

Entertainment Flourishes At EC

Waring And Co. Present Concert

The third of five pops concerts in the current SGA series will be presented tonight as Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians appear in Christenbury Gymnasium at 8:15 p.m.

Tonight's performance marks the return of the musical troupe to the East Carolina campus after an absence four years ago. The previous show was a huge success in spite of a snowstorm in Greenville at the time.

The 1965 Waring show's selections have all the qualities that "have enchanted Americans during the last few decades," according to critics. Included in the show are show tunes, old standards, current pop hits, and instrumental music. The revue has been called "the world's most exciting musical organization" for its wide range of melodic and merry-making activities.

Waring has led his famous singers since he was 17 years old and is a veteran of radio and television. Yet, this master musician finds time for numerous hobbies and outside activities. For instance, he owns and operates a luxury resort, a music publishing house, publishes a music magazine, and is the perfecter of a steam iron which has been successfully manufactured. Also, he is a trustee of his alma mater, Pennsylvania State University.

Violinist Jack Glatzer And Accompanist Entertain Students With Impressive Concert

By ROBERT CAMPBELL

Violinist Jack Glatzer, accompanied by pianist Dr. Wilton Mason, performed in concert at Austin Auditorium, March 11, before a less-than-capacity audience.

Three numbers were performed, including two sonatas for violin and piano and one number for unaccompanied violin. A very excellent job was done by both performers, as attested by the response of the audience.

The first number was "Sonata No. 2 For Violin and Piano" composed by Samuel Adler, a well-established contemporary composer. Mr. Glatzer and Dr. Mason flowed through the three segments of this number with barely a hesitation, and the audience settled down for a pleasant evening.

The second number was "Partita in B minor for Unaccompanied Violin" composed by Johann Sebastian Bach. Mr. Glatzer rallied into this number, paused briefly between segments to catch his breath and wipe his brow, and renewed the performance with increased vigor.

This selection was followed by an intermission.

The concert was continued and terminated with "Sonata For Violin and Piano," written by Cesar Franck, who was a nineteenth century composer not recognized until after his death. Mr. Glatzer and Dr. Mason did indeed make this composer immortal to the audience with their impressive musical skill and performance.

For those of us who attended the concert, Mr. Glatzer and Dr. Mason will be long remembered.

East Carolinian Fills Positions, Lee And Avery Get Promotions

The office of the EAST CAROLINIAN has recently released a statement concerning the promotion of Nellie Johanna Lee to the position of Managing Editor and John A. Avery to the post of News Editor.

Nellie Lee, an English major from Raleigh, N. C., has worked previously as Features Editor and as News Editor. She professes an avid interest in journalism and is considering the possibilities of a major in the field. She has applied to the North Carolina Press Association for work in the news-writing field during the summer. Favorable results have been received.

John Avery, a sophomore English major from Durham, N. C. has previously served in the capacity of news reporter and general staff writer. His major interest is reading. But he says that he realizes that the training in journalism that he is receiving here will be of value in the future as a teacher.

Both staff members seem to have the same thoughts about their new positions. "I'm learning a lot in a short amount of time . . . sometime it's a little trying."

When asked about the new appointments, the editor stated, "I'm certain that both John and Nellie will do justice to their new positions. Both are diligent in attempting any new task. Both are interested in helping the school and not out for personal gain . . . this is evident from their past performance in the office."

Avery is replacing Miss Lee as News Editor. Nellie moves in to replace Effie Bishop, who has stepped down because of schedule conflicts.

RING SALES

Eddie Greene, Chairman of the Ring Committee, announced that rings can be bought from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. in the SGA Office.

CHURCH GROUP INSTALLS OFFICERS

The King Youth Fellowship installed its officers Tuesday for the coming year. Elected to lead the religious organization for 1965-66 were Ronald Gray Dean, President; Winston Lee Underwood, Vice President; Peggy Sue Kennedy, Secretary-Treasurer; and Rheba Merle Ballard, Chaplain.

Ethridge-Kilpatrick Participate In Debate

One of America's most distinguished journalists and a Richmond newspaper editor nationally respected for his Southern conservatism met in a civil rights debate here last night.

Mark Ethridge, editor of Newsday, and James Jackson Kilpatrick, editor of the News Leader in Richmond, discussed the positive and negative sides of current civil rights issues.

The debate, which was moderated by David J. Whichard, II, editor of the Greenville Daily Reflector, was held at 8:00 p. m. in Christenbury Gymnasium.

The debate, was a part of the Lecture Series sponsored by the Student Government Association. The Ethridge-Kilpatrick debate, sixth of seven programs on the 1964-65 Lecture Series, was an exclusive presentation for the East Carolina Campus. It has not been repeated elsewhere.

Ethridge, a native of Meridian, Miss., has edited Newsday since September of 1963. Prior to that his journalistic career spans nearly a half-century and covers many positions of distinction.

He, Arthur Sulzberger of the New York Times and J. N. Heiskell of the Arkansas Gazette are the only recipients of "distinguished journalist" honors from Columbia University in New York.

Kilpatrick, a native of Oklahoma, succeeded the late Douglas Southall Freeman as editor of the News Leader about 15 years ago.

Since that time he has built a national reputation as an eloquent champion of fairness and considered thinking from the responsible Southern viewpoint on civil rights.

National Council Accepts EC

The Graduate School of East Carolina has been accepted as a member of a national association for graduate study programs.

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins announced Friday that EC has been granted full membership in the Council of Graduate Schools in the United States (CGS). The organization is composed of institutions which are accredited by their respective regional agencies and which maintain creditable programs of graduate instruction.

The official East Carolina representative for Council affairs will be Dr. John O. Reynolds, director of the Division of Graduate Studies.

East Carolina now offers five basic graduate degrees: an academic MA, an MA in Education, and MA in Clinical Psychology, a Master of Fine Arts (MFA), and a Master of Music (MM).

Many of the 1,200 graduate students enrolled in the EC advanced degree program attend summer sessions only. Only 400 and 500 are enrolled in any given quarter of the regular school year.

East Carolina conferred 240 master's degrees last June with more than 250 expected to receive such degrees on May 23.

The Official announcement came in a letter to Dr. Jenkins from CGS President Gustave O. Arlt. The Council official reported in the letter favorable action on EC's application for membership and extended official welcome from the association.

SOCIOLOGY CLUB MEETING

The Sociology Club held its first meeting of the Spring Quarter Monday night. Meetings were arranged for the remainder of the term and a field trip was planned. An interesting speaker has been invited for the next meeting on March 23 and all members are urged to attend.

Goins And Adkins

A show of drawings and prints originating at Appalachian State Teachers College from colleges of Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina is now on exhibit in the Appalachian Gallery of the Fine Arts Building in Boone, N. C.

Mr. Perry Kelly, painter and State Art Supervisor, was the juror. He selected the works of Mike Goins of East Carolina and Lynn Adkins of Appalachian for purchase prizes. These will become a part of the AS TC permanent collection of student work.

The exhibit will be held from March 1 through March 25. The public is invited.

Former Student Dies In Action While Leading Viet Nam Charge

By BENNIE TEEL

Lt. Dempsey H. Williams, a 1961 graduate of East Carolina College, died in Viet Nam Thursday while leading a charge on a hill held by the Viet Cong.

It is reported that 25-year old Lt. Williams and another Marine, Maj. William G. Leftwich, Jr. were serving with Vietnamese marines when they were cut down on the crest of a hill in the town of Hoa An, 285 miles northeast of Saigon.

Dr. N. M. Jorgensen, chairman of the Physical Education Department, who had close association with Williams, stated that the ex-football player was "a quiet and reserved person, who ordinarily didn't have much to say unless spoken to. Yet when he spoke, it was with a great deal of sincerity and conviction."

While attending East Carolina, Williams was an outstanding guard with the Pirates. Williams also served as president of his senior class, and was elected to "Who's Who." The P. E. and Sociology major was an active member of the Young Democrat's, the Varsity Club, the Physical Education Club, and held several offices in the SGA. He was also a member of the Sigma Nu Fraternity.

Williams married the former Judy Spear who is a 1962 graduate of East Carolina. He was the son of Mrs. Helen B. Williams of Fayetteville. Williams' sister Laura Jean Williams is a senior at East Carolina.

In reference to the death of Dempsey Williams, Dr. Jorgensen said, "God often calls home his most prized children at a time that we may think premature."

baker's "old saws . . ."

It will never become a practice for a college newspaper to fill its editorial column with material written by professional writers. However, an exception will be made in this issue and we have chosen to run a column written by Russell Baker which appeared in the New York Times on March 6 of this year. The column is entitled, "Observer: Rich Richard's Almanac".

"Old saws are wearing out." Take the case of "The devil finds work for idle hands to do." As recently as fifteen years ago when a mother caught a son loafing around the pornography rack at the corner drugstore, she could take him by the ear and lead him home to wash the windows with the perfectly satisfactory explanation that "The devil finds work for idle hands to do."

Nowadays, the world is different. With the march of automation, idleness is becoming the national occupation and socialists will speak sternly to mothers who oppose it. Since ever-expanding idleness is the goal of the American economy, it is unpatriotic to mention it in the same breath with Beelzebub.

The goal now is to rehabilitate idleness and the first step in every rehabilitation program is a name change. During World War I, when Germany became the enemy, the Hunnish sauerkraut was restored to respectability by being renamed 'Liberty Cabbage.' In the same way, ugly satanic old idleness is now rechristened 'leisure'.

Leisure sounds ever so much more decent than idleness. It sounds like something that the uptown set might go in for enthusiastically. Idleness was an evil to be fought by placing such weapons as window-washing rags and lawnmowers in the hands of the indolent young. Leisure is merely another typical American problem to be solved by a nexus of committees, study groups and Congressional investigations.

Now, if a boy loafs around the pornography rack, it is merely because he has a 'leisure-time problem.' The solution is not to put him to work—the machines have that well in hand—but to encourage him to take up the oboe or start a bee colony. In this way we say, he uses his leisure 'creatively'.

The notion of creative leisure is mostly nonsense, of course. The sin that a boy may stumble into by keeping company with oboe players or going to beekeepers' convention is considerable, especially if his interest in oboes or bees is only a substitute for loafing around the drugstore.

The American economic system must nevertheless, be justified. And so, if a boy follows the oboe path to sin, his parents are no longer permitted to blame it all on Satan; instead, the parents are indicted for failing to find a creative solution to the leisure-time problem.

There are many other pieces of ancient wisdom that have turned obsolete under the bizarre new American prosperity. Take "A Penny saved is a penny earned." Sound enough in Franklin's day perhaps, but clearly subversive in 1965.

The first economic duty of every citizen today is to consume. To keep the economy booming we must consume with our cash, consume with our credit cards, consume with our charge accounts and then go to the bank to borrow the means to consume again.

It is obvious that if people began acting on the theory that "A penny saved is a penny earned," production would fall, unemployment would rise, salaries would be cut and the country would stagnate. Nowadays, the homily should read "A penny spent is not good enough."

Then there is the collapse of "A stitch in time saves nine." To maintain even the present unsatisfactory level of employment, it is absolutely imperative that we never settle for the timely one-stitch job when a bit of dallying can make work for eight additional stitchers.

As we have seen in too many industries, the eight stitchers thrown out of work either go on relief—which reduces the timely stitcher's take-home pay—or turn in desperation to braining the smug stitch-in-time takers for their entire pay envelopes. In this type of economy, the canny stitcher takes his stitch too late.

And, of course, there is old, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." Taken literally, this advise would now be disastrous.

In the first place, rising early would immediately raise the leisure-time problem to unmanageable proportions. The safest of all leisure-time activities is sleep, and the fellow who rolls out at the cock's crow to work on his oboe is going to be thoroughly sated with leisure by breakfast time.

What's more, early rising tends to make a man reflect on the absurdity of his life. In this mood, he may very well realize that his way of life is insane and decide to change it by saving a penny, thereby triggering an economic catastrophe.

Very likely he will go to the office feeling energetic and healthy and, before he can stop himself, take a stitch in time, thus causing unemployment, raising his taxes and increasing crime. "Early to bed and early to rise" has had its day.

So, apparently has Benjamin Franklin.

JOAN BAEZ

Today, Joan Baez is the single most successful solo performer on the American concert circuit. It is not hard to find the reasons for Miss Baez' success. Her soprano voice is never strained, and has both a bell-like and gypsy quality. The freshness of her voice brings originality to the old themes of unrequited love and loss of a loved one. She is right at home with her audience and enjoys every minute of her singing.

It should be quite clear to any one who has seen her, or listened to records, that Joan Baez is not just a singer, but a charismatic youth figure. Her stage performances, like those of the greatest artists of our times, are not performances in the sense of acts at all, but extensions of her private life personality. This is another part of her tremendous

Warning: Wake Up, Youth Of America

The most agonizing thing about the youth of today is that they either do what everyone else does or try so hard to be different that they fall into another, equally as nauseating, category of the "pseudo-non-conformist".

Ask an adult what teenagers like and he will most likely say, "Pizza, the Beatles, and records." There is the stereotype of a teenager: the girls in bushy hair, fan-tastic eye make-up, and a matching sweater and skirt; the boys in tight pants, bushy hair, and driving a terrifically noisy car.

Then there are the pseudo-non-conformist; boys who are smart but dress like crumbs, or who are not smart but still dress like crumbs, or who act superior, disclaiming all forms of society, and their girl counterparts who have long stringy hair and scuffy shoes.

Come on, youth of America, wake up. Do you fall into these atrocious categories just because you haven't the courage to think for yourself? If you like classical music, do you slink off to concerts, someone will see you. Just because you see future and grades, there's something wrong and you'll be doomed of "real square".

If you like a party rather than a rat's nest, a party rather than a party evening of bowling or rather than necking, speak up, stand up, be a fact that you are not not a sheep, a person of the look-alikes in the "her" crowd.

Above all, do your out the universal lesson. Be yourself, have your you as a young person, a victim—of ideals, know what and when you want Jones or Sary Smith, yourself take the lead, blend, unnoticed, into those of the...

VOTE!

Last week, an old friend dropped by my room for a visit. We talked about everything imaginable, which included, of course, the coming SGA elections. As we talked, I heard such questions as, "How did the SGA on this campus get the reputation of being a 'yes-man' for the administration?" and "Why don't the students get a vote in the spending of their activity fees?" After a dozen or so questions, I decided to ask my friend to run for the office of Junior Class Representative, and find out for himself. I expected him to laugh—but he didn't. Instead, he agreed to put his name in the race if I would support him.

I shall support Mr. Charles Bernier as a candidate for Junior Class Representative. Here are the reasons:

Background: Mr. Bernier served in the United States Marine Corps for six years, four of which were on active duty as a radar technician at Cherry Point, N. C. He has traveled extensively (as a civilian) in eight European countries, and in 48 of the 50 states. After his Honorable Discharge as a corporal, Mr. Bernier decided to continue the he had begun at Cherry Point Winter Quarter of 1960, as a full-time premed at ECC, and became a student. Last quarter he changed his major to English. He has attended both the YBC and YDC Club, worked for the LINIAN, and has application on the staff of The Platform: Mr. Bernier be classified as a student. He is completely influence of any type on campus. He listens as demonstrated by his but he rarely makes decisions of one voice. Permission to this rule of his Drill Instructor, afraid to ask "why" his influence to improve East Carolina College.

Will you please consider, whose only purpose serve you with the best ties and experience.

LETTERS

Dear Editor,

I don't know if the school newspaper is the proper media for my complaint but I have no other ideas.

My complaint is this: Why, when buying a special in the cafeteria, can you not substitute milk for tea and just pay the nickle difference? When you make the substitution the cashier adds up everything separately and charges you ten cents extra, his means you pay fifteen cents for a glass of milk when buying the special.

I've talked to the main cafeteria and said that you can't do anything when buying for I gave me no reason for.

Jim Upton

Editor:

Those unfortunate with the Paganini and their performance (and returned to the minutes late), are the serious defects in the policies concerning success. She is natural and real and the way she is on stage is the way she is at breakfast.

It is this utter reality, plus the glowing humanity of her personality and the remarkable gift for vocal communication that she possesses, that makes her appeal so incredibly strong.

Her audience for the most digs her all the way and, in a very real audience (just as with the Ray Charles) seem to feel that her concerts are more than recitals, they are religious experiences.

People, young and old who attend one of Miss Baez' performances go away talking about how moving she was, and how instantly she reached them. Spending an evening at a performance by Miss Baez is a truly enriching experience.

In addition to this appears to be another restrictive influence of coeds (seniors, for example are twenty - one or years old, must be initories by 10:30 PM and midnight on week policy for freshman be understandable, not for everyone.

Most of the blame flexible and ridiculous can be traced to the tist influence in this seems a tragedy that cially - minded individuals positions to determine obviously they are.

Sincerely,
 Richard

Romanticism Comes With Spring, Students Receive Seven Signs

1—Spring is coming, and with it come the most irritating, useless pests known to mankind: locusts, mosquitoes, and campus romantics.

There are fortunately cheap and efficient counterforces against the insect kingdom. But as far as I have been able to determine, no one has yet managed to find a painless yet lethal means of disposing of those insufferable creatures whose only claim to significance is that they feel deeply. For those of you who retain an archaic reactionary admiration for such departed virtues as balance, reason, and sanity, I offer this guide to romantics.

2—Note the girl who walks sideways twisting her body in uncontrollable turns and sweeping her arms low to pluck a flower or piece of grass or leaf or weed, smile wistfully, and place said flora in her hair. Run away from this girl. Quickly if you do not you will be buying her coffee and listening to her stories about her Relationships.

3—This is the second sure sign of romanticism. Relationships. Romantics don't know anybody they have Relationships, which are Evolving, Dissolving, Clarifying, or being Reformed. What this means is she wants to sleep with him but is afraid, or has slept with him and is sorry, or doesn't want to sleep with him but thinks she should want to, or he made a pass at her. A Fulfilled Relationship means she is pregnant.

4—Romantics are drawn as lemming to the sea (or whatever metaphor suggests compulsion to you) to the Children's Books. These books are about the size of postage stamps, are about 30 pages long, have simplistic drawings of wide-eyed children holding daisies, teddy bears, dolls, and cookies, and contains on each page a sentence, such as "a friend is someone you like," or "love is very nice," or "people should be nice to each other," or "home is warm." There is a difference between these Profound Truths Which Only Children Know and the readers you had in third grade. The difference is that your third grade reader had ten times as many pages. The children's stamp books sell for a sweet, Profoundly Simple four bucks a throw and are so common among Romantics that they serve as the medium of exchange, given in fetching gift wrap. The writers earn enough money to buy real books. That is another Profoundly Simple Truth.

5—Romantics are People Watchers. All of them will tell you that they are really People Watchers. This means they stare out the window at people, bringing to this the Inner Truths which they have learned during their Relationships. This also means they do not get around to learning about such base trivia as politics, social change in the world, or their school assignments. They are watching people. In New York City people watching is called Loitering, and is punishable by a $50 fine or ten days in jail.

6—Romantics wade in fountains, look at the Moon, and take long walks at night. They wade in fountains because that is what Romantics do. They have read about it in books and seen the movies and by God they are going to have a Meaningful Experience if it means double pneumonia. This is the way you get to Know Yourself and didn't Socrates say "Know Thyself?" He did, and that is the real reason why they gave him Hemlock.

7—Romantics do not have dates. I knew one Romantic who never had a date—he had Experiences (this is the first step toward a Relationship). Every time he had a date I'd say, "How was your date, George?" He would smile. "It was surrealistic," he said. He is the only guy in the world who ever had 73 consecutive surrealistic Experiences. A surrealistic Experience is when you make out on your first date. The date is called a Soul-Mate. That means she might let you go to bed with her.

8—A Romantic is much too busy to make any social commitments, to understand or participate in the political dialogue, or expend any energy in making the world a better place to live; he is busy learning about himself. The lower animals who are so occupied are called Parasites, and man has spent a great deal of his time trying to rid himself of these useless animals. Pity he didn't start a bit higher on the tree of life.

JOE BRANNON, official photographer for such campus organizations as the East Carolinian, The Buccaneer, The Rebel, and The Key, gets ready to take a picture of Wright Fountain. Joe spends a great deal of his time in taking and developing pictures of our campus and its activities. Joe does an outstanding job and our campus salutes him this week.

Washburn Review Letter Makes The Rounds, 'Are We Doing Campus Surveys On Boloney'

ACP—Washburn Review, Washburn University, Topeka, Kan., tells of a letter received by its president, Dr. Harold Sponberg, which he decided to pass around.

The letter, from a meat packing company which shall be designated as "Company X", reads:

"Company X is a manufacturer of artificial sausage castings and other flexible film products used in the meat industry. As a major supplier to this industry, we would like to know if your institution maintains a sausage kitchen and/or a course on the processing of sausage. Company X's interest is to be of assistance by placing this department on our mailing lists and having our local representative keep in contact for whatever help we can be to the college. If you have such a course, we would like to know the names of the supervisor in charge and the equipment. Since students graduating from such courses might be considered for employment by our firm, we would also like to receive a description of the course curriculum and the number of students taking it."

Dr. Sponberg sent the letter first to Richard Vogel, school treasurer, with this comment in the margin: "I know there is plenty of boloney on this campus, but I did not know they were doing surveys on it."

To which Mr. Vogel replied: "This I believe is an academic affair."

The letter then was forwarded by President Sponberg to Dr. A. F. Englebert, dean of the college, with the comment: "This project seems to be in your area—a continuous ring of boloney. Please establish a course of study in this meaty field."

The dean sent the letter back to the president with this notation: "If this refers to link sausage, we could make it a divisional course. Get the pun?"

Dr. Sponberg then forwarded the letter to Dean John Howe, head of the law school with the question: "Would the sausage course fit your curriculum, since you are training pork-barrel specialists?"

To which the law school dean responded: "Would the course in sausage stuffing count as a physical education substitute?"

And, at this point, the matter of beginning a sausage-stuffing course at WU was dropped, probably not to any great dismay to either students or administration.

Pi Kappa Phi

Mr. Mel Metcalfe, National President of Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity, will be in Greenville visiting with the Fraternity's Alumni and Undergraduate Chapter at East Carolina College on Tuesday, March 16, 1965.

Metcalfe is an insurance executive from Port Arthur, Texas, and a 1927 graduate of the University of Oklahoma.

Pi Kappa Phi has been on the campus of East Carolina College since 1963. The Chapter is currently advised by Mr. A. B. Stallworth, 314 Evans Street, Greenville, N. C.

This meeting of undergraduates and alumni of Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity is scheduled for 7:00 p.m., Tuesday, March 16 at 1301 East Fifth Street, Greenville. All local alumni of Pi Kappa Phi are encouraged to attend.

Talented EC Photographer Aids Campus Organizations

For several years now, Joe Brannon has been the official photographer for such campus organizations as the East Carolinian, The Buccaneer, The Rebel and The Key. This man devotes almost all of his time to taking pictures of our campus organizations and activities, yet he has very little recognition for his outstanding work.

Joe started school at East Carolina in 1960 and was married to the former Judith McIver of Sanford, N. C. in August, 1963. He started his career as a part-time photographer on his hometown newspaper, "The Sanford Herald," about ten years ago in Sanford, N. C. He also worked for the Photo Arts Studio here in Greenville for a short time before working for the college.

When asked if he had had any embarrassing situations arise while taking pictures here at East Carolina, he said that the most embarrassing things is when a piece of equipment does not work. He was recently called to President Jenkins' home to take pictures of about 20 girls for the selection of Miss Buccaneer. President Jenkins and other college officials were also present. Joe was already to begin taking pictures when he discovered that his flash didn't work. Since then he has acquired a new flash for his camera.

To people who are interested in photography as a hobby, Joe advises them to learn the basic things about it, such as how to operate a camera correctly and the correct exposure. To persons who are thinking of photography as a career, he wouldn't advise it.

When he is not working in his official capacity, Joe enjoys photographing buildings and animals. He also enjoys fishing, watching TV, and collecting stamps.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

OBITUARIES

Adams

Dr. Carl L. Adams, 75, retired head of the Education and Psychology Departments at East Carolina, died in St. Petersburg, Florida Saturday.

Coming to East Carolina in 1926, Dr. Adams headed the combined departments of Education and Psychology until they were separated in 1948. He served as head of the Department of Psychology until his retirement in 1957, after which he taught part-time before retiring in 1961.

Dr. Adams received his AB degree from Bethel College and his MA and PhD degrees from George Peabody College. He did post-doctoral study at Harvard Medical School.

Howard

Walter Allen Howard of Jacksonville died last week from burns received in a freak accident at his home.

Howard was a leading student in the East Carolina School of Business and was slated to graduate this May. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Howard of Jacksonville.

An article by Dr. Oscar Keeling Moore of the School of Business has been published by House Beautiful this month.

Dr. Moore's article is entitled "The Marvelous Orchids You Can Grow" and is accompanied by color photographs. The author discusses species best suited for home growing and with proper methods for their care and feeding.

PROFESSOR TO LEAD REVIVAL

A professor of Religion at Campbell College will conduct a revival on the East Carolina campus this week. Dr. Charles T. Welborn will lead services on Sunday, March 21 at 11:00 a.m. and 8:00 p.m. in Old Austin.

The students, faculty, and general public are invited to attend and hear Dr. Welborn.

FRATERNITY BROTHERS AND FRIENDS get into the swing of spring with a game of Intramural Baseball. Participation in Intramural Sports appears to be creating much enthusiasm and interest among students.

Buc Box

By RANDY RYAN

March has arrived at East Carolina and over on the athletic field the spring athletic program has begun to stir into life. The various coolest participants can be seen starting their season of golf, track, tennis, baseball or football.

Football?

Yes, it's football season for the 74 candidates that turned out for spring football practice. Spring football will be scheduled within a period of 20 days that will end on April 10, climaxing with the Purple and Gold game. The Purple and Gold game is the annual inter-squad game that ends the spring practice period and will be open to the student body. It will be played at Ficklen Stadium at 2 p.m.

Spring football has three main objectives. The first objective is to find replacements for the graduating seniors. Coach Stasavich faces the problem first and foremost of finding a replacement for Little All-American tailback Bill Cline. There are several candidates for the tailback position, the key to the single wing offense which Stasavich has been so successful with. George Richardson spent some time last year at tailback, also alternating at fullback. Richardson started the first games last year as Cline came up with an injured hand. Neal Hughes is a good looking prospect up from the freshman team.

Wingback is another position which is open due to the graduation of three lettermen, Gerry Tolley, Dinky Mills, and Larry Rudisill. Lost also are both of last year's ends Dave Bumgarner and Johnny Anderson. There are some big losses on the line where two tackles, co-captain Ted Day and Colon Quinn are leaving. Both had held the tackle posts for the last three years.

The second objective of spring practice is to "develop the technique of the rising sophomore," to quote Coach Stasavich. Last year's freshman team was one of the best ever at East Carolina in the coaching staff's opinion and they will spend much of the spring polishing the freshmen for varsity experience in the coming season.

The third objective is to experiment in offensive and defensive formations for next season. The basic offense will of course remain the Stasavich wing but the coaching staff will work on a variety of options and new plays.

The squad has looked good in its early scrimmages and should be as good or perhaps better than last year's Tangerine Bowl Champions. Although the Pirates are losing 13 seniors through graduation, they still have some key men returning. Dave Alexander, the Southern Conference scoring leader of last year with 96 points, will be back. And quite a few men will be back from last year's line, among them Corie McRae, Mitchell Cannon and Harold Glaettle to name a few. It will all be answered in time but we are likely to see a team of championship caliber again on April 10 at the Purple and Gold game.

W. Va. & State Represent SC & ACC Respectively For South

Last week, in the first round of the N. C. A. A. tournament, West Virginia took a 91-67 beating from Providence. West Virginia entered the tournament as the Southern Conference representative, sporting a 14-14 record for the season while Davidson, ranked seventh in the nation, led by All-American Fred Hetzell and Dick Snyder, the two leading scorers in the Southern Conference, sat at home. Davidson with a 24-2 record for the season remained home because one of its two losses came in the conference tournament to West Virginia, a team it had beaten twice in regular season play.

The Blue Devils of Duke were put in the situation when they were defeated by North Carolina State for the right to represent the Atlantic Coast Conference in the tournament. Twice during the season the Blue Devils had beaten State but the third meeting decided the championship, so sixth ranked Duke stayed home while State lost to Princeton, 66-48.

Most major conferences have long since given up their private tournaments and let the team which posts the best record over the season represent them in the N. C. A. A. playoffs. In view of the fact that no major team is unbeaten this season, a conference tournament could have sidelined top-ranked Michigan, second-ranked U. C. L. A. and fifth ranked Vanderbilt in addition to the two nationally-ranked that have been dumped by this obsolete method of selecting a representative. There are simply too many variables in the game of basketball to make the important selection of a champion in one game. There too often is an upset that can wreck a whole season as it did in Davidson's case.

Here in the South the last conference to give up the post season tournament was the Southeastern Conference in 1952, when Kentucky won the championship for the 13th time in 19 tries. It was the 1951 tournament that caused the Southeastern Conference to take another look at the whole idea. That was the year when Vanderbilt, which finished the regular season with a 15-3 mark, upset Kentucky, which sported a 25-1 record, by the score of 61-57 in the tournament finals. Earlier in the season Kentucky had easily handled Vanderbilt by the scores of 74-49 and 69-57.

The Southeastern conference decided to disregard the tournament and named Kentucky its champion. In return, Kentucky went on to win the national championship that year.

In the final analysis, the only reason the post-season tournament is still in existence is because of the money it provides. The tournament puts extra cash in the league coffers but in doing so makes a mockery of the season of league play designed to select a champion.

If the league wants the cash so badly, why not hold the tournament but without eliminating the champion in the regular season standings. Instead let the tournament champion play the season champion if it happens that the conference leader is
