Jean is helping with program design and posters for the Playhouse publicity. After graduation, Jean hopes to become an art instructor in high school.

Dickinson Presents Organ Recital Tonight

Dr. Clarence Dickinson of New York, one of the great organists and organ recitalists of America, will present an organ recital in Austin Auditorium tonight at 8:00 p. m. The recital is a featured program of the Church Music Workshop to be held on campus through Friday, June 29.

Dr. Dickinson, one of the founders of The American Guild of Organists, has done additional study and under Rejman and Singer in Berlin and under Guilman, Vierne and Moskowski in Paris. He has given many organ recitals both in Europe and in America.

He was the founder and director of the School of Sacred Music at the Union Theological Seminary in New York and for fifty years was choirmaster and organist at the Brick Presbyterian Church.

In collaboration with his wife Helen, Dickinson has written several books on musical subjects. Among these books are "Excursions in Musical History", and "Technique and Art of Organ Playing". Dickinson has also edited "An Historical Recital" series for organ consisting of more than 40 numbers.

He is the composer and arranger of more than 500 choral works, mostly sacred, as well as composer of a symphony for organ and orchestra, and an oratorio.

Presented by the student government as the first summer attraction of the Fine Arts programs, the recital is free of charge to all students, faculty and friends of the college.

Students Elect SGA Officers

In a light turnout at the polls last week, Bill Eyerman was elected president of the Student Government Association for the present summer school term.

Elected to Eyerman's slate of officers is Gary Idol, vice president; William Goodwin, secretary; and Tom Mallison, treasurer.

Members-at-large elected in Friday's voting are: Gail Koonce, Royce Tart, Walter O'Berry, Ronnie Neal, Bill Griffin, Wilkie Burt and Bobby Swinson. These eleven members plus each dormitory president will compose the governing body for the summer term.

Summer Playhouse Rehearses Goulsh Comedy, 'Sight Unseen'

Ghouls, ghosts and romance provide the theme for the Playhouse Summer production; SIGHT UNSEEN, a farce-comedy written by Rosemary Foster and Warner Law. Charlotte Donat portrays the lovely and beautiful Lady Judith Elliot, the last in a long line of a wealthy and influential family. Unfortunately the money and power have gone and Judith is left with Barnsley, a huge manor house in rural England. Barnsley has become a quite unsalable "white elephant" because of the antics of some long dead, but still present ancestors whose supernatural powers have gained it "the reputation of the most haunted house in England". The ghosts frighten off all the prospective buyers that Archie, Judith's fiance, played by Doug Mitchell, brings to view the manor until Mrs. Millicent Malone arrives on the scene. Played by Sybil Hinds, she is a hard boiled bakery tycoon from America and intends to convert Barnsley into an institute for physic research. The ghosts horrified at the thought of being studied plan a revolution much to the consternation of Judith who is falling in love with Henry, Mrs. Malone's young physicist nephew, played by Jim Shanahan. Archie quite naturally doesn't find either situation at all to his liking.

The specters Brigadier General Sir Thomas Elliot and Lady Hortense Elliot, who are in real life

Westly Howard and Lois Garren, have problems of their own. However, Penelope a ravishing beauty and former consort of Charles I tries to thwart their plans so that once more Barnsley may be full of people and she may relieve her centuries of boredom. Lady Penelope is played by Minnie Gaster.

In the ingenious and hilarious third act the complications are happily resolved but not before Mrs. Malone has had her fill of "ectoplasm" and the smugly scientific Henry has experienced the shock of his life.

Also appearing in the cast are Howard Mallard, Mary Carolyn Barnes, and Teresa Saieed.

The play is directed by Dr. J. A. Withey. It is to be presented July 9-11 in the air conditioned band room of the music hall, but the number of seats are limited. As a new experience to many theatergoers it will be presented in the round so this makes every seat "front row center".

SGA Reviews Organizational Summer Budgets

The first meeting of the summer school SGA was spent primarily on reviewing and voting on budgets submitted by various campus organizations.

All budgets submitted, with the exception of two were approved. The Exceptions were the Playhouse and THE KEY.

The Playhouse had its budget reduced by $30 and the KEY's request for $185 was denied.

Walter Faulkner, Editor of the Buccaneer, made a special request for $1400 to be used in the purchase of additional yearbooks. The books will be used in public relations and many will be distributed to those students who failed to get a yearbook before the supply was exhausted this Spring Quarter.

A complete list of budgets submitted follows:

Organization	Amt. Req.	Amt. App.
SGA	$2,660	$2,660
Entertainment	6,599	6,599
EAST CAROLINIAN	2,295	2,295
Playhouse	555	525
Men's Intramurals	864	864

First Summer Session Term Reaches 3,111 Enrollment

With 2,911 students already registered for work during the First Summer Session at EC and approximately 200 pre-registered for workshops scheduled to be presented before July 17, enrollment is estimated at 3,111 for the six-weeks period.

This figure establishes a new record in number of students at a summer session and exceeds the 2,830 total for the same session last year by 281 students.

Many of those taking courses at the college this summer are following an accelerated program which will enable them to complete requirements for a degree in three, rather than four, years.

"We have been encouraging as many students as possible to plan their work so that they may take advantage of work offered during the summer," President Jenkins stated.

"This accelerated program not only helps the student but also gives the college opportunity to utilize facilities more advantageously," he explained.

"Realization of complete participation by students," he added, "is necessarily limited, for many must work during the summer months in order to finance their college work during the regular academic year."

The Long, Hot Line

A Necessary Evil—lines, lines, and more lines were part of the recent registration procedure when some 2,911 students registered for regular session work. Most of the students are completing requirements for a degree in three, rather than four, years.

Union To Sponsor Student Talent Show

Among the special programs to be sponsored by the College Union for the first session is a student talent show. Thursday, July 12, has been tentatively set as the date for the talent show.

Students interested in participating are asked to sign up in the College Union not later than Monday, July 2. Jimmy Cannon, president of the summer school College Union, feels there is much talent on campus and encourages students to participate.

Our Responsibility Is To The Student

What is freedom of the press? It would not be accurate to say that it is the freedom of a newspaper to print anything which is true. The word "freedom" carries within its definition another word which precedes any such loose interpretation. This word is "responsibility".

Such a theory, when applied to the EAST CAROLINIAN, brings to mind a question which, to our knowledge, has never been clearly and emphatically answered. The question is, "to whom are we responsible?"

In any institution as large as EC, responsibility seems to be passed from one level to the next in chainlike fashion. The fact that this is a state supported institution adds another link to the chain.

Tracing this chain of responsibility, we can most logically say that we are responsible to the student in the form of the SGA, (assuming that the SGA represents the student) since they finance the paper and it is they to whom the paper is directed. The SGA is responsible to the administration which gives it the authority to exist. The administration is responsible to the state which finances it which is in turn responsible to the people of the state.

Shortly the chain develops into a cycle and we are back to the responsibility to the student. Assuming that the chain is correctly structured, we are, in the final tally, responsible to the student, a position we gladly accept.

Until someone gives us an answer that we can more readily accept we shall operate from this position and do so to the best of our ability.

Mallison The Politician

Generally, the term "machine politics" brings to mind graft and corruption. This impression is not always correct, as may be seen by looking at the present SGA administration. It is a product of what could best be labeled the "Mallison Machine".

Tom Mallison has taken, for the summer, the position of treasurer in order that he may next year have a closer working relation to Jimmy Chesnut, the regular session treasurer for the coming year. Even though he is not, for the present, the titular leader of the SGA, Mallison seems to still be in the drivers seat.

This is not a situation over which we should become upset, for Tom Mallison has done more for this college than most of you realize. It all started back when he became chairman of the Entertainment committee. The results of his presence are becoming more evident everyday.

No matter what you may think of Tom Mallison as a person, you have to admit that he's one heck of a politician.

Yes, We're Late

We apologize for being so late with this first edition of the EAST CAROLINIAN. Our printer has been out of town attending army reserve camp.

Perhaps the appropriate headline for this first paper would have been, "Yes, Virginia, There is an EAST CAROLINIAN." There seemed to be some doubt about it for a while.

The Shoot-Out

By MONTY MILLS

It was a sweltering night thirsty in the prairie town of Buzzard Gulch, when out of the purple shadows rode a lone, tall stranger astride a lean Pinto (horse variety). With an appraising eye, the stranger noticed the lights from the Next To The Last Chance Saloon. He slid off his Pinto and hitched his horse to the hitching rail, then he hitched up his faded jeans and sauntered through the swinging doors of the saloon.

Every eye in the saloon turned toward the stranger, every eye except the one under Texas Tom's black patch; he lost it in a poker game over at Tortilla City—the stakes were high that night. Moseying over to the bar he looked apprehensively at the bottles stacked against the wall. He was gazing at the abstract by Grandma Moses over the gilded mirror when Gonzales Gonzales, the Eskimo tending bar, asked the stranger his pleasure.

"Ya got any tall brunettes?" the stranger asked. When the stranger realized that Gonzales meant what'll you have to drink, he ordered a shot of Redeye for himself, and a shot of the same for his Pinto; it had been a long, dusty day on the trail. His saddle sores had saddle sores and his Pinto was tired and Over in the corner, engrossed in a game of chance, sat the local cowhands back from a cattle drive down to Little Pecos. The stranger drained his whiskey and strode over to the table. Flipping a $20 gold piece on the table he asked the boys to deal him in.

After the game had progressed a hand or two, he noticed that a cow poke called Saddle Sam was dealing off the bottom of the deck. The stranger jumped to his feet, whipped out his Colt 45½ (an improvement over the Colt 45), and demanded a shoot-out.

The gents at the table quickly cleared out of the way and the men took a stand at the bar. They paced off the usual twenty, turned and drew—except for Sam who, having no charcoal and canvas as did the stranger, was helpless to do anything but fire away.

The stranger, with a last kick of his boots, lay dead on the floor. Sam stood admiring the half finished charcoal portrait.

The moral of this western saga is—the man with the quickest draw always wins the shoot-out, but bullets are deadlier than charcoal and canvas.

The stranger, with a last kick of his boots, lay dead on the floor. Sam stood admiring the half finished charcoal portrait.

algebra. The new requirement was passed by the Policies Committee of the college and has been approved by the faculty.

Announcement of the change is being made well in advance, Dr. Holt commented, so that all students wishing to enroll at East Carolina will have the units in mathematics necessary for admission.

The addition of a second unit in mathematics to college entrance requirements at East Carolina, he explained, is designed to enable the student to be better prepared for the courses in mathematics which all students at the college must take. The additional preparation, he added, will also help eliminate the need for remedial work in mathematics for many students.

Just Between Yankees; What About The South?

The inquirer's question for the week was directed at the "Yankees" on campus and the question was "What has impressed you most about the South?" As suspected the overwhelming majority of answers concerned the almost legendary "Southern Hospitality".

The men seemed to like the new surroundings better than the women, but it seems to this reporter that our Yankee women just find the competition too good. Here's a sampling of the replies:

Bill Weidenbacher, P.E. Major from New Jersey, says "the fact that total strangers would stop and say hello to me on the street is one thing that has convinced me 'Southern Hospitality' is no myth." Mowad Rubin, Accounting Major from New York commented that "the pure friendliness of the southern people has impressed me more than any thing else."

Linda Hall, an Art Major from Pittsburg, Pa., has this to say "I have been most impressed by the hospitality and for the first time I have heard birds singing all night."

Rick Nittoli, a Social Science Major from New Jersey, says he can't get used to seeing the various combinations of food that compose the southern diet.

A few other common replies were: the weather, the southern accent, the distances between towns, the lack of entertainment other than movies on weekdays, the uniformity of dress between boys and girls, the progress, and "grits".

Being a Yankee myself, I am quite impressed with many things I have encountered here in "Dixie". MY first shock was hearing everybody talk with a southern accent and being told that I talked funny. My greatest shock, however, came when I ate my first meal in the cafeteria (I have heard that this experience has shocked many of you native southerners also). Some of the vegetables were completely new to me and some of the familiar ones were to a great extent unrecognizable because of the way in which they were prepared. I sought to conceal my ignorance by ordering peas, the one vegetable I knew on sight which led to the most nerve shattering experience of my young life, for when I looked at my plate, it looked back at me. I ate my entire meal with the uneasy feeling of being stared at; I later learned that to get peas I had to specify garden peas. I have mastered most of my food problems, but I am as yet unable to distinguish between collard greens and spinach on sight, and I have the same difficulty with butter beans and limas. The substitution of rice and grits for potatoes was at first alien to my yankee taste, but I have grown to like rice.

I am also impressed with the friendliness of the people AND the contrariness of the weather, the slow pace of living and the fast rate of accomplishment, the dryness of the soil and the humidity of the air. I am on the whole favorably impressed with the south, but there's no place quite like home.

Intramural Softball Stars 'The Humpers'

By RICHARD BOYD

Intramural Notes

There is not much doing on the East Carolina campus sports scene with the exception of the intramural activities. In the Men's Intramural Softball League, the favorites will be the Humpers and the Unknowns. The latter will be in the running to defend their 1961 championship, while the former, composed primarily of graduate students, should make things quite interesting for the defending champions. In the first meeting between these two foes, the "old grads" grabbed a 5-1 verdict. The winners boasted a 4-0 record going into this week's contest, while the losers composed a 3-1 mark to show for their efforts. Other teams in the loop are Lambda Chi Alpha, the Ridge Runners, Pi Kappa Alpha, and the Has Beens.

EC Grid Coach Talks Football Early

New EC football mentor Clarence Stasovich, formerly of Lenoir Rhyne is talking early concerning the 1962 grid squad. The Bucs, who launch their campaign in Richmond, Virginia in September against the University of Richmond Spiders will carry quite a burden on their shoulders. It is true that it is nice to have a coach who compiled many championship records at LR, but the change to the power formation, the single-wing at East Carolina in one short Spring practice, and a couple of weeks late this summer will be a challenge to Stas, or for that matter, any coach in his shoes. But despite the handicap, the new grid coach feels that with eleven eager men, who "really" want to play the game bad enough East Carolina's football fortunes should rise. Stasovich talked as though the Pirates should get stronger this fall as the season progresses. This theory is due to the fact that the players, as they learn the new system will get better. In any event, this should be the most interesting grid season in EC history this Fall, and it is something for EC sports followers to look forward to.

The National Scene

On the national sports scene, baseball is currently in the spotlight, and over in the American League, an interesting race for the loop crown is shaping up in fine style. The New York Yankees, rulers of the baseball world more than any other team during the past 15 years are having their troubles physically. With Mickey Mantle, having a time with his bad legs, and with Whitey Ford being bothered with arm trouble, the Yanks dropped to third place last week behind Cleveland and Minnesota. It is good to see two new teams, who are the youngest American League outfits challenging the Yankees and Cleveland. The Los Angeles Angels and the Minnesota Twins were only a couple of games from the league leading Cleveland Indians last week. The race for the Junior Circuit crown is so close, that Baltimore and Detroit were only 5 games off the pace set by the Indians. It definitely appears that New York may have strong competition during the latter part of the season from one of these five teams.

Teachers Attend Special Education Events At EC

EC, for the 1962 Summer Term, will present during two sessions, a series of special educational events planned largely for public school teachers and graduate students.

Two travel-study tours are featured during the first Summer Session. The college's Third Grand Tour of Europe began Friday, June 8, when 26 members met in New York City with Mrs. Myrtle B. Clark, director, before a jet-plane flight abroad. The itinerary includes nine foreign countries to be visited June 9-July 17.

Thirty-six members of a tour of the northwestern United States will leave Greenville June 11 for a trip across the nation, to the World's Fair in Seattle, and to various points of economic, historical, geographical, and cultural interest. Dr. R. E. Crammer of the Department of Geography is director.

During the First Summer session workshops to be offered include Arts and Crafts, Drawing and Painting, both for elementary teachers; Elementary Music Education; Alcoholism in Health Education; Church Music; Reading Institute; and Directed Observation in the Kindergarten.

Clinics during the First Session include Football, Basketball, and Baseball, and Summer Reading Clinic.

Sponsored by the National Science Foundation, a Summer Institute for Junior High School Teachers of Earth Science, Biology, and Physics, will bring to the campus 49 teachers from North and South Carolina, Florida, Oklahoma, Kentucky, New York, Ohio, Virginia, Illinois, Tennessee, California, Minnesota, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Mexico, and Indiana. Dr. Frank W. Eller of the East Carolina Science Department will direct the Institute.

The Ninth Annual Summer Music Camp for junior and senior high school students and for music teachers is scheduled for July 22-August 4. Approximately 500 people from states along the Atlantic seaboard have registered for the event, one of the college's most popular summer programs.

Courses in fifteen departments of instruction and in the Schools of Business and Nursing will be taught during the summer.
