'Four Freshmen' Appear Tomorrow

As the last presentation of the Entertainment Series this year, the Four Freshmen will appear in concert here at 8:15 p. m. in Wright Auditorium on Wednesday, May 16.

The Freshmen first developed their individual style at the Arthur Jordan Conservatory of Music in Indianapolis. Originally they called themselves "The Toppers", but they changed the title just before they made their professional debut in 1948.

For the next two years the group played the Midwest Nightclub Circuit, gathering a group of loyal fans wherever they went.

One night in 1950 they opened at a small nightclub in Dayton, Ohio. In the audience was Stan Kenton, then on tour with his "Innovations in Modern Music". He was so impressed with their style that he called Capitol Records and told them about his discovery.

A contract with Capitol, an appearance on the Steve Allen show, and a role in the movie "Rich, Young, and Pretty" followed in rapid succession.

Firmly established as one of the top vocal groups since 1955, they have played the Crescendo, the Palladium, and the Hollywood Bowl, in Hollywood, Pack's in San Francisco, most of the major colleges in the United States, and dozens of conventions and state fairs.

The Four Freshmen not only sing, among them they have seven instruments at their command. The two original members of the group are Bob Flanigan and Ross Barbour.

Bob sings top voice and plays trombone and string bass. Ross, master of ceremonies, sings third voice and plays trumpet and drums. Ken Albers, bass, plays trumpet and mellophone while Bill Comstock, second voice, plays guitar. Ken and Bill frequently arrange and compose the group's material.

They have ranked at the top of the Metronome, Billboard, Down Beat, and United Press surveys, as well as others, for years.

East Carolina Students Present Evening Of One-Act Play Series

Theater enthusiasts are invited to attend an evening of one-act plays which will be staged here Thursday, May 17, at 7:30 in Austin Auditorium. Two plays—"The Valiant" by Holworth Hall and Robert Middlemass, and "A Sunny Morning" by Serafi and Joaquin A. Quintero are two of the scheduled plays.

Dr. Ralph H. Rives is co-ordinator of the performances.

Directed by Minnie Gaster, "The Valiant" depicts a prison scene just before James Dyke's execution. Minnie starred in the title role of Auntie Mame in the East Carolina Playhouse production of the comedy during the winter quarter.

Playing the leading role in "The Valiant" as James Dyke, a condemned prisoner is C. Thomas

Jackson. A freshman, Thomas also shared honors in "Auntie Mame" when he played the role of Patrick Dennis, the nephew of Auntie Mame. Other members of the cast are Ed Smith, as the warden; Cassandra Drake, as a young girl; Clyde Putnam, Jr., the jailer; and William W. Modlin, as the priest.

Two aged Spanish lovers, played by Carmen A. V. Raynor, as Donna Laura, and Dr. Rives, as Don Pedro, are seen meeting in a park in Madrid on "A Sunny Morning." Carolie Barham, as director of "A Sunny Morning," appeared as Libt in the spring musical "South Pacific." In 1960, she was also a member of the cast in "The Lady's Not For Burning."

Miss Raynor, the leading Spanish lady in "A Sunny Morning," is a native of Puerto Rico. She is majoring in Spanish at the college and is frequently called upon to give speeches about her native country. She will be making her first appearance on the stage when she appears as Donna Laura. Loretta Foster and Gilbert Crippen will appear as the two servants.

Traffic Notice

The College Traffic Committee has decided that in order for any freshmen to be allowed to bring their cars to Greenville prior to the end of the spring quarter all requests must be approved in advance by the committee.

Requests should be made by only those students who can present evidence that a hardship or an unusually large expenditure will be involved unless they are permitted to bring their cars to Greenville in advance of the closing of school.

No students ineligible to have cars at present will be permitted to bring cars to Greenville prior to the weekend of May 19.

Taylor Joins U.S. Peace Corps

Jimmy Taylor, a senior business education major, has been selected as a member of the Peace Corps. He is the first EC student to announce joining the Peace Corps.

Nigeria Assignment

Jimmy has been assigned to Nigeria, where he will teach or perhaps assist a teacher from that country.

On July 6, Jimmy will leave for a two to three month training session to be held either in Puerto Rico or here in the United States.

Additional Training

Jimmy will spend an additional two weeks in Nigeria before he begins teaching. He will receive physical training; and he will be taught the language, government, economics, and history of Nigeria. He will spend approximately 21 months in Nigeria and will give, as well as receive, a great deal as a member of the President's Peace Corps.

Anybody Can Serve

EC Offers Wealth Of Traditions

It's time we stopped being a petty school with few or no traditions. At present traditions last as long as the students who began the traditions are enrolled in school.

Actually there are many phases of campus life and campus history that could become a part of tradition. For instance, when the groundbreaking for the stadium was held, few people knew the significance of the spade used by the dignitaries. EC's history is just as important as that of any college and much more unusual. Surely when an EC graduate leaves this institution, he should remember something besides our sadly neglected motto, "To Serve." Anyone can serve. Shouldn't we evaluate our present college aims?

Most colleges have some way of distinguishing freshmen from upper-classmen. Why not at EC? Perhaps it would mean more to finally know that we are sophomores if we know also that we will be distinguishable from other students. Now the only way a sophomore knows frosh days are over is by the rules in the "green pages." Sophomore women may ride at night; freshmen women may not. If there were some manner of making freshmen feel like freshmen then EC would begin to be a real college and not a "playlike" institution.

Why do we babble about traditions? Because everything that is important has traditions and a reason for existing. We know EC is important as an educational institution and has reason for existing, even if it be only to supply teachers and be of service.

We aren't saying that serving is a bad thing. Actually it has its purpose, but as educated college graduates aren't we supposed to take for granted that our lives will be of service in some way? This should definitely not be a part of our EC traditions. EC has grown from a small Normal School, and its traditions should reveal this change. We are proud of our growth and proud also that we began in a service area. By not having traditions, we present the idea to others that EC is an "exist-for-today" institution and not a growing college founded on high ideals of progressive education.

Why not form a group called the "Order of the Spade" in which outstanding graduates will hold membership? This year the fountain was remodeled. Surely some tradition could evolve around the colored spray. Buc is gone . . . so why not find another Buc.

EC is growing and will continue to grow. Let's take part of EC's past with us into the future to remind us of this growth.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

"LEMONADE!! WHAT A THOUGHTFUL SURPRISE, WORTHAL, ON SUCH A HOT AFTERNOON!"

Commuters Face Endless Problems; Miss Fun

By CAROL EULER

Get up at 5:30 a.m. every morning? No, never! If you were a commuting day student and lived quite a distance from the EC campus, yes, you would probably find yourself climbing out of the old sack at hours more unbelievable than that. Then you would have to hurry to make it to an 8 o'clock class—liking it or not!

EC is by no means restricted to dormitory students. There are many day students here, each living off campus because of an individual reason. Many are day students because of the lack of dormitory accommodation at the beginning of the year. Some live in fraternity or sorority houses, some are local residents, and some are students who find off campus living easier because they work in town, or they just don't like dormitory life as well.

Abundance Of Time

Day students are faced with many problems and complications arising from the inconveniences of commuting or living in town. Transportation is limited, and those who have cars find parking space inadequate and troublesome. A day student unable to schedule his classes in succession, is inconvenienced by the abundance of free time with no outlet for utilizing it for study or other chores needed to be done. He is forced to lug all of his classroom materials around all day, having no place in which to keep them safely when they are not needed. The majority of the day students, therefore, spend their free time in the CU or soda shops.

The day student is deprived of much of the learning acquired by having to learn to live with others. In a crowded dormitory, there are rules that must be kept and obligations to be met. Learning to adjust to these responsibilities is a part of reaching the ultimate of college learning, as well as a new maturity sought after by college students.

Day students report that they seem to be missing the opportunities of knowing more people and keeping up with college activities because they are on campus only for classes. They miss the fun of living with others and forming stronger life-long friendships. They are often hard to locate, thus impairing complete participation in campus organizations and activities.

Studying Problems

Studying is not as great a problem for day students at it is for those who live in dormitories. It is easier for a day student to master good study habits, as he is not distracted or disturbed by a number of people around him. Dormitories have been known to be quite noisy, thus distracting those who are trying to study with ample concentration. Students not living with a large group are more apt to secure the proper atmosphere for studying. The commuting student, however, finds it difficult to set aside enough time for study, as he is under a strain due to tiresome traveling to and from the campus. In this case, the dormitory student is at an advantage, because he is always close by and is able to preserve more free time.

Of course the day student has problems, but the dormitory student does also. It cannot be said, therefore, that either phase of living at college is preferable. The choice remains up to the individual and the circumstances involved.

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

This is the final column of my eighth year of writing for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, and this year, as in every preceding year, when I come to the last column of the season, I come to a problem.

My contract with the makers of Marlboro calls for me to write a humor column and, truly, I do the best I can—all things considered, I am not, I should explain, a jolly man by nature. Why should I be? First of all, I am shorter than everybody. Second, there are moths in my cashmere jacket. Third, I work in television.

All the same, when it comes time to write this column, I light a good Marlboro Cigarette, put aside my trauma, and try with all the strength in my tiny body to make some jokes. Sometimes it works better than others, but on the last column of the year, it just flatly doesn't work at all.

Even in the very beginning this was true—and that, you will recall, was eight years ago when I was relatively young and strong and had not yet developed that nasty knock in my transmission. Well do I remember sitting down to write the final column of my first year. Day followed barren day, and not a yock, not a boff, not a zinger did I produce. I was about to give up humor and take a job selling mechanical dogs when all of a sudden, in a blinding flash, I realized why I couldn't think of any jokes!

I leapt up from my typewriter and ran as fast as my little fat legs would carry me to the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, and I tugged my forelock, and I said, "Sirs, I am well aware that you have engaged me to write a humor column, but today, as I approach the final column of the season, I am far too misty to be funny, for the final column of the season is, after all, a leave-taking, and when I think of saying goodbye to my audience—the swellest audience any columnist ever had—the college students of America—wonderful human beings, every man and woman of them—wise but kindly—astute but compassionate—perspicacious but forbearing—when, sirs, I think of saying goodbye to such an audience, I am too shook up even to consider levity, and so I ask you, sirs, to let me, in the final column of the year, forego humor and instead write a simple, dignified, straightforward farewell."

Then I took out my bandanna, wiped my eyes, ears, nose, and throat and waited for a reply from the makers of Marlboro.

They sat around the polished board room table, the makers, their handsome brows knit in concentration, puffing thoughtfully on the Marlboros in their tattooed hands. At length they spoke. "Yes," they said simply.

I never doubted they would say yes. People who make a cigarette as good as Marlboro must themselves be good. People who lavish such care on blending tobaccos so mild and flavorful, on devising a filter so clean and white, on boxing a flip-top box so flip-top, on packing a soft pack so soft—people like that are one hundred percent with me!

And so from that day forward, the final column of the year—including the one you are, I devoutly hope, now reading—makes no attempt to be funny, but is instead a simple thank you and au revoir.

Thank you and au revoir, makers of Marlboro. The memory of our eight years together will remain ever fresh in my heart, and I would like to state for all the world to hear that if you want me back again next year, I shall expect a substantial raise in salary.

Thank you and au revoir, college students of America. May good luck attend all your ventures. Stay well. Stay happy. Stay loose.

Small Max has said it all. We, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, can only add a heartfelt second chorus: Stay well. Stay happy. Stay loose.

Art Instructor Displays Work In Crafts Exhibition

Mrs. Nanene Q. Engle, faculty member of the Department of Art, is among the American craftsmen whose work has been accepted for display in the First Annual Jewelry Makers Show at the Feinberg Gallery, State University College, Plattsburgh, N. Y.

The exhibition includes 110 pieces selected from 29 countries representing 61 craftsmen from 20 states. Mrs. Engle's contribution to the show is a neck piece pendant.

The show focuses attention on jewelry making, in which, according to Harold J. Brennan, juror for the event, "the most imaginative and resourceful work" by American craftsmen is now being done. Purposes of the exhibition include promotion of production of handcrafted jewelry and recognition of excellence in craftsmanship and design.

Mrs. Engle joined the faculty at East Carolina in 1961. She is a graduate of Evansville College in Indiana and of Indiana University in Bloomington and has studied at the John Herron Art School in Indianapolis.

Bucs Finish Season With 6-3 Victory Over Elon's Christians

The East Carolina Baseball team concluded their '62 season Saturday night against Elon as they defeated them 6-3.

Senior right-hander Earl Boykin went the distance for the Pirates allowing the Christians three runs on eight hits. He walked four and struck out seven. This was probably one of Boykin's best performances. Except for his wildness in the eighth inning, Boykin scattered the Christian's hitting effectively, and was in command all the way. The Bucs who were held to four hits during the game, and only two the first five innings, opened their scoring in the bottom of the sixth. Charlie Johnson walked and Pirate third baseman Junior Greene tripled over the Elon left fielder's head driving Johnson home. In the seventh, pitcher Boykin walked to start the inning. Spencer Gaylord then followed with a 400 ft. blast to left center which rolled to the fence. Boykin and Gaylord both scored and Gaylord was credited with a home run.

Students Present 6th Art Show

EC's Sixth Annual Student Show presented by the Department of Art is now on view in the entrance lobby and the third-floor Hallway Gallery of the Rawl Building and will be open to the public throughout May.

Included in the exhibition are 105 selected pieces of work by 37 students which illustrate the varied types of instruction and activity carried on by the department.

Fourteen oil paintings included in the show vary in style from realism to abstract impressionism. Also hung in the Hallway Gallery, are eleven tempera paintings chosen from the work of 'talented' freshmen in the Art Department.

Graphics being shown include woodcuts, etchings, serigraphs, and a lithograph. Commercial art is represented by sixteen plates illustrating advertising design, interior illustration, and story illustration.

Twenty-six pieces of sculpture in the gallery include student work in carved wood, cement, plaster, wire, and other materials.

Shown in display cases near the front entrance to Rawl are examples of weaving, crafts, art education, and other types of work.

After Gaylord's trip to the plate, Elon pitchers proceeded to walk seven Pirate batters, forcing in 3 more runs before they could retire the side. Elon got their three runs in the eighth on walks to Jim Leviner, Phil Cheek, singles to Mike Little, and pinch-hitters Jim Crook and Wayne Allen. Allen singled to drive in two runs.

Due to a pre-season agreement by the coaches, the Bucs final game with Western Carolina has been cancelled because it has no bearing on the outcome of the Championship of the Carolinas Conference.

The Saturday night game with Elon was Seniors' Spencer Gaylord, Charlie Johnson, Nathan Greene, and Earl Boykin's last performance on the college level.

The Pirates record for this year was 11-10 overall, and 7-5 in the conference. Their wins were at the expense of such powerful teams as Florida State and Wake Forest. Wake Forest is presently top contender for honors in the Atlantic Coast Conference.
