Dem. Hold 1st District; People Re-elect Jones

By DAVE CULLEY
Staff Writer

Walter B. Jones was re-elected to the United States House of Representatives from North Carolina's First District with a sound victory over East Carolina's professor John P. East.

Congressman Jones carried every county with the exception of three and these three counties were lost by very small margins. The victory cannot be considered a victory for President Johnson or the National Democratic Party, however, it can be stated that the First District is still strongly a Democratic section of the nation.

An exceptionally heavy turnout for an off-election year helped the Democratic candidate win the election. The voter percentage was 65 percent for Congressman Jones and 35 percent for the Republican candidate, John East.

Congressman Walter B. Jones at a victory gathering at the Greenville Moose Lodge stated, "Of course I'm thrilled to have won. It has been a hard campaign. I am indebted to so many people for all their contributions. This vote has shown their confidence in my voting record. I will try to honor this confidence shown in this election."

Dr. John P. East, EC Associate Professor, conceded the 1st district race at 11:15 p.m., November 8, with the following statement: "I would like to give my heartiest congratulations to Congressman Jones, and I wish him the best in the future."

Greenville Businesses Poll EC Next Week

By SANDY MIMS
Chief Staff Writer

When students go to the polls next Thursday to vote on the judicial immunity amendment they will also find an invitation to participate in one of the most beneficial student polls to be taken at East Carolina.

In an attempt to establish a liaison between the businesses of Greenville and the students, SGA President Steve Sniteman announced Tuesday the formation of the Economic Relation Board with Charles Watson as chairman.

Mr. Watson committee plans to advocate a lowering of prices for EC students. A two way approach will be used in an attempt to achieve a satisfactory working relationship between the two. In commenting on this Sniteman said "the businessmen in town have been responsible for a large part of EC's growth and visa versa. Each is dependent on the other."

The major areas of business that will be concentrated on are restaurants, clothing stores and laundry. The prices of laundry will be considered first. In connection with this a survey will be conducted at the polls next Thursday when the students vote on a Constitutional Amendment. The survey includes questions concerning the prices of dry cleaning in Greenville in relation to the prices in students' hometowns.

In a report from Dr. Locke it is stated that of the $997,000 EC students spend every year only $199,000 is spent in Greenville. Charles Watson stated that he would like to see the student body participate more in Greenville but that cooperation is also needed from the local businessmen.

Watson's committee will work through the approach that the lowering of prices will help businesses. If this does not work competition will be used in attempt to attain more reasonable prices.

Pierce Placed In State Publication

Ovid Williams Pierce, noted author and professor of English at East Carolina is one of 70 writers included in the third edition of "Young Readers' Picturebook of Tar Heel Authors" by Richard Walser of N. C. State University.

The handbook is published by the State Department of Archives and History as a guide to young readers and their teachers and librarians to help them become better acquainted with North Carolina books and writers. It contains one-page biographical sketches of historical as well as contemporary writers.

A native of Halifax County, Pierce received his AB degree from Duke University and his master's in English from Harvard. He was an Army counter-intelligence officer during World War II in various posts in the Caribbean.

Before joining the East Carolina faculty in 1956 he taught at Southern Methodist and Tulane universities.

He is the author of a number of short stories and two novels, "The Plantation" and "On a Lonesome Porch," both with a setting in Eastern North Carolina. Both novels received the Sir Walter Raleigh Award for the best work of fiction by a North Carolina author for its year of publication.

Students Vote On Bill And Take Economic Relation Poll

The judicial immunity bill passed by the Student Legislature on September 26, is being presented for a vote by the student body on Thursday, November 17.

Along with the amendment to be voted on will be a student opinion poll sponsored by the SGA Economics Relation Board for the purpose of inciting student interest. The SGA Administration is utilizing combined efforts (the poll and the amendment election) in order to insure the greatest amount of participation from the student body. Both items allow students the opportunity to decide on far reaching items which effect their college life.

The judicial immunity bill concerns the separation of duties and conflicting interests within the judicial and legislative branches of the Student Government Association.

The student poll is directed toward the ultimate goal of solving the economic relation problem which besets the EC student.

The judicial immunity amendment which students will be voting on one week from today states that:

"No person serving as a member of the Student Legislature or the Executive Council may serve in a judicial post which is selected by the Executive Council and approved by the Student Legislature. He may, however, serve in any judicial post to which he is elected by a general election of the student body."

(Article I, Section 2, Sub-Section 3, Sub-Sub-Section 4.)

Tuesday's EAST CAROLINIAN will be the final edition for Fall quarter.

Deadline: 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

Pass Chancellor Of UNC-G Speaks On Campus Sunday

Dr. Otis A. Singletary Jr., new vice president of the American Council on Education and former chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, will speak on the East Carolina campus next weekend.

He will be the main speaker at the sixth anniversary celebration of the North Carolina Joint Council on Health and Education to be held Sunday, Nov. 13, at 3:30 p.m. in Old Austin auditorium.

His talk will center around the theme for the celebration, "In Pursuit of Progress in the Campaign Against Poverty."

Dr. Andrew Best, president of the Joint Council, has invited the public "and especially the students at East Carolina College to hear Dr. Singletary speak."

Dr. Singletary, a native of Gulfport, Miss., received his AB degree from Millsaps College in Jackson, Miss., and his MA and PhD degrees from Louisiana State University.

He became chancellor of UNC-G in 1961. In 1964 he took a leave of absence from the university to serve as director of the Job Corps, a major branch of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Last weekend he spoke out vigorously in a newspaper interview against ECC's bid for separate university status, saying it might cause disintegration of the state's consolidated university system.

PRESIDENT LEO W. JENKINS proclaims next week as AIR FORCE ROTC WEEK at East Carolina. Group Commander Frank Freudig (left) and Colonel Douglas F. Carty (right) discuss next week's agenda with Dr. Jenkins. A special ROTC recruitment program and a military exhibit in New Austin parking lot will highlight next week's activities.

Jenkins vs. Bowles?

East Carolina does have a way of making the news headlines particularly if that news is politically inspired.

Recently by way of the East Carolina College News Bureau, came an article from the SANFORD HERALD that tied Hargrove Bowles, personable Greensboro business tycoon and newly elected House member from Guilford County, and EC President Dr. Leo Jenkins as possible opposing gubernatorial candidates for the 1968 election.

Though the EAST CAROLINIAN has heard no official word on Dr. Jenkins' specific interests in the next gubernatorial election, we have heard rumors. Though the SANFORD HERALD news story may be based simply on campaign rumors, one still wonders if East Carolina's champion of higher education and the East would consider entering the governor's race two years from now.

Though the name of Lieutenant Governor Robert Scott tends to be the name leading the gubernatorial race now, we couldn't help but take note that THE HERALD quoted Bowles as saying in a recent interview:

"Isn't he (Scott of Alamance County) from the East?" Of course Bowles noted that the Piedmont had not been notable in the past for giving uniform support to any gubernatorial candidate.

A political block buster was tossed into the interview for Bowles to answer next. When asked about the "new and lively rumor, making the rounds in Central Carolina, that President Leo Jenkins of East Carolina College is being strongly urged to enter the governor's race," Bowles came back with an absolute "no comment" to this new eventuality.

Bowles, however, did not deny that he had heard mention of the possible Jenkins candidacy, "a movement which supporters have kept very close to the vest."

According to the SANFORD HERALD, "the prospects of dynamic Dr. Jenkins, the East Carolina College President, arrayed in the same RACE against dynamic Bowles is enough to give new dimensions to the state's political picture. Both are excellent public speakers. Both are energy-filled men with ambition but neither have had prior experience at attracting voters."

Though Bowles quickly turned the conversation toward his campaign for last Tuesday's election, it was quite obvious that the idea of opposing Dr. Jenkins in the 1968 election had occurred to him. Certainly Bowles, who won his seat in the House Tuesday, will use his first legislative post to its fullest advantage.

What 1968 will bring to the political ring is a matter of speculation at the present time. From the rumors circulating through North Carolina at this time, however, we cannot help but wonder if there may not be some new and perhaps familiar faces among the gubernatorial candidates for 1968.

If there is a certain familiar face in the 1968 race for Governor, we wonder just what position East Carolina will find itself in. Of course, what happens in the General Assembly will be a key factor in determining what new faces will appear in the coming gubernatorial election.

Don't Let 'It' Die?

What does it take to get students to participate in a faculty evaluation project that benefits their own personal needs?

It seems impossible that out of 9000 students there are only a hundred or so who are willing to give a little of their free time in helping the Faculty Evaluation Committee circulate questionnaires. When a project such as this does not inspire student interest, there is either something wrong with the way the project is being handled or something greatly lacking in the student body as a whole.

Student apathy is an old story but students don't just let a faculty evaluation project die while they sit watching as spectators. Laziness sounds more like the problem.

After the faculty evaluation committee spent the entire quarter setting up an effective orientation program for the evaluation, it does seem logical that the average student would be appreciative enough of the evaluation to insure the committee that they at least support faculty evaluation.

The Two Faces

Lee Harvey Oswald

In the July 28th issue of the New York Review of Books, Professor Richard H. Popkin charged the Warren Commission with catering to the public's need for security by concluding, before examining all facts and possibilities about President Kennedy's death, that the crime was committed by a lone, alienated assassin.

THE SECOND OSWALD, a book-length version of Professor Popkin's widely-quoted article, with an introduction by Murray Kepton, will be published on September 11th by Avon Books. In addition to 10,000 words of new material, the book contains the FBI autopsy report dictated by two FBI agents on November 26, 1963. Published in its entirety for the first time, the report describes what these agents saw and heard while the doctors were examining President Kennedy on the night of November 22nd.

THE SECOND OSWALD offers the first systematic theory suggesting how Oswald may have conspired with others to assassinate President Kennedy. It is based on evidence in the 26-volume Warren Commission Report, on new evidence that has appeared in recent weeks, and on recent books criticizing the findings of the Commission. Professor Popkin presents evidence that a man who looked like Oswald, and often posed as Oswald, could have been the actual assassin. He shows that the Commission dismissed important evidence. A man who looked like Oswald was identified at a Dallas shooting range, at an auto showroom, and at the book depository itself. The author cites numerous other instances pointing to the role a second Oswald may have played in the assassination.

Unlike the Commission's theory, Professor Popkin writes, the theory of the second Oswald "fits much of the known data, and requires fewer miracles or highly unlikely events. Since Oswald was an excellent shot, my theory does not require the dismissal of all of the people who saw second Oswald as mistaken, no matter how much corroboration they have."

In the light of the Report's deficiencies, Professor Popkin urges a reopening of the investigation. He believes the Warren Commission served the American and the world public badly by doing "a rush job, a slap-dash one, defending a politically acceptable position."

Professor Popkin is Chairman of the Department of Philosophy at the University of California at San Diego.

"M" IS FOR THE MANY THINGS YOU'LL TEACH HER

Nobody will dispute—surely not I—that raising children is a task which requires full time and awesome skills. Nonetheless, a recent nationwide survey has revealed a startling fact: mothers who go back to work after their children are safely through the early years are notably happier, better adjusted, and more fulfilled than mothers who simply remain housewives. Moreover—and mark this well—the children of such working mothers are themselves happier, better adjusted, and more fulfilled!

All very well, you say, but what's it got to do with you? Isn't it obvious? If you are underachieving at college, get your mother a job.

What kind of job? Well sir, your mother is probably between 35 and 50 years of age, so certain occupations must immediately be ruled out. Logging, for example. Or whaling. Or carhopping.

But don't despair. There are other kinds of jobs—not many, to be sure, but some. However, you must not stick Mom in just any old job. You must remember that after the excitement of raising you, she would be bored to tears as a file clerk, for instance, or as a dolman. (A dolman, as we all know, is someone who brings handfuls of water to track layers. With the recent invention of the pail, dolmen are gradually falling into technological unemployment.)

But I digress. I was saying, find Mom a job worthy of her talents, something challenging that uses her vast wisdom and experience but, at the same time, is not too hard on her obsolescing tissues. That's what Walter Sigafoss did, and the results were brilliantly successful.

Walter, a sophomore at the Upper Maryland College of Wickerwork and Belles Lettres, majoring in raffia, approached the problem scientifically. First he asked himself what his mother did best. Well sir, what she did best was to keep hollering, "Dress warm, Walter!"

At first glance this seemed a skill not widely in demand, but Walter was not discouraged. He sent out hundreds of inquiries and today, I am pleased to report, his mother is happily employed as wardrobe mistress for the Montreal Canadiens.

Another fortunate venture was that of Frank C. Gransmire, a junior at the Oregon State Conservatory of Music and Optometry, majoring in sties. Frank, like Walter, did a survey in depth of his mother's talents. Chief among them, he found, was her ability to make a roast of beef feed the whole family for three days. So, naturally, Frank got her a job at the Museum of Natural History.

What has one to do with the other, you ask? Isn't it obvious? Anyone who can stretch ribs like that belongs in paleontology.

I cannot conclude this column without saying a few words about Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades. The reason I cannot is that this column is sponsored by the makers of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades, and they are inclined to get peckish if I omit to mention their product.

Not, mind you, that it is a chore for me to plug Personna. Or, for the matter of that, to shave with Personna. No sir: no chore. Personna takes the pain out of shaving, scrapes the scrape, negates the nick, repudiates the rasp, peels the pull, boycotts the burn, blackballs the bite, ousts the ouch. Furthermore, Personna endures and abides, gives you luxury shave after luxury shave, day after day after day. And further furthermore, Personna is available both in double-edge style and Injector style. And as if all this were not bounty enough, Personna is now offering you a chance to grab a fistful of $100 bills! Stop at your Personna dealer and get an entry blank for the new Personna Super Stainless Steel Sweepstakes. But hurry! Time is limited.

The makers of Personna who bring you this column all through the school year also bring you the ultimate in luxury shaving with Personna and Personna's partner in shaving comfort—Burma Share, regular or menthol.

LETTER

Dear Editor,

It is quite evident to me now that the President of the Student Government Association is not doing his job.

On September 26, 1966 the Student Legislature passed the following amendment to the S.G.A. Constitution: "No person serving as a member of the Student Legislature or the Executive Council may serve in a judicial post which is selected by the Executive Council and approved by the Student Legislature. He may, however, serve in any judicial post to which he is elected by a general election of the student body." (Amend Constitution, Article I, Section 2, Sub-Section E, Sub-Sub-Section 4.)

This action took place exactly six (6) weeks ago. It was supposed to be voted on by the students, after being published in the East Carolinian. As to this day, you the students have been given no notice, and Mr. Sniteman has held no election as stated in the Rules for Amendment.

It seems to me that the President of the S.G.A. should tend to duties at home, instead of spending the student's money to go to Canada on a conference that has absolutely nothing to do with the workings of the Student Government . . . except to say that ECC was there!! There are several platform promises that also need to be fulfilled.

It is time the students woke up, and realized that there are certain things that paid, elected officials must do if they are to stay in office. With East Carolina College's Student Government Association growing, we must demand that the President do his job for the students, who I might add put him in his office.

Constructively,
Bill Deal, Chairman
University Party

Trivia

Senior Revelations

By Mike Arledge

Freshmen girls overcome by fraternity pins. A senior (mature supposedly) flipping an old cigarette butt into beautiful Wright Fountain. A headache derived from the endless hours of boring class and small talk with friends. These are revelations of my daily college life. Poor professors mixed with excellent ones lecturing in monotone to disinterested and somewhat bored students.

A bell ringing... a mad rush for freedom and fresh air. Disgust registered in giggly remarks with the hand and mouth close to the ear of a cohort, reaching for another sandwich or soft drink. A dog moving through the crowd searching for nourishment or trying to fulfill his gluttony urges. This is our college life, wrapped up in reality, or possibly in the mental defecation of trivia and other things.

I am overcome with a feeling of meaninglessness. No goal to reach for, no hill to climb. Is this what I have spent nearly four years of my life trying to achieve? Is this what my parents have spent a small fortune for? Maybe so... Sometimes I wonder?

Did you know that the average E.C.C. college student cannot speak French, Spanish, or German fluently?

Isn't it amazing that a student who is over voting age and has attended three years - plus in a college that calls itself ready for University status is unable to open his mouth to a professor in defense of a grade for fear of losing his status as an unheard member of the college "herd" and, as a matter of personal dislike, suffering a failing grade because of the fact that he stood up for his personal freedom like a member of the American Revolution would? I can't see it, can you?

It has been said to me that East Carolina College is a "rinky-dink", second-rate institution. After three and one-half years, I find myself believing that if something isn't done to show me different, I might take this view myself.

Right now, though, I am true-blue to my school, and I don't believe a word of it.

Money is scarce. I don't have much, and my friends have less. It burns me up to see someone that spends money like it grows on trees. Do you know that some students around this school are suffering from a great malady? Nothing to do and too much money to do nothing with. I can't make up my mind whether I want that problem to contend with or not...

True friends are hard to come by at school. I can't tell whether I am really being befriended or whether I am being exploited. Maybe I'm shallow-minded. Things like this can make a person wonder.

They tell me I still have to obtain a ticket for the football games and for certain performances given here at school. Is it really necessary? What I mean is: Why do we have activity and I.D. cards with our pictures on them? Maybe the ticket-takers can't discern one student's features from another's, or maybe the school has so much money that they figure one good way to increase their budget for next year is to waste what money they have on tickets for the students. Nobody ever bothered to explain these things to me... should I bother to go and find out on my own?

Would you believe it if I told you that as far as I can tell, the majority of the students at this school are often poorly informed if they are informed at all? I would.

When I was a freshman, I stood around wondering if the Administration and faculty really cared whether I led a satisfactory life here at E.C.C.! The funny thing is that I am now a Senior, and I still wonder the same thing.

If someone registered a protest openly (not just verbally) here at school, I fear that he or she would be run up before that Kangaroo court called the "Judiciary". This is a crime which should not be committed upon any free person especially one who is endeavoring to bring about the betterment of society, no matter how small it may be.

A person who is considered mature enough to attend college and to live away from his or her parents should not be burdened by rules which would be placed on a freshman in high school. This refers to all students, men as well as women.

So much for trivia and other things. I'll expound again when I have something further to say...

Students For Peace

By ROBERT JOHNSTON
The Collegiate Press Service

Students have found a new movement. It's called peace.

Not just peace in Viet Nam, or Selma, but a new world order, a new concept of international affairs.

While it is of necessity a long-range assignment, one is compelled to point out that the sooner the better.

The prospectus of the Student Forum on International Order and World Peace, which held a conference in Princeton last weekend to survey the dimensions of the problem, outlines the student's interest thus:

"We, the student generation of today, must begin now to educate ourselves to assume responsibility for creating the conditions prerequisite to international order and world peace."

A lot of people tend to think we have learned to live with the bomb. Others are resigned to an ill-defined holocaust in the same way they are resigned to any other form of death — it is just not something anyone can comprehend seriously.

"Most of us think war is inevitable," one speaker said realistically.

There is, for example China — making faster progress in the development of a nuclear striking force than anyone seems able to comprehend. (If the State Department bureaucrats would quit reading Top Secret counter-intelligence reports and look at the newspapers, they might realize, for example, that the Chinese synthesis of insulin last summer was a feat comparable in its own way to Russia's first Sputnik. Unfortunately it will take something more spectacular to affect our complacency this time.)

Of course there is no greater probability of China's using nuclear weapons at any given time than there is of United States use. But the fact that neither of these figures is zero begins to suggest the dimensions of the problem. Meanwhile, influentials in India, Pakistan, Japan and Indonesia are pressing for development of their own nuclear "protection." And from their point of view it would be protection; there is nothing between them and China's bomb but God, but statesmen have never been known to put too much reliance on that commodity.

From the rest of the world's point of view, however, it would just be one or even a dozen more steps toward the realization of a state of nuclear war. (The radio announcement would read that a state of nuclear war had been declared. Imagine that announcement if you can.)

So how do you talk about a great big, all-encompassing subject like peace? How do you talk about it? And most important of all, what can you do about it?

Here we owe an intellectual debt to a circle of hard-working thinkers, now labeled strategists, that set out about 1950 to think about the "unthinkable," nuclear war, and not just worry about it.

Slowly, systematically, step-by-step, idea-by-idea and concept-by-concept, they have analyzed exactly what the bomb (with its various globe-girdling delivery systems) really means, how it affects a nation's military strategy in a wide array of possible circumstances.

These men have shown that such a huge, incredibly difficult subject as nuclear strategy can be thought about, analyzed and, to a very considerable degree at least, understood.

All of which gives us every reason to believe that peace, which, after all, is not too far removed conceptually from war, can be analyzed in the same manner; that it can be transferred from a universally accepted and very badly defined value to a real world, institutional reality.

Students have a natural stake in all this, since it is going to be their world. They are the ones who, in 20 years, are going to be building the new world order — either amidst the shattered remnants of the old, or, somehow, in the midst of a rigid, outmoded set of present-day social institutions tied to the nation-state.

Unless you are both a determinist and a pessimist, cataclysmic nuclear war is not inevitable, or even likely. But this isn't to say that some kind of a nuclear war somewhere in the world isn't likely in the fairly near future.

Such strategists as Herman Kahn (On Thermonuclear War), and others that think about things like this, seem to agree that, in any given year, there is something like a 2-5 percent probability of nuclear weapons use, and this figure will rise markedly as proliferation of these weapons accelerates in the absence of effective controls.

Under these circumstances, unless you are over 60, you face a grim and scary future. Fortunately, or hopefully, to define the problem thus is to begin to define what needs to be done, to establish the limits of the problem, to unlock rather than to foreclose the future.

The very phrase "international order and world peace" suggests a redefinition of that very difficult concept, world peace, into the idea of world order, which in turn suggests the reordering of our institutions so that such system malfunctions as international violence no longer occur.

War (international disorder) is not and need not be a foregone conclusion. If your boilers are constantly blowing up, you don't resign yourself to inevitable doom, you design a better one.

Things Are Looking Up For Ridiculed Flying Saucerians

Two thousand strong, they thronged over the desert, bearing folding chairs and picnic lunches and the grandest of illusions. They were the true believers, the fate-touched who have "sighted" spaceships from other planets and "conversed" with their humanoid pilots. Last week, still earthbound, but perhaps not for long, they converged on Giant Rock, a 60-foot boulder in the Mojave Desert of California, for the thirteenth annual convention of the Amalgamated Flying Saucer Clubs of America.

Things are looking up for Saucerians. A recent Gallup poll reported that 5 million Americans say they have seen flying saucers. If scientists still discount most such reports - or else attribute them to recognizable phenomena - there remain a few each year that cannot be explained away.

Indeed this week at the University of Colorado, a team of scientists begins the first government-sponsored study of reports on Unidentified Flying Objects. The news of this $300,000 project filled the conventioners at Giant Rock with a sense of vindication for past slights and mockery from the public - despite the somewhat dampening fact that one phase of the study will be the "behavioral" characteristics of the saucer-sighters themselves.

The Colorado scientists might well have begun their investigations at the convention. In a two-day period there were fourteen hours of publicly delivered space-age confessions and testimonials.

Book stands displayed such titles as "Barehand Psychic Surgery" and "Who and What is the Anti-Christ and Has it Arrived on Earth Already?" A man calling himself a "contactee of the galactic command" was hawking a tract entitled "Get Aboard a Flying Saucer, Get With the Messiah's Plan!" And a number of the world's most renowned Saucerians were on hand:

Host George Van Tassel, who owns the convention area, a nearby restaurant and airstrip and an ominous, fenced-in observatory that contains, according to the sign outside, "A Time Machine for Basic Research on Rejuvenation, Anti-gravity, Time Travel."

Truman Bethurom, a craggy Fillmore, Utah, senior citizen in a black wool hat whose cosmic friends have power that could be used to halt the war in Vietnam. The adverse effects would be too serious, Bethurom says: "The bottom would drop out of the stock market, and 100,000 people would commit suicide."

Maria Graciete Elliott, 29, a chunky brunette "clairvoyant" - a clergywoman in a leopard-spotted miniskirt and white boots who claims to be a countess, says she once won the title Miss Portugal and now heads the Maria Creative Womanhood Foundation in Los Angeles. Miss Elliott was taken inside a flying saucer at Tallulah Falls, Ga., given a series of physical tests by Martians, then discharged with a warning that the earth is in great danger.

There was a sentimental moment during one convention, when two gray-haired old ladies shyly disclosed that they had been visited during the night by a Martian who gave one of them a ring, the other a necklace. "He had on a navy-blue jacket and blue slacks and he was clean, dignified and wholesome," one lady said. Indeed she added, "he was real sweet."

But the high point of the convention came when a handsome, curly-haired, former Air Force Pilot named Mel Noel announced that he had made contact through an intermediary with a secret Martian spaceship station in darkest Brazil.

The Martians, Noel said, plan to fly their ship into Mexico within the next month or so, and have offered to take a dozen Americans for a 30-minute ride to Europe and back. Applicants must produce a photo of themselves, over which the Martians sprinkle a powder that enables them to divine the applicant's intentions, character and health.

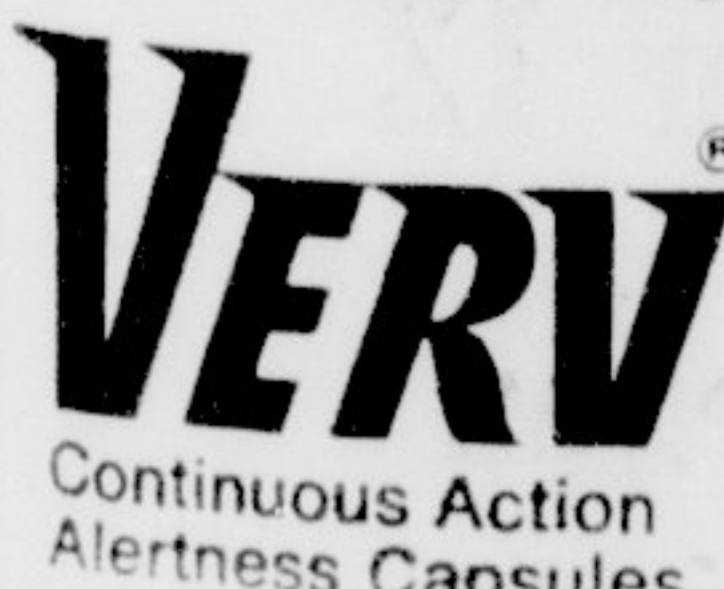

Inevitably, the convocation attracted some skeptics, but Convention President Green defended his associates, earthly and otherwise. "Pioneers of advanced thought," he said, "have always been ridiculed."

Foreign Film Committee Presents 'Sand Castle'

By G. MARTIN LASSITER

Next Tuesday, November 15, the Foreign Film Committee of the S.G.A. will present the British film, "The Sand Castle". It is a uniquely different film written, produced and directed by Jerome Hill, who also produced and directed last month's Foreign Film, "Albert Schweitzer". "The Sand Castle" is the story of an afternoon in a boy's life. It is a double film. What occurs in his waking consciousness is in black and white, and what he dreams is in color.

His mother leaves him in charge of his little sister on a beach, telling them that she will return later. When he tries to join in the war games of the other boys, he is driven off and told to go and build his own fort. Rejected, he wanders down the beach in a melancholy reverie. The stray objects he finds washed up at his feet, especially a very beautiful shell that succeeds in communicating with his unconscious, lead him to decide to build a sand castle. Eventually, the usual holiday crowd gathers to watch him, — a dozen or more of the most unlikely people are affected, directly or indirectly by what he is doing. In a sense their destinies are either confirmed or reversed.

A sudden rain storm drives everyone from the beach except the boy and his sister. Under an umbrella which has been given them to protect the castle, they lie down to await their mother. The boy falls asleep. In his dream, he explores the interior of the castle. Here he meets the people that had surrounded him while he was building. He picks up threads of their problems as he understands them, and dreams them through to his own conclusions.

Just before his mother wakens him, he learns the secret of the power of his creation. The castle, of course, is washed back into the sea.

"The Sand Castle," the fifth in this year's series, will be presented at 7:00 p.m. in Wright Auditorium on Tuesday night, November 15. Students are urged to be on time for this delightful film so they will not disturb those already seated.

Jenkins Addresses Women Students

By KATY PRIDGEN

The East Carolina women students were honored by an address from President Leo W. Jenkins, Monday night, on E.C.C.'s future University status.

Although a disappointingly small number of women students bothered to attend the address, there was a surprising amount of participation from the few who did attend.

Dr. Jenkins, upon being asked what the hurry is for University tatus, replied that E.C. isn't in a particular hurry. The people would never decide that it is ready because of such a large amount of unfavorable and untrue publicity. E.C.C. has to try for the status while it can and must convince everyone that university status is needed by telling the truth.

The status can be gained only through the legislature. The legislators must be convinced by the people. They can be convinced only through the students, faculty, and the administration because they are the ones who know the reasons and needs. The people must be convinced now and this is what is trying to be done.

When asked why E.C.C. is growing so quickly and being criticized so ardently for it, Dr. Jenkins said that it is not right for E.C.C. to turn away North Carolina students when it can possibly squeeze them in. The college was built and is supported by the taxpayers who are the parents of prospective students. It is not fair to turn away one student and take another when they are equally qualified. Therefore, E.C.C. tries to take all that it can who have the same academic standing. The only way the great number of applicants can be handled fairly is by raising entrance standards.

Many people and publications have tried to claim that the academic standards are being lowered by the large number of students here. Nothing could be further from the truth. Entrance standards are being raised every year. A proof of this is that the top hundred in our school compare very favorably with the top one hundred in Davidson and other such Universities and the averages were 3 points better than Carolina.

Many, many questions were asked of Dr. Jenkins. The girls who attended the meeting did not know most of the things he informed them of. Most everyone left the meeting convinced of our great need for University status and with intentions of setting straight many of the falsehoods being circulated throughout the state.

Rice Urges SGA To Increase Interest

By DOYLE PERDUE
SGA Staff Writer

Speaker of the Legislature Steve Burns called the weekly meeting of the Student Legislature to order at 5:00 last Monday in the Legislature Room in Wright Annex. There being no communications and no old business, the Chair moved directly into new business. Frank Rice introduced a measure that would remove from office any Legislator who missed six Legislature meetings. Mr. Rice stated that six absences showed a definite lack of interest in the government. The present rule provides for the dismissal of any Legislator who has three unexcused absences. Bill Deal suggested that the Legislature let the Rules Committee handle this measure. The measure was then brought to a vote and defeated. There was no further new business.

In the way of announcements, the Legislators were urged to come and bring their friends to a meeting of people helping the Faculty Evaluation Committee. Dean Tucker said that a lot of time and money would be wasted if the Faculty Evaluation did not come this quarter. Speaker Burns also urged the Legislators to support Faculty Evaluation, because the Legislature had been criticized for a lack of interest in SGA committees. Frank Rice announced that the Spirit Committee has found a Great Dane which will be the school mascot at the last two home football games. The dog, Dutchess, was borrowed from Billy Flowers of Clayton, N. C. There will be a pep rally Thursday at 6:30 p.m. at the cafeteria on campus. There being no further announcements, the meeting was adjourned.

Drama, Fiction, Poetry, Essays Balance Largest 'Rebel' Issue

By DAVE CULLEY
Staff Writer

In an interview with Ron Watson, editor of the college literary magazine, Mr. Watson stated that this issue of the REBEL is easily the most balanced ever published at East Carolina College.

The magazine, which will come out Friday morning, will have something that appeals to everyone. Two sections that have been omitted in the past few issues will be seen again, the Editorial section and the Book Review section. A section that has never been included before, a photographic essay, will be of special interest to the men.

Drama, fiction, poetry, and essays provide the balance which makes this issue outstanding. The strength of this issue lies in the essay entitled, "Functions of Religious Language," by Houston Craighead, Jr., a member of the philosophy department. There is also an interview on the subject, "God is Dead."

Mr. Watson feels that this issue of the REBEL is one of the best on the undergraduate level. He feels that the only weakness in the magazine is in the Art section, but he feels that this weakness is strengthened by the photography used.

The magazine on Friday will be the largest ever produced at East Carolina, 52 full pages. For the first effort of a completely "green" staff, the editor considers the magazine excellent. Compared to other college magazines it is above average.

The unfortunate thing about this issue is that there is only 4,000 copies to go around. Subtract 400 copies which will go to other colleges and newspapers throughout the United States and an additional 400 or so which will go to the faculty and you have about 3,000 copies of the magazine to divide between 9,000 students. This is just one of those things that happens and cannot be helped.

Perhaps the only part of the magazine which may provoke criticism is the editorial. The editorial itself criticizes certain aspects of administration, faculty, and students. Mr. Watson said that even though we don't like criticism at times we must be willing to accept constructive criticism if we are ever to become a university. He also said that the magazine has been copyrighted so that any material that is quoted from the magazine will have to be approved before being printed in other publications.

The underlying thought in this issue of the REBEL is threefold, philosophical, psychological, and religious. The next issue of the REBEL will come out about February 6.

For the purpose of advanced criticism of the magazine, a REBEL review party will be held on Thursday, November 10, from 6:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. at 1017 W. 3rd Street. All interested persons are invited.

Bradner, Matney Lead Discussion

Dr. Cleveland Bradner and the Rev. Bronson Matney were featured at the second "Meet the Fellows" program held in Aycock dorm on Nov. 7, at 7:30 p.m.

The discussion was very informal in nature dealing with the topics of religion and sex. One of the major questions posed to Matney and Bradner was, "Is there a need for organized religion in this country?" Matney replied that there would be organized religion even without society. Dr. Bradner commented that every society moves away from basic essentials. Religion compensates for many things in life.

Later on in the discussion, Dr. Bradner describes himself as an "agnostic" while Matney described himself as the "exception to the rule" in Presbyterian Ministry.

Zunich And Co. vs. Pirates

By Clem Williams

Upset Minded Richmond Visits ECC

The Pirate defense is going to have its hands full when the University of Richmond takes the field. Larry Zurich, who recently was voted back of the week by Sports Illustrated will be leading the ground attack. Zurich powered his way to 129 yards rushing offense against Furman. The Spiders romped by Furman 24-14.

The Pirates will be making their first appearance since the South Illinois game. Some of the Pirates are still on the injured list but most will see action against Richmond.

Lineberry Back

Wayne Lineberry, 6'3", 220 lb. middle linebacker will be back in the Pirate lineup this week after being out for four weeks because of a bruised kidney. Lineberry could help the Pirate defense considerably.

Johnny Schwarz, starting tackle for the Pirates has dropped out of school because of illness. Schwarz's services will really be missed. Schwarz was a starter for the Pirates.

Southern Conference Cross-Country Championships

East Carolina's Cross-Country team will travel to Furman Nov. 14 for the Southern Conference Championships. The Pirate runners will go into the contest as one of the three favorites to win. The others are William and Mary and VMI.

The Pirates threesome of Don Jayroe, Terry Taylor and Charles Hudson will lead the Pirates attack. Mike Smith, Dick Roth and John Osborne will be pushing for some of the higher places. Hope the boys come back with another trophy to add to the collection.

Bad Bet!

When Kentucky beat North Carolina 10-0, Governor Ned Breathitt settled back in his Kentucky mansion and waited for the country ham that he won in a bet with North Carolina Governor Dan Moore. Instead of the ham, he received a 50-pound pig and a bag of feed. On a tag that accompanied his payoff, Governor Moore had written, "I am sending the ham which I bet on the University of North Carolina football team.

Not only am I sending this ham, but I am putting on the line a similar wager on the outcome of the next meeting of these two teams." Kentucky is not scheduled to play North Carolina in 1967, and, as of now, no future game between the two teams is planned. "By the time I have won this pig for keeps," said Breathitt, "it will have become a pet." But until the pig is all his, he will keep it in a pen behind the State House. He also announced he would give an extra week's vacation to the state employee who came up with the best name for the pig by November 8. Who said you can't make something of a sow's ear.

Runners Place Second In State Championship

The East Carolina Cross-Country Team led by team captain Don Jayroe looked strong as they placed second out of thirteen teams in the State Cross-Country Championships on Monday Nov. 7. Ed Stenberg of Duke was first with a record breaking time of 20:08 for the hilly four mile course. Don Jayroe of East Carolina took second and also broke the old course record that had been set by Dave Starnes of Maryland in 1965. Charles Hudson and Terry Taylor of EC ran very well and finished thirteenth and fourteenth respectively out of a total of eighty-eight runners. Mike Smith was twentieth and John Osborne was twenty-fourth to round out the top five for ECC.

UNC won the team title but the ECC distance men under the leadership of Coach Baxter Berryhill were pleased to take second in the team standings ahead of Duke, N. C. State, Wake Forest, and others. The Cross-Country team will run in the Southern Conference Championships at Furman University on Monday, Nov. 14.

Baby Bucs Win Fourth; Only One Game Remains

The Baby Bucs capitalized on the long play as they toppled the University of Richmond freshman football team 19-6. It was the fourth straight win for the Bucs and Coach Vansant's seventh straight victory in two years.

Bryon McClure, tailback from Charlotte, North Carolina passed 44 yards to Vaughn Bozeman for the first touchdown of the day. Not to be held to just one long bomb McClure heaved another to Mike McGuirk which covered 50 yards in the third quarter.

Tom Bullock, wingback from Cary, N. C. gave the fans a real thrill as he ran back his fourth pass return for a touchdown. The pass returns covered 70 yards. Bullock's touchdown came in the second period.

Richmond's lone touchdown came on a 20 yard pass from Joe Opa-lenick to Buzz Mortsinger in the second quarter. The Buc defense stood up very well under Richmond's ground attack.

Jim Gudger kicked the only extra point.

The Bucs now have a 4-0 record this season with only the game against Chowan College remaining.

Junior Class Held Meeting; Introduced Elected Officers

The first meeting of the Junior Class was held Thursday night, November 3, 1966, in Rawl 130. Twenty-six people were present. President Martin Lassiter called the meeting to order and stated that the purpose of the meeting was to introduce the class officers. Vice President Bill Dryden, Secretary Judith Joyner, and Treasurer Kathy Bateman were introduced respectively. Two of the Junior Legislators, Gale Adams and Charles Watson, were also introduced. There was no old business brought forward so the president called for new business. The President suggested that each student could further the cause of E. C. U. by speaking with the N. C. Legislator in his district when at home for Thanksgiving. The President announced the following upcoming entertain-

 Count Basie — Thurs. Jan. 19
 Kingston Trio — Thurs. Feb. 2
 Town Criers — Fri. March 31
 Pozo — Seco Singers — Fri. April 28
 The Association — Sat. April 29
 Maurice Williams & Zodiacs — April 29
 It was then explained that the 50c service charge which the students have been paying to obtain concert tickets goes back into the Entertainment Series Budget. Therefore, we have more and better entertainment. President also announced that the ROTC is sponsoring the Bleed-In this year. All were urged to pledge themselves. The President then stated that the next class meeting will be held during Spring Quarter. The meeting was then adjourned.

Pop Entertainment Brings 'Music By Richard Rodgers'

"Music by Richard Rodgers" will be heard in a concert at East Carolina College Saturday night.

Part of the pops entertainment series sponsored by the Student Government Association, the concert is scheduled at 8:15 p.m. in Wright Auditorium.

It will feature music director Richard Maltby and his orchestra and four other stars: soprano Elaine Malbin, baritone William Metcalf, flutist Joanne Wheatly and her accompanist - performer husband Hal Kanner.

The Richard Rodgers' appearance here is the second pops concert since the opening of the 1966-'67 school year. Yet to come are Sabinas, the famous flamenco guitarist, in January and the Dukes of Dixieland in February.

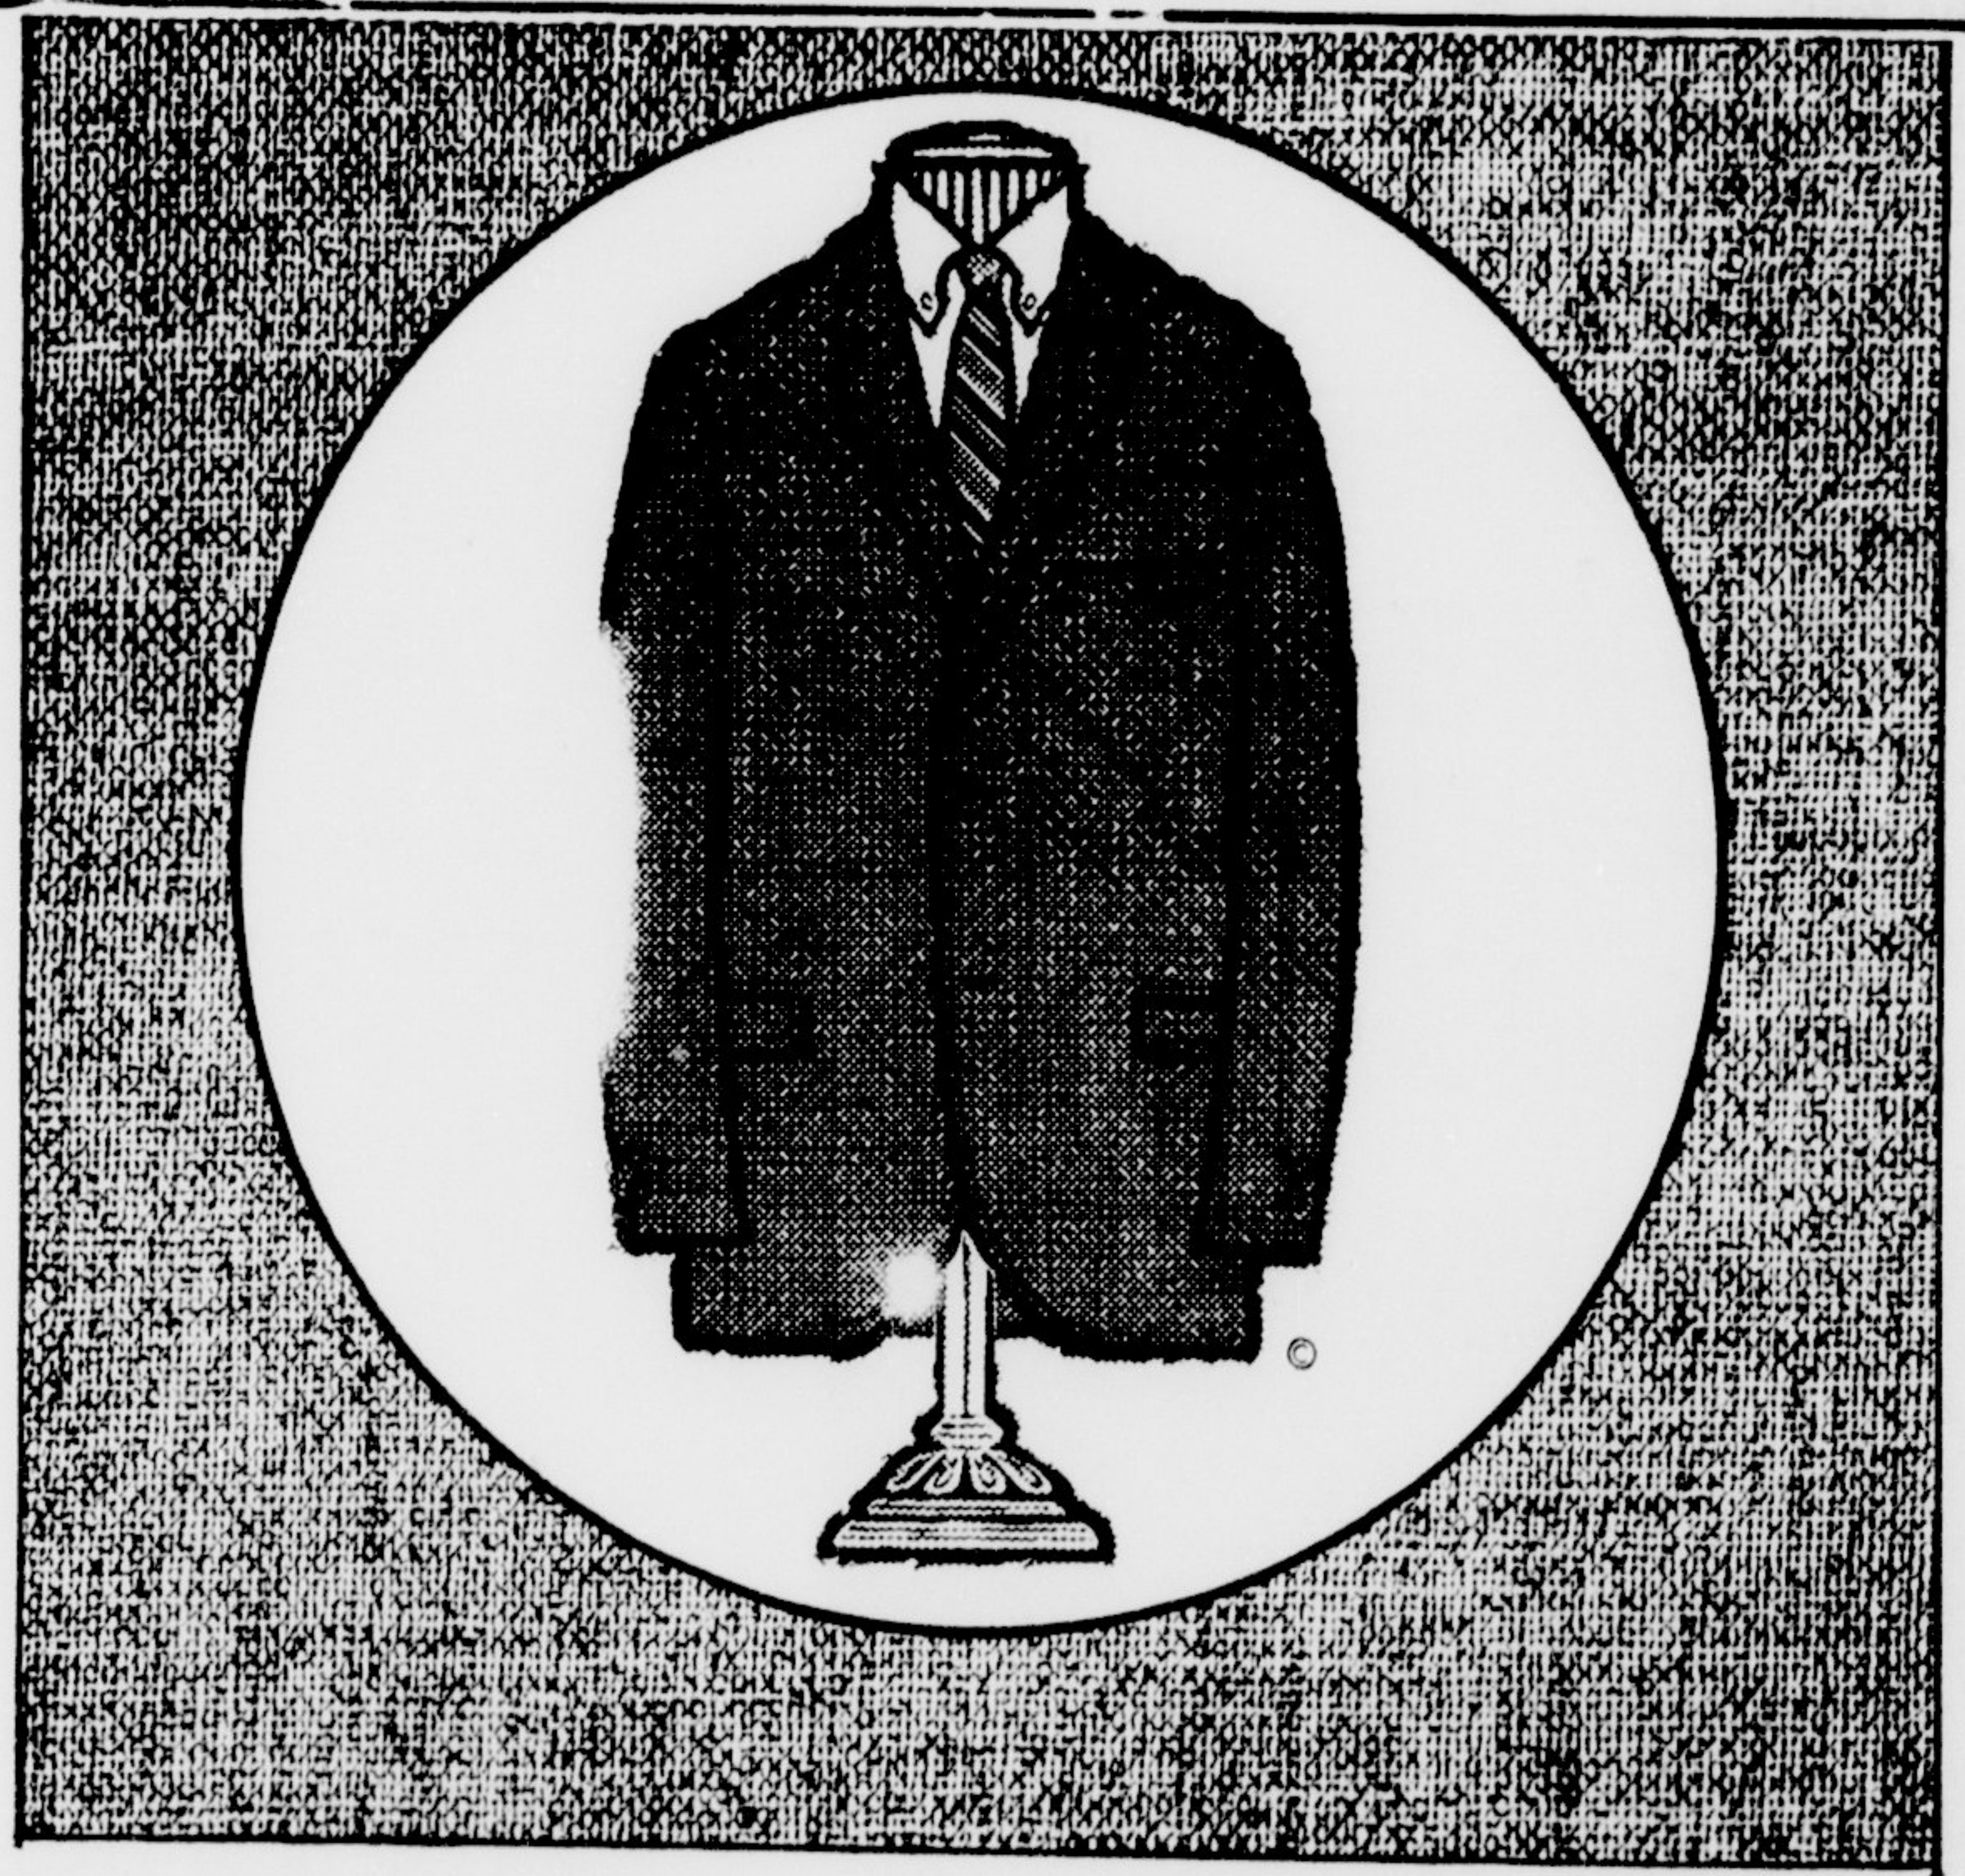

Saturday's program will feature music from the versatile pen of the master, and underscores such rewarding experiences as "Victory at Sea" written for television and "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue" written for ballet.

Additional program offerings include "It's a Grand Night For Singing," "March of the Siamese Children," "Carousel," "Dancing on the Ceiling," a medley of "My Favorite Things," and "Mimi."

Of special interest to EC students should be "Love in the Rogers Manner." The subject of love is probably the most used, as well as the most abused, in the field of popular music. From the sentiments of the beautiful waltz, "Falling in Love with Love" to the fun of the rhythmic "Mountain Greenery" and caustic lyrics of "I Wish I Were in Love Again," Richard Rodgers with Lorenz Hart and Oscar Hammerstein show an incomparable versatility in this group of hits that touch love's every emotion.

"A Visit with Rodgers and Hart" and "A Revisit to Rodgers and Hammerstein" are other specialties to be offered in the weekend concert.
