Faculty Establishes Messick Scholarship

Dr. John D. Messick, president of East Carolina College, was honored last weekend by a $1,500 scholarship established in his name by the faculty. Dr. Messick was also presented a gift of $1,000 as an expression of the respect and admiration which the faculty and staff members have for him. Both sums of money were given wholly by the faculty and staff of East Carolina.

The presentation of the gift and of the scholarship fund were both made at the annual Christmas faculty banquet by Dr. Robert L. Holt on behalf of the faculty. Dr. Holt explained that though gifts to the scholarship fund had been restricted to faculty members until the dedication, it is hoped that there will be more voluntary contributions by all friends of Dr. Messick and the college.

Holt said, "Dr. Messick, we remember your tenure of service at East Carolina College as exemplifying your interest in the educational welfare of young people. So that your interest shall remain an integral and permanent part of East Carolina, your friends on the faculty and staff have established in your honor the John Decatur Messick Scholarship Fund. The specifications for its use we leave entirely to your discretion."

Dr. Holt then presented Dr. Messick with the faculty's gift of $1,000. He expressed the gratitude of the faculty for Dr. Messick's efforts to improve the cultural, material, and intellectual atmosphere of the campus. The presentation was followed by an immediate standing ovation by everyone.

After quipping that "from the standpoint of money this is the best day of my life," Dr. Messick said, "Twelve of the happiest years of my life were those I spent at East Carolina College. One of the things which made my work here most pleasant and rewarding was the constant cooperation which I received from those with whom I worked." Dr. Messick continued with a brief explanation of the responsibilities of his new position as assistant director of the Department of Special Education and Rehabilitation in Washington, D.C. Dr. Messick closed by saying, "I hope that my successor, who ever he may be, will have as much cooperation as I have had. Though there have been occasional barbs, it has really been a great and rewarding experience. I hope that you will do everything possible to keep E.C.C. on the upward spiral of development."

The banquet program began with a tribute to Mrs. Messick for her devoted services to the college. Mrs. Joseph A. Withey, president of the Faculty Wives Club presented Mrs. Messick with a sterling silver compact bearing the inscription "Faculty Wives Club, East Carolina College, 1959."

After the presentation of the gift and dedication of the scholarship, the College Singers under Mr. Dan E. Vornholt sang a group of traditional carols.

The banquet, which is an annual holiday event, was held in the North Dining Hall. Mobile structures by Francis Neel's art students were hung regularly about the hall and tables were decorated with red candles and greenery. A large Christmas tree, given by Dr. Paul Jones of Farmville, was brilliantly lighted.

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins was master of ceremonies and complimented the Faculty Entertainment Committee under Mr. Norman Cameron for their decorations, Mr. Neel, for the numerous mobiles, and Mr. Paul Julien, for the meal.

Jenkins To Give Yule Message During Assembly

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, Vice President of E.C.C., will deliver the annual Christmas message at the assembly scheduled for 10:00 a.m. Friday in Wright Auditorium.

This will be the first time in a number of years that the Christmas message has not been given by Dr. John D. Messick who has recently taken the position as vice director of the Special Education and Rehabilitation Study of the Subcommittee on Special Education.

Dr. Earl Beach is in charge of the musical program which will feature the college band, the Chapel Choir, and the choral group from the Messiah.

The college band will play "Sleigh Ride" by Anderson and the "Christmas Story" by Mel Torme with Jane Murray singing the solo part. "Carol of the Drum," "Cherry Tree Carol," and "Oh Tannenbaum" will be sung by the Chapel Choir under the leadership of Gordon Johnson.

Dr. Carl Yvortsvang will conduct two numbers from the Messiah by Handel: "The Hallelujah Chorus" and "For Unto You A Child Is Born."

The assembly will be concluded with the singing of "Silent Night." Dan E. Vornholt of the Music Department will lead the singing of all Christmas carols.

Following tradition, the Sigma Alpha Iota brass quartet will play Christmas carols from the balcony of the Music Hall as students resume classes.

Rebel Sponsors Writing Contest

All students enrolled at East Carolina College are invited to join in the contest sponsored by the Rebel, literary magazine. The winning contribution can be a poem, short story or an essay and will be entered in the Arts Festival to be conducted in Greensboro in March.

The entries will be judged by four faculty members of the English department. They must be typewritten. Besides receiving a cash prize, the winning entry will also be featured in the next issue of the Rebel.

The deadline is February 1. The material may either be mailed to box 1420 or received by a staff member in the Rebel office located in room 309½ in Austin.

SGA Passes Loan Proposal, Suggests Jersey Retirement

Jenkins Announces Meeting To Combat Cheating Problem

Dean Leo W. Jenkins, Vice President of E.C.C., announced this week that the college administration is making preparations for a meeting with the administration, faculty, campus publications and the student government to organize a joint effort to curb cheating at East Carolina.

The meeting is scheduled for the first week after the Christmas holidays.

Dean Jenkins said, "We are going to meet with the faculty, SGA, and paper staff and ask them to begin a program of education, stressing the seriousness of dishonesty, not only in school, but in all phases of life."

"The administration heartily approves the action taken in the recent cheating case by the Disciplinary Board. As for administration policy on cheating, it depends on the meetings after Christmas. We will listen to all recommendations from the faculty, the SGA and from the students."

"We think it is a student responsibility to eliminate this. The students will have just about the type of college that they want to have. If they make it uncomfortable for cheaters, there will be no cheating. When asked if the faculty had been requested to take any special precautions against cheating since the recent incident which resulted in the suspension of six students the Dean commented, "It is not appropriate to see the professors now since there are no exams being given. However, we will have a meeting soon."

He added, "I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of students here find cheating distasteful because they have been brought up in an environment which frowns on dishonesty."

"I think cheating is caused by lack of security and laziness, and I believe it can be remedied by creating an atmosphere which makes cheating an ugly act. This can be done by an educational program such as conference and roundtable discussions with students and campus leaders as well as increasingly severe penalties for those who elect to ignore the well being of their fellow students.

"When students are graded on a normal curve the cheater disturbs this curve to the disadvantage of the honest students. Therefore common sense ought to encourage students to expose cheaters on all occasions."

The Dean also commented, "I think a definite procedure will grow out of our meetings with the SGA and the faculty. I think the SGA will act quickly. We have to have the cooperation of the students to overcome this problem."

"I'm very optimistic because it is one problem on which faculty and students all agree; that is, the fact that dishonest people in our midst is undesirable."

The Dean also stated that he thought cheating practices here were no different from other schools and that he had less than some.

Dallas Wells, SGA president said, "East Carolina classes are the students opportunity to learn, to profit by the wisdom of past generations and to gain through sincere effort deeper wisdom. A student should not treat lightly this opportunity nor lower his character by dishonesty in academic work."

"As for corrective measures, there is nothing the SGA can do. An organization of 40 people cannot pass rules that will be effective. It will take cooperation of the faculty and the students," he continued.

"The SGA is very concerned over the matter, however no steps have been taken yet that can be published."

"I don't think everyone should look to the SGA, it will take all the students to correct this problem."

Wells went on to say, "If we don't rank higher than some schools then our education system is in a bad state. Cheating is like a cancerous growth. It keeps growing and growing. Some students are looking for an easy out. I don't think students realize how much is going on."

The Student Government Association, at its meeting Monday night, voted passage of the Student Government Emergency Loan Fund proposal. In another action, the student senators went on record as strongly recommending the retirement of the jersey of ECC football star James Speight.

The SGA Emergency Loan Fund, instigated primarily by President Dallas Wells, will go into operation sometime around the first of the new year.

President Wells, in outlining the functions of the loan fund stated, "We are going to set aside $500, as a beginning. Any student will then be able to borrow up to $25 on a simple note for 30 days." Wells pointed out that the main stipulation of the loans would be that the borrower would have to be in dire need of financial assistance.

Wells, further speaking in support of his plan told the senators, "There is no place on campus where anyone can borrow money in time of need. The SGA has the money, and in this way, it would be put to a good use."

Wells said, to keep from losing money, the administration would handle all loans. "I don't feel that the SGA will lose money. A borrower might drop out of school, but then the administration would be handling the loans, and they would take care of that."

President Wells also stated that Dean White and Dean Mallory would be handling the applications for loans, and they would approve the applications before loans are made, according to the merits of need.

After the proposal received the approval of the senate, Wells commented, "East Carolina has long needed something of this nature, I am sure that his privilege will not be abused." Wells emphasized that "the loans will be easy to get, but a student must show a need. This plan is not for big weekends."

In the action concerning the retirement of the football jersey of James Speight, Wells read a letter written by Doug Morgan which requested that the student Senate take appropriate action whereby James Speight's football jersey would be retired, and placed on permanent display in East Carolina's trophy case.

Because of a question as to the legality of the proposed action the Senate took no definite action on the matter, but adopted a resolution which strongly recommended that the jersey be retired.

If Speight's number 29 is retired, the Pirate halfback will be the third athlete in the fifty-two year history of East Carolina to be honored in this manner. The only other retired jerseys now in the trophy case belonged to Sonny Russell, former EC cage great of the early 50's and Roger Thrift, former All-Conference and All-State quarterback of the 1949-50 Pirate gridiron squad.

Bookstore Moves To New Quarters

During the Christmas holidays the ECC Bookstore will change its location from the present one in the basement of Wright Building to the ground floor of the new South Wing Dining Hall, next to the new soda shop.

The new store will be completely self-service. Students will enter one door after depositing all their books out side on specially designated shelves. On the inside, seven foot high shelves will line the wall with the books categorized in alphabetical order. The sections will be clearly identified with efficient lighting and modern decorative plan which has been adopted by most colleges for the best possible service.

Because of this revolutionizing fewer people will be needed to work in the store. Students will be charged for all books which they bring to the cashier. The new system will aid in the rushes at each quarter. It will be also easier to take care of between rush demands for books.

Books will be sold exclusively in the new store. The present store will be expanded to take care of increased need of space for other articles such as stationary, art supplies, and basic equipment.

The store will be ready when school begins after the holidays, and will operate on the regular hours of 9:00 a. m. to 5:00 a. m.

APO Schedules White Ball

The Annual White Ball Dance sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will take place at 8:00 p.m. January 15, in Wright Auditorium. The Collegiates, with Betty Lane Evans vocalist, will be the featured band. The dance is open to all students on campus. Admission will be $1.50 per couple.

The highlight of the evening will be the crowning of the White Ball Queen. All fraternities, sororities, and clubs may select a girl to represent their organization to compete for the queenship. The only restriction on these candidates is that they must have a "3" average.

The voting of these queens will take place in the College Union where pictures of the candidates will be posted. The opening day for the voting is January 11. The voting will be the same as in the past, a penny a vote. Each student may vote as many times as he wishes, but must vote with a penny each time. The organization sponsoring the queen will be presented a plaque and the queen, a trophy.

James Ward, president of APO, announces that all the profit from this dance will be donated to the TB Drive.

YWCA To Send Delegates To Missions Conference

Chosen to represent East Carolina as delegates from the Young Women's Christian Association to the 18th Ecumenical Student Conference on "Christian World Missions" are Nancy Alford, Frosty Smith and Dixie Wilson. The conference will convene at Ohio University in Athens, Ohio, December 27, through January 2.

Every year the National Student Christian Federation, formerly Student Volunteer Movement, sponsors a conference of this type at which some phase of Christian work is studied. Of the three thousand students attending the integrated conference, approximately half of them will come from overseas.

Scheduled speakers include: Bishop Leslie Newbigin, from Scotland, who has been a missionary to South India; D. T. Niles, chairman of World's Student Christian Federation and evangelist in Ceylon; and Martin Luther King, Negro Baptist minister from Montgomery, Alabama, who will analyze the frontier caused by racial tensions from the perspective of his involvement in the Biblical faith and the racial problem.

Haubrich Responsible For Interest

Hopkins Expresses Views On Importance Of Study, Research

By BETTY MAYNOR
"Pay, pack and follow" as Inglis Fletcher expressed, is just what we did because my father was a Marine Corp engineer," replied Tom Hopkins, a senior biology major, when relating his years prior to college. "We very rarely lived in one place for more than two years, and for this reason I had lived in several states by the time I entered high school," Hopkins stated.

From his birthplace of Los Angeles, the Hopkins family moved to Kentucky, then to Virginia and on to North Carolina. From North Carolina the family moved to Seattle, Washington and then Hopkins entered Shattuck Military School in Minnesota. He finished high school in San Francisco and while in California studied one year at San Mateo College.

After reserve and active duty with the Marine Corp, Hopkins decided to complete his educational studies and in 1957 entered East Carolina College. He is at present completing requirements for an A.B. degree in biology, a major which was introduced last year.

When explaining his reasons for choosing this field of study, Hopkins commented, "Dr. Robert Haubrich is responsible for orienting me into this particular area, and for stimulating my interest—simply by answering my heretofore unanswered questions."

At present Mr. Hopkins is working on an experiment with marine life. He has 2,000 sea urchins under surveillance and from them is compiling factors, those which vary and those that are alike, and is trying to establish trends. His research sponsor is Dr. Haubrich.

In recognition of his outstanding achievements in research, Hopkins was presented the John Bewley Dercaux Award for the best paper presenting an original research. He received this award at the annual meeting of the Collegiate Academy of Science last spring on the campus of Catawba College.

"My aim in study and research is to stimulate in the people with whom I will work later on an interest in any phase of biology, especially from the philosophical view," replied Hopkins, "instead of showing a species of the insect world and noting its ten legs and four eyes, instilling an appreciation and awareness of its worth as a part of life itself."

"I am very interested in the concept of evolution and its importance—a factor which people do not often realize," continued Hopkins.

After graduation, Hopkins plans to do graduate work, but at present he does not know which graduate school he will attend.

A recently elected member of "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, Hopkins is Vice President of Phi Sigma Pi, Men's Honorary Fraternity, and is President of Chi Beta Phi, Science Fraternity; and is President of the Collegiate Academy of the North Carolina Academy of Science. In addition to these activities he is laboratory assistant for Dr. C. B. Knight and Dr. Haubrich.

Hopkins is married to the former Betsy Duncan of Edenton, a graduate of Woman's College, and they live in Washington, where Mrs. Hopkins teaches music.

Dean Upholds Decision

Spokesman for the college administration, Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, Vice President and Dean, says he staunchly upholds the decision of the Discipline Committee on the recent cheating incident. He promises, in the future, to have a meeting of campus leaders and faculty members to decide how to deal with our problem.

To date, we have received no word from any department or faculty group on plans to curb cheating. The SGA has made no resolution or proposals concerning this pressing problem.

Everyone seems to feel that we should just wait until the end of this quarter when examination time comes around again and attempt to make students honest again.

Cheating is here now. Cheating occurs everyday in many forms and fashions—copying someone else's assignments, copying or even buying term papers, cheating on little pop tests and mid-terms that are given all through the quarter.

Educating students to the evils of cheating cannot be done a few minutes or even a few days before examination time. It will take a long time and an extensive campaign.

The first step in this program will have to be taken by the students themselves. Every campus leader must not only stand up against cheating and scorn the cheater, but he must take care that he is never tempted to cheat himself. This problem will never be licked so long as the students who lead set a bad example.

A strict punishment for cheating should be set. One either cheats or doesn't cheat; there is no in-between. This should be posted and read in class by every professor here. Then no student can plead ignorance of the law and no one, not even the cheater himself, can feel sympathy for one who is caught and punished.

If one wants to cheat after reading the law against cheating, let him go ahead, but all the time he will be full aware of the punishment he will receive if caught.

We Must Have Honor

A group of students advocate the instigation of an honor system here as a bulwark against cheating. Their idea brings to mind the words of Dr. Roy Prince of the Foreign Language Department who said, "An honor system is a set of privileges which is granted to a group which has first proved that it has honor. An honor system will work only among people who have honor. It cannot be imposed. It must be evolved."

Anxiety, Excitement Causes Another Wreck

It was Friday and Charlie had just finished his last class. As soon as he had packed his suitcases in his new Ford and picked up his riders, he headed home for the Christmas holidays. Excitement stirred in Charlie as he watched the soft, white snow fall from the sky and trickle to the ground where it quickly melted. Down, down to the floor he pressed the accelerator.

Having been cautioned to watch for hidden patrolmen and whammies the other occupants looked alternately to the back, up ahead and on each side of the speeding car. Snow flakes fell faster and heavier, making the highway wet and slick and dimming Charlie's view. But faster and faster he went.

In the woods just before the bad curve sat Eddie, a patrolman, struggling to keep his windshield fogged and clear of the fast falling snow. It was his job to watch for speeders. Inhaling deeply on his cigarette, Eddie sat, dreading the time when he would have to throw his car into gear, turn on his siren, and chase after some speeding car. The fool he caught would curse Eddie and hate him for giving him a ticket. It's sad that more citizens don't realize that patrolmen are here to protect them and keep the highways safe and clear of speed maniacs.

To some people a patrolman is a monster, ready to pounce upon them every opportunity he is given. Suddenly a loud screeching noise interrupted his thoughts. He looked up, but saw nothing. Then a streak of blue flashed past. "College students anxious to get home," he said to himself, "Oh, why bother them?" He knew well why he had to bother them. Any speeder is not only dangerous to himself, but to others.

Out of the woods came Eddie, trying to catch the car, risking his life as he sped over the slick, wet pavement.

A loud crash, a piercing scream, and the sound of metal sliding against concrete and then hitting a solid object made Eddie grip the steering wheel harder. Then complete silence filled the night once more and soft snowflakes fell on the still forms stretched out on the cold, frozen ground. Charlie did not run over a whammy. The patrolman did not catch Charlie and give him a ticket. Charlie missed the bad curve. Eddie turned off his siren and picked up his radio-mike. "Another wreck, Joe. Yeah, a bunch of kids. I tried to catch them but they were going too fast. They missed the bad curve on 70."

Campus Overtones

Christmas Brings Seasonal Rush

By MIKE KATSIAS

The pre-Christmas rush has blossomed into enormous proportions here on the Greenville campus . . . fraternity men are hectically at work recruiting promising material . . . Barney West has been mentioned as a candidate for the student government presidency . . . a strong blended conversation can be heard concerning Saturday classes and the introduction of an honor system.

After reading the articles in the fall issue of the Rebel, campus literary magazine, many students have inquired when they can expect the next edition. The magazine is printed each quarter and distributed in the following manner: dormitory occupants, faculty mail boxes, and the day student stands used for the East Carolinian.

Discipline committee action seemed to alarm quite a few students recently. Six students were suspended for using a stolen examination. The suspension for five involved a period of six months and the remaining one received a three month sentence. Some people thought the procedure of the Discipline Committee was unfair due to lack of student representation—this is a falsehood. The SGA president selects student representatives to serve whenever the committee meets.

On the sporting scene, advanced reports show that Coach Ray Martinez should produce another tennis powerhouse this spring. The Pirate netters have made shambles of the North State Conference during the past four years and this one should be no exception. The addition of Blarney Tanner, last year's state singles champion, plays a large part in this early confidence.

Duke Ellington's failure to sign a contract for the big annual IFC Ball has dampened quite a few spirits. To accommodate the large crowd expected for the event, plans were being made to secure a warehouse. But all is not yet lost, the Four Freshmen are being contacted to serve as a suitable substitute for the concert. The dance band still remains unselected.

SGA Prexy Praises Campus Groups; Students Voice Approval Over Recent Editorial On East Carolina's Widespread Practice

Dear Editor: Throughout the entire year, the Student Government has found it rather difficult to obtain the services of various groups to aid in SGA projects. However, two groups have constantly stepped forward to render help on several occasions.

The purpose of this letter is to publicly thank these two groups for their contributions to the college. First, Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, who helped in our recent clean-up campaign, deserve special recognition. This group posted signs around the entire campus calling the students' attention to the condition of the grounds. Students were made more aware of the importance of an uncluttered campus.

Last, but by no means least, the Veterans Club has earned a place of admiration by controlling the Student Book Exchange, which was newly organized this year. The members of the club spent more than nine hours each day at the beginning of the quarter handling used books. Time was given by each man without fail in this endeavor. Without the services of the Veterans Club, the Book Exchange would have been unable to operate successfully.

Once again, the Student Government would like to say thanks to these two organizations and feels that they have been a definite asset to the college.

Chet Huntley Gives Views On Krushchev Visit To ACPG Members At Conference In New York

(Editor's note: Miss Vogel heard Huntley speak at the Associated Collegiate Press Conference in New York City recently. Huntley is an NBC news commentator and has a television news program, "The Huntley-Brinkley Report," presented daily.)

By MARCELLE VOGEL "Editorial writers have a tendency to write too much history too fast, and we must remember that the kings, nobles, and other dignitaries are only humans, and are subject to moods, the same as anyone else," stated Chet Huntley of NBC news, when he tried to explain Khrushchev's actions during his recent visit to the U.S.

"Khrushchev," continued Huntley, "is the supreme social climber of this time—a newly rich man . . . and is thriving for status for himself and his country."

"Russia has a new educational system, but there is no ultimate conflict between the two systems. However, the Soviet Union is not immune to doubt or idiosyncrasies" added Huntley. Russia's purpose, it seems is to outdo the U.S., and Huntley's comment to this is "Russia has doubled her consumer goods, and has, since seeing how the Americans dress, jumped down clothesmakers necks because of the shoddy appearance of Russian dress."

Ending his address Chet Huntley stated, "Russians are often open to doubt their own right and judgment, and they feel the armament strain as much as we do."

Following his address, Huntley opened the floor to questions from the audience, and some of the questions asked were: "Can a journalist be of value to his country?"

Huntley, answering said, "Yes, if one can excite or provoke a citizen to comment or think about something going on in the world, its to the good of themselves and the people."

"What can we on college newspapers do to make relationships with Russia better?" was another question. "Read up on news, keep informed," was Huntley's advice, "and perhaps go over there and see for yourself what sort of life they lead, and what their problems are."

"What do you think about co-existence with Russia," was another question directed toward Huntley. In answering he said, "Keep our guard up, but try for peace—keeping our arsenals well supplied. We have not kept our guard up good enough," he added.

"Do you think we no longer have capitalism, but are drifting toward socialism?" questioned an interested listener. "No," said Huntley, "but it is a question worth watching, to see if we are drifting toward that sort of life." Judging by the way Khrushchev was greeted here, how do you think Eisenhower would be greeted in Russia," someone else questioned. Huntley thought that he would be greeted very hospitably, because the Russians are very hospitable people, and they may get their heads bashed in if they did otherwise!

"Our relations with the Soviet Union is the biggest problem with the U.S. and all countries today," stated Chet Huntley, and he added "We must define what our main purpose is today . . . the National American purpose. Russia has defined her purpose . . . she's out to take us over economically, and we must somehow reach a decision also."

The last question asked was, "Is Rockefeller running scared or scared to run?" In answering, Huntley said, "The latter. He is out on a survey trip now, and must find some opinions that differ from Nixon."

Retreat From Frustration; Christmas Is Almost Here

By ROY MARTIN

Yes sir, that time is here again. Christmas, the time of year that always sneaks up on you leaving you to exclaim "My, how time does fly." Realizing that in just a matter of days, Christmas will be upon you, you rush out to buy presents for all those wonderful people on your list. You work your fingers to the bone, worry, sweat, get sizes, advice, and finally you come out with the ideal gift for each person. Then, the day after Christmas, your recipients also rush out to exchange what you gave them for something they like better.

Another enjoyable part of Christmas is the Christmas tree. Oh, what fun it is to decorate! You climb up on chairs, hang by your heels from chandeliers, and finally you get it decorated, you stand off, admire your handiwork, and think to yourself, "what an artist I am." Then, about four in the morning, as you slumber with visions of egg nog dancing around in your head, you awake to a resounding pop-pop-pop, which signifies that the strings you tied the little colored baubles on with, weren't strings at all, but tinsel. To top that off you hear a resounding crash also signifying that the tree stand wasn't too strong.

The next day, you resurrect the remains of the tree as best you can, vowing that the first person who touches it, gets it, right in the head. You are then set upon by little demons, in the form of cousins, nieces, and nephews, who seem to have the idea that the tree looks better the way it was before you put it back up, and they work towards that end. You smile, ask them kindly to leave it alone, and then you take them by the napes of the neck and lock them in the darkest closet you can find.

After you finally get the tree squared away, it's getting late, and you have been invited to a Christmas Eve party, so you leave, expecting to make quite a night of it.

After the party is over, you return to your humble abode. Quietly you open the door, trying not to awake those who gave up and went to bed. You shut the door, take about two steps, and land in the midst of police cars with screaming sirens, apples and oranges, plus that blasted Christmas tree, which seems to have a habit of being in the way.

Now you know that you have really done it. You wait in the dark with a growing apprehension, and then it happens, the little demons come bounding down the steps with "look what Santa Claus brought us!"

The BB's start whizzing around your head, so you decide you had best get yourself safely out of range. You start up the stairs and you look back upon the merry scene taking place in the middle of the living room floor, and you think, "what would Christmas be without it," then you turn, and walk up the steps.

Frats Emphasize Need For High Scholarship

By TOM JACKSON

The pizza crumbs are gone, the combos stilled, and fraternity men and rushees are catching up on their sleep now that the formal IFC Rush Week is over.

Well over one hundred freshmen men participated in the formal rush staged by the six social fraternities on campus. The comment of the week from most fraternity men was "Too bad those boys are down in points, I wish we could pledge them."

Why was such a large percentage of the rushee group in the "below a three average" category? Could the school be really cracking down? Is it that first quarter freshmen usually have a low grade average? Or is it that only the "party boys" came through rush? Hmmmm . . . there is food for thought.

If (and we emphasize IF) only the so-called "party boys" were the ones coming through rush, then someone should enlighten them. Fraternities on this campus are no longer on a "wide open" basis as they were in their early stages when all were desperate for members and anyone with a relatively clean dress shirt and a tie would be pledged.

The fraternities are becoming more and more selective each quarter, and scholarship is being stressed by all. The Inter-Fraternity Council has in its constitution a stipulation which states that no freshman who has a grade average below a three may be pledged. We heartily congratulate the IFC on this ruling.

Fraternities are naturally interested in a high scholastic standing because (and you die-hards can believe this or not) the majority of the boys realize that their primary purpose here is to get an education. Those fraternity men who are not interested in good grades are slowly but surely being eliminated, either by flunking out, or by action being taken upon them by the group.

You see, the group realizes that their college peers judge them, in part, by their scholastic standing. At a time when growth and strength are so vital to the fraternity system, they know that there must be no "weak links in the chain."

In conclusion, we offer these suggestions to the freshmen boys who are interested in pledging a fraternity in the future. First of all, if the college is cracking down you must meet the challenge by working harder for your grades. Secondly, if your grades are low because last quarter was your first one here and you are still "green," then keep in mind that this is your second quarter and you're going to have to prove yourselves.

Finally, if you are interested in fraternities for parties alone you might as well forget all about them.

Cancer Scare Reaches Number Of Products

By DERRY WALKER

Lately, we have been warned about the cancer producing effects of cranberries, lipstick, and chicken skin. These warnings resulted in ruining our Thanksgiving dinner. They put the quietus on about ten per cent of the nation's smooching, and we now get goose bumps when we see fried chicken on a menu.

Nothing has been officially announced yet, but the latest rumblings about cancer are centered around ice cream. It seems that the ice cream made from Wisconsin milk contains cancer-bearing traits. It's a rather complicated theory: in order to kill some weeds in Lake Michigan, fishermen sprayed the surface of the lake with chemicals capable of producing cancer. The fish in the lake absorbed these chemicals. When the fish were caught and ground up for fertilizer, the latter carried the cancer-producing chemicals. The fertilizer was used to aid the growth of grass which fed to the Wisconsin cows which, in turn, gave the milk that made the ice cream.

It boils down to: fishermen sprayed lake, fish absorbed spray, fish became fertilizer, fertilizer grew grass, grass fed cows, cows gave milk, milk became ice cream.

Investigators are preparing for a trip to Wisconsin. They are taking along aqualungs and plan to get to the bottom of the matter by diving into Lake Michigan. As well as enlisting the aid of the nation's top marine biologists, the investigating committee has prepared an extensive list of articles and equipment needed for the research, including: a laboratory on wheels containing the latest in research equipment, a water filtration plant, underwater cameras, seven mortars with pestles, and four beach balls.

Officials at Sealtest, Buttercup, and Caro-maid ice cream companies have ordered their productions cut back, pending the outcome of the investigation. Dairy men in Wisconsin are leaning forward to help the investigating officials as much as possible. Some are reported to have begun X-raying their cows.

Now if this story were carried as a lead in the pages of the nation's number one newspapers, it would cause some people to panic, but knowing you as I do, I think you'll take it with a grain of salt. The best way to lick cancer at present, is to keep check on yourself through a competent doctor, not by worrying about half the products in America.

Audience Witnesses Experimental Play; Ferrell's 'October Wife' Takes Spotlight

By PAT HARVEY

"I felt as though I were acting with the players," commented one of the observers of the two North Carolina plays conducted in the band room last week. The staging was much like that of the amphitheatre in as much as the audience looked down on the actors. Also the people who were either fortunate or unfortunate, according to their reactions, sat on the front row approximately two feet from the stage partially pulling them into the action of the play.

A Gift for Penelope, a historical production, which describes an incident in the life of Governor Eden's stepdaughter, was a comparatively dry presentation before an uneasy audience waiting impatiently for something entertaining to occur.

Doris Robbins portrayed the stepdaughter and with believable facial expressions tried to keep the show alive until Blackbeard, Jim Roper, made his entrance; but the play seemed to be doomed because of the scarce staging and twentieth century actions. The actors must have felt rather stilted saying the lines of the original script because they seemed to try the realistic approach thus tearing apart the original idea (whatever that was).

As the innocent bystander and understandable aunt, Sue Davis made an attractive picture, as did Miss Robbins, the Negro servants, William Bowen and Kay Martin, failed to add the needed and usual comedy touch.

Jim Roper as Blackbeard performed well because of his tall stature and cruel sounding laughter. In fact, Blackbeard was the only spark in the play until the sudden death ending, which produced the hand of Miss Eden's Loved one in a golden chest, making Jim's "you may have his hand but never his heart" the best line in the entire play.

As Leigh Dobson, director, explained during the discussion following the plays, the play seemed to be a loser from the beginning. She felt that the only way to save it was to make it drab and uninteresting, then sock them suddenly with the blood curdling end.

Ferrell's Play

Jimmy Ferrell, ECC alumnus and past editor of the East Carolinian, sat in the audience and observed the first performance of his play, which depicts an aspect of modern life in North Carolina. Whether or not he was pleased with its enactment remains a mystery, but after hearing the sudden burst of applause from the audience, it was evident that they were satisfied.

The play, written on the Tennessee Williams style, took place in an unusual atmosphere. The buses used as a combination of cab establishment and liquor disposal were represented in outline form with a background of carnival music playing throughout the entire play.

Ed Barelift, Bob Gooden, Leigh Dobson and William Bowen are to be commended for their realistic performance. Ed as the father, who after losing his wife years before has contented himself to just lie around, scratch his stomach and wait for liquor buyers, was active throughout the play even when he was supposed to be idle. One of the few flaws in Ed's portrayal was his speedy lines conflicting with his tired movements.

As another of the "po' white," Bob Gooden opened the play jabbering to himself and moving his arm up and down. Later we found that he was counting the number of seconds between the spotlight changes thus informing the audience that his mind is not in its best order. Bob hopped around the minute stage like an excited infant and through his crazy antics got his point across.

Leigh Dobson had her "they-day" in a role, which only Leigh could have given us a believable portrayal. Unfortunately, Miss Dobson became so engrossed in her role that she did not pronounce her lines clearly enough for the late-comers in the back row; but to the front row enthusiasts, she gave another excellent performance proving her versatility in the Playhouse. If the audience was in the dark as to where they had heard her accent before, please refer back to Madeline Sherwood's performance in Cat on a Hot Tin Roof.

After a quick change from his servant's outfit, William Bowen donned a flashy shirt and mussed his hair to portray a ferris wheel operator, who was the object of Miss Dobson's eyes throughout the play. William, a hard worker in the Playhouse, handled his lines and love scene like a pro and presented his best acting job this year.

Doris Robbins should also receive recognition for her job in direction and the members of the technical staff which included the casts, deserve a cheer for the behind-the-scenes job of putting the casts and stage in proper order.

After the presentation, James Brewer of the English faculty led a discussion and recap of the play's staging and content in which the audience joined.

Union Offers Nassau Cruise

The Florida Union of the University of Florida has invited East Carolina College students to join their group and other college students in the Regional IV of the Association of College Unions to take this cruise to Nassau on the "S.S. Bahama Star" which sails from Miami in April. The cost is $51.00, which includes transportation to and from Nassau and Miami, 8 meals, lodging for the weekend. The ship serves as a "dry dock hotel" for the entire trip.

North Carolina College Union has arranged special space on the Seaboard Air Line Railroad for students in this area to get to and from Miami—for the roundtrip price of $41.15 (from Raleigh to Miami).

ECC students interested in further details of the trip should come to the College Union Office. The deadline for reservations will be January 5, 1969.

Stalin, The Master, Challenges Policies Of Foxy Successor

Setting: The bedroom of Nikita Khrushchev. On a side table a worn edition of Orwell's 1984, and several empty Miltona bottles. Beneath the bed, two Gladstone bags smeared with shipping labels. The time is midnight, December 24, with the bells of the Kremlin tolling madly as the curtain rises. Khrushchev is seated before a fireplace in his dressing gown, slippers and nightcap, sipping bouillon and throwing darts at a portrait of Josef Stalin.

Nikita: I'm bushed.

Voice: You're also very fat.

Nikita: (whirling about to confront a weird phantom dressed in a peasant frock-coat, clasping a long chain made of hammers, sickles, and crumpled treaties) Dreadful apparition, what do you want with me?

Voice: Much.

Nikita: Who are you?

Voice: In life I was your mentor.

Nikita: (falling upon his knees and clasping his hands before his face) Josef! Old Josef Stalin . . . Speak comfort to me, Josef.

Stalin: I have none to give.

Nikita: But you were always a good man of business, Josef.

Stalin: Business? Marxism was my business! Deceit, insincerity, war, insatiable ambition and . . .

Nikita: Marxism is my business also!

Stalin: Huh! You're a traitor to all I lived for. You're not a Marxist.

Nikita: There's not a shred of evidence.

Stalin: (laughing) No? what about this big rally-round-the-capitalists campaign? Nixon and Macmillan tramping around Red Square? You and your wife rocketing over to America, sashaying all over Washington with Eisenhower and Lodge?

Nikita: That's part of the new look.

Stalin: There's more than one way of burying a capitalist, Josef . . . you don't always have to bludgeon them to death.

Stalin: Don't change the subject.

When you were in New York, you were quoting the Bible, even offering to swear on it.

Nikita: Well, even the devil can quote scripture . . . anyway, the revolution is proceeding according to plan.

Stalin: Was Hungary part of the plan? All that ruckus with the tanks and freedom fighters? (shaking his head) Boy, you messed that one up.

Nikita: Now who's talking like a capitalist?

Stalin: Very well, what about China?

Nikita: What about it?

Stalin: It strikes me that Mao has several tricks behind his curtain . . .

Nikita: Like what? I call every shot. He doesn't budge without me!

Stalin: What about Tibet?

Nikita: A misunderstanding.

Stalin: What about Quemoy, Laos, Vietnam, the Indian border?

Nikita: (sucking his breath) Alright, alright. You don't have to rub it in.

Stalin: I'm not rubbing it in. I'm just trying to prove that too frequently the tail of Marxism is wagging the dog.

Nikita: (jabbing his finger at Stalin) Alright genius, what would you do if you had 660 million Chinese on your back?

Stalin: I would "guard" them from themselves—just as I did in Poland, East Germany, Latvia, Rumania and the rest of our, uh, temporary holdings. In other words, trample them. Nikita: It is too late to trample China.

Stalin: Perhaps. But is it too late for China to trample Russia?

Nikita: What do you think those Miltonas are for, ulcers?

Stalin: Speaking of ulcers, those were terrible things you said about me in the Comintern: murderer, tyrant, greedy, psychotic. I deserved better treatment than that, old comrade.

Nikita: (shyly but firmly) It was the diplomacy of the moment. The world needed a new image . . .

Stalin: Don't apologize. But I think you were foolish to establish such a precedent because one of these days you too are going to have a successor . . . and then, what of your reputation?

Nikita: I stand on my record. Clean as the wind. My encouragement of the arts and humanities . . .

Stalin: And Pasternak?

Nikita: My sputniks and luniks and jets created . . .

Stalin: Mostly by German scientists.

Nikita: My desire for a united Germany . . .

Stalin: With free elections?

Nikita: My peaceful coexistence . . .

Stalin: Budapest?

Nikita: My humane disposal of Malenkov, Molotov, and Zhukov . . .

Stalin: And Beria?

Nikita: I'm not used to being interrupted!

Stalin: And I'm not used to having my name dragged through garbage, my statues toppled, my memory—

Nikita: (smoothly) As I explained, Josef, it was mere diplomacy.

Stalin: It was dirty pool, and you know it. (pulling his chains tighter, and gradually melting into a large communal laundry bag, stage left) One last question, my friend: Just where were you when I was committing my crimes in the Kremlin?

Nikita: (picking up a fresh dart) Ah, Josef! I didn't learn much while I was in America, but one fine democratic custom did impress me. It's called taking the Fifth . . .

Versatile Dr. Brimley Views Long Career As Educator

By MARCELLE VOGEL

"He is just like a father to me," I recently heard a student comment about Dr. Ralph Brimley, director of Foundations and Public Relations, and many of the students here feel the same sentiments toward him.

Dr. Brimley is interested in people and likes nothing better than to sit down and have a nice chatting session. He spends many of his leisure hours visiting and speaking with different civic organizations throughout this part of the country. He also preaches frequently on Sunday mornings to help out ministers who need him.

Born and raised in Raleigh, Dr. Brimley attended school there, and received his first degrees from State College. Although he majored in landscape architecture, his first job was coaching in Winston-Salem. This was during the depression and few jobs were available. After coaching basketball, track, football, and boxing he was promoted from teacher-coach to principal of the Central School in Winston-Salem. From there he went to Womans College where he was assistant professor of education. Then he joined the Army for three years, returning to Winston-Salem where he was superintendent of the Forsythe County Schools.

Leaving there, Dr. Brimley went to Montreat College where he was head of the department of Psychology and Education. After a year at Montreat, Dr. Brimley came to East Carolina and has been here for the past three years.

Dr. Brimley is married and has two married daughters and six grandchildren.

"This is a great school," commented Dr. Brimley, "and I'm having a great time here." "East Carolina has a wonderful group of people to work with," he added.

"My favorite hobbies are gardening, playing bridge, and people," said Dr. Brimley. "Through the gardening I can work out all my problems and troubles and get a peace of mind which I can't get any other way," he added.

"The girls are a lot prettier now than when I was in college commented Dr. Brimley, "or with my bifocals maybe I just can see better."

Work Begins On Rawl Annex

An annex to the Rawl building, East Carolina College's newest classroom building, is now under construction and is expected to be ready for use at the end of a five month period, Vice President and Business Manager F. D. Duncan has announced.

The addition will be a two-story brick structure located on the East Campus at the rear of the central wing of the T-shaped Rawl building. Designed by A. J. Maxwell, Goldsboro architect, it will match the main structure in materials and plan. Cost of construction is estimated at $65,291, Mr. Duncan stated.

The first floor of the new structure will provide accommodations for the director of public relations and extension and his staff. Five offices are included in the plans.

The office of the director of graduate studies, a room to be used for testing purposes in the special education program at the college, a psychometric and reading laboratory, and three offices will be located on the second floor.

'One For The Road' Leads To Blurred Vision, An Unsteady Hand And The Death Toll Mounts

Statistics Show Young Violators

Here is the substance of three separate reports recently released which come to the same conclusion—young drivers are responsible for far more than their proportionate share of accidents. Because statistics on this subject are so difficult to obtain they are presented here for your information.

A study by two University of Nebraska professors, in which they clocked cars by radar, found that drivers in the 16-25 age group have the least regard for speed laws.

Drivers 25 and under held only 17.5 per cent of the licenses among the drivers checked, but they were responsible for 36 per cent of the speed law violations.

The survey also shows that 59 per cent of the total violators were under 30 years of age.

Continuing reports from the Province of Ontario shows that drivers in the 18-24 age groups were involved in almost twice as many accidents as the average of the other age groups.

A report from the State of Minnesota shows that the 15-24 age group has 17.6 per cent of the drivers in that state, but they accounted for 23.7 per cent of all accidents.

Thirty-eight Seniors Represent EC In 'Who's Who' Leaders To Appear In 1959-1960 Edition

By EVELYN CRUTCHFIELD

Thirty-eight seniors have been notified that they have been accepted for recognition in the 1959-60 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities." This is an honor achieved through activities in college, personality, and academic record.

Pi Kappa Alpha Wins Hi-Fi In Cigarette Contest; Philip Morris Presents Award

Philip Morris Inc. awarded a hi-fi stereophonic record player to the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity in the college union last Friday to terminate an extensive cigarette package saving contest on campus.

The number of packages turned in by Pi Kappa Alpha was estimated to be about 9000, but a count was not made because the only other official entry had only a small box of packages, according to D. G. Mulvey, Division Manager for Philip Morris.

Theta Chi fraternity protested the decision Friday on the grounds that several fraternities won the set through joint efforts but Mulvey, who headed the contest, said, "I have no control over the fraternities getting together. I announced that all ballots must be here at 2:00. They (Pi Kappa Alpha) were the only ones except for a small number submitted by the drill team. Therefore, I gave the prize to Pi Kappa Alpha because they had the largest number of ballots."

"This has happened at other colleges before and we feel that it should be changed. In the future we will run the contest on a more individual basis," he commented.

Judy Stott, campus representative for Philip Morris, said, "For our first contest I am pleased with the results."

Philip Morris intends for each fraternity or group to enter individually and in the spring we will have a new contest which will be worked on a more individual basis. The prize has not been chosen for the spring contest and if anyone has a good prize in mind, please contact me."

Tony Mallard, president of Pi Kappa Alpha, commented, "We are very happy to have won the stereo. It adds a great deal of pleasure to the Pi Kappa Alpha house and all the boys are enjoying it. We started off by putting it to good use at an informal hi-fi party at the house Saturday afternoon."

In regard to an official protest through the college administration concerning the joint efforts, James H. Mallory, Dean of Men, said Monday that no official protest had been lodged and added, "As far as I'm concerned it is not an administrative matter."

As A Finalist, Betty Lane Evans Competes For Maid Of Cotton

By PAT HARVEY

As North Carolina's first entry, Betty Lane Evans, freshman and 1958's Miss North Carolina, is attempting to cop another crown, that of the 1960 Maid of Cotton.

If Miss Evans wins she will serve as an international fashion and good-will envoy for the American cotton industry.

Seven months of extensive travel will take the cotton industry's representative coast to coast in the United States and to Canada and Europe.

Betty Lane, a piano and voice major from Greenville, has had her share of touring in her state and neighboring states. During her reign as Miss North Carolina and fourth runner-up in the Miss America voting, she made more than 300 public appearances and traveled more than 10,000 miles.

At present Miss Evans is soloist with the Collegiates, a member of the College Singers and College Choir, and Kappa Sigma Nu's Yearbook sponsor.

Six prominent members of the cotton industry and related organizations will serve on the committee to choose the lucky contestant. The judges will select the 1960 Maid of Cotton from a group of 20 cotton belt beauties, who will compete in contest finals at Memphis, December 29 and 30.

The newly named Maid will fly to Dallas on December 31, the day after her selection, and make her first public appearance at the Cotton Bowl. Following her reign in Dallas the Maid of Cotton will leave for New York where she will be outfitted in her all-cotton wardrobe styled by the nation's top designers. A new Ford will also be among her lavish winnings.

Her forty-piece wardrobe will include warm winter coats, bathing suits, and elegant ballgowns as well as a smart collection of day dresses and suits. The clothes will be presented in a special showing on January 21 at the Waldorf-Astoria.

After her visit in New York she is scheduled to open an international tour in Washington, D. C., in late January. The National Cotton Council reports that the highlight of the Maid's stay in the nation's capital will be a formal reception and fashion show attended by representatives, senators, and other high government officials.

Tour Of Europe Combines Travel With Learning

East Carolina College will sponsor during the summer months of 1960 a tour of Europe which will combine travel with study. Directed by Myrtle B. Clark of the Wahl-Coates Laboratory School on the campus, the tour, according to plans, will take 32 people to nine European countries during June and July.

The itinerary covers thirty-five days of travel beginning June 9. Atlantic crossings, beginning and ending at Idlewild Airfield in New York, will be made by jet aircraft. Countries to be visited include Scotland, England, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, Germany, Belgium, Holland, and France.

Special events of the tour will include operas at Paris and Rome; a play at the Shakespeare Memorial Theater at Stratford; visits to Versailles and Oxford; the Passion Play at Oberammergau; a cruise of the Rhine; and drives through the Dolomites, up the Arne and Moselle valleys, and over the Scottish Highlands from Edinburgh to Glasgow. Museums and art galleries and other places of interest will be visited in such cities as Rome, Florence, Venice, and Munich.

Those enrolled as students on the travel-study tour will, on completion of requirements, receive nine quarter hours of graduate or undergraduate credit, according to the type of work done. At East Carolina for a short orientation period as the tour begins, each student will select a topic for intensive research on a particular phase of the trip.

Lectures, seminars, and sharing of their research projects will be among educational advantages of the tour. Special lectures at UNESCO in Paris and at the universities of Rome, Heidelberg, London, and Munich have been arranged. An evaluation of the tour will be made by students on their return to the campus in Greenville in July.

Mrs. Clark, director of the tour, holds the B.S. degree from George Peabody College and the Master's degree from East Carolina College. She has taught at State Teacher's College, Commerce, Texas; acted as supervisor of Pitt County Schools, and served since 1947 as supervising teacher at the campus laboratory school here. She has traveled in a number of European countries. In directing the tour, she will be assisted by professional guides in the countries visited.

Further information about the tour, including a travel schedule and a list of suggested topics for individual study by student-tourists, may be obtained from Mrs. Clark, 409 Holly Street, Greenville, N. C.

Dear Dr. Frood: My roommate continually steals my Luckies. What should I do? Sinned Against

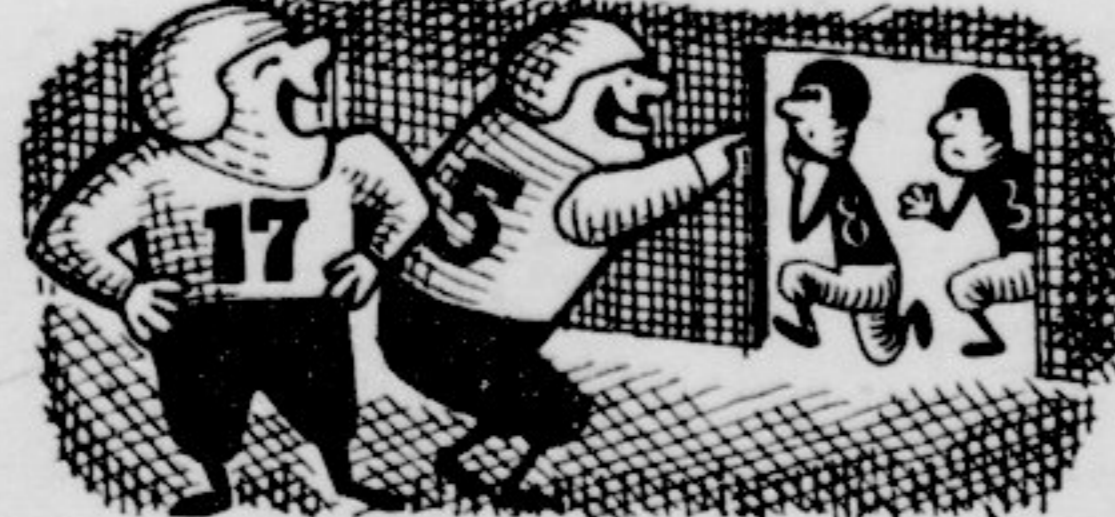

Dear Sinned Against: The most successful defense is the traditional African one. Mold a small wax image of your roommate. Then, at full moon, insert half a dozen common household pins into the hands of the image.

Dear Pen Pal: Address your letter to: Dr. Frood, Box 2990, Grand Central Station, New York 17, N.Y.

No phone calls please. Thus far I've been unable to have a phone installed here in the box.

Dear Alumni Pres.: Schedule fewer games.

Dear Dr. Frood: I am a 5'11" co-ed with a figure exactly like the Venus de Milo's. Would you say I should be in the movies? Lovely

Dear Lovely: I'll say anything you want me to.

Dear Dr. Frood: I told my fiancée we can't afford to get married until I finish college. She insists that two can live as cheaply as one. Is this true? Dubious

Dear Dubious: Yes. If they take turns eating.

East Carolina Swimmers Take First Win Over Southern Champs

East Carolina's swimming team won their first meet of the season Saturday afternoon but it was the hard way, relying on the final relay to gain a 48-47 victory over Southern Conference champion, V. M. I.

Swimming the Southern Conference champion without their freshmen, East Carolina hung on to a brief glimpse of victory throughout the afternoon and then came on strong in the final relay for seven big points and their upset win.

The Pirates once again captured both relays to add 14 points to their over-all total.

It was Tommy Carroll, Tommy Tucker, Jimmy Meads and Jake Smith that put the final touches on the spine-tingling meet.

Trailing 47-41, Carroll and Tucker picked up a small lead and Jimmy Meads, a little speedster, held his own against Southern Conference sprint champion Ederle. Jake Smith, the anchor man in the relay, held the lead and brought home the victory to the tune of a cheering East Carolina crowd.

The Pirate tankmen had gone out front on the opening relay but fell behind on the third event and didn't regain it until the diving competition rolled around.

Glenn Dyer took a first place and sophomore Jack Mathers placed second in diving to push ECC back in front.

The two clubs were tied twice before V.M.I. made a clean sweep of the 440 freestyle event to move into a 43-36 lead.

Jack McCann prevented a V.M.I. win by gaining first place in the breaststroke—the next to last event—and sending the meet down to the wire.

Jake Smith was the only other ECC swimmer to gain a first place. Smith copped the 100 yard freestyle.

Coach Charles Arnold of the visitors was anything but overjoyed over the defeat. "We lost our own meet," he cited. "Not taking anything away from East Carolina, but we just didn't show our actual strength. We are weaker than last year and especially in the sprints.

"It was evident in several events that both coaches were trying to outfox the other and it could have gone either way."

Arnold noted that he did not believe East Carolina was as strong as last season and also pointed out that his club wasn't quite as strong. Arnold picked The Citadel as "the team to beat" in the Southern Conference this winter.

Cagers Lose To Lenoir Rhyne, Come Back To Lick Catawba

Bears Win Tilt In Second Half Flurry Of Goals

By LEONARD LAO
Lenoir Rhyne's senior forward, Ken Norman, led the Bears to a 71-63 victory over the Pirates Saturday with 27 points. The deliberate offense of the Bears finally caught up with the Bucs in the second half. Trailing by three points at intermission, 26-29, LR fought back to tie the game at 35-35. Then Norman hit a jump shot to put the Bears out front for the first time in the ball game with 15:52 left on the clock. Pirate guard Ike Riddick, who has a three game scoring average of 21.3, tied the game back up at 37-37, but Norman hit again to put the Bruins ahead for good.

The Pirates made a late rally to come within four points of LR with eight minutes left, but two quick field goals by Norman staved off the Buc surge.

ECC forward, Don Smith, led the Pirates in the scoring department with 15 points, followed by Riddick, Dave Starrett, and "Cotton" Clayton with 13, 12, and 11 points respectively. Smith got 11 of his 15 points in the first half, but had to sit out much of the second half with four fouls. He fouled out with less than two minutes left in the game.

SOPHOMORE CENTER . . . Dave Starrett grabs a rebound against Lenoir Rhyne while Cotton Clayton looks on. Starrett scored 12 points for the Pirates in a 71-63 defeat.

Talented Reserve Leads EC Cagers To Second NS Win

Reserve Benny Bowes put in a formal request for a starting position Tuesday night as he came off the bench to lead East Carolina to a 74-59 North State win over Catawba College.

Usually a strong first half club, East Carolina was slow starting against the Indians but Bowes came off the bench late in the first half to tally eight quick points and push ECC into a lead. By intermission, the Pirates were out front 33-22.

Catawba, scrappy all the way but feeling the effects of their road trip, was never able to combat the Pirate lead in the second half although Horace Medford put on a brilliant effort, scoring 13 points and making 10 in succession. Three quick baskets at one spell cut a 14 point lead to eight which was the closest that the Indians got.

Ike Riddick was consistent former for ECC in both halves and finished the night with 26 points and game honors. Don Smith hit almost every ting he threw up and finished with 15 points.

East Carolina kept Catawba confused most of the night with varied defenses but it was an air-tight man-for-man that finally put the clamps on the Salisbury visitors.

The victory closed out play for East Carolina until after Christmas when they play in the Camp Lejeune Tournament. The win gave ECC a 2-2 conference mark and dropped Catawba (1-2) a couple of notches.

Riddick's 26 points gave him an average of 22.0 heading into the holiday tournament. His mark is expected to rank near the top when North State statistics are released.

EC Halfback Captures Three Banquet Awards

Halfback James Speight, a four year football star at East Carolina College, walked off with individual honors at the annual football banquet last night, bagging three trophies.

A Greenville native and one of the top backs in North Carolina, Speight was selected as "The Outstanding Senior," and "The Outstanding player" by his teammates and then chosen as recipient of the "Rawl Memorial Trophy" which was selected by the ECC coaching staff.

All-State tackle Ed Emory received the trophy for "The Best Blocker" and end David Thomas was named as the club's "Most Improved Player."

The banquet, sponsored by the Greenville Touchdown Club, was highlighted by the presence of guest speaker Abe Goldbalt, noted Sports Editor of the Virginia-Pilot of Norfolk, Virginia.

Mr. Con Lanier of Greenville served as master of ceremonies and tackle Vernon Davis offered entertainment for the evening.

Others adding to the program were Dr. Leo Jenkins, Dr. N. M. Jorgenson, Coach Jack Boone, and Touchdown Club President Lou Collie.

Making presentation of awards were Best Blocker—Mr. Gordon Strum of Pitt Theatre; Outstanding Player—Alpha Phi Omega fraternity; Outstanding Senior—Dr. Grover W. Everette; Rawl Memorial—Mr. Ed E. Rawl, Jr.; and Most Improved—Mr. Louis Collie.

Kilpatrick Cops Honors In Table Tennis Tourney

ECC players dominated the roster of the team of Eastern North Carolina table tennis players who met Central N.C.'s top table tennis stars, in a special team match held December 12, at the Burlington YMCA.

East Carolina's No. 1 man, Norman Kilpatrick, swept the individual honors, by defeating North Carolina champion Gary Preston 21-12 and 23-21 and Burlington's two top players, Hubert Britt and Joe Corne, in winning all six of his matches. ECC's Thomas Paul also surprised Preston, with his drives and counter-drives, and stopped the state champ 23-21 and 21-18, while posting a 4 wins, 2 losses record.

The Eastern team narrowly lost to the Central aces, 17 wins to 19, when EC's Hubert Leggett was unable to stop the blasting attack of Preston in the final match, losing 20-22 and 15-21. Meanwhile Paul, the East Carolina doubles champion, and Kilpatrick fell in the finals of the doubles event to Preston and Corne, 21-17 and 21-19, as Corne's counter-driving proved too much for the defense of the EC pair.

Leggett ended with a 1 and 5 record, while another East Carolina player, Nelson Tigwell, hit his way to a 2 and 4 won-lost score. Other players making up the Eastern team were William Stancil and Andrew Kilpatrick, both of whom came within two points of defeating Preston.

EC Frosh Absorb Loss To Frederick

The Baby Bucs absorbed their first defeat Saturday night at the hands of a strong Frederick Junior College team of Portsmouth, Virginia.

Having consecutive victories over Louisburg Jr. College, Camp Lejeune, Edward's Military Institute, and Hobbs High School, the EC frosh ran into a Frederick squad that seemed to have no end to their depth. The Lions, after taking a commanding 38-23 halftime lead, substituted fully in the second half of play and scored 44 points during the last 20 minutes of the ball game.

Jack Connolly and Jim O'Keefe tied for scoring laurels for the military men with 17 points each.

There were bright spots for the Baby Bucs. Fred Fowler, a 6-5 freshman center, dumped in 16 points in defeat and grabbed 7 rebounds to lead the EC frosh in those categories. Following Fowler in the scoring department was freshman guard Jim Farnes, who turned in a good floor game in addition to his 12 points.

Carolina Captures One Point Triumph

A capacity crowd saw the University of North Carolina swimming team squeak by the East Carolina tankmen in Memorial Gymnasium last Thursday night. The final score was 48-47.

E.C.C. is the defending NAIA champs, while U.N.C. is the defending Atlantic Coast Conference champions.

Four pool records were broken between the two teams. They are as follows: diving, now held by Bob Kingrey but also broken by Jack Mathers and Glenn Dyer, all of E.C.C.; the 200 yard individual medley, now held by James Bromwell of U.N.C.; butterfly, now held by Vince Simolton of U.N.C.; and the 100 yard freestyle, now held by Harry Bloom of U.N.C.
