Publications Attend 3rd Annual Meeting

East Carolina College will stage its Third Annual Publications Conference, Saturday, March 9. Staff members of high school newspapers and yearbooks and their advisors throughout Eastern North Carolina have been invited to attend through announcements mailed this week to school principals. Short courses in school newspaper and yearbook production, a luncheon in the South Dining Hall, and announcement of awards to students and schools competing for honors will be among major events of the program.

Robert F. Campbell, Editorial Page Editor of the Winston-Salem JOURNAL-SENTINEL, and Lee Blackwell of Goldsboro, representative of the Taylor Publishing Company of Dallas, Texas, will conduct short courses in newspaper and yearbook production, respectively. These meetings are scheduled for 10 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.

Sam Ragan, Executive Editor of the Raleigh NEWS & OBSERVER, will be principal speaker at the luncheon in the South Dining Hall at the college at 12:30 p.m.

Plaques presented by the Eastern North Carolina Press Association and the Taylor Publishing Company will be awarded at the luncheon to the best yearbooks from two schools one with fewer than 400 students and one with more than 400 students, and to newspaper writers of the best news, sports, and feature stories, and the best editorial. Honorable mention will be made of those awarded runners-up.

Student editors and faculty advisors on the staffs of campus publications, and officers of the SGA are assisting with arrangements. Serving on a committee in charge of the conference are Mary H. Greene, Director of the EC News Bureau, Chairman; Mrs. Mary Goodman of the English Department, Program Chairman; and Dr. James W. Butler Assistant Director of Public Relations, Coordinator.

EC Participates In Nationwide Bridge Tourney

East Carolina College will be one of the more than 175 colleges, universities, and junior colleges throughout the country which will participate in the 1963 National Inter-collegiate Bridge Tournament. All play will be by mail and will be conducted on the individual campuses in a single session. It will be held Monday, February 18, at 7:00 p.m. in the Wright Social Room.

This is a duplicate contract bridge contest in which men and women at leading colleges and universities compete for championship titles and trophies. Traveling trophies and plaques will be given the college participants winning the national titles. Each of four individual national winners will receive a cup for permanent possession. All competing colleges play a set of sixteen hands. These hands are prepared and scored by William Root, a nationally recognized authority on contract bridge.

East Carolina College Union has entered the Inter-collegiate Bridge Tournament for the past six years. Details concerning eligibility requirements for participation can be obtained at the CU Office. Interested participants must sign up in the CU Office by Friday, February 15.

Committee Submits Budget To Assembly

Last Friday the budget committee submitted its recommendations to the General Assembly. The recommendations included nine new construction jobs at East Carolina College. Capital improvements for 1963-65, which the college had asked for, included fifteen new construction jobs totaling $10,429,000. The budget committee recommendation total was $7,014,000, which would include $3,701,000 in state money and $3,313,000 from self-liquidating loans.

Recommended was a $970,000 building to replace Austin. The new building is to be a 63,500 square foot, air conditioned classroom building. This would be paid for by bonds subject only to legislative approval.

$519,000 for an addition to Joyner Library.

$28,000 for an addition to the maintenance facilities.

$157,000 for an addition to the

Jones Hall Cafeteria.

$700,000 to pay half the cost of a 6,000 seat gymnasium. The other half would have to come through self-liquidation loans.

$815,000 classroom building for education and psychology (subject to bond approval by legislature).

$512,000 for partial cost of replacing Wilson Hall. The college had asked for $1,100,000. The remaining cost would have to be financed through federal loans.

$650,000 for additions to Wright Building. This would be entirely by self-liquidation loans.

$1,375,000 for new men's dorms—also entirely paid for by self-liquidating loans.

The following are improvements the college asked for but which the budget committee refused to recommend:

$750,000 for a home economics and nursing school building.

$210,000 for purchase of additional land.

$1,100,000 for another seven

story women's dormitory.

$1,200,000 for a 75,000 square foot music building.

$70,000 for walks and drives.

$85,000 for outdoor athletic facilities.

Dr. Horne Joins Secondary School Study Program

Dr. John Horne, Director of Admissions, has been appointed a member of a new committee on secondary schools of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, the purpose of which is to formulate a clear policy on the relationship of the association's Commission on Secondary Schools to the Committee on Elementary Schools.

The appointment of Dr. Horne was made by Morris Cierley of Lexington, Ky., Chairman of the Commission on Secondary Schools of the Southern Association.

The new committee on Secondary Schools will work with the committee on elementary schools. These groups will focus attention on finding solutions to such problems as evaluation and accreditation of twelve-grade schools and establishment of good working relations within each state in order to serve the best interests of education in the South.

EC Young Democrats Attend Raleigh Weekend Lectures

Bing has announced. Dr. T. J. Haigwood of the college faculty is acting as chairman of the conference.

School administrators in the eastern counties of the state have been invited to attend morning and afternoon sessions.

"It is our hope that this conference will answer some of the questions faced by school administrators on some of the values of industrial arts in a comprehensive secondary school curriculum," Dr. Bing stated.

Superintendent A. B. Gibson of Laurinburg City Schools, as principal speaker at the conference, will address participants at a luncheon at 12:30 p.m.

Chief event of the morning session, opening at 10 o'clock, will be a panel discussion of the conference topic. Taking part will be Principal Guy T. Swain of the Rose High School, Greenville; Superintendent Roy F. Lowry of Northampton County Schools, Jackson;

Eng. Instructor Mills Writes "Pig Manual"

Harlan Mills, instructor of English at EC, is the author of "The Pig Manual: Photographed Dissection of the Fetal Pig," which was published this week by the Wm. C. Brown Company Publishers, Dubuque, Iowa.

"The Pig Manual" pictures the fetal pig in the various stages of dissection required by college biology and zoology courses. Photographs are labeled and defined by a brief text.

Mills completed the manuscript for his book at Southern Methodist University in Dallas. Employing a professional photographer and an experienced laboratory technician, he organized the cycle of dissection into an authoritative text.

Mills points out that it is unusual for a student of literature to produce a biology manual, but that the idea of creating a book to meet the needs of biology students intrigued him sufficiently to motivate his work on "The Pig Manual."

The book will be adopted by colleges and high schools using the fetal pig as a laboratory specimen.

Mills 24, joined the EC faculty last September. He received his MA degree in literature from Yale, and his BA degree from Southern Methodist University in French and comparative literature. His one-act play entitled "The White Picket Fence" appeared in the fall issue of The Rebel.

ACADEMIC FREEDOM

In an article entitled "The Unreported Crisis in the Southern Colleges" in the October issue of Harper's, C. Vann Woodward discusses the recent attacks in the South on academic freedom. In the article, Woodward spent most of his four and a half pages cataloguing incidents in violation of academic freedom. These incidents almost invariably resulted from pressure applied on college presidents by politicians or other high muckety-mucks in the world of anybody's-soul-for-sale-at-the-right-price. The incidents usually resulted in the peremptory dismissal of a professor or student whose expressed views did not correspond to those of the whip hands.

Woodward points out that the most frequent Southern violators of academic freedom are reactionaries—White Citizens Council, Ku Klux Klan, John Birch Society—who clash with current agitations for Negro rights. (Most offenders in any area seem to be reactionaries of one kind or another.) These reactionaries take great pleasure in discussing how the "unctuous and dishonest cloak of academic freedom" is used to conceal sedition and outright treason. Their shenanigans and innuendoes have resulted in nearly twenty new cases outstanding of academic freedom and tenure in the files of the American Association of University Professors in the last year. This almost equals the number of violations previously extant from the entire history of that organization.

Aside, may we remind Mr. Woodward that in his discussion of these harbingers of would-be New McCarthyism, he should not forget that travesties on the sanctity of the academic community occur elsewhere than in the South. Recently, for example, right-wing Senator Barry Goldwater forced the resignation of University of Colorado President Quig Newton, in one of the most astounding breaches of justice and honor ever witnessed. To make matters even more distasteful, Goldwater is not a citizen of Colorado.

If these incidents do nothing else, they illustrate the deplorable necessity for members of the academic community to be politicians. This necessity results in a situation which Mr. Woodward describes as "... timidity and shame in the classroom ... a cloud of distrust and suspicion between trustees and state officials, between faculty and administration, between students and teachers. What happens to the pursuit of truth and the advancement of learning in such an atmosphere as the heresy hunters and thought controllers have created ... can only be conjectured."

No longer can the college be a center of intelligent analysis and challenge in every field. Today it must pander the views of the legislator and the hypocritical donor. Its one-time freedom of intellectual fertility and imaginative critical examination has been replaced by madding flight into conformity and safety. Questions that at one time were considered "thought provoking" are today, more frequently than not, taken to be politically or ideologically seditious and consequently disastrous. American's stronghold of freedom appears in great danger of becoming America's sinkhole of inculcated orthodoxy.

Jersey Joe And Quality Ed.

By JIM WILLIS

President Kennedy's legislation in Congress providing for federal aid to education, in its essence is proposing for the United States what North Carolina did for its one hundred counties a long time ago. Several years ago the North Carolina General Assembly adopted a proposal which stated in effect that geographic accident of birth would have no effect upon the education available to a child born anywhere in the State of North Carolina. In other words, a child born in Martin County has the same educational opportunities as does a child born in the more populous, and incidentally, more prosperous, Mecklenburg County.

Why, then, must equal educational opportunities be limited to the children within North Carolina, or within the boundaries of other states that have enacted similar statutes? Why can't a child born in North Carolina be assured of having the same educational opportunities as those enjoyed by a child born in New York or California? Evidence repeatedly shows us that even though we like to think of North Carolina as being equal to New York in any area. We are wrong as far as education is concerned. To put the matter bluntly, a high school graduate of North Carolina is far inferior to a high school graduate of New York state or any number of other states. When we say "inferior," we speak not of basic intelligence, but rather of cultural experiences, international understanding, social achievements, and a score of other facets that are basic criteria to the degree of education one has. Test scores of the Air Force Officers' Qualifying Test administered by the Air Science Department at EC indicate that even though basic intelligence may be equal, a student from New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Florida, or any number of other states has a far greater chance of passing the exam than do students from North Carolina. Why the difference? The answer is simply a quality education that most North Carolina students never even hear about much more have the opportunity of enjoying. Excluding the few city school systems such as those found in Raleigh, Greensboro, Charlotte, and Winston-Salem, how many high school graduates of North Carolina have ever had courses such as psychology, sociology, solid geometry, trigonometry, or even a decent course in English composition? The situation is a sad one when one ponders over it long, and it is also one which we have difficulty in accepting. It takes effort, prolonged effort, to swallow the fact that Joe, an EC freshman from White Plains, N. Y., knows more about American history than we do after having had it in high school and college when Joe has had it only in high school.

It is a little late for those of college age to do very much about the situation for themselves. We must remember, however, that most of us will rear families in North Carolina. Will the children of these families have the educational opportunities that we of North Carolina never had? Don't we really want them to be equal to any child born in any state in this nation? Will they be able to meet the challenge of change without the educational deficit that plaques the average high school graduate of North Carolina today?

Being in one of my creative moods, I decided to compose a poem and moving poem. I wrote:
Little fly upon my wall,
Ain't you got no shoes at all?
Ain't you got no undershirt?
Ain't you cold?
My creative mood satisfied, I turned out my lights. Twelve o'clock finally arrived and after the people upstairs discontinued their boring lessons, I drifted off to dreamland. And the sun had gone down on the fourth day of my confinement.

INFANTRY DID IT TOO

By HERB WILLIAMS

The Marine Corps Commandant found an Executive Order written by Theodore Roosevelt and sent it to the President. The President "requested" that some marine officers comply with the order which calls for a fifty mile hike, and now everyone from the Marine Corps to the White House Press Secretary is getting into the act. No doubt, every U.S. Army Infantryman who was stationed in Germany in 1961 is doubled up with laughter since practically all of them made a similar hike "two years ago" by "request" of no one higher than their Battle Group Commanders.

In the Summer and Fall of 1961, every Infantry Battle Group in Germany completed their hikes while the newspaper kept a running account. Company "E", 1st Battle Group, 18th Infantry, made its hike in early September. The hike was completed by marching twelve miles the first day, fifteen miles on the second day, and eighteen miles on the third day. Several men made the entire march without stopping and finished in approximately eighteen hours. After the first day, one man had an attack of abdominal cramps (which turned out to be appendicitis a month later) and was told he was being sent back to the barracks the next morning. He refused to quit and completed the hike. There was no rule that said they had to but the company doubled the last quarter mile just to show the Colonel they could do it. In addition to this hike, the company was required to make a ten mile hike every week. When the Expert Infantryman Badge test came up each contestant had to complete a twelve mile hike within three hours and one hundred and fifty men made it successfully.

RESTRICTION

To the Editor:

One thing about being restricted you certainly learn to occupy your time with all kinds of activities. Busy! busy! busy!

Take this weekend, for example. Part of Friday night was spent in a stimulating game of ping-pong. My friends, Carrie and Jose (the names have been changed to protect the dateless) allowed me to chase all through the dorm in search of a ball. Then they allowed me to chase the ball while they played. Finally, they even considered letting me play a game, but by this time I was too tired to lift the paddle, so I kept score instead. My friends are also avid bridge fans. We spent a riotous evening playing bridge, discussing men, playing bridge, staring gloomily at each other, playing bridge. We even cried a little. Finally twelve o'clock arrived, the people upstairs stopped driving nails in the furniture, and I climbed into bed.

Saturday was even more exciting. For entertainment, I answered the phone from 6:45 'til 11:00 p.m. Not only did this stimulate my circulation, but I actually got a chance to talk to some living breathing men oh joy—oh gee. In the course of four and one half hours I managed to thoroughly insult one operator, discourage three romances, climb thirty-six flights of steps, and get lost two times.

Sunday, now Sunday was my big day. Did you know that there are 351 squares on my floor?—twelve cracks in my ceiling?—35 slats in my blinds?—ten green stripes and twelve white stripes on my bath towel?—and 73 cigarette butts in my madras ashtray? Did you know that my faucet drips on the average of 62 times every minute?

Being in one of my creative moods, I decided to compose a poem and moving poem. I wrote:

Little fly upon my wall,
Ain't you got no shoes at all?
Ain't you got no undershirt?
Ain't you cold?

My creative mood satisfied, I turned out my lights. Twelve o'clock finally arrived and after the people upstairs discontinued their boring lessons, I drifted off to dreamland. And the sun had gone down on the fourth day of my confinement.

House of Representatives in 1962. Other speakers included Roy Lee, president of the local club; James Johnson, Lawrence, and Edward Mae Jones, Winston-Salem. Midnight Mayhem Bewilders Broadcasters

Late last Saturday night quite a disturbance erupted in Joyner Library. As the people working on WWWS were leaving the studio shortly after midnight, they heard voices in the library and noticed that one of the back doors, which are usually locked, was ajar. A search was started by the broadcasters with the help of three other students who were passing by. The restrooms, closets, and halls were thoroughly checked by the students who split into two groups. One person discovered that a door which leads to the third tier of library stacks was unlocked. Doors such as that one are supposed to be kept locked at all times. After the students had checked through the building without finding anyone, the police arrived and searched it again, still without finding anyone. It is believed that the persons must have left by way of an unguarded door.

SPORTS REVIEW

By LLOYD "STACK" LANE

The Pirate swimmers gave up glory here Saturday afternoon to uphold sportsmanship in their meet with Old Dominion College. The EC team could have easily swamped the tankmen from Old Dominion by a score of 82-11, but Coach Ray Martinez decided to hold the score down in order to make the meet interesting.

If Coach Martinez had left the decision up to the spirited Pirate team, the blue and white team from Norfolk, Virginia would have been left submerged in the pool long after the meet had ended.

To top off the meet, the EC swimming team held a grueling practice session after the meet's last event. It appears that Coach Martinez wants the team to be in the best possible physical condition for the trip to Florida. The Pirates will face some of the best swimming teams in the nation on this up-coming excursion. These teams include the University of Florida, the University of Miami, and Florida State.

What has happened to the Clemson Tigers recently? On January 15, the Tigers had a 4-8 record. Last week's victory over Virginia was the sixth straight for the rampaging maneaters. It pushed this season's record to 10-8. Could it be that Clemson is looking forward to tournament time this year and are hoping to make a repeat performance of last years tournament when they upset State and Duke on consecutive nights before losing to Wake Forest in the finals? They have already beaten the second place team in the conference this year. Wake Forest found the Tigers ready for this years competition. The Clemson team knocked Wake Forest out of a first place tie with Duke last Wednesday 71-70.

Tulane ended a 10-game losing streak by knocking off sixth-ranked Georgia Tech last Saturday in an overtime game which saw the Green Wave come from behind time after time before taking the victory 77-69. It was the first victory for Tulane in the Southeastern Conference this year. The victory pushed the Engineers out of first place in the conference.

Tournament time in the Atlantic Coast Conference will be giving ACC coaches gray hairs, and might cause those with gray hairs to lose what hair they still have. If Duke remains number one, they will have the easiest opening assignment. The Blue Devils would open against South Carolina. Every other game would almost have to be listed as a toss-up. Wake Forest would play Maryland. No one really knows how tough Maryland is because the Terps have not been at full strength all season due to injuries. Carolina would play Virginia. That should be an interesting game. The Cavaliers have been impressive in many of their games this year, especially against the Wolfpack. The UVA team has beaten the Wolfpack twice this season and has pushed Carolina, Duke, and Wake Forest to the utmost before losing. State College will meet the Clemson Tigers if the present trend in the conference is maintained. The Tiger's claws have sharpened as of late. Clemson has put together a six-game winning streak including on one-point victory over the Deacons.

EC-CU Bowling Finalists Compete In Atlanta, Ga.

The College Union announced the results of EC's local rolloff for the five men who will represent EC in the Regional Inter-collegiate Bowling Tournament at Atlanta, Georgia on February 15 and 16.

Norman Blackwell, Doug Marlow, Kerry Schmidt, Jerry Waters, and Mike Romaniw are the five men who will represent the Union at the Region 4 Tourney. These five will have all expenses paid and will compete against such colleges and universities as Duke, UNC, Wake Forest, North Carolina State, Georgia Tech, Florida, Tennessee, Georgia, Vanderbilt, and Virginia.

EC's five representatives won this spot in the local playoff last month at Hillcrest Lanes. During this tournament each participant bowled two, six-game blocks. The top twenty men who posted the highest scratch totals entered the rolloffs in which another twelve games were bowled to determine the top five.

These are the scores that allowed the following to enter: Doug Marlowe—2215, Jerry Wallace—2203, Kerry Schimdt—2197, Norman Blackwell—2193, and Mike Romaniw—2159.

The Union wishes to express its thanks to all those who participated in this event.

Elon Beats Pirates On Road, 69-63

EC's Pirates, after leading for most of the game, fell behind with less than four minutes remaining, and went down to defeat before Elon's Fighting Christians 69-63 in Saturday nights game at Elon.

The Bucs jumped off to an early 35-25 lead with ten minutes gone in the first stanza only to have this margin cut to six points at halftime. EC left the floor at the end of the initial period leading 39-36.

Three quick jump shots by Miller pulled the Christians within one point of the Pirate five 43-42 after six minutes had gone by in the second half. A free throw by the Christians tied it up at 43 all seconds later. This was the first time that the Christians had been even with EC since the early minutes of the game.

One minute later the Elon team went into the lead on a jump shot by Morningstar following a foul shot by Brogden. With 13 minutes remaining, the blue and white team lead 45-44. Elon managed to keep the Pirates at bay until Bill Otte sank a foul shot to tie the game up again at 61-61 with 4:16 left to play.

Elon's D. Andrews sank two free throws to put his team ahead at 63-61. Morningstar hit four more free tosses to push the Christians way ahead of the Pirates at 67-61. The Bucs managed one more basket before D. Andrews sank the final basket of the game to give the Elon team the game at 69-63.

Bill Otte was high man in the game with 20 points. Williams hit 15 and Brogden bagged 14 for EC. The Elon team featured four men in double figures. Andrews was top scorer for Elon with 19, followed by Morningstar 18 Miller 15, and Branson 10.

The Pirates record is now 10-7.
