we won four of our earlier games.

Our football budget does not stand up to most of the schools in the conference—especially Lenoir Rhyne. Our Alumni Association has not had a chance to become real strong and become a contributing factor to our athletic program. All this will come through time and organization.

Looking back again to the history of ECC, it is interesting to note that only three coaches have winning records while coaching here. John Christenbury was a winner prior to the war and Bill Dole had one more victory than defeats in his stay here. The third winner is Coach Jack Boone.

Era Of The Ku Klux Klan

It could have been a yearning to return to their high school days or the after-effects of a rough weekend which prompted a group of ECC students to band together and show their ignorance in the wee hours of Monday morning.

Some say it was fraternities—I hope not. I hope I am safe in saying that none of my bond, Lambda Chi Alpha, was involved and I know that some of the others had no part of it.

If it was fraternities, these few men have gone against all the principles on which the Greek letters were founded here several years back. They said that fraternities would make this a strong college which could and should prove true. But, the activities which they carried on Saturday night and the week-end, as a whole, can only hinder the growth and reputation of our alma mater.

This column is not the original one for this week's paper but was written due to necessity. I offer a plea to our student body that we accept our situation as a reality. East Carolina is growing and our day will come. Let the team and coaches your respect—they deserve it.
