Jose Molina Presents Spanish Performance

Jose Molina "Bailes Espanoles," Flamenco song-and-dance revue from Madrid, will be presented here Thursday at 8:15 in Wright Auditorium. The program will be the third attraction on the 1962-1963 Fine Arts Series at the college.

"Bailes Espanoles" features a company of nine performers—four women and five men—in a program of songs and dances. The most popular among the most popular in Spain today, have been described by American critics as "incredibly youthful, talented, and handsome."

All have impressive professional backgrounds, and have appeared with most of the great Flamenco artists of our time, such as Jose Greco, and Jimenez-Vargas.

More than one hundred engagements have been played or set since the company arrived in the U. S. last April. More than half of these sponsors have rebooked the company for return appearances in the months to come.

Critics have dusted off their bluest superlatives to describe the new company and its production, "Bailes Espanoles." They have described the production and performances as "exuberant", "breathtaking", "dazzling", "show-stopping", and "skillful."

Jose Molina, who heads the company, at the age of 23 has already won international acclaim as a master of the Spanish dance. After making his debut with the famous Soledad Miralles, he toured Europe and the Middle East. At the age of 18 he appeared in this country on Steve Allen's TV show and immediately afterwards joined the Jose Greco Company as "first dancer," a position he held for five years. He formed his own company in Madrid last year.

The program consists of songs and dances from the Spanish provinces, the gypsy camps of Andalusia, the court of Charles III, the great Spanish operas and ballets, and from the works of such non-Spanish composers as Ravel and Rimsky-Korsakov. Each of the show's twenty numbers is spectacularly choreographed and staged. Costumes for the production were designed in Madrid by Spain's foremost designers and are valued at more than fifty thousand dollars.

Dr. Alexander Directs New Forensic Society

A Forensic Society has been formed at East Carolina College under the direction of Dr. Michael J. Alexander of the School of Business. Dr. Alexander and Dr. Ralph H. Rives of the English Department will serve in advisory positions with the Society which will sponsor a debating team.

Present at the first meeting last Thursday night were Jerry Ainsfield, Doug Braswell, Janice Cockman, Shelba Grady, Fallon Melvin, Tom Mortillaro, Hubert Rehm, Patricia Tatum, and Jim Forsyth. A debating handbook was passed out which contained information about the current college and university debating subject, "Resolved: That the non-communitistic nations of the world should establish an economic community." The following officers were elected: Tom Mortillaro, president; Hubert Rehm, vice president; Janice Cockman, secretary-treasurer; Fallon Melvin will be in charge of transportation and Jim Forsyth will work with publicity.

Although actual debating will probably not start until next fall, the East Carolina group has been invited to observe debates at Hickory on March 7, 8, and 9. The next meeting, which is open to all interested persons, will be held tonight at 7:00 in the Library Auditorium.

Noted Chemist Speaks To Club

The Science Club will have as its speaker on February 27 a noted chemist from Chapel Hill, N. C., Dr. James Collman. Dr. Collman will speak to the club on Wednesday at 5:00 p.m. on "Organic Chemistry" in Flanagan 317. Everyone interested in this topic is invited to attend. Refreshments will be served afterwards.

Vinson Studies Under Janis; Spends Summer In France

Miss Emily Vinson, a candidate for the B. M. degree, with a major in performance in applied music, has been chosen by Mr. Byron Janis, celebrated young American pianist of international reputation, to study with him through the summer months at Nice, France. This is a distinct honor that has come to Miss Vinson since Mr. Janis is constantly in demand for concerts and recordings which leaves not time for teaching. The unanimous acclaim accorded Mr. Janis recently in Russia has now become musical history.

For the past five years, Miss Vinson has been a student of Dr. Robert Carter of the East Carolina College School of Music. During this time Miss Vinson was chosen in open competition to play the Bartok Concerto No. 3 with the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Benjamin Swalin, conductor. Last season she appeared in New York City in concert and this year has several engagements to fulfill.

As a sophomore at East Carolina College she won the orchestral appearance with the college orchestra and played the Beethoven Concerto No. 3 in C Minor.

Miss Vinson is just one of several students that are achieving distinction in applied music through the hands of Dr. Carter. Tasker Polk, a former student of Dr. Carter's, is now in Basel, Switzerland, studying with Paul Baumgartner. Mr. Polk had the honor of playing at the Governor's Mansion two times last season. He also gave two performances at the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh. Mr. Polk played with the North Carolina Symphony, performing the Ravel Left Hand Concerto.

Another student, Miss Carolyn Hinton, has this semester received the highest and most coveted award the School of Music of the University of Indiana has to offer—the Performer's Certificate. This award is given to one student only.

Cooke Presents Senior Recital Of Piano Works

Mrs. Olive Herring Cooke of Rockingham and Dunn was presented by the EC School of Music in her senior recital of works for the piano Monday, at 8:15 p.m.

Mrs. Cooke's recital was part of the requirements for the Bachelor of Music degree at East Carolina. She is studying piano under the direction of Elizabeth Drake of the college music faculty.

The evening program began with Bach-Siloti's "Prelude in G Minor" and Scarlatti's "Sonata in D Major." Other representative works on the program included "Etude op. 104, no. 1" by Mendelssohn; "Etude op. 10, no. 3" and "Valse op. 34, no. 1," both by Chopin.

In closing Mrs. Cooke selected Poulenc's "Perpetual Movement No. 1," Slonimsky's "Variations on a Kindergarten Tune," and Griffes' "Barcarolle op. 6, no. 1."

AT HOME FOREIGN AFFAIRS

In a world fraught with international and personal tensions, efforts are made daily to improve relations with foreign countries. Recently, a report was issued by the Committee on the Foreign Student in American Colleges and Universities. Leading educators studied the report and endorsed a call for U. S. colleges and universities to re-examine the philosophies, objectives and operation of their foreign student program.

The report says that schools must recognize the significance of foreign students as basic and essential parts of their educational missions, and points out what the committee calls a "new dimension of educational exchange," that of furthering the development of emerging countries.

"In vigorously pursuing their own primary goals—the advancement and diffusion of knowledge—colleges and universities contribute also to a primary goal of United States foreign policy—the preservation and support of free nations around the world."

Actually, it should not have taken a special committee to remind us of the need to educate those foreign students in our schools. But an even more important aspect of the problems concerning foreign students, is the treatment which these individuals undergo while enrolled in American schools. Their education may exude quality; but if they return to their own countries disgruntled with the attitudes of the Americans they have contacted, they will scarcely employ this education in any way to benefit America or its foreign policy.

Yet the ethnocentric American frequently refuses to accept foreign students on an equal level with American students. Americans usually have never gotten outside their own tiny sphere of interests. In consequence, they fail to realize the tremendous insecurity felt when one is living in a strange culture. Insecurity can rapidly develop into dislike if some attempt is not made to assuage the feelings of strangeness and difference. But Americans treat foreign students standoffishly and at times extremely rudely.

For example, one student, Martin Abeln, who was returned home to the Netherlands. He has written caustic comments on observations from his six-month stay in the U. S. The allegations may or may not be true, but the point is that Martin Abeln has returned home bitter. A potentially useful "ambassador" for the U. S. has been lost, and in fact has become an outspoken anti-American element. Many such incidents certainly would not help create a favorable image of the U. S. abroad.

Outrages against foreign students continue to occur in American schools, East Carolina is no exception. We ourselves committed one such injustice recently when we made an unnecessarily strong comment in an editor's note to a letter written by a foreign student. The letter deserved the comment; but did it if read in the light that the student had been in this country less than a year?

More recently, a college official misused his position to discriminate against a foreign student. The student has been at the college for one year as an above average student. He requested to borrow money under an available program; money, which, under the provisions of these programs he is entitled to borrow. At first he was merely put off with an "I'll see what I can do." After a month or more, when he pressed the matter, he was told rather curtly that the members of the loan committee had been unofficially contacted and were "not in the mood." Justifiably, this student was upset. Faced with such treatment in a foreign country he had no real alternative but acceptance. But the reprehensible action of one college official scarred his impressions of America.

Is this what America wants? In the future we hope that all America wants? In the future we hope that all Americans will realize their responsibility and act accordingly.

Notes From The Underprivileged

THE WELFARE STATE

I have gone into frequent tirades on the necessity of education in the use of the English language to facilitate communication. The other day a friend gave me the following sentences from actual letters received by the Department of Welfare. They are indicative of what results when people cannot effectively use language and its rules.

I am forwarding my marriage certificate and six children. I have seven but one died which was baptized on a half sheet of paper.

I am writing the welfare department to say that my baby was born two years old. When do I get my money?

I cannot get sick pay. I have six children. Can you tell me why?

Mrs. Jones has not had any clothes for a year and has been visited by the clergy regularly.

I am glad to report that my husband who was reported missing, is dead.

Please find for certain if my husband is dead, as the man I am now living with can't eat or do nothing until he finds out.

I am very much surprised to find that you have branded my boy as illiterate. This is a dirty lie. I was married to his father a week before he was born.

In answer to your letter, I have given birth to a boy weighing ten pounds. I hope this is satisfactory.

Unless I get my husband's money pretty soon, I will be forced to live an immortal (sic) life.

I am forwarding my marriage certificate and my three children, one of which is a mistake as you can see.

My husband got laid off from his job two weeks ago, and I haven't had any relief since.

In accordance with your instructions, I have given birth to twins in the enclosed envelope.

You have changed my little boy to a girl. Will this make any difference?

I have no children as yet as my husband is a bus driver and works all day and night.

I want my money as quick as I can get it. I have been in bed with a doctor for two weeks and he hasn't done me any good. If things don't improve, I will have to send for another doctor.—June Grimes

We GOOFED

To the Editor:

I whole heartedly agree with the opinions expressed by Jimmy Shuman in the February 22 edition of the EAST CAROLINIAN and am extremely sympathetic.

Since a good projectionist is hard to find, here's hoping Mr. Lawrence Tracy has a speedy recovery from influenza.

Apologetically, I remain an out of practice projectionist.

Editors note:

May we apologize to the gentleman who wrote this letter. (He requested that his name be withheld.) In last week's rush, facts in the letter by Mr. Shuman were not checked and it appears that the letter was motivated by personal animosity rather than by any honest concerns. In the future we will attempt to check more carefully the facts in the letters we print and drop politely in the trash can any such items, whose irresponsibility immediately becomes our own when we print them. Meanwhile, we thank the student who is substituting as projectionist for Mr. Tracy and commend him for even tackling the job.

SUCCESS

In 1923, eight of the world's most successful financiers met in Chicago. They were men who had found the secret of making money. They were: the president of the largest independent steel company, the president of the largest company, the greatest wheat speculator, the president of the New York Stock Exchange, a member of the President's Cabinet, the greatest "bear" in Wall Street, head of the world's greatest monopoly, president of the Bank of International Settlements.

In Milwaukee, that same year a champion was crowned at the 23rd Annual ABC Tournament, the world's most important bowling tournament.

AMF star bowler, Evelyn Taylor, who was born in 1923, did some research and found out where these men are, forty years later.

The president of the largest independent steel company, Charles Schwab, died bankrupt, living on borrowed money for five years before his death.

The president of the largest company, Howard Hopson, became insane.

The greatest wheat speculator Arthur Cotton, died abroad in a vent.

The president of the New York Stock Exchange, Richard Whitney, was sentenced to Sing Sing Penitentiary.

A member of the President's Cabinet, Albert Fall, was pardoned from prison so he could die at home.

The greatest "bear" on Wall Street, Jesse Livermore, committed suicide.

The head of the world's greatest monopoly, Ivar Kreuger, committed suicide.

The President of the Bank of International Settlements, Leo Fraizer, committed suicide.

The winner of the ABC Super Title in 1923 was Carl A. Bunzgartner. In 1963, forty years after winning his ABC championship, he is still going strong and is an advertising and public relations executive living in Garden City.

AARGH!

Dear Sirs:

Woe to the good!

Woe to the bad!

Some "liberals" think

Most leftists stink

Enough coverage has been given in this journal to the right wing extremists. Least we forget, there is also a left wing and they produce extremists. How about mention of some of the far left policies of such popular "liberal" organizations as the (ADA) American For Democratic Action?

The right wing may have Robert Welch (sic) and the General Walker but the "liberal" claim such men as Norman Mailer (ugh!) and subversives such as Alger Hiss.

Many left wingers express extreme viewpoints (sic) by being "soft" or apathetic toward Communism. May I remind you of such follies as the Cuban fiasco, the Bay of Pigs. Many "liberals" were behind the Women's Strike For Peace which has been under investigation by the House Committee on Un-American Activities for possible Communist Party ties. Let us think about the surreptitious policies suggested in such books as The Liberal Papers, commonly referred to as "The Yellow Book."

Granted, that extremism in political ideology is buffoonery but remember that the extremists reside on both the right and left sides of the road.

Conservatively yours

SPORTS REVIEW

By LLOYD "STACK" LANE

The swimming team under the direction of Coach Ray Martinez leaves today for a few days in Florida. They will compete in a meet with three of the best swimming teams in the Southeast—the University of Miami, Florida State University, and the University of Florida. The Pirate swimmers have compiled an impressive record this year and should do well in this important meet.

ACC fans received a mild reproof from the Commissioner of the Southern Conference Lloyd P. Jordon, and it was well deserved. Commissioner Jordon said that he had heard a lot about Duke's mauling of West Virginia, but no one a lot about the number two team in the SC beating both Duke and Wake Forest (number 1 and 2 in the ACC). The No. 2 team in the SC is Davidson's Wildcats.

Poor Wake Forest can't seem to get off the floor against some of the SC competition. Davidson scored an impressive 15 point victory over the Deacon Deacons, 90-75. Thursday night Furman's Paladins beat the Deacs, 59-53. Furman is the fourth ranked team in the SC.

Fortune Magazine had an interesting article on the economic condition of college football. An interesting point that the article ably presented was the fact that it costs as much as $700,000 to field a big-time, three-platoon college football team today. The magazine suggested that the necessary remedies to end this situation would be to (a) recognize the game as a business and pay the players as professionals, (b) pay for the expense of the team out of a general fund of money which would normally go towards higher education, or (c) drop the so-called sport completely.

Unfortunately, none of these suggestions are practical to apply to football today. It has become almost a basic institution in all of the colleges throughout the land. The only way that college football could be kept on a relatively less expensive basis would be de-emphasis. The Alumni pressures are too great for a de-emphasis movement to take place at any school that has a big-time football team. The problem will have to be solved sooner or later, but right now there is no solution in sight. College football continues to grow as evidenced by the increasing number of spectators that swarm into the stadiums every fall. They come to see a hard-fought game between two evenly matched teams. Many coaches have to resort to illegal methods to make sure that the teams are evenly matched. This is one of the big reasons why college recruiting is important.

An article in last Friday's EAST CAROLINIAN that brought forth some favorable comment was the story on Winter football drills. Many of the students liked the way the article was presented and its content. The credit for the article goes to Ron Dowdy of the Sports department. The part of the article that drew the most comment was Coach Stasavich's discussion of EC's recruiting of football players. Many of the students at EC are in favor of giving athletic scholarships and grants-in-aid to athletes from this state as opposed to out-of-staters. They feel that the out-of-stater would get a free education at the expense of the N. C. taxpayer. Upon receiving his degree, he would leave the state and go to work elsewhere. It does not seem to meet the approval of some to have the N. C. taxpayer pay for the education of some one who will spend the rest of his life in Virginia or some other surrounding state. EC was not set up to educate students from other states, especially for free.

The EC men placed first in nine out of eleven events. They lost the 50 yard freestyle and were disqualified in the 400-yard freestyle relay.

Harry Sober, in placing first in the 100-yard freestyle for the Bucs, set a new Washington and Lee pool record—48.2 seconds.

Pirates End Basketball Season With 81-73 Loss To Va. Tech

The Gobblers of Virginia Tech staged a second half comeback to defeat EC's Pirates 81-73 in Blacksburg, Va., Saturday night. The game was the final one for the Pirates this season and left them with a record of 12 wins and 10 losses. The Bucs are 3-3 against Southern Conference competition this year.

EC's Pirates surprised the crowd in the VPI gym by being able to control the sixth-place Gobblers of the Southern Conference for the first half.

Trailing in the opening minutes of the first half 14-9, the Pirates put on a scoring burst of six straight points to move ahead of the Gobblers 15-14. Two baskets apiece by Lacy West and Bill Otte built the Pirate lead up to 23-14 before the home team could get another basket. VPI cut this nine point lead to five a few minutes later. The Pirates and the Gobblers matched baskets for the remainder of the second half. EC left the floor with a five point margin over the VPI team, 31-26.

The Bucs found themselves in trouble immediately after the intermission as the Virginia Tech high scorer Howard Pardue started pouring points into the VPI basket. Pardue was aided in his attack on the scoreboard by substitute A. T. Walthall. Pardue tossed in 18 points and Walthall added 13 more to lead the Gobblers well out of the five point halftime deficit, and move into a slight lead. The Pirates kept within sight of the SC team, but could not manage to move ahead. Virginia Tech managed to score 55 points in the second half to get an 81-73 victory.

Lacy West was high scorer for the game with 28 points. Bill Brogden and Bill Otte also hit in double figures for the EC quintet. Brogden had 18 and Otte 15.

Howard Pardue scored 25 points in leading the Gobblers to their eleventh victory of the season against eleven losses. Frank Alvis
