NC Administration Changes Hands

Governors Office, Day Become Full With Appointments, Visitors

"The man on the go for the state on the go . . . that's Terry Sanford!" Labeled by many as North Carolina's greatest of all governors, Terry Sanford will retire from office at today's state Inaguration ceremonies.

A man with the hands of a farmer pulls open the heavy door and walks to the secretary's desk.

"I wanted to see the Governor."

He sits down next to a banker who wears a tailored suit and who also has business with the Governor.

There are others in the reception room.

A school girl in bobby socks giggles at a story told by a fisherman.

A housewife who wants a commutation for her husband clasps her hands.

The head of a state agency reads a report and answers a question from a newsman.

The mail clerk deposits a stack of letters on the secretary's desk.

The Western Union machine prints a telegram.

The phones ring often.

All of this, and more, makes the Governor's Office a crowded place and a noisy place.

The work of the Office would go on faster if it weren't for the interruptions of the people who are waiting their turn to see the Governor.

But nobody on the staff complains.

After all, those people own this Office.

A schedule for the Governor, neatly typed the day before, lies on top the secretary's desk. But nobody pays much attention to it, least of all the Governor.

To start with, he doesn't wear a watch. Besides, the schedule doesn't anticipate "emergency calls" on "crucial matters." It doesn't anticipate the unscheduled visits of a department head who needs "just five minutes" to clear a policy decision with the Governor. It doesn't contemplate the calls initiated by the Governor himself.

This would be a heck of a way to run a railroad. But by skipping lunch and by being late anywhere from a half hour to two hours at night, the Governor gets his work done.

The Constitution of North Carolina lists the duties of the Governor in a few succinct lines.

But the citizens of North Carolina construe those lines liberally.

And so has Governor Terry Sanford and other Governors.

The duties of the Governor include anything that affects the growth of North Carolina and everything that affects the welfare of North Carolinians.

He is the chief executive officer of the eleventh largest State in the Nation.

He is the director of a billion dollar a year budget.

He is commander in chief of the North Carolina National Guard.

He is the appointive authority for hundreds of members of policy-making boards, ranging from the State Highway Commission, the Board of Conservation and Development, and some of the Superior Court judges to the Board of Refrigeration Examiners and the Board of Cosmetic Art.

The Governor is the last man between the cell and the electric chair at Central Prison. He also is the one man who is responsible to God and the people of North Carolina for commutations of prison sentences.

The Governor of North Carolina cannot succeed himself and he is the one Governor in the Nation who does not have the veto power.

But the Governor of North Carolina has more authority than most.

Even so, there are legal limitations on that authority and on any given day in the Governor's Office there will be requests for him to take action which both law and custom preclude him from taking.

There is enough room within the law and within the tradition of North Carolina's habit of good government to fill an 18-hour day and a seven-day week.

The Governor's Office gets the traffic of a bus station.

It gets more calls than most telephone answering services.

It gets the mail of a major industry.

When the farmer leaves the Governor's Office, when the banker departs, when the school girl in bobby socks gets her autographed photo, when the department head has his policy decision approved; when the phone calls are answered, the letters written and the telegrams dispatched, then the Governor leaves the Office.

There are other matters of State business awaiting him when he gets to the Executive Mansion.

But that begins another story.

And this is him—the mountain man—North Carolina's Governor-elect Dan Killian Moore of Canton, who today became North Carolina's new governor.

EC's Growing Political Science Department Becomes Leader In Areas Of North Carolina

The Political Science Department of East Carolina has been recently established in an institution which is rapidly assuming leadership in many areas of development in the eastern part of North Carolina. The department, moving with the College, also strives to develop programs that are not only academically useful, but also, of service to the general community.

In the summer of 1963 the department initiated an Institute on Constitutional Democracy and Totalitarianism for the purpose of better preparing high school social studies teachers in North Carolina to compare the political and economic ideas and institutions of the Soviet bloc and the free world. The Institute relied heavily on outside authorities during its first two sessions (1963 and 1964), and in its third session will continue to use outside lecturers, but to a smaller extent. Some of these lectures were also open to the public, as lectures at East Carolina often are.

Now that the Institute on Constitutional Democracy and Totalitarianism is established, the Political Science Department is beginning a program under the general title of Education in Politics. The main purpose of the program will be to give students a first-hand understanding of practical politics, by lectures, formal surveys, and participation.

Political party organization is beginning to develop rapidly in this traditionally one-party area. It is the departments informal observation that students and the general public are only partially aware of the possibilities of political organization. This program would be useful to students and non-students. Their study of the process as it develops here will afford an unusually good opportunity for understanding.

As a first step the department has brought in speakers and guests who would appear on a non-paid basis. In the spring and fall of 1964 both the Democratic and Republican candidates for governor spoke and talked informally at meetings attended by Political Science majors and students in Political Science classes. In the coming year the department will introduce a two-quarter course in political behavior for seniors and graduate students. In the first term, students will study the nature and scope of recent behavioral studies. In the second term they will develop and execute a behavioral project.

This program is for the student who desires to play an active part in politics, which should be all political science majors. As Dr. John Howell, head of the Political Science department and co-ordinator for the program states, "A political science major who does not enjoy political party participation is like a doctor who doesn't practice medicine." Dr. Howell believes that a two party system in North Carolina is finally emerging. The Democrats have always been strong and the Republicans, with the leadership of Barry Goldwater, are growing. He believes that Republican leaders in this state are true and devoted conservatives and not racists similar to Republican leaders in other southern states that overwhelmingly supported Goldwater. With this two party system, Dr. Howell believes the program will be successful.

Further Tributes . . .

Due to an overwhelming participation of tributes about Gov. Sanford, we were unable to run all those submitted. A continuation will be carried in the next issue.

transition

This issue of the EAST CAROLINIAN is pleased to look back upon four years of progress. But with equal pride we look forward to a period of growth and development of the education of the people of this great state.

Four short years ago, the individual voters of North Carolina made a decision. And collectively, they elected a man named Terry Sanford to the highest elective position that a state may bestow.

The decision of the voters of this state pointed out their chosen leadership for the period from 1960 through 1964.

State supported, East Carolina was, of course, effected by this decision. And looking at the period of time since the Sanford Administration took office until the present, one is able to easily see tremendous progress.

When students, who are a part of the campus each day, can see and feel the boom of growth taking place on the campus, progress is definitely in high gear.

Credit for such progress is due in no small part to the Sanford Administration, who worked as part of a team with people and organizations across the state toward the development of this institution of higher learning.

The campus feels a sense of unity with the state in producing this growth. The momentum of expansion has been built up during the previous administration is now ready to propel the school into the midst of a new era in North Carolina government . . . the administration of Governor Dan K. Moore.

East Carolina is ready to continue its movement. The school feels a closeness to the new Governor. Many times before and during his campaign, Governor Moore was our guest. Many of the people who work closely with the Governor come from the Greenville area. This institution feels a part of the family that will lead our state for the forthcoming four years.

East Carolina is in agreement with Governor Moore's statement, "Every boy and girl with the capacity for college work should be given the opportunity to reach that goal."

This school feels that it is a part of the progress of education in North Carolina which will some day make this idea reality.

Higher education in North Carolina will prosper under the able guidance of the new administration. This school feels the emphasis which the members of the present legislature has placed on our development.

It is quite evident from Governor Moore's past actions, that the quality of cooperation in higher education at East Carolina and about the state will prosper in the future.

The transition from Governor to Governor will be quite smooth. And this institution endeavors to work henceforth in union with North Carolina's government to send people into the world who not only know but practice harmony with his fellow men.

Letters To The Editor

This message comes to you straight from the McKay cabbage patch. Mr. McKay should think seriously of leaving the garden if he has a dislike for what he finds here. How did he happen to wander into such a place as this when it is to totally unworthy of him? Is the Medical School proposal really a big joke to him? Perhaps he thinks that people in the eastern part of this state do not get sick. Maybe he also thinks that the only medical centers should be where they already are—in the center of the state, regardless of the needs of the other parts of the state.

How can you bear to surround yourself with such unworthy company Mr. McKay? Surely you can't be sincere. If you were serious, you would be packing your belongings and leaving for greener pastures. From what you say, almost any pasture is greener. Surely, it must pain you to lower yourself to such a degree as to enroll at such a place as this.

As a student at E.C., I resent your self-righteous condemnation of a school with which you obviously are unfamiliar or have an axe to grind. Wipe your tear-stained, sophomoric eyes and look about you. If you still feel as you did in your "Sahara" column on December 16, why not leave? With your attitude, you would certainly not be doing East Carolina a favor by keeping your enlightened presence on our campus. If you decide to stay cut out the inferior-school bit and stop crying on everyone's shoulder about how unfortunate you are to be exposed to such a place so far below you. Head for greener pastures, McKay: some other garden might really need your kind of cow-dung fertilizer.

Notices

All EC students are invited to visit the Mathematics Computer Laboratory on Tuesday, January 12, between the hours of 12:00 noon and 7:00 p.m. Mr. F. M. Johnson, director of the computer laboratory, and his assistants will demonstrate and explain many of the uses of the computer.

At 7:00 p.m., everyone is invited to the Math Club meeting in room 132, New Austin Auditorium. We will have Major Simpson of the USAF as guest speaker. Afterwards, some games will be played using the computer.

The foreign language reading examination for Master of Arts degree people will be given on Saturday, February 6, 1965 at 2:00 P.M.

Students should sign for this examination in the Graduate Office, Rawl Annex, 138, prior to January 29, and pick up regulations governing the examination.

A seven-week institute for high school Spanish teachers will be held at East Carolina next summer, a college spokesman announced today.

Well, dear readers, did you all have a nice Christmas holiday? Was Santa Claus good to you, or had you Mothra (the good guy), which two monsters battle in the 20th century. Be prepared for a surprise ending as Godzilla goes home.

Some dear friends of mine told me that Bo Dilly was performing in Richmond; I'm sorry but I did not get to see or hear him. From what I hear he was really great and I hope some of you were able to attend his performance.

In Raleigh, there was a dance nearly every night at Jim Thornton's dance hall. A group from my home town, Roanoke Rapids, by the name of THE FABULOUS CONTINENTAL-ALS were playing there. This band is really good and I hope that sometime soon they will be able to perform here. They are one of the few bands I know that actually dance as they play.

Here is your chance to see one of the greatest motion pictures ever shown on the screen, EXODUS. This fabulous movie will be playing in our own, old, Austin Auditorium this weekend. Be sure to try and see this amazing picture.

This Friday at the Pitt theatre you will be entertained with SEX AND THE SINGLE GIRL. This movie is said to be the wildest ever seen anywhere. As the title depicts, the movie is about sex and single women. Boys, be sure to take your girls to see this picture, maybe you will learn something (?)

Maybe you are the type that enjoys a good horror picture, if so the State has the one for you, GOD-

ZILLA vs. THE THING. This takes place in Japan and the friend Godzilla (the bad guy) Mothra (the good guy), which two monsters battle in the 20th century. Be prepared for a surprise ending as Godzilla goes home.

Well, tonight is the A P O's White Ball. A P O has done a fine job for this event, and this should be better than ever. I hope every one will date and will have a good time at the dance. The dance will be in Wright auditorium at 8 o'clock.

As most of you have known, the college union is closed for time being. The furniture has been moved to the lobby of Wright building and will be open to the public starting today. Let's hope that we move back into the old union it will be bigger and better before. While the CU is closed, co-operate and go down, buy food and drinks, and return lobby up stairs. Your support is greatly appreciated.

If any of you good people have any news that pertains to our affairs, and think the other students would benefit from it, drop a line stating what the event is, when it will be held, when it is where. Address the letter to Bob Brown, c/o East Carolina, box 2516, 10th Street Post Office, Greenville, N.C. If you wish, can bring it to me at the Carolinian office in Wright building. My office hours are posted on bulletin board inside. Any suggestions or ideas will be appreciated.

readings and special lectures. Dr. Morrison said application forms are available now and can be mailed on request to any teacher of Spanish in a secondary school who has not previously attended similar institute.

Interested teachers should contact Dr. Morrison through P. O. Box 2683, Greenville, N.C. 27603.

A Jamesville High School ring has been found. It has initials C.C.M. Information obtained in 181 Aycock Hall.

WIND BLOWN LEAVES
By JOHN D. MATSON

The wind would blow and the leaves would flow across the lawn and into a wall where they would stop and rot. The next year came it was the same, the leaves would blow against the wall and rot. And so life comes and so life goes and why they lived few know.

Sanford Guides New South

Sanford Achievements Affect All Carolinians

By MARTHA MCKAY

The contributions which Terry Sanford has made to the state of North Carolina and its people are so many and so varied that it is almost impossible to cover the whole spectrum. He has lit a thousand candles; with words, with deeds, with courage, with patience and with love he has reached out to his fellow man, and he has touched our hearts and stirred our minds, and we are not the same. The women I know, and they are many, who worked for the Governor at that time, and have continued his loyal supporters are grateful to have been a part of the past four years, and are sure they have had a hand, however small, in making things better for present and future generations of school children. The bright, the average, the slow, those who need technical training or college training, the economically deprived and the racially deprived, all have better chances because there was a Terry Sanford who came forth at the right place at the right time and made himself heard.

The Governor has not been unmindful of his large and still growing support from the women of North Carolina. He did not have to be convinced of the real and valuable contributions to the life of the state which could be expected from this quarter. There is no clearer evidence of this than the fact that he has placed over 350 women on important boards and commissions, some in places where women had never before served. Also, as a result of his efforts on the Federal level, North Carolina women have been appointed to a United Nations Commission; to represent the United States on the Inter-American Commission of Women (there is just one U.S. member in this body); to the high-level Committee on Inter-Governmental Relations; to the National Citizens Committee on Community Relations; and, of course, the U.S. Commissioner of Welfare is North Carolina's Ellen Winston.

Not content with this recognition, more than has ever been accorded women by any governor in the history of the state, Governor Sanford was one of the first governors in the country to establish, by executive order, a state Commission on the Status of Women. This commission, under the chairmanship of Dr. Anne Scott of Duke University, has just recently presented its report to the Governor. In my opinion, the N.C. report is better than the Federal report, and has a number of suggestions, legislative and otherwise, which I'm sure the women of the state will hope to see carried out in the next few years.

As head of the Democratic Party of the state, and through party chairman Bert Bennett, Governor Sanford ordered massive transfusions as Rx for a somewhat weak and worn-out state party structure. Here are a few of the "firsts" in this area: a full-time executive secretary, paid at the same level as top state officials; expanded office space and additional secretary in order to better serve local party officials, legislators, etc.; a newspaper, the N. C. Democrat, mailed every six weeks to from 12 to 15 thousand Democrats from precinct officials up—and down to the smallest grass root; the Vance-Aycock Dinner, held annually in Asheville; workshops for party officials and candidates; direct liaison with Washington and the White House to better facilitate getting Federal jobs for North Carolinians; entertainment of county chairmen and their wives and other party officials in the Mansion (for the first time, the Jefferson-Jackson Day reception was held in the Mansion last year); a new, modern and meaningful party Plan of Organization came into existence, putting the county vice-chairman (in most cases, women) on the county executive committee for the first time. This last is perhaps the single most significant change in party structure as far as women are concerned, for it gives us a real voice on the local level. The list is endless and perhaps it will take years to access the changes, but the party at this point is alive, vibrant and well, and hopefully will remain so. It is my ardent hope and his, too, that they will flourish.

For my part, let me say that I have been a full member of the decision-making structure of the Party. Men and women, we worked together, under the Governor, to make a better Party and a better North Carolina. As a member of the 15 member executive committee of the Democratic National Committee, I have heard our Governor, our state, our party work and our people praised to the skies. I can only say now, in the presence of all, thank you, Terry Sanford, on behalf of those of us who struggle to better the condition of mankind. You have truly been a great leader and a light unto us all. May God grant that this is not an end, but a beginning.

"OUR FAMILY"—Known to most East Carolina students as (l to r) Margaret Rose, Betsy, Terry Jr. and Gov. Terry, the state's first family was seen, both formally and informally, more on our campus than any other campus in North Carolina. And, undoubtedly, we shall continue to see our beloved family, for recently Margaret Rose was named a trustee for our school.

Tributes To Terry

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins comment to Sanford

During the administration of Governor Sanford, East Carolina College has experienced large growth in the student body, faculty, and physical facilities. The size of the campus having been increased from 207 to 290 acres at present; the on-campus enrollment having increased from 4,500 in September, 1960, to 6,600, at present; the faculty from 234 at that time to 378; and a substantial expansion of the physical plant provided for including three dormitories, two classroom buildings, a health and physical education building for men and a music building.

In addition to this, the state appropriation for maintenance and expansion of the College has increased from approximately three and one half million dollars to seven and one fourth million dollars. This is an increase of more than 100 per cent during this four-year period.

Governor Sanford has demonstrated in many ways his deep interest in education on all levels for all of the people of North Carolina. The present status enjoyed by East Carolina College would not have been possible without the full support and interest of Governor Sanford, and it gives me great pleasure to join with our Board of Trustees in expressing our deep appreciation to Governor Sanford.

STATEMENT OF
W. LUNSFORD CREW
Re. Governor Sanford

North Carolinians will long remember Governor Sanford because he was a man who cared. He cared about wisdom and ignorance. He cared about poverty and plenty. He cared for the skilled and the unskilled. He cared for the rich and the poor. He cared about his friends and enemies—and they cared about him. He kept his head, when all around him were losing theirs and blaming it on him.

His finest hour may well come later, but already he has brought North Carolina hers. Let the bells toll!

To the Editor

Terry Sanford, throughout his entire administration as Governor of North Carolina, has demonstrated exceptional leadership in the building of a better and more progressive North Carolina. With vision and courage and with a sure grasp he has moved the State forward on many fronts.

In the important field of education, his accomplishments have been monumental. He expanded and improved the educational opportunity for all our youth below, within, and beyond the high school to an amazing degree. He will rank just below Aycock as an educational governor of large stature.

And in the field of better race relations he has followed with wisdom the moderate course for the great and enduring good of all the people.

His independence and skill in all the areas and arts of government have given him a sure footing in his effort to lift all segments of our society. As his distinguished term as Governor comes to a close, all North Carolinians can say with truth and gratitude, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Irving E. Carlyle

Statement by Charles B. Winberry
Chairman, N. C. Federation of College Democrats

The administration of Governor Terry Sanford has meant much to college students. Not in the terms of roads paved, or state employee benefits, or dollars of industrial expansion though he has no equal in these fields.

Terry Sanford means much because he has stimulated the mind to think and has made the wheels turn with new ideas and programs that enrich the whole man. He has shown that government and elected office are not instruments of red tape but are the hammer and chisel through which a new and better life evolves. He has that politics in not necessarily the art of the possible as much as it is the practice of a responsibility to meet the needs of the people.

It has been said that only once in a generation are the people willing to turn the reins of government over to one with new and often experimental ideas through which the real desires of every man can be fulfilled. I think it can truly be said that Governor Terry Sanford represented that person to the generation of the 1960's.

Governor Terry Sanford, by his life and leadership, his record and ideals, has long been an inspiration to young people, not only in North Carolina, but also throughout the nation. He served as an outstanding president of the Young Democratic Clubs of North Carolina and helped to build this organization in this state with its 30,000 members and clubs in nearly all 100 counties and on 30 college campuses into the strongest and best in the nation and sets an example for all other state Democratic clubs to emulate.

His interest in young people, his administration's programs for youth, his concern for education and "the right of every child to burgeon out all that here is within him", has furnished ideals for youth both here and throughout the land.

In every state he is recognized, not only as a leader in North Carolina and in the "New South", but a spokesman for progress in America. His record indicates he holds with Ibsen that "Those in league with the future are in league with Truth."

We remember his leadership well, as a director of the Boys State program at the Institute of Government and as an assistant director of that institution, as an instructor in law at the University Law School, as an outstanding State Senator, a state president of the young Democrats, and clearly one of North Carolina's greatest governors. Having led this state so well, he will now be looked to for leadership not only for the South Land, but for the Nation. The youth of this Nation, and over one-half of our population is now under 28, know that in Terry Sanford they will have a leader of foresight, progressive ideals, and inspiration.

By J. Albert House, Jr.,
President Young Democrats' Club of America

It is a pleasure for me to join the thousands of North Carolinians paying tribute to you. Your efforts in education and in the war on poverty have set a standard for the whole nation bringing recognition to your state and quality into the lives of your people.

I feel confident the monument to your turn of office will not be built by the hands of men but by the appreciation of children of North Carolina who will recapture your efforts in years to come.

Mrs. Johnson joins me in sending best wishes to one of America's greatest governors.

LYNDON B. JOHNSON

To the Editor

"The administration of Governor Terry Sanford has made great strides in continuing the march of progress by North Carolina. Though he emphasized all aspects of education, Governor Sanford gave strong direction to a wide range of programs to better our state and its people. His record is clearly stamped upon the face of North Carolina and generations yet to come will know the benefits of his significant leadership."

Robert W. Scott

Leader Sanford Pilots State Well

By BERT BENNETT

Five or six years ago when Terry Sanford began his campaign for Governor there were many apprehensions voiced by old-line politicians. Sanford's friends, college pals, colleagues, war-time associates and others who really knew him had no doubts as to his ability, courage and burning ambition for the advancement of North Carolina.

From the very beginning it was obvious to those of us who helped direct the campaign that here was a man with a determination, who would not compromise principles and who would get the job done or die trying. As the campaign progressed, this became more evident to those of us behind the scenes. After three strenuous campaigns in one year, Sanford proved once again his ability, backbone and foresight.

The past four years of his administration is history. The accomplishments of his team proves once again what can be done when a group of citizens band together for an unselfish goal. Historians will be kind to Sanford and will report that he was a man who was not seeking to win a popularity contest and the only question he asked was "is this good for North Carolina?"

When a sequel to "Profiles in Courage" is written the Sanford years will be recorded.

Terry Sanford speaks for progress. He has faith in the young people and respect their opinions. His administration recognized the need for higher education and has demonstrated in many ways his deep interest in education on all levels for all the people of North Carolina.

Typical of the action which took place during the Buc's Christmas basketball circuit, this picture was taken during the East Carolina, Berea game. The Bucs won 83-73 and now boast 6 wins to 3 losses.

Pirates Clinch Third Place In Lenior Rhyne Classics

By RANDY RYAN

East Carolina took an 89-69 victory over Berea College of Kentucky to clinch third place in the Lenoir Rhyne Holiday Classic on Saturday night. Jerry Woodside scored 22 of his 29 points in the second half to spark the Pirates to an easy victory. East Carolina had fallen victim to the Chattanooga team in the opening round of the tournament by the score of 83-73.

The Mountaineers of Kentucky had grabbed an early lead, rolling up a ten point spread of 12-2, but the Pirates battled back to tie up the game on Bob Kinnard's pair of free throws at 22-22. The lead bounced back and forth between the two teams until Bill Duckett's pair of foul shots gave the Bucs a 29-27 lead which they never lost after that.

The Pirates pulled away slowly until midway in the second period, holding a six point lead of 61-45, when Jerry Woodside went on a 12 point spree to crack the game wide open.

The Pirates had a good night, hitting 40 of 75 shots for a 53.3 shooting percentage while the Mountaineers hit a rather poor 31.3 per cent of their shots. East Carolina led in rebounding 52-44, with Bob Kinnard hauling down 12 and Woodside grabbing off 10.

Larry Williamson tallied 16 points to pace Berea. Grady Williamson with 12 points and Bob Kinnard with 11 points followed Woodside in the scoring for the Bucs. East Carolina now has 6-3 record overall while Berea now stands at 4-6.

A PARAMOUNT RELEASE

The East Carolina chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority is among the top four Tri Sigma chapters in the nation, according to the current issue of the sorority's quarterly magazine, The Triangle.

EC's Gamma Beta Chapter and Alpha Sigma Chapter at the University of Southern Mississippi led for third place honors in the 1964 round of the Annual Chapter Examination, a regular sorority test for all chapters.

First in the nation is the Gamma Alpha Chapter at the University of Illinois; ranked second is Florida Southern's Beta Phi Chapter.

Results of the examination were reported in the fall issue of The Triangle which also listed the EC chapter among 58 collegiate Tri Sigma groups on the Robbie Page Memorial honor roll for 1963-64.

The Robbie Page Memorial Fund of Tri Sigma will be matched by North Carolina state government funds and money from the University of North Carolina to finance construction of an out-patient children's room at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill. To be listed on the honor roll of the memorial fund, a chapter must contribute an amount equivalent to at least $3 per member.

Officers of ECC's Gamma Beta Chapter are: Melba Anders of Clinton, president; Pamela Jo Waters of Belmont, vice president; Joyce Sigmon of Roanoke, Va., secretary; and Linda S. Charlton of Arlington, Va., treasurer.

Dr. J. William Byrd of East Carolina's Department of Physics will speak to Chi Beta Phi, national honorary scientific fraternity, in a public invited seminar this Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m. in Flanagan 317.

Dr. Byrd's topic will be on a relatively new subject in physical science, "Plasma Physics in the Role of Energy Production," that is becoming more important as the world searches for new and more valuable sources of energy.

Before the seminar, Chi Beta Phi will hold a Christmas Banquet in South Cafeteria at which Dr. Byrd and his wife, and the fraternities advisors, Dr. J. N. LeConte and Dr. C. B. Knight and their wives will attend. This banquet will be the first formal meeting at which the eleven new members will attend in addition to the 20 old fraternity members.

A special invitation is extended to the faculty and members of the Mathematics and Science departments to attend and hear this informative lecture.

The East Carolina chapter of Chi Beta Phi was founded in 1953 and served as host to the national convention in the spring of 1964. Twenty-three colleges and universities in the eastern half of the United States have campus chapters of this honorary fraternity.

Alpha Phi Omega

The Kappa Upsilon chapter of Alpha Phi Omega has extended bids to its winter quarter pledge class. New pledges are: Phil Cates, Durham; Lou D'Ambrosio, Strafford, Pa.; Byron Demon, Mt. Olive; Joe Gralick, Maple Shade, N.J.; Tom Stott, Norfolk, Va.; George Thigpen, Mt. Olive.

The fraternity's big service and social event of the year, the White Ball, is being held Friday from 8:00 until Midnight in Wright auditorium. For those who have not gotten tickets, they may be purchased at the door.

Tau Sigma

The Alpha chapter of the honorary educational fraternity Tau Sigma, held rush on Tuesday evening, December 8, in the Mami Jenkins Alumni Building.

Judy Sullivan, president, began the rush by telling those present about the responsibilities of being a member of Tau Sigma. Paye Creegon then informed the potential pledges of necessary duties to be performed as pledges. Afterwards refreshments were served in the adjoining dining room.

Miss Daniels, also a nominee for secretary-historian of the national honorary business education society, will preside for the ritual of society meeting and the national chapter award session.

The East Carolina business teacher, whose two-year term as national editor of the fraternity's national circulated news magazine, will accompany three EC students, Carol Alderson of Colonial Heights, Va., who has been nominated as the office of national student representative of Pi Omega Pi, Ann Joyner of Rocky Mount, and Ethel Gayle Strickland of Dan.

Other speakers scheduled to appear with Miss Daniels are George Cooper and Dr. Fagan of Eastern Illinois University; and Miss Marilyn Berman, Dr. Mearl R. Guthrie, and Bowling Green State University.

The national meeting began today at the Palmer House Hotel of national officers a whole Tuesday evening as part of the general session.

The ECC delegation will attend the North-Central Business Education Association meeting held jointly with the Pi Omega Pi Convention.

Frances Daniels, assistant in the School of Business, Carolina, is one of five speakers at the three-day 19th Biennial Convention of Pi Omega Pi in Chicago, Ill., next week.

United National Collegiate Council Offers Essay-Writing Contest

First prize of a month-long, all-expense paid trip to Europe, including a special summer-school session about the United Nations in Geneva, will be awarded to the winner of a college essay-writing contest sponsored by the Collegiate Council for the United Nations. CCUN is basing the contest on the first of a series of 90-minute television entertainment programs about the UN that are being developed by Telsun Foundation, Inc.

The contest is designed to inspire better understanding of the UN by stimulating greater interest about the world organization among college students throughout the United States. That is also the primary purpose of CCUN.

Undergraduate students enrolled in any accredited college or university are invited to submit entries. They must compose an essay of 3,500 words or less after watching "Carol for Another Christmas," the TV program which will be televised on the ABC network on Monday evening, Dec. 28, at 9:30 (EST). Peter Sellers heads an all-star cast in the gripping, dramatic story about the need for all men to become involved in today's world. Xerox Corporation is providing $4,000,000 to underwrite the series of special TV programs.

While preliminary winners will be judged regionally, the top five finalists will be selected by a blue ribbon panel of national judges. The panel will include:

Clark M. Eichelberger, Vice President, United Nations Association; author John Gunther; Arthur

Larson, Director, World Rule of Law Center at Duke University; Henry Cabot Lodge, until recently U.S. Ambassador to South Vietnam and former U.S. representative at the United Nations, and Ambassador Marietta Tree, U.S. Mission to the UN.

Each essay must concentrate on the same theme on which writer Rod Serling based his script for "Carol for Another Christmas"—the idea that today, more than ever before, no man can live as an island. From this, each student may point his essay in whatever direction his intellect and fancy may take him.

The grand prize winner will be flown from his home anywhere in the U.S. to Europe. Upon completion of the summer-school session at Geneva, co-sponsored by the World Federation of United Nations Associations and the International Student Movement for the UN, the student will be provided with the necessary funds for several weeks' travel in Europe.

Second prize is an expense-paid trip to New York to attend intensive briefings about the UN at a special summer session. The third prize winner will receive a trip to San Francisco in June to take part in the 20th anniversary celebration of the signing of the UN Charter. Fourth and fifth prizes are complete 24-volume sets of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1964 Edition, while 12 regional winners will receive two-volume sets of the Britannica World Language Dictionary.

Preliminary judging of all essays are to be conducted regionally by a board comprising the CCUN regional director, appropriate faculty members and representatives of the United Nations Association of the U.S. The top five essays from each region will then be forwarded to CCUN headquarters for judging by the national blue ribbon panel.

All students intending to enter the contest must notify the CCUN, at 345 E. 46th Street, New York City, no later than Jan. 15. They will then be mailed complete rules and details.

East Carolina Professor, Dr. Winkler Dies Saturday

Dr. Frances Roberta Winkler, 57, Associate Professor in the Department of English at East Carolina died Saturday, January 2 at 9:35 a.m. at Pitt Memorial Hospital after three weeks of illness. A rosary was said for her on Monday at 8:00 p.m. at Wilkerson Funeral Home on Evans Street. A Requiem Mass was held on Tuesday at 11:00 a.m. at St. Peter's Catholic Church by Father Maurice Spillane, and burial followed in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Dr. Winkler was of German and Irish descent, and was born in Brooklyn, New York. Since August, 1957, she has been a member of the East Carolina faculty. She received a B.S. degree from St. Joseph's College for Women, Brooklyn, New York; an LL.B. degree from Pacific Coast University, Los Angeles, California; and her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Southern California, Los Angeles, California.

She began her career as a legal secretary. After entering the field of education, she was a teacher in the Los Angeles public high schools and later an instructor at Southwestern University, Occidental College, and Coalinga Junior College. She was also an Associate Professor at St. Mary of the Plains College in Dodge City, Kansas. She traveled widely in the United States, Great Britain, and continental Europe, and held membership in the following organizations: the Modern Language Association; the Medieval Academy; Phi Delta Delta, legal fraternity; and the Newman Club. She was a communicant of the Roman Catholic Church.

Dr. Winkler is survived by her father, Mr. Emil A. Winkler, who resided with her at 2700 Jefferson Drive, Greenville.

Gordley Works Appears In Periodical

A review of the works of an East Carolina faculty artist, Marilyn Gordley, appears in a recent issue of the French arts periodical, Revue Moderne.

Part of the October issue, the article covers Mrs. Gordley's training and career up to her painting, "Heritage," which led the magazine to prepare the review.

"Heritage" drew the attention of Revue Moderne's art editor while it was on exhibit with the National Academy of Design Show.

An instructor in the School of Art at EC, Mrs. Gordley is a graduate of Washington University (BFA) and the University of Oklahoma (MFA) and has studied further at Ohio State University. Her husband, Tran Gordley, is a professor on the EC art faculty.

Greenville Art Center Begins Classes January 12

Two senior art majors from East Carolina College join two college faculty wives in teaching children's and adult classes at the Greenville Art Center beginning next Thursday, Jan. 7.

Walter Louis Jones of Randleman will instruct classes in drawing for Pitt County children aged seven through 13. Willie Gray Marlowe of Whiteville will teach a course in watercolor for adults and children.

Mrs. Sarah Speight, wife of East Carolina artist-in-residence Francis Speight, will instruct an adult class in portrait and still life painting.

Also for adults will be a beginning sculpture class taught by Mrs. Suzanne Durland, wife of Donald L. Durland of the School of Art faculty.

Adult classes in portrait and still life painting on Thursdays, beginning Jan. 7, from 10 a.m. until 12 noon; drawing and watercolor classes for children on Saturdays, beginning Jan. 9, at 10 a.m.; and beginning sculpture and watercolor classes for adults on Tuesday evenings, beginning Jan. 12, from 7 to 9 p.m.

For persons who are members of the East Carolina Art Society, tuition will be the same for children and adults. Non-member tuition will increase by $3 for adults and $1 for children.

According to Mrs. Jill S. Edwards, director of the center, tuition must be paid on or before the first lesson. Applications for refunds will be accepted only at the time of the first lesson or through the end of the first week, she said.

Further information about the courses is available from the Greenville Art Center at 802 Evans St. or by calling Mrs. Edwards at PL 8-1946.

Gordley, Edmiston Serve As Jurors

Painter Tran Gordley and sculptor Robert Edmiston, East Carolina faculty artists, served as jurors for the Gold Cup Exhibition of the Albenmarle Art Association.

The exhibition on view in the University of Virginia Art Museum in Charlottesville, was opened to the public last week.

Following a reception at which Edmiston and Gordley were guests of honor, the two EC artists presented Gold Cup awards in seven categories: oil painting, water color, graphics, ceramics, sculpture, mosaics and crafts.

Mason Receives Honors In History Program At EC

A senior history major from Wilmington, Jack M. Mason Jr., has been accepted in the history honors program at East Carolina.

Mason, one of five seniors selected to participate in the program, has been assigned to an honors professor, Dr. David N. Thomas, in the history department here.

The history honors student will be expected to carry on a program of intensive reading in 20th Century American History with emphasis on the new era. In addition, he will be required to prepare a research paper in his chosen field.

Dr. Richard C. Todd, EC professor of history and director of the program, said Mason was chosen "for his outstanding academic record and for his genuine interest in history."

Choice of Mason for the history honors program was made by the EC Student Financial Aid Committee on recommendation of the History Honors Committee and the director of the history department, Dr. Herbert R. Paschal Jr.

In addition to Mason's scholastic achievements, he holds membership in four clubs at the college: Young Democrats, Philosophy, History and Canterbury. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack M. Mason of 2108 S. College Road, Wilmington, he is a graduate of the New Hanover High School and studied from 1960 to 1962 at Wilmington College.

Notice

The AWARD-WINNING BRAZILIAN FILM "THE GIVEN WORD," described by the New York Daily News as "a scapel at work on the conscience of mankind," will be shown in Austin Auditorium, Tuesday, January 12, at 7:00 P.M.

The film is sponsored by the Inter-Religious Council as a part of its "Institute on Human Rights."

Adapted by director Anselmo Duarte from Brazil's most popular stage work, "The Given Word" is a study of human motivation. Time magazine said that "The Given Word's" strength lies in the vitality that pulses through . . . the cries of pitchmen and voodoo women and street-corner poets, the hip-swinging dancers and gourd-rattling hipsters who almost make humanity look worth dying for."

Students and faculty are invited.

Profile Of Dan K. Moore

Posed for a family portrait in their modest home, this is the new first family of the state. (l to r) Mrs. Dan Moore, Jr. (many EC students know her as "Fran"); her husband, Dan Moore, Jr.; Edgar B. Hamilton (son-in-law of the governor-elect) "Little Jeanelle"; Mrs. Dan Moore; Blanton Hamilton; Edith Hamilton (the Moore's daughter), and governor-elect Dan K. Moore.

Life And Times Of Dan Moore, Governor-Elect Of North Carolina

By BILL JOHNSON
"Democrats for Dan" Staff Member

DAN KILLIAN MOORE, 58-year-old Democratic Governor-elect, is a man whose outstanding record of public service testifies to his abiding interest in good government, his deep concern for the future of North Carolina and its people, and his loyalty to a family tradition of service that predates the Revolutionary War.

Traditionalist Democrat

Moore's great-great-grandfather, Captain William Moore, commanded troops in western North Carolina in 1776. Granted a parcel of western land as part payment for services in the Revolution, he turned west in 1787 and is generally credited with being the first permanent white settler west of the Blue Ridge.

Down through the years, the Moore family made its mark on North Carolina history, furnishing the State with a Speaker of the House of Representatives and three Superior Court judges. Dan Moore's father, Fred Moore, was named to the Superior Court bench at the age of 28, one of the youngest men in North Carolina history to be so honored.

Two years after Dan Moore's birth in Asheville on April 2, 1906, his father died and the family moved to Sylva in Jackson County. There, young Dan grew up and attended the public schools.

In 1923, young Moore borrowed money and entered the University of North Carolina. He made Phi Beta Kappa and earned a B.S. degree in Business Administration in 1927. Following in his father's footsteps, he entered the UNC Law School where he won recognition as an outstanding student. He was graduated and admitted to the North Carolina Bar in 1928.

In that year, Dan Moore entered the private practice of Law and began a long and distinguished career of service to the Democratic Party. He served as a precinct worker, precinct chairman and then moved through memberships on a variety of Party committees at the county and state level. For more than a quarter of a century, he served as a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee. He has attended both State and National Conventions as a delegate.

Moore's rise in the ranks of the Democratic Party paralleled a steady increase in stature in the legal profession. He first served as attorney for the Town of Sylva, beginning in 1931, then as Jackson County Attorney and legal representative for the County Board of Education. In 1941, he was chosen Jackson County's representative to the North Carolina General Assembly, where he won a reputation as a forceful and capable legislator.

Family History

In 1933, Moore married Miss Jeanelle Coulter of Pikeville, Tennessee. Their daughter, Edith, now the wife of Shelby bank executive Edgar B. Hamilton, Jr., is the mother of the Moore's two grandchildren, Blanton, four, and Jeanelle, two and a half. The Moore's son, Dan, Jr., recently married Miss Fran Brock of Wadesboro. They live in Raleigh where he is associated with the Shell Oil Company.

Judge Moore is an active Methodist layman, having served as president of the Board of Trustees of his church, a member and chairman of the Board of Stewards, Sunday School Superintendent, church treasurer and teacher of the Men's Bible Class.

Shining Record

His public service and civic activities include the vice-chairmanship of the North Carolina Board of Water Resources and past membership on the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina. He is also past president of the Sylva Rotary Club, a member of the Canton Civitan Club, a member of the Masonic Order and a director of the UNC Law School Foundation, UNC Alumni Association, the North Carolina Railroad and Radio Station WWIT. He is a member of the Morehead Scholarship Committee and the Board of Managers of the Asheville Branch of Wachovia Bank and Trust Company.

A veteran of World War II, Moore, although draft exempt because of age and marital status, enlisted in the United States Army and saw service in the European Theater with a medical unit. Toward the end of the war, he was transferred to the Judge Advocate General's Office where he remained until honorably discharged in 1945.

Following the War, Moore moved quickly back into his legal and political career. He was elected solicitor for the old 20th Judicial District in 1935 and easily won re-election to that post in 1946. In this election, he was chosen without a run-off against two strong opponents, polling 80 per cent of all votes cast in his home county.

When a vacancy occurred on the Superior Court bench in 1948, Governor Gregg Cherry chose Dan Moore to fill the post. He won re-election for an eight-year term in 1950.

During his 10 years on the bench, Judge Moore earned a reputation as an outstanding jurist. Newspapers commended him on the conduct of his court, and in at least two counties, members of the Bar presented Judge Moore with gifts at the conclusion of his terms.

After completing his term in 1958, Judge Moore embarked on a new phase of his career, accepting a position with Champion Papers, Inc., of Canton as General Counsel. He was later named Assistant Secretary of the company.

Moore announced his candidacy for the Democratic Party nomination for the Office of Governor in September, 1963. A vigorous campaigner who believes that personal contact with the people is the key to political success, Moore carried his campaign into each of North Carolina's 100 counties. The effectiveness of his effort was reflected in his selection as the Democratic nominee by a 186,000 vote majority in the second of two hard-fought primary campaigns.

East Carolina's School Of Nursing Receives Accreditation From NLN

East Carolina announced today that its young School of Nursing has been accredited by the National League for Nursing (NLN).

Officials said they consider NLN accreditation a vital step forward for the nursing school in its drive for excellence.

Now in its fifth year, EC's school becomes the third in North Carolina with NLN credentials for a program leading to the bachelor of science degree in nursing. Others are at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill and at Duke University.

Accreditation by the national organization, frequently a stumbling block for new nursing schools, came quickly for EC. It became eligible for NLN evaluation just six months ago by granting its first BSN degrees last June.

Action by the organization was based on the report of its evaluation team which visited here in September and October. Formal sanction was granted by the League's Collegiate Board of Review. Officials here were notified by telegram from Mary F. Quarmby, director of NLN's Department of Baccalaureate and Higher Degree Programs.

Mrs. Eva W. Warren, dean of the school; Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, EC president; and Dr. Robert L. Holt, college vice president and dean, jointly announced the NLN action and spelled out the significance of the accreditation.

Generally, the new national sanction carries immediate benefits for East Carolina's nursing graduates and for the school itself.

Nurses trained here will be added prestige. That means better jobs, higher salaries and less difficult entry into higher degree programs.

The school finds its development opportunities greatly enhanced, showing its new quality label stands a better chance in local recruitment—and it stands tall when considered for financial aid from such sources as the state and state governments.

Currently, the nursing program here lists an enrollment of 100. It began in 1960 with a class of 13, including Dean Warren, who is quartered temporarily in a building structure on the fringe of the campus.
