Historical Play Premieres In McGinnis Auditorium

By JAMES M. FERRELL

ECU News Bureau Staff Writer

The historical drama needs more study and analysis of character, says playwright Kermit Hunter, whose "The Faithful Lightning," a new historical play, is being produced here in McGinnis Auditorium March 13-16 at 8:15 p.m.

Hunter, the author of "Unto These Hills" and many other outdoor dramas and professor of drama at Hollins College in Virginia, calls his new play "a compromise in style for historical drama, whether indoors or outdoors."

Dealing with the forces that made Thomas Jonathan "Stonewall" Jackson "what he was in general," the drama pictures his life from 1805 to 1863 while he was a teacher at Virginia Military Institute.

Hunter feels that if this new play proves successful in "The Faithful Lightning," it will "give historical drama what it needs. It's a new-written play for the indoor stage and I hope for a New York production in the future," he said. "This play has been an indoor play all along. The outdoor drama has become stereotyped."

Mr. Hunter, who will attend either the Friday or Saturday night performance of the play's four-day run, wants to take a look at the production before deciding on rescheduling it for the New York stage and incorporating it into an outdoor drama. "It might prove to be better as an outdoor play," he added.

The style of the play is similar to that used in Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," according to Hunter. "It is a matter of using words of stage and special lighting effects—area staging—and the audience is asked to move back and forth in time. Actually, we see two different periods in time taking place simultaneously."

Hunter describes Edgar Loessin, director of the College Playhouse, as "one of the best young directors in the country. I'm proud to have him and his group handling this show. They're doing me a great favor to allow me to see 'Lightning' done well."

The American theater is getting to be more and more the theater of the college and university and less and less the Broadway theater, Hunter explained. "Colleges and universities have the best physical space, the best experimentation is done there, and they draw the best audience."

Loessin, who has worked with numerous Hunter plays, including serving as assistant director of "Unto These Hills" during its first two years of production at Cherokee, says, "We're excited about doing the play. It's a great opportunity for students to have the chance to work on a new play in order that they may see changes and revisions that take place during its staging."

"The significant thing about this play is that Hunter has attempted a whole new style and approach to the problem of covering all significant events," he continued. "This style makes it possible to cover the significant events in Jackson's life. If this is successful, it will represent a whole new technique and style in writing for this type of play."

The cast of "The Faithful Lightning" consists of 22 speaking parts and many extras. Original background music for the show is being composed by Paul Kelly of Sanford, graduate student in the School of Music. Standard hymns and folk songs of the Civil War period will be intergrated into the show. Director Loessin pointed out that a choir will be used but will never be seen by the audience. A small instrumental and percussion group will be used for background music.

Playhouse Technical Director John Sneden has designed a multiple-level set for the production, which will lend itself to battlefields as well as interior scenes.

Senate Accepts Administration Office Proposal

At its last meeting of the quarter, the student senate accepted a recommendation from the administration that the present SGA Assistant Treasurer be allowed to move into the office of Treasurer next year unopposed, but that future assistant treasurers can not be guaranteed this same privilege. A problem arose after the administration ruled that all non-demonstrative qualifications be removed from SGA office requirements. The decision to allow Mr. Shearin to run unopposed was based on the fact that the constitution guaranteed him this opportunity at the time he was elected.

After a lengthy discussion on a report submitted by the cheerleaders, the senate voted to consider a request that the head cheerleader be elected by the student body in the general spring elections. This action would require a constitutional amendment, and was therefore tabled for two weeks. The senate then approved a recommendation that the budget committee approve the second half of the report which calls for an appropriation of $381 for cheerleader uniforms.

Ed Smith stating that the Committee on Constitutional Revisions had been inactive since it was formed in September, introduced a motion to direct the chairman of the senate to appoint seven members to serve with the new committee chairman and that the committee offer a report to the senate no later than April 22. After the senate passed this motion, an amendment was offered and passed which will allow the president to make substitutions in the committee after consultation with the committee chairman.

HUAC

The United States National Student Association has been advocating the transfer of the House Committee on Un-American Activities from status as an independent group to a new status as one of several subcommittees under the House Judiciary Committee.

The motion came before the House Rules Committee on February 26. At that time the House Rules Committee voted 12-1 to kill the motion for transfer.

Francis C. Walter, Democrat of Pennsylvania and chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, sent a letter to the Rules Committee stating that such a transfer "would abolish the committee and remove it as the most effective weapon in the fight against communism."

We cannot agree with the stand taken by Chairman Walter. His contention was that the climate of the judiciary committee, headed by Representative Celler, is not conducive to the committee's work. Congressman Celler, a staunch defender of civil liberties, was one of twenty-four members of the House to vote against a security bill sponsored by Congressman Walter last year. This bill permitted the firing of any employee of the National Security Agency without stated cause.

Our contention is that the judiciary committee, under the direction of Congressman Celler, would provide a climate which would end unnecessary damage done to the reputation of individuals and end the fear which now tends to limit the freedoms of Association and free speech.

Moreover, since the judiciary committee is composed solely of Congressmen who are lawyers, it seems to us that these men would be better equipped to deal with the technical code criminal legislation which often comes before the House Committee. Because they are schooled in the law it seems likely that they would be better able to confront some of the delicacies involved in civil liberties questions.

The absurdity of the prevailing side of HUAC was best characterized by the remark of Congressman Clyde Doyle, Democrat of California who stated that the move for transfer is "nothing less than part of the conspiracy of the Communist Party and its buddies." This very statement underscores all the difficulties that people coming before the House Committee are likely to encounter. It indicates an inability to judge questions on the basis of evidence. This statement is filled with the emotional content and the spirit of conspiracy which has characterized the activity of the House Committee.—D.S.

To The 'Bravery' Of Cheating

BY HERB WILLIAMS

Were we erroneous in assuming that a desire to learn was the basis for a person's seeking a higher education? Evidently we were wrong in believing this was everyone's basis, since the writer has witnessed several recent incidents in which students compromised their honor by cheating. These incidents of "mental larceny" do not reflect a desire to learn on the part of the students involved; they merely demonstrate their stupidity since they are not intelligent enough to realize they are cheating only themselves. We have to give these people credit though; they are just so "clever" in their stupidity! And the "bravery" they exhibit by cheating under the very noses of the teachers makes us want to give them a medal!

Their shrewdness is reflected in the sly tricks they dream up to accomplish their goal, which is to steal another person's knowledge and fraudulently represent it as their own. It is unnecessary to enumerate these subterfuges; we all have seen them. Suffice it to say that the clever articles they employ are as abundant and as devious as the criminal mind can make them. What this writer cannot understand is how these people are "smart" enough to think up ways to cheat but are not smart enough to learn the items they connive to steal from their fellow students.

The cool, unflinching "bravery" these thieves exhibit while cheating would merit a Medal of Dishonor in any war. To watch them courageously copying answers from a fellow student's paper, you would think they had never considered what would happen if they were caught. And to think about the consequences of getting caught, you realize that these people really are brave. For a couple of stolen points on a test, they risk such things as expulsion from college, social disgrace, and loss of the many advantages that a completed college education offers.

What can be done about this problem? For a start, each individual might examine himself and be sure that his own personal ethics are up to par. At the teacher level, a uniform program for dealing with cheaters might help; as it stands now, one teacher might only deduct a few points while another would press for expulsion. And finally, the institution of an honor system might place the idea of honor in the minds of those who do not have it or be instrumental in removing from college the individuals who would not accept it.

Dormitory Structure Changes

Northfield, Minn.—(I.P.)—Both the height of the dormitories and the dissimilar rooms recently authorized for construction by the St. Olaf College Board of Regents are significant departures from the pattern of buildings usually found on small college campuses.

Scheduled for completion by the summer of 1964, the proposed men's residence will be ten stories high and the women's residence 12 stories high. Both buildings will be of non-rectangular shape with no two rooms alike on any one floor. The men's dormitory will house 296 while the women's residence will be occupied by 292 women.

In designing college dormitories three considerations are taken into account. One of these is the nature of dormitory life and the character of student population—the physical and aesthetic quality is dependent on the possibilities of the human factor. The second is of the growing campus. And the last is the economic factor, which in structural and other technical fields.

In meeting the needs of the human factor, the aesthetic qualities of the campus, and in taking advantage of new possibilities in structural methods, the projected residences at St. Olaf represent imaginative new approaches to problems of student society and campus aesthetic.

To the editor:

The editor of the EAST CAROLINIAN has demonstrated at least one thing: That is that he is not afraid to print criticism about the paper. (There is no truth to the rumor that I threatened to give the letter in last week's EAST CAROLINIAN to the DAILY REFLECTOR if the "student" paper would not publish it.)

In addition, the editor of the EAST CAROLINIAN has shown that he cannot write a simple paragraph without a major error—a sentence fragment.

The editor of the EAST CAROLINIAN has also shown how he answers criticism. He simply does not. He cannot even "not answer" criticism without making a few errors. The editor, showing typical poor taste and bad judgement, made the statement that the best he could find out, I had done nothing in the "several" years I have been here. Even this was inaccurate. In the first place, I have been in the army for the past two years. In the second place, I have had a short story published in the REBEL (Winter, 1960) and was also assistant editor on the REBEL. In the third place, I wrote for a Mexican newspaper this summer including reporting and feature articles about the bullfights.

In the fourth place, I was asked to do a column for the EAST CAROLINIAN last quarter and wrote several of them. They were all rejected. One contained a satire on the administration, another on the preference of a stadium before classrooms. They were termed "critical" of the administration.

Summing up, the editor, in addition to proving himself incompetent, inaccurate, and indifferent, has also proven himself to be a thoroughly conscientious lunatic. As a newspaper editor, he's a fine third baseman.

R. W. Gollobin

Natural groupings of six to eight and larger groupings of 20-30 students, together with more opportunities for individualized rooms, have long been advocated by deans of men and women. Studies have shown that variety and irregularity characterize the student's use of his room; functional efficiency doesn't seem to be too important in his mind.

The architectural profession has never reached a conclusion about the size and shape of the "ideal" dorm room as it has about the ideal hospital room. What seems more important to the student is that his room be different or just he wants it.

Dramatic evidence is shown of the desire for individuality in Ellingson Hall on this campus. For example where furniture was originally arranged to provide a logical, efficient space for two students. Two weeks after school started only six rooms remained in the original arrangement. Hoyne Hall, elaborate efforts to complicate the spacial organization of the rooms by arranging furniture in bizarre patterns have taken place.

These factors of irregularity and desire for individuality led to designing rooms for the new dorm which are asymmetrical, cross lighted, and non-rectangular shape.

NC Literary, Historical Assn. Holds April Meeting At EC

The N. C. Literary and Historical Association meeting at EC Friday and Saturday, April 26-27, will present a program based on the Carolinas Charter Tercentenary celebration in the state this year. The theme will be "The Town in Colonial North Carolina."

A tentative program for the event has been announced by Dr. Herbert Paschal, professor of social studies here. Dr. Paschal is chairman of the College Committee on the Tercentenary, which is sponsoring the April meeting of the N. C. Literary and Historical Association in Greenville.

The program will have added interest in that it will open the annual Fine Arts Festival in Greenville.

"Since the spring meeting of the N. C. Literary and Historical Society has been discontinued for several years," Dr. Paschal stated, "It is hoped that the program this year will serve as an incentive to the scheduling of spring meetings in the future. Interest in the Tercentenary and its significance to the state are expected to bring the college a large number of members and guests."

Registration will take place Friday, April 26, and will be followed by a banquet at the college that night. Two speakers featured on the program will develop the theme of colonial towns and will be announced by Dr. Paschal in the near future.

Highlight of Saturday morning, April 27, will be a meeting of the Association at historic St. Thomas's Church in Bath. A program on the history of Bath and recent restorations there will be presented. A tour of historic sites will follow.

Returning to Greenville, members of the Association will attend the annual luncheon staged as a major event of the Greenville Fine Arts Festival. The luncheon will take place at East Carolina College.

In addition to Dr. Paschal, members of the East Carolina College Committee on the Tercentenary who are assisting in plans for the meeting of the N. C. Literary and Historical Association are Dr. Joseph Steelman, Dr. Francis Adams, Dr. Robert Cramer, Dr. James L. White, Dr. Douglas Jones, and Mrs. Ellen Rion C. Fleming.

Dr. Poindexter will be located for most of the summer at Cambridge University. His field of research is Seventeenth Century Literature. In 1954 he spent the summer at Oxford University in England working on a research project. He has been a faculty member of the Department of English at the University of North Carolina since 1951. He came to the college from Mississippi State College, where he taught from 1948-1951.

He received both the A.B. and the Ph.D. degrees from the University of North Carolina and an M.A. degree from Emory University in Georgia.

He has just completed a year as president of the N. C. Association of the American Association of University Professors.

Miss Greenville Pageant; Bunting Recalls Thrill

This year's Miss Greenville Pageant promises to be one of the best that the local Junior Chamber of Commerce has presented, and the judges indicate that the proper thought and deliberation will go into the selection of Miss Greenville for 1963. To head the list of judges, Mr. and Mrs. Bugs Barthelet from Rocky Mount have for several years judged the Miss Greenville Pageant and have been in close contact with local pageants in many other towns and cities in Eastern N.C., also judging this year's Pageant will be Mrs. Elbert Peel, Jr. of Williamston, formerly Lucia Hutchinson and Miss Georgia. The other two judges are Dr. John MacAllister of Raleigh, closely associated with the Miss Raleigh Pageant for eight years, and Mr. Curtis Albertson from Goldsboro who has judged many pageants and such contests as the Yakety-Yak Queen at the University of North Carolina.

MISS GREENVILLE, 1962

From start to finish, the Miss Greenville Pageant is a fine contest, providing many experiences for young women. I will never forget the thrill of curtain time, the joy of that exciting night, and the joy of new friendships with others.

You learn a lot during the preliminary meetings before the contest. And on the night of the crowning you are secretly praying for our favorite to become the winner.

Most little girls dream about "beauty contests"—I know I did—but they never expect their dreams to come true. At last in Greenville a girl has the opportunity to enter such a contest in order to better herself and her future. Besides acquiring poise and experience, she can win tangible prizes, too. I received lovely gifts and a longed-for college scholarship.

Thank you, Greenville Jaycees, for giving me a wonderful, rich year. Lots of luck to the girls of this year's Pageant.

The judges for this year's Miss Greenville Pageant to be held March 28th at 7:30 p.m. in the Wright Building on the East Carolina Campus have been announced by the co-chairmen of this year's Pageant, Curtis Hendrix and Louis May.

Johnson Directs College Choir In Home Concert March 25th

The East Carolina College Choir under the direction of Gordon Johnson, will present its home concert Monday evening, March 25, at 8:15 p.m. in Wright Auditorium.

For their home concert, the Choir, composed of 45 members, will present a variety of sacred and secular compositions, ranging from early music of the church to folk music.

One of the highlights of the program will be the first local performance of Three Madrigals by EC's composer-in-residence, Dr. Martin Mailman. A special feature of the program will be an ensemble from within the choir.

This small group has been directed by Jane Murray, a graduate student in the School of Music. The accompanist for the choir is Terry Coley.

This home concert will mark the return of the choir's recent trip to Charleston, West Virginia. The choir was selected from an eleven state area to represent North Carolina at the Southern District Convention of the Music Educators National Conference and the American Choral Directors Association.

Two years ago, at the last district convention, held in Asheville, the ECC Symphonic Band was selected to perform. This makes the second consecutive year that a major performance group from the East Carolina School of Music has been asked to appear. This is an honor of which our college justly has a right to be proud.

SPORTS REVIEW

By RON DOWDY

Basketball fans will soon have to bid farewell to one of the greatest professional basketball players of our time. Robert Joseph (Bob) Cousy will close out an exciting 16-year career of active professional basketball with the Boston Celtics to be a collegiate coach at his Alma Mater's arch-rival, Boston College.

His number, 14, in white on the emerald green uniform of the Boston Celtics, has become a minor land mark in the basketball world. The behind-the-back dribbles, passes that seem to ride a wire to their target, and the shots thrown off one ear at some of Cousy's long-lasting marks of identification. Having never been a star or hero before his professional days in basketball, Cousy was always considered to be "just another player," especially during his college days at Holy Cross.

Cousy will long be remembered as modern basketball's most exciting player. Our hats go off to another professional athlete as he turns from the field of being a participant to the field of being an instructor.

Jerry Steele, from up around Elkin, N. C. way, was recently seen taking in the sights of our campus. He was being escorted by EC's head basketball coach, Wendell Carr. Steele played 4 years of basketball at Wake Forest during the Chappel (Len) era. The rumor is that he could be an addition to our basketball staff—possibly the head Frosh coach. Steele is presently head basketball mentor at Guilford College. But we will not believe rumors until we have reason to do so.

With baseball not being much of a spectator sport here at EC now, chances are that it will be an even lesser one this season unless something drastic is done. The games will be played at the new EC baseball stadium which is located about 100 yards behind the new concrete football stands. The stadium itself is still quite bare except when the team is practicing. But the ground crew says that the stadium will be ready way ahead of the scheduled date.

The stadium will have a four foot high fence surrounding it.

Despite all rumors, there has not been one ticket sold to the Wake Forest-EC football game. Earl Aiken, Athletic Publicity Director, says "The season tickets will go on sale within the next ten days to two weeks. We are receiving tremendous support from the Century Club, the Pirate Club and the local residents. We are all very much pleased with this response." Mr. Aiken went on to say that "the Century Club will have first choice when it comes to buying the season tickets." This group is the main financial backer of our new stadium. They had their chance Thursday night to buy their tickets.

Lambda Chi Alpha Wins Frat. Basketball Tournament

Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity is extremely proud of its basketball team this year. ## Blue Devils Face NYU; Carr Also Coaches Tennis

By KEN SMITH

The East Carolina Athletic Department solved one problem and realized another when Wendell Carr was named head basketball coach. Carr replaced Earl Smith, the new baseball coach.

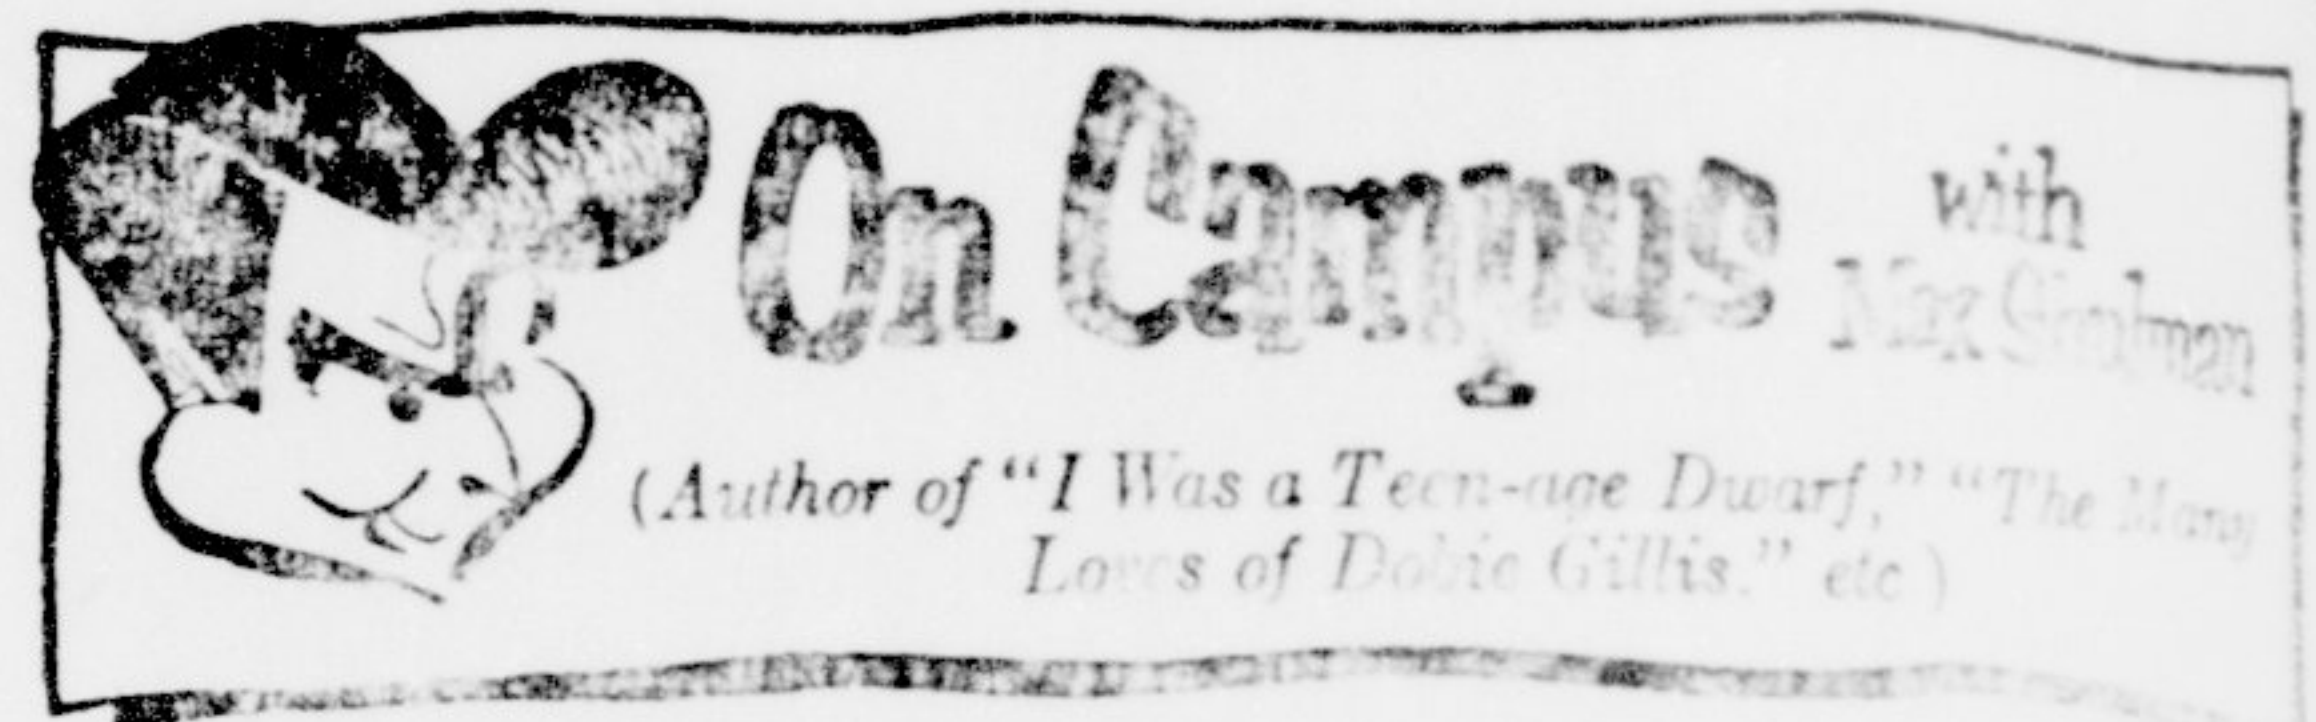

Carr is looking forward to next season as he has four returning regulars to be bolstered by an outstanding upcoming Freshman team. Carr feels that either Lacy West or Bill Otte of this year's team could play for any Atlantic Coast Conference team.

Duke Frosh flash, R. D. Carson, of Sanford, who was rumored to be headed for EC, now appears to be settled with the Blue Devils.

Prospects for EC getting in the Southern Conference appear to be very dim at present. At present the school does not even have a track for its track team. Also, most of the larger teams would not consider playing the Pirate cagers here in Memorial Gym, because of the small seating capacities.

Buddy Bovender, frosh flash from Winston-Salem, was the leading ground gainer in the Purple and Gold game Saturday which is another sign of plenty of depth in the '63 Pirate lineup.

The Duke Blue Devils, who finished second in the nation, which was the highest rating they have ever achieved in a final poll, will be representing the Atlantic Coast Conference and also the state of North Carolina tonight when they face the Violets of NYU in the NCAA basketball playoffs. The Blue Devils will be followed on Regional TV until they are eliminated.

HOW TO GET EDUCATED ALTHOUGH ATTENDING COLLEGE

In your quest for a college degree, are you becoming a narrow specialist, or are you being educated in the broad, common sense of the word?

This question is being asked today by many serious observers—including my barber, my roofer, and my little dog Spot—and it would be well to seek an answer.

Are we becoming experts only in the confined area of our majors, or does our knowledge range far and wide? Do we, for example, know who fought in the Battle of Jenkins' Ear, or Kant's epistemology, or Planck's constant, or Valsalva's maneuver, or what Wordsworth was doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey?

If we do not, we are turning, alas, into specialists. How then can we broaden our vistas, lengthen our horizons—become, in short, educated?

Well sir, the first thing we must do is throw away our curricula. Tomorrow, instead of going to the same old classes, let us try something new. Let us not think of college as a rigid discipline, but as a kind of vast academic smorgasbord, with all kinds of tempting intellectual tidbits to savor. Let's start sampling tomorrow.

We will begin the day with a stimulating seminar in Hittite artifacts. Then we will go over to marine biology and spend a happy hour with the sea slugs. Then we will open our pores by drilling a spell with the ROTC. Then we'll go over to journalism and tear out the front page. Then we'll go to the medical school and autograph some casts. Then we'll go to home economics and have lunch.

And between classes we'll smoke Marlboro Cigarettes. This, let me emphasize, is not an added filip to the broadening of our education. This is an essential. To learn to live fully and well is an important part of education, and Marlboros are an important part of living fully and well. What a sense of completeness you will get from Marlboro's fine tobaccos, from Marlboro's pure filter! What flavor Marlboro delivers! Through that immaculate filter comes flavor in full measure, flavor without stint or compromise, flavor that wrinkled care derides, flavor holding both its sides. This triumph of the tobaccoist's art comes to you in soft pack or Flip-Top box and can be lighted with match, lighter, candle, Welsbach mantle, or by rubbing two small Indians together.

When we have embarked on this new regimen—or, more accurately, lack of regimen—we will soon be cultured as all get out. When strangers accost us on the street and say, "What was Wordsworth doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey, hey?" we will no longer slink away in silent abashment. We will reply loud and clear:

"As any truly educated person knows, Wordsworth, Shelley, and Keats used to go to the Widdicombe Fair every year for the poetry-writing contests and three-legged races, both of which they enjoyed lyrically. Well sir, imagine their chagrin when they arrived at the Fair in 1776 and learned that Oliver Cromwell, uneasy because Guy Fawkes had just invented the spinning jenny, had cancelled all public gatherings, including the Widdicombe Fair and Liverpool. Shelley was so upset that he drowned himself in a butt of malmsey. Keats went to London and became Charlotte Bronte. Wordsworth ran blindly into the forest until he collapsed in a heap ten miles above Tintern Abbey. There he lay for several years, sobbing and kicking his little fat legs. At length, peace returned to him. He looked around, noted the beauty of the forest, and was so moved that he wrote Joyce Kilmer's immortal Trees... And that, smart-apple, is what Wordsworth was doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey."
