Comediens Perform On Campus Nov. 29

Appearing in Memorial Gymnasium at 8:15 November 29, the Smothers Brothers will provide plenty of abundance.

While in high school and college, the Smothers Brothers appeared in school productions of many kinds. Their first job was in the Kerosene Club in San Jose, California back in 1950 when they were still students at San Jose State College. They put on a combination music-comedy show that pleased even the most discriminating college audience for the sum total of seven dollars a night and all the beers they could put down. From there they have gone to the Purple Onion for a fifteen month booking, to Denver, and finally to New York's Blue Angel.

They have released a hit record, "The Smothers Brothers at the Purple Onion," and are looking forward to the release of their new LP, "The Two Sides of the Smothers Brothers."

Jack Parr booked the brothers for a dozen appearances on his show. One critic said that the roof of the NBC studios was in danger of being blown off. Their brash irreverent approach to folk music and their comic flair won tumultuous applause from the audience and return engagements from Parr.

These two young men, Tom and Dick Smothers, have brought a fresh devastatingly funny approach to the night club world. On the college circuit, besides EC, they are scheduled for a swing through Stanford, Texas A. & M., Oklahoma, Duke, Florida, the University of Chicago, and the University of Bridgeport.

Stadium Worker Plunges Seventy Feet To Death

The Ficklen Memorial Stadium which will soon house many EC activities was the scene of tragedy early Wednesday morning when a construction worker plunged seventy feet to his death.

Louis E. Woolard of Washington, who had been working here for the past two and a half months, fell from the top of the stadium's press box.

Immediately before the accident he had been seated on a short plank placed between two rafters. One of the two boards on which the plank was resting slipped and he toppled to the ground.

Two men working with Woolard at the time of the accident were B. M. Sheppard, Woolard's brother-in-law, and John Winstead, Sr., both of Washington. After the incident, the job was shut down for the rest of the day by Henry Brown, the superintendent on the job.

Woolard died instantly of severe head injuries, reported Pitt County Coroner E. W. Harvey.

Music Students Suggest Possible Curriculum Changes

In order to determine student opinion toward the recently formed School of Music, the EAST CAROLINIAN conducted interviews with a number of music majors.

Changes In Curriculum
Student opinion varied greatly as to the changes they would like to see made in their curriculum. Some expressed a desire to have the number of general academic courses decreased so they can concentrate on their major. Others disagreed maintaining that a well-rounded academic background is essential to every student, music major or otherwise.

Many expressed a desire for more music literature and history courses. Pedagogy classes, methods classes in specific fields such as piano and voice, were suggested. One type of course suggested by students which will probably be offered at EC as soon as enough music majors are interested in it is liturgical music, concentrating on the organ.

Performance Groups
Most of the students stated that they believed they are required to participate in too many performance groups, such as bands, College Orchestra, and Choral Union. All music majors must participate as regularly enrolled members of at least one major performance organization each quarter in residence and as regularly enrolled members of the Choral Union a minimum of six quarters during the 12 quarters in residence. These performance groups require from two to three hours of rehearsal each week, plus the extra rehearsals before performances. Music majors do not receive credit for these performance groups if they are already taking the maximum number of hours permitted.

One student summed up his opinions this way: "Music majors are required to be in so many performance groups that they do not have enough time to spend on their own music."

More Practice Studios
When asked about room space in Whichard Building, the students immediately explained that they need more practice rooms, studios, and a recital hall or auditorium with a good piano. Students agree that it should have been enlarged already; but they realize that many other improvements are needed around campus and since the Bond Referendum failed, no improvements can be made until the State Legislature appropriates funds. About twice the number of practice rooms are needed. In some studios, there are two teachers instruction their private pupils in rooms intended for one instructor.

Students Praise Dean
The music majors voiced a strong belief that the present faculty of the School of Music is "one of the best in the state; and one of the finest, if not the finest, in the South. Students attributed this excellence to the efforts of Earl E. Beach, Dean of the School of Music.

Opens Religious Emphasis Week

Haselden Traces World Church Council Growth

"The spirit of world-wide cooperation among Christians is in the air today, and we can be grateful for this fact," Dr. Kyle Haselden told an audience Monday at the opening program of the annually observed Religious Emphasis Week on the campus.

Dr. Haselden, Managing Editor of the "Christian Century" magazine, was the first of three speakers who appeared on programs developing the theme of the Ecumenical Movement. An authority on the World Council of Churches and associated with its work since 1948, he spoke on the organization, purpose, and development of the Council in a morning lecture and in informal sessions in the afternoon and evening.

The World Council of Churches was organized in Amsterdam, in 1948, Dr. Haselden said, to unite Christian forces throughout the world. Analyzing the name, he stated that "World" indicates the crossing of such lines as those of race, nationality, and denomination. "It is not a super-church," he continued, but a council effecting "a coming together of various denominations" to consider their problems. It is council of churches, he emphasized, and stated that there is "no truth it has anything to do with political ideologies."

He traced the development of the Council through its second assembly at Evanston, Illinois, and its 1961 meeting at New Delhi, India, which he described as a "marriage" of new groups of Christians with the World Council.

At this meeting last year, he said, 70 million Christians "were brought into the movement" when non-Roman Catholics behind the Iron Curtain became represented. In addition, he said, eleven churches in the emerging nations of Africa applied for membership and were received. A "spirit of unity and cooperation is being sought today," he concluded, "and one way to move toward this unity is to work through councils of churches."

Dr. Haselden is visiting EC from Chicago, Ill. Other speakers who appeared on this week's program and discussed the Ecumenical Movement from the points of view of their faiths were Rabbi Israel J. Sarasohn of Temple Beth El, Rocky Mount, and Father Dr. Robert Wilken, former editor of the "North Carolina Catholic" and now Catholic Student Chaplain at UNC.

George Patrick, President of the Baptist Student Union and Publicity Chairman of the Inter-Religious Council, presided at Monday's

College Investigation Results In Suspension

Ten EC students have been suspended after a shoplifting investigation was carried out by college officials and campus police. It was revealed Wednesday that eight freshmen and two upperclassmen were suspended Tuesday after they were found in possession of $400 worth of stolen articles.

The college officials were notified last week that there were students at EC involved in thefts; but they did not take action until Sunday when reliable information was secured.

When the boys involved were asked to have their rooms searched, they made no effort to conceal the merchandise, most of which was clothing. The investigation was solely carried out by campus police and college officials. If they had been arrested, according to the Pitt County Clerk of Court, they could have been sentenced to two years in prison. As it now stands, ten young men have forfeited their college education for an average of $40 each.

President Leo W. Jenkins has said that if any other students are found to be involved, they will receive the same penalty. Dr. Jenkins also issued the following statement.

"It was brought to my attention that ten male students, eight freshmen and two upperclassmen, were involved in shoplifting from various stores. All of these students were suspended from college and their parents notified of this action. It is regrettable that a few students elected not only to discredit themselves, but to bring discredit to the splendid reputation enjoyed by the college throughout the state."

The stolen items have been recovered, and are in the process of being returned.

Public Image

It seems at times that we are taking our motto, "To Serve", a little too seriously. With all the activity on this campus that is obviously designed for public relations purposes, it seems in order to remind those who are so conscious of public opinion, whoever they may be, that "To Serve" can also, in a certain context, mean "To Lead". It seems that it would be much more to our advantage to consider this motto as meaning "To Lead."

Certainly, we must acknowledge a certain responsibility to the public which, through taxes, supports this institution, but it would not seem altogether out of order to pay a great deal more attention to the people who find themselves attached to the College in a more direct way—either in a paying position or as students.

If a College never varies from the general public's concept of propriety, it seems doubtful that many advances, either academic or social, will ever be made.

There is a theory held by some that the institution of higher learning is a shrine that should be exempt from pressures of an un-informed and/or un-educated public. While we can't totally agree with this concept, we feel that the reasoning behind it is worth thinking about. Many people would disagree even with the reasoning behind this concept—they feel that every person who supports the institution has a rightful voice in its operation. While this idea is, in theory, fine and democratic, if carried to its logical conclusion it would result in a board of trustees numbering well into the thousands.

It seems that the ideal thing would be to calculate on how far we can go in a right direction that doesn't seem right to the public without losing their much needed (unfortunately) financial support.

Philosophy Expansion

We feel that philosophy is one of the most important areas of education at a high level. It seems that the philosophy department at EC is being left behind or ignored in the present growth pattern of the college. The present staff of philosophy instructors is extremely competent, but it is also extremely limited in number. We feel that an expansion of the curriculum and an increase in the number of instructors of philosophy would be just as important a move as some of the other, more widely publicized, projects underway at this time.

HAMBURGER

A Column for People Who Can't Afford Lobster Newburg

By J. ALFRED WILLIS

The REBEL went down to Chapel Hill a couple of Tuesday nights ago to interview Betty Smith (A Tree Grows in Brooklyn, Maggie Now) for the fall issue of the magazine. She talked about writing as a seamstress would talk about sewing or as a brick mason would talk about laying brick. There is nothing mysterious about the craft of her fiction. Mrs. Smith explains that she just has something to say and says it.

She is nothing at all like the stereo-typed picture of the writer. For instance, she can't remember authors or book-titles. She was asked what books she would recommend to beginning writers to read. She said "... you should read better than you write. If you want to write like Faulkner, you should read Shakespeare. I, personally, would recommend everyone to read War and Peace ... No, no, that's not the one. I mean Crime and Punishment by what's-his-name. I can't even read War and Peace myself."

After the interview was over, we sat around her living room having refreshments. Her granddaughter opened the back door and one of those shaggy dogs with hair-all-over-but-for-the-black-beady-eyes-shining-in-the-face came bounding through the door. The dog's name was No Name. A pound mutt who was used for medical research in which he was frozen for three hours until dead and then his heart opened and brought back to life. He was the only one of fifty to survive, and the surgeon who performed the operation asked Mrs. Smith if she wanted the dog and she asked what was his name and the surgeon replied — "No name."

Mrs. Smith warned us to take our napkins off our laps. She said that the dog goes wild over paper — plays with it, scratches it, tears it, etc. "That's all a dog can do all day with a cage full of paper like they have at the pound. He used to be bad about going through doors. I had to carry him from one room to another and he weighs a lot. I guess at the pound he learned that every time he went through a door he found himself in a cage."

No Name was quite a smelly dog. Mrs. Smith had gotten the dog in June and had been afraid to give him a bath because of the stitches. (So she has been putting talcum powder and men's after shave lotion on him to cover up the smell. She looked at him and commented, "Doesn't he look just like a Neanderthal man." I said, "He smells like a Neanderthal man." Mrs. Smith responded, "You're supposed to pat him; not smell him."

To Be Read And Pondered...

Los Angeles, Calif. (I.P.) — The following Freshman Summer Reading List, together with a covering letter from Dr. Robert Ryf, Dean of Students at Occidental College, was sent out to students who were expected to attend the college this fall. In each case, a specific reason was given for the reading of the particular book.

Mark Van Doren,
Liberal Education

Written during World War II, Mark Van Doren's penetrating analysis remains as relevant today as it was twenty years ago. Many people have spent most of their lives trying to define, in theory and practice, liberal arts education; nobody has finally and definitely succeeded. Van Doren's attempt, however, is one of the most memorable, and reflects the wisdom and understanding of a lifetime.

Calvin Hall,

A Primer of Freudian Psychology
A continuing theme for your intellectual exploration during your freshman year, both inside and outside the classrooms, will be that of Contemporary Views of Man. Certainly, Freudian psychology offers one such view. Although there may be room for a difference of opinion as to the absolute validity of all of Freud's theories of human nature and behavior, few would deny his importance as a major figure in the intellectual history of the 20th Century.

William Golding,
Lord of the Flies

Here is one of the most provocative and challenging novels of the last 10 years, and one which offers another contemporary view of man. In this deceptively simply take of British schoolboys on a remote island and their attempts to rebuild their society are implicit such vital concerns as the nature of man, the nature of power, and the relationship of the individual to society.

Catawba Complaints

The following was released in a special edition of the PIONEER from Catawba College:

In special session last Thursday, the SGA presented a report on current student attitudes. Meeting with the SGA officers were the Women's Representative, the Men's Representative, the presidents of the three women's residence halls, the president of the sophomore class, the Deans of the college, and Dr. A. R. Keppell.

SGA President Larry Godwin spoke to the group concerning the report of a committee studying the validity and seriousness of complaints about rules, particularly those recently interpreted and enforced by the Dean of Women. Godwin emphasized the importance of student attitude in reflecting the aims of the college, implying that this condition is unlikely under present conditions.

SGA did not recommend any action but presented the situation and tried to promote understanding. Several members of the administration implied that they had not realized the seriousness and extent of the current student attitude toward the Dean of Women.

The only definite step made was Dr. Keppell's suggestion for further consideration of the problem. Dean Dearborn recommended that Dr. Keppell and Godwin select a committee of six to study the situation.

Direct results of the session will depend upon the findings of the committee to be formed. However, indirect results may prove even more beneficial. Students attending the meeting feel that progress has been made in better acquainting the administration with the feelings of the student body.

A particularly encouraging factor in the meeting was courtesy displayed by Dr. Keppell, Dean Dearborn, and Dean Sessoms. Students meeting with them felt that this diplomacy helped to relieve embarrassment felt by members having to discuss an unpleasant situation.

The SGA also should be commended in preparing an objective, conscientious report indicating confidence that members of the administration would consider the problem. This method is more effective and more mature than leaving the student body to its own devices for informing the administration of student attitudes.

Possibly, the most important result of the session is the recognition of the communication problem. Discussion following the report showed that much criticism of the rules and of the Dean of Women can be attributed to misconception and misinterpretation. We hope that better communication can be created by the administration and through the work of the Women's Residence Council with the cooperation of the Dean of Women.

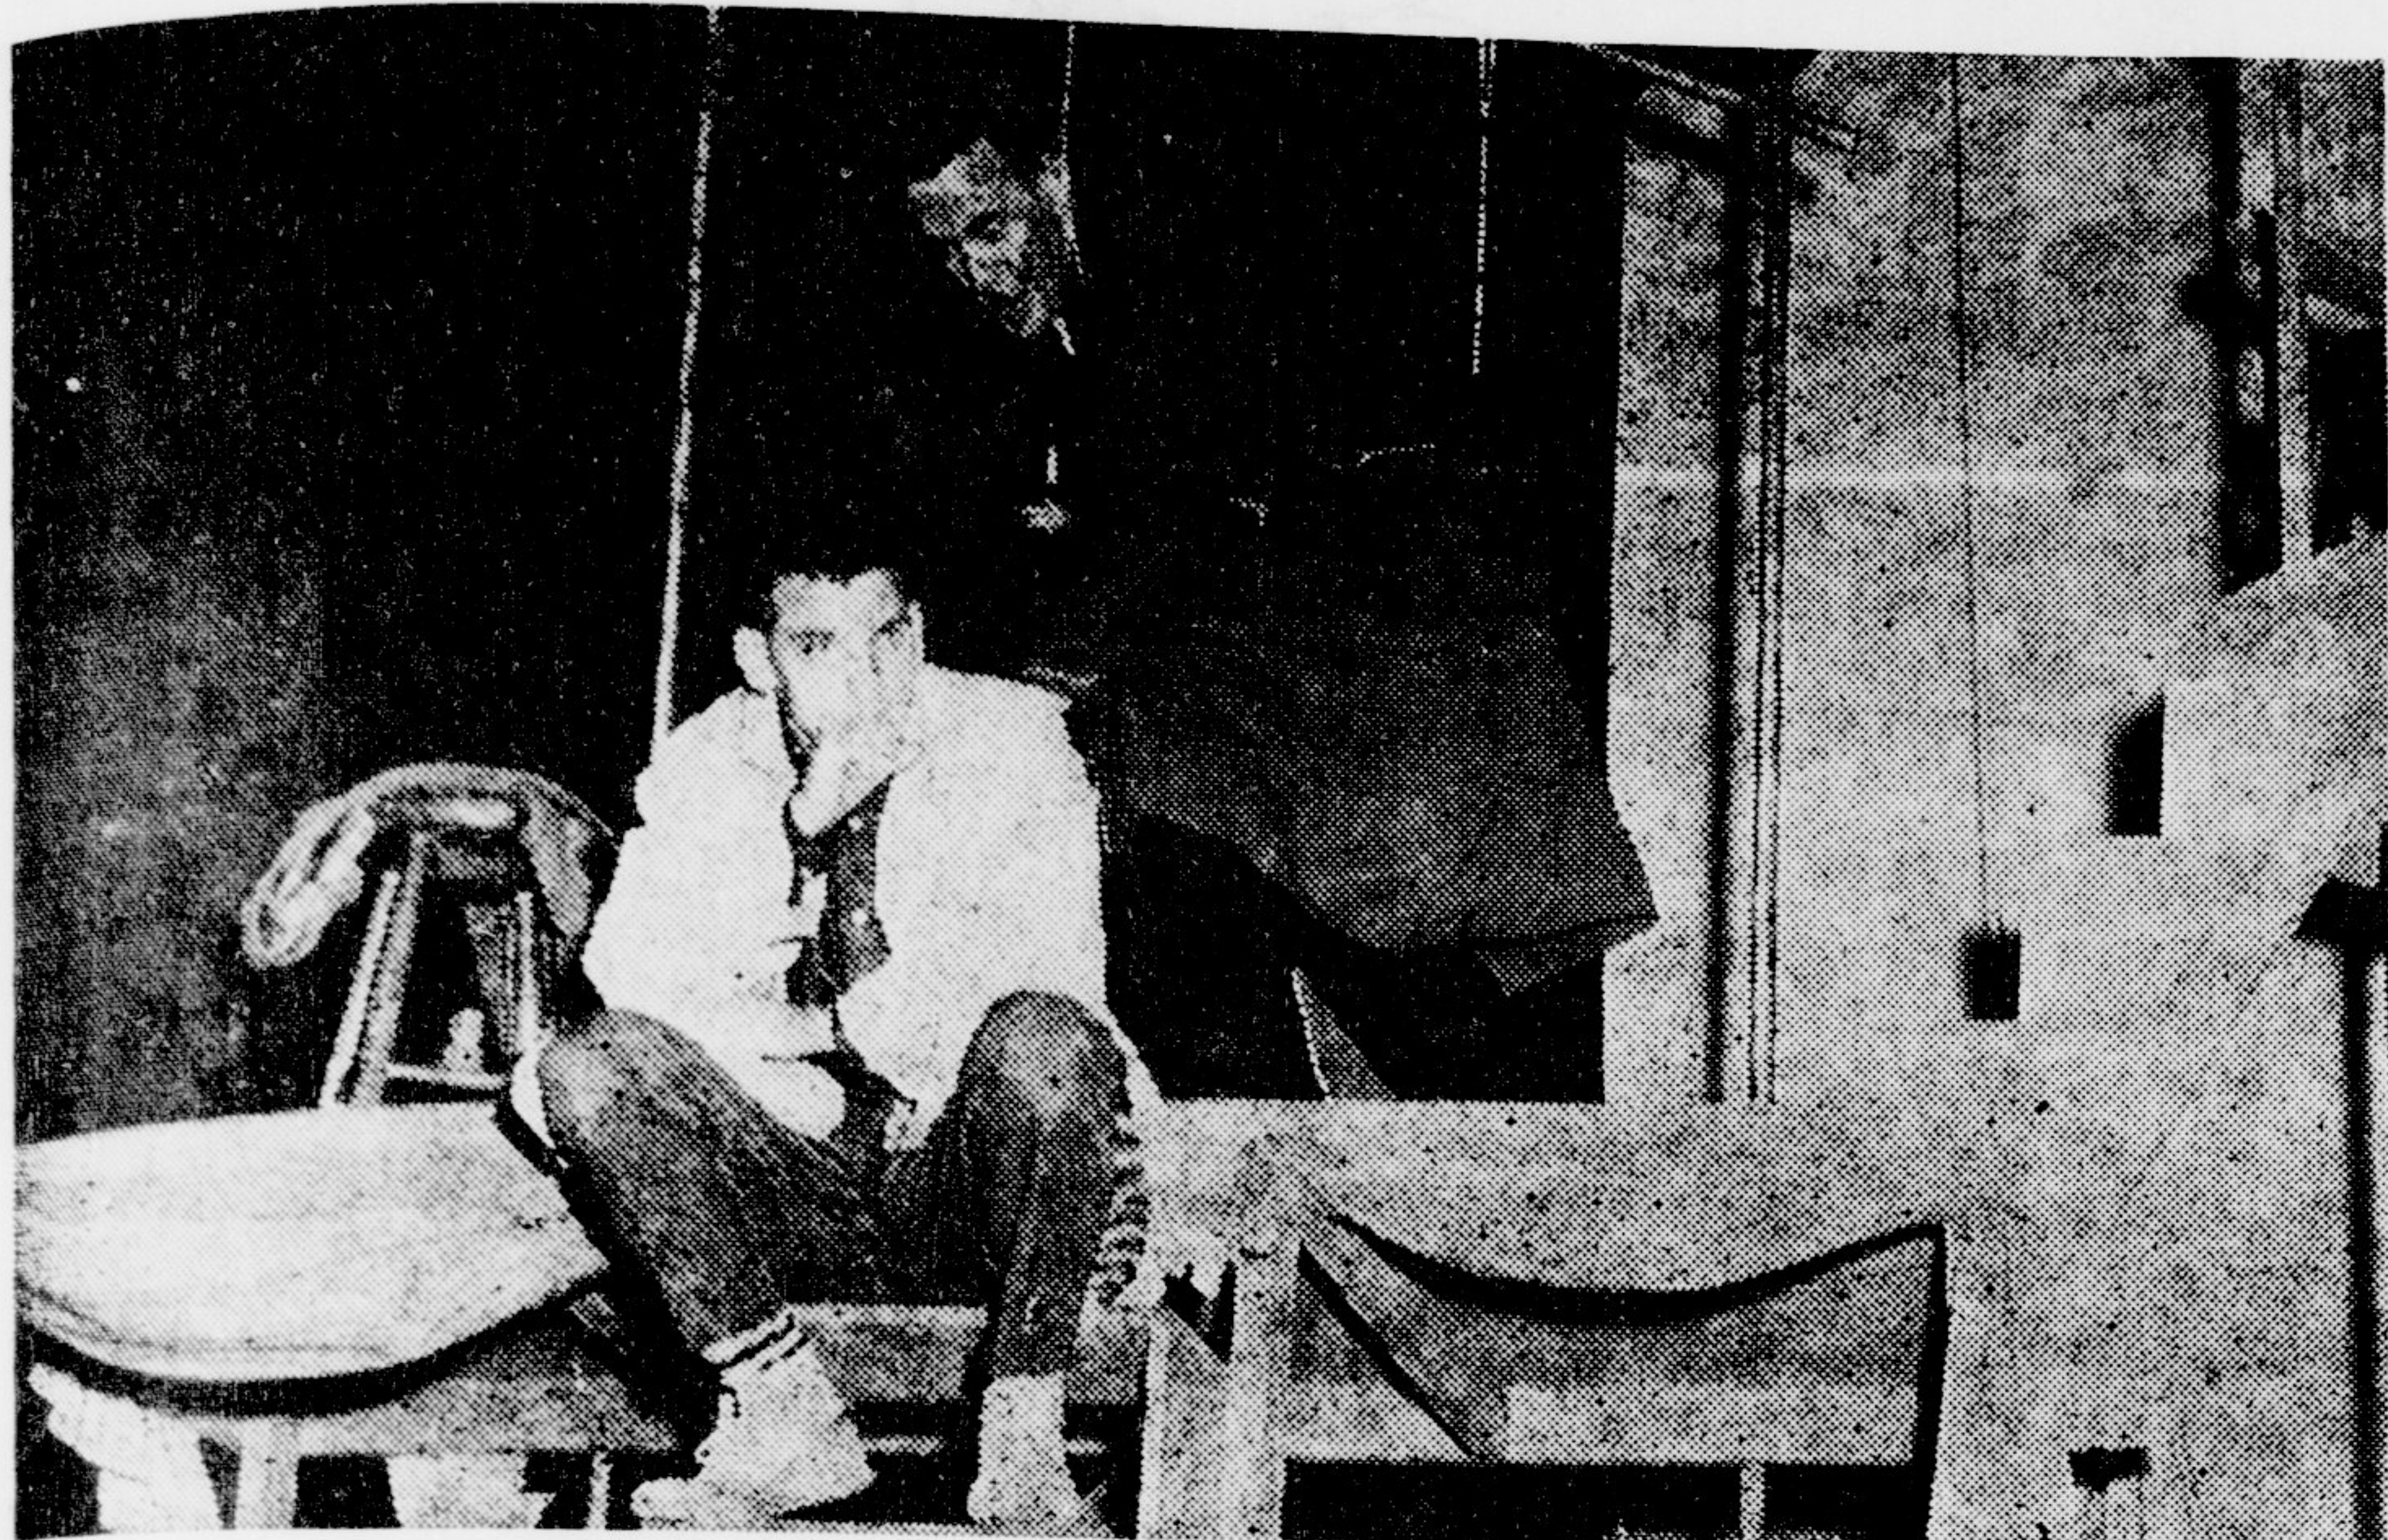

Letters

The EAST CAROLINIAN welcomes letters from its readers. The briefer they are, the better is the prospect of publication. Letters should be kept to a maximum of 250 words. They should also be of general interest. All are subject to condensation and should conform to the standards of decency and good taste. We assume no responsibility for statements made. All letters to the EAST CAROLINIAN must be signed. Names will be withheld on request if the Editor can be shown sufficient reason for doing so.

Playhouse Presents Modern 'Job'

J. B. Struggles Between

Powers Of Good, Evil

Mr. Zuss (Bob Allen) tries to persuade Nickles (Clyde Putnam) to go along with the idea of playing the roles of God and the Devil as they should be played in the Book of Job. Nickles seems to be very disagreeable as he listens to the argument given by Mr. Zuss.

The Archibald MacLeish play "J.B." is now being presented by the EC Playhouse. The stage setting and lighting, the unorthodox by-play between Mr. Zuss and Nickles, and the beauty of the play's verse form capture and hold the audience's attention from the beginning of Act I until the falling of the curtain on the last scene.

Headed by Edward Loessin as director, the staff and cast are as follows: John Sneed, technical director and set designer; Bob Immamura, lighting designer; Carolista Fletcher, costumes; English

131 class, set construction; John
Behr, masks; Brad Weisiger, J.B.;
Casandra Drake, his wife, Sarah;
Bob Allen of Greenville, Mr. Zuss; and Clyde Putnam, Nickles.

"J.B." opens as two old carnival vendors, Mr. Zuss and Nickles, come upon the set where a troop of actors present the Book of Job every night. Mr. Zuss and Nickles decide to play the parts of God and Satan as they should be played. Mr. Zuss assumes the role of God while his friend portrays Satan. The two men pick up the actors' masks and hold them before their faces. Out of nowhere comes a voice, speaking lines from the Bible.

Actors appear to enact the Book (or J.B.). Originally playacting, the situation suddenly becomes reality, presenting a modernized version of Job, right out of the Bible. J.B. is a pawn in the struggle between the powers of Good and Evil. His children are killed, his world is destroyed, and his wife leaves him because she cannot stand his blind acceptance of unjustified punishment.

Throughout all of his suffering J.B. continues to praise God. Finally his last test, bodily affliction, is visited upon him. He still praises God; but he cries out, asking what he has done to deserve such suffering. At this point his comforters arrive and they tell him that Man is guilty simply by being Man. This is no answer. In the midst of his troubles, J.B. calls upon God for a reason for his afflictions.

God answers only to the extent of inquiring, "Who are you to question Me?" J.B. repents of his "sins" and asks forgiveness, but forgiveness for what? He has done no wrong. Nickles puts this question to Mr. Zuss, "Is God to be forgiven?" That is what J.B. is really doing.

Satan believes that J.B. would never risk going through such torment again. As Mr. Zuss points out, there is always one more act. J.B. regains his losses, including his wife. The play closes as J.B. expresses his belief, "As long as we have each other . . . perhaps we can endure it. We are, and that is all we can ever know."

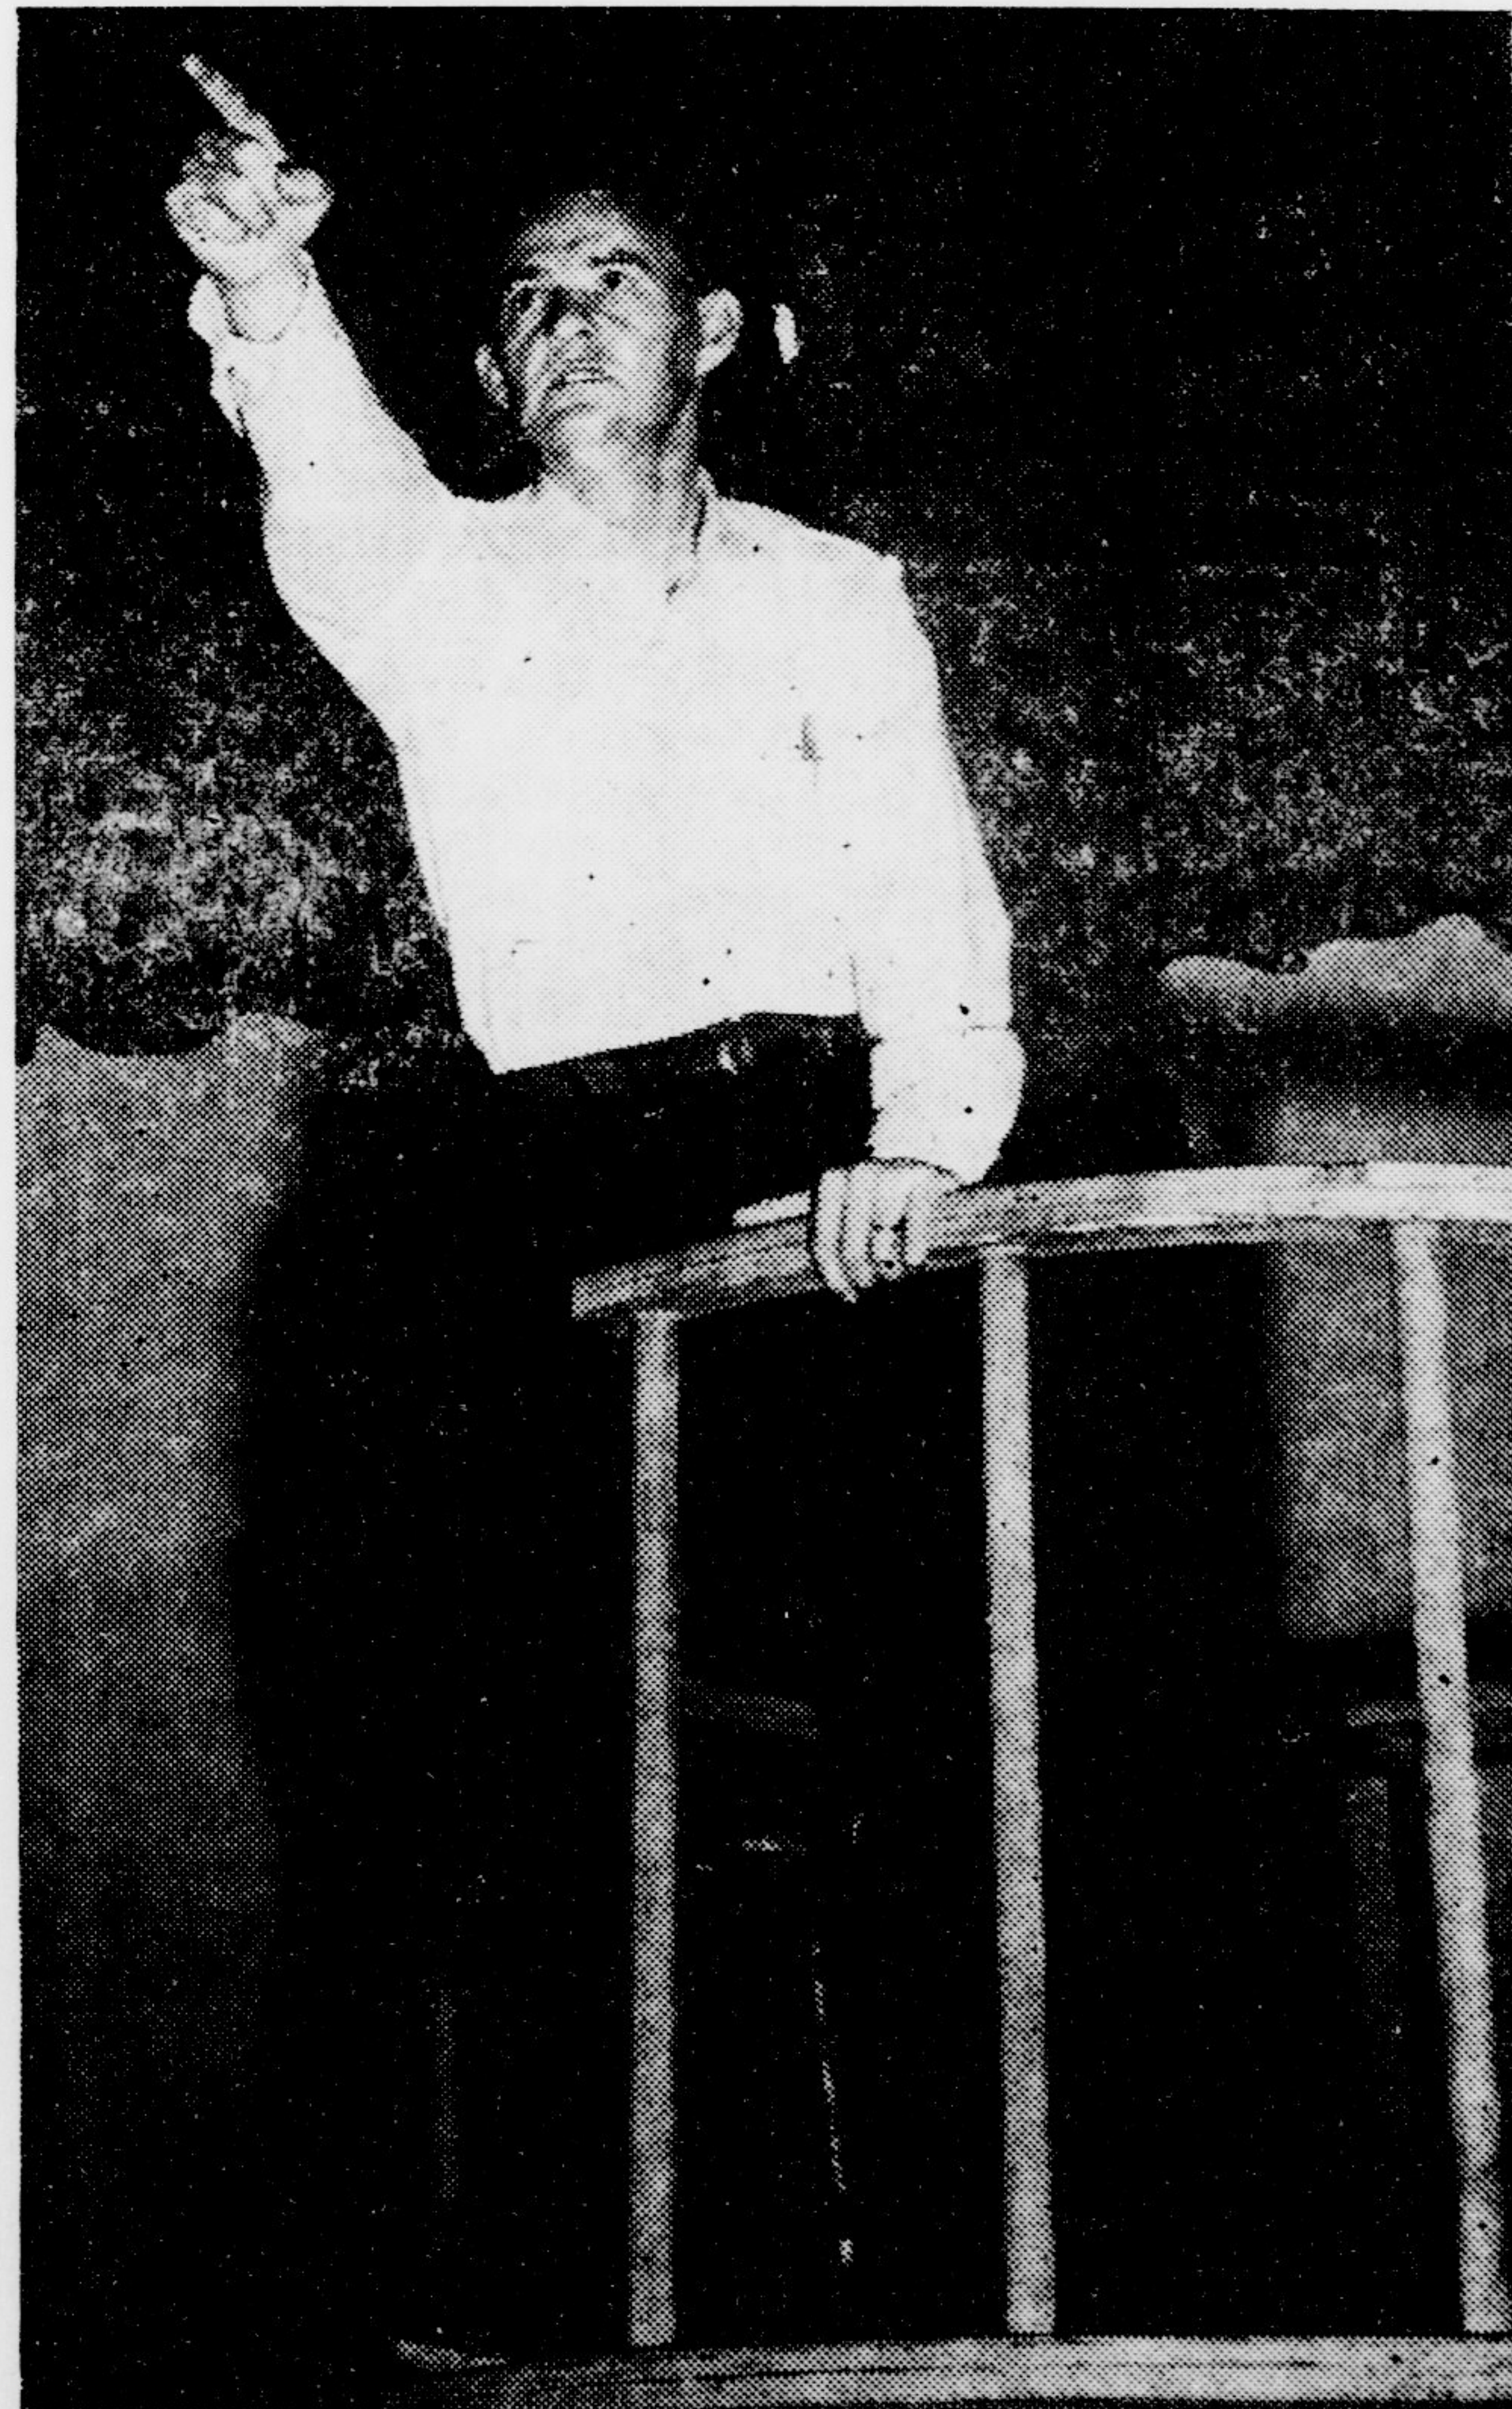

J. B., portrayed by Brad Weisiger, puzzled by his unwarranted affliction, cries out to God.

Director Edward Loessin enlightens Casandra Drake, who portrays J.B.'s wife, Sara, about one of the scenes. Watching over Loessin's shoulder is Donald Miller, a workman in the play.

"You're no actor. You're just a popcorn peddler," Mr. Zuss (God) exclaims to Nickles (Devil). Bob Allen portrays God in the Playhouse production of "J. B." now being presented in McGinnis Auditorium.

After the world has been disrupted by an atomic blast, four old women, played by (left to right) Chris Schwenke, Lucille Dew, Della Basnight, Shirley Morse, befriend J. B.

Alpha Delta Tau Installs Kyles, Moore, Piner

Alpha Delta Tau, Industrial Arts honorary fraternity, installed John Piner, William Moore III, and Don Kyles as new members at a dinner held at the Cinderella Restaurant this week.

Alpha Delta Tau is an honorary fraternity based on scholastic achievement in Industrial Arts and related fields. It is primarily interested in promoting professional advancement in Industrial Arts, fostering scholastic proficiency in Industrial Arts, and encouraging all members to uphold personal and professional honor.

Faculty members of the Industrial Arts Department who attended the installation ceremony were Dr. Kenneth Bing, director, and Robert Leith, both faculty advisors of the organization, and Blondy Scott.

Art Faculty Selects Student Of Month

The Art Student for the month of November, chosen by the faculty of the School of Art, is Jean Butler. Jean, a senior here, attended American University in Washington, D. C., for two years and studied liberal arts courses. After transferring to EC, she became interested in the arts. In this field, her major interests lie in graphic arts, particularly woodcuts.

Jean is a member of the Eastern Carolina Printmakers, an organization composed of student graphics majors; the Art Club; the Southeastern Art Association; and is secretary for the local chapter of Delta Phi Delta, the national honorary art fraternity. She is also on the Family Life Committee at EC.

Jean's work has been widely exhibited, including exhibition at the Corcoran Gallery and the Junior League Christmas Exhibition at the Mayflower Hotel, both in Washington, D. C. She has also been represented by lithographs exhibited among a traveling show extended from the EC School of Art to various areas of the state.

For her future, Jean plans either to travel to Tokyo with her parents or attend graduate school to obtain her master's degree.

Students Tour Insurance Depts.

More than 50 students recently toured in offices of Occidental Life Insurance Company and Nationwide Insurance Company in Raleigh.

The students, all majors in the School of Business, are enrolled in three separate classes in office management taught by Dr. James White, Dr. William Durham, and Bob Myers, faculty members of the School of Business.

The tour included visits to all major departments in these companies. Students observed the use of the latest in automated and data processing equipment and also had an opportunity to see office procedures and routines.

Chi Beta Phi Initiates Eleven New Members

Eleven students were initiated into Chi Beta Phi, national science and mathematics fraternity, this week.

They are Charles Stroud, Jr.; Eldon Nelson, Jr.; Gerald Mitchum; Roy Hyle II; Richard Miles; Melba Rhue; Elizabeth Brown; Mary Castelloe; Barbara McRoy; Julian

Worthington; and Margaret Hill.

Members of Chi Beta Phi will have an opportunity to hear outstanding speakers during the school year and will take an active part in seminars with the Science Club.

The local chapter was organized during the 1952-1953 term.

Serving as faculty advisors are Dr. Joseph LeConte and J. O. Derrick.

Notices

Those students who did not have their fraternity or sorority pictures made for the yearbook on the scheduled day may do so on Monday, November 19, between 3:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. or 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.

Proofs of yearbook pictures may be seen for the last day on Tuesday, November 20, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. If you have not indicated your preference for the yearbook, please do so.

Lambie Attends NCNSA Meeting

Ruth Lambie, assistant professor in the Home Economics Department and director of the Nursery School, and Mrs. Jannis Shea, assistant in the Nursery School, represented EC during the State meeting of the North Carolina Nursery School Association in Raleigh, November 10.

The purpose of the meeting was to present information on trends in development of facilities for children, special programs, current proposed regulations, and the needs of children now and in the future.

Dr. George Pasti

Interested In Comparative Study

Pasti Advocates Peace, Economic Development

By CAROLYN COKER

Dr. Pasti, a member of the History Department, is a native of Chicago. He attended Northwestern University and the University of Illinois where he obtained his doctor's degree in history. For two years Dr. Pasti studied at the Institute of Historical Research at London University doing research at the British Museum for his doctorate. Living with a Welsh couple, Dr. Pasti found his stay in Britain rewarding.

Dr. Pasti is intensely interested in a comparative study of Europe and Asia. In his quest for knowledge, he did post-doctoral work at Harvard at the center for Asian studies. He also belongs to an Asian Society whose yearly meetings he attends.

This dignified man was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma, the American History Association, and The American Association of University Professors of which he was once president.

Dr. Pasti thinks a sound knowledge of history is constructive in the world today. He feels that a revolutionary change, adopting workable disarmament agreements is necessary to reduce the threat of war. He argues that it would be helpful for world leaders to continue to avoid world war and to progress in economic development to alleviate the poverty that threatens peace.

COMMITTEES:
AN AGONIZING RE-APPRAISAL

To those of you who stay out of your student government because you believe the committee system is just an excuse for inaction, let me cite an example to prove that a committee, properly led and directed, can be a great force for good.

Last week the Student Council met at the Duluth College of Veterinary Medicine and Belles Lettres to discuss purchasing a new doormat for the students union. It was, I assure you, a desperate problem because Sherwin K. Sigafos, janitor of the students union, threatened flatly to quit unless a new doormat was installed immediately. "I'm sick and tired of mopping that dirty old floor," said Mr. Sigafos, sobbing convulsively. (Mr. Sigafos, once a jolly outgoing sort, has been crying almost steadily since the recent death of his pet wart hog who had been his constant companion for 22 years. Actually, Mr. Sigafos is much better off without the wart hog, who tusked him viciously at least once a day, but a companionship of 22 years is, I suppose, not lightly relinquished. The college tried to give Mr. Sigafos a new wart hog—a frisky little fellow with floppy ears and a waggly tail—but Mr. Sigafos only turned his back and cried the harder.)

He only turned his back and cried the harder

But I digress. The Student Council met, discussed the doormat for eight or ten hours, and then referred it to a committee. There were some who scoffed then and said nothing would ever be heard of the doormat again, but they reckoned without Invictus Millstone.

Invictus Millstone, chairman of the doormat committee, was a man of action—lithe and lean and keen and, naturally, a smoker of Marlboro Cigarettes. Why do I say "naturally"? Because, dear friends, active men and women don't have time to brood and bumble about their cigarettes. They need to be certain. They must have perfect confidence that each time they light up they will get the same gratifying flavor, the same Selectate filter, the same soft soft-pack, the same flip top flip-top box. In brief, dear friends, they need to be sure it's Marlboro—for if ever a smoke was true and trusty, it's Marlboro. Get some soon. Get matches too, because true and trusty though Marlboros are, your pleasure will be somewhat limited unless you light them.

Well sir, Invictus Millstone chaired his doormat committee with such vigor and dispatch that when the Student Council met only one week later, he was able to rise and deliver the following recommendations:

1. That the college build new schools of botany, hydraulic engineering, tropical medicine, Indo-Germanic languages, and millinery.
2. That the college drop football, put a roof on the stadium, and turn it into a low-cost housing project for married students.
3. That the college raise faculty salaries by $5000 per year across the board.
4. That the college secede from the United States.
5. That the question of a doormat for the students union be referred to a subcommittee.

So let us hear no more defeatist talk about the committee system. It can be made to work!

© 1962 Max Shulman

You don't need a committee to tell you how good Marlboros are. You just need yourself, a Marlboro, and a set of taste buds. Buy some Marlboros soon at your favorite tobacco counter.

SPORTS REVIEW

By LLOYD "STACK" LANE

Although most of the student body will not have the chance to see the Pirates play Wofford tomorrow in Spartanburg, S.C., they will have an opportunity to see some athletic competition on Saturday.

The annual Pi Kappa Alpha-Sigma Nu game will be played this Saturday afternoon at 2:00 in College Stadium. Both teams will be playing a regular football game, wearing football equipment, and observing the rules set down by the NCAA in accordance to college football games. It should be interesting to see this meeting of two football powers playing this game in order to raise money for the Ficklen Memorial Stadium Fund.

Another feature will be the freshman girls' powder-puff football game in the Gym on Monday night. The game will start at 7:30. The proceeds will go toward a dance that the freshmen are sponsoring.

Students felt that although the Pirates will be stronger than ever, scheduling Wake Forest is too big a step to take. They would really be surprised if they knew which teams the Frosh are trying to schedule (if they have not done so already) for next season. Not only will the frosh schedule be longer next year, but with the addition of these TWO teams will be tougher.

Prediction: In two years the Big Four will once again be the Big Five — Duke, UNC, State, Wake Forest, and EAST CAROLINA. A few years back, when Davidson had not started to de-emphasize athletics, the Big Four was the Big Five and included Davidson as the fifth member.

Talk about corrupt athletics! In a recent powder-puff football game (played by girls, although some boys would like to form a team and get into that league), one of the girls had the audacity to go into the other team's huddle and suggest a play. She then proceeded to run back to her side of the field, tell her teammates what the play was, where it was going, and even pointed to the girl who was going to carry the ball. The play was subsequently stopped for a two-yard loss.

If any girl does get injured during the course of one of these games, a few boys are always on hand to help remove the body.

It seems as though this columnist owes an apology to the men in the PI KAPPA ALPHA house for last Tuesday's paper. Contrary to the thought that seemed to prevail that SIGMA NU would donate their share of the money to new football uniforms and PI KAPPA ALPHA would stick their share away in the treasury, the PI KAPPA ALPHA fraternity will also donate their share of the proceeds to the school.

Frosh Girls Featured In Power Puff Football Game

For those of you, especially the men, who have never seen women play football, this is now a golden opportunity to witness such a spectacle. Tom Scott, President of the Freshman Class, announced that the class will sponsor a Powder Puff Football Game on Monday, November 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the gymnasium.

The proceeds from this promisingly interesting game will go toward more entertainment for the student body: a combo dance to be held Winter Quarter.

In Powder Puff Football, girls play against girls, and the outcome should be amusingly interesting. Tickets for the game can be purchased at the gate, in the CU, and they will also be circulated by individual students in the dorms. Buy a ticket, come out and enjoy the game and help the Freshman Class in this function.

Pirates Play Wofford Saturday; Travel To Spartanburg, S. C.

This Saturday, The Pirates travel to Spartanburg, South Carolina, to encounter Wofford. This will be a contest of two LR victims, both of which lost to LR by one point — EC lost 7-6 and Wofford lost 15-14.

The Terriers run a split-T offense with the flanker set wide and, quite often, put the end out on the opposite side to spread the defense for their strong running attack. Running is the keynote of the Wofford attack, although they use a lot of quick jump passes to take advantage of the height advantage of their pass receivers. Wofford's receivers average 6'3" and weigh around 210 lbs.

There is no such animal as fall back in the Terrier ground game, only halfbacks. Wofford has three halfbacks in Roma, Hipp, and Lane, who can move the ball up the field using the quick hitting dive plays that the Terriers employ with a great deal of success. No one has been able to stop the ground game of the Terriers this year. No opponent has had to worry about stopping the ground attack because Wofford usually stops itself with a fumble. They have muffed many a scoring opportunity this year because of a fumble deep in enemy territory.

The flanker back for the Terriers is Bramman — a 220 lb. back. Bramman and right end Housel are the favorite targets for the Wofford quarterback Ellis. Ellis never runs the ball and is primarily a third down and long yardage passer; that is, he seldom passes except on third down and long yardage.

The interior line of the Terriers averages 220 lbs. — offensively and defensively. Outstanding on defense for Wofford are Byrd, a 230 lb. middle line backer, and Belcher, a 235 lb. defensive tackle. The offensive line has two standouts in Rogers and Padgett, who play the tackle position. Byrd is the center offensively.

The Pirates will have to stop the offensive power that Wofford generates, but should be able to move the ball against the Wofford defense.

EC will be using some new plays that they have been working on in practice this week against Wofford. Tailback Bill Cline, completely recovered from an injury sustained in the first game of the season, will do the punting. Pirate kicker Bill Bailey is out for the rest of the season because of a shoulder separation. Bailey and Frankie Galloway are the only major injuries although there are a few other slight ailments on the squad. Winning this game would give the Pirates an even split in their record so far this year. The Pirates are now 3-4. Wofford has a 2-2 record.

WRA Holds Meeting

The Women's Recreation Association held an open meeting on November 5.

Miss Russell, the advisor, spoke on the formulation of interest in leisure-time activities.

Alpha Phi is the winner of the sorority division of the volleyball intramurals.

Ann Kizer has been elected WRA representative for the Buccaneers.
