Henley's 'ECU Bill' Heads Senate Committee Agenda

East Carolina University could be a reality by the end of this session of the North Carolina General Assembly. A new bill advocating university status for East Carolina has been introduced by Senator John Henley of Cumberland County, an opponent of the May ECU Bill.

Under Henley's bill East Carolina would be made the first of possibly several independent regional universities. East Carolina University in this system however, would not be allowed to award the doctoral degree. After a trial period of five years, a decision on a doctoral program would be made.

The bill appears to have widespread support among several senators who voted against the last university try for EC. Former North Carolina Governor Terry Sanford, Lt. Governor Robert Scott from Halifax, and several members of the I. Beverly Lake section of the Democratic Party have come out in favor of the Henley Bill.

Presently, it is the understanding of this paper that several interested senators are working on amendments for the bill.

The announcement of a public committee hearing for next week on the Henley East Carolina University bill should be forthcoming. As of press time Tuesday, the bill was still under discussion in closed senate committee session.

Dr. Jenkins Comments

In a late afternoon interview on the new ECU bill, Dr. Leo W. Jenkins was both optimistic and pleased.

"I feel it is an excellent bill if it is made clear that East Carolina must build toward doctoral programs. It is the only way we can truly serve the state as a whole and in particular this region.

"It is interesting to note that we have students from 28 states and ninety three counties enrolled here. It is interesting also to note that thirty eight percent of our students come from the piedmont crescent.

"This bill would enable us to compete in a more favorable way for government and foundation assistance and monies. It will also enable us to work toward offering more degrees including the doctorate."

In looking to the future Dr. Jenkins stated that the present Henley bill would "enable us to become more deeply involved in educational programs associated with the university level."

Answering the question of the bill being merely a name change because of the lack of an immediate doctorate program, Dr. Jenkins explained that the existing standards in American universities did not require such.

"It should be very clear," he stated, "that it is customary for some universities to wait for a period before offering the doctorate degree."

The president explained that the University of North Carolina was founded in 1789. It was almost one hundred years (1883) before a Ph.D. was offered. Duke University was founded in 1924 and waited four years before awarding the doctorate. It was announced recently that the future Wake Forest University had decided not to offer a doctoral program for a few years.

"There are 129 universities in America who do not offer a doctoral degree such as Colgate, Bucknell, Villanova, and Furman."

In conclusion Dr. Jenkins emphasized the major statement in question, "I predict that this bill will pass because the people have demonstrated that the East should have a university. Our aims and objectives are honorable and we make no apologies for being ambitious."

Dr. Weigand Teaches Study Skills Course

Participation in the course is voluntary and it is open to all interested students. It will meet every day at 1:00 p.m. in room 209, Wright Building. The first meeting will be held next Monday at that time. No registration is necessary.

RUTH FLEMING

Ruth Fleming Represents N. C. In Nat. College Queen Contest

The second North Carolina representative to the Miss College Queen Contest is in New York for competition for the national title. Miss Ruth Fleming of Greenville left Raleigh - Durham Airport Wednesday for the week-long contest.

Nominated by her sorority, Kappa Delta, Miss Fleming sent in entry forms questioning her future plans, major, and campus and community activities to the College Queen Contest Committee in New York. She also submitted an essay on "Why I went to College."

From the contestants the committee selected four finalists from North Carolina. The four girls were voted on in a statewide election on the NC campuses. Miss Fleming was informed on May 20 of her election as the North Carolina representative.

The fifty contestants, one from each state, are staying in the Waldorf Astoria, headquarters for the competition.

Between events the girls will receive the "Ambassador's Tour" of the United Nations, attend a Broadway play, take a boat tour around Manhattan Island, and enjoy many features of a vacation in New York City.

The national contest is comprised of ten events, many of which involve writing essays rather than stage competition. Also included is a Safe Driving event and the important cooking event which takes place in the kitchens of the Waldorf. Miss Fleming has chosen as her original recipe, barbecued hamburgers.

The selection of the National Miss College Queen is based on accumulated points in each event. The girl acquiring the highest total of points will win the crown.

The final night of competition will be televised on the NBC Television Network. Television station WITN Channel 7 in Washington, N. C. will carry the program. The formal presentation, scheduled for that Saturday night, June 17, will be hosted by Robert Goulet.

The winner will receive a two weeks trip to Europe, a new convertible, a five hundred dollar wardrobe, and ten shares of Corn Products Company.

When asked about her feelings toward the coming event, Miss Fleming replied, "I was surprised to have gotten this far. I am looking forward to meeting all of the girls. It should really be fun and we'll be getting unheard of opportunities."

Ruth, a junior Spanish major at East Carolina, lists among her hobbies knitting, sewing, cooking, and reading. She plans to either teach Spanish or work for the State Department upon graduation.

She is the second East Carolina student to be selected as the North Carolina representative to the Miss College Queen Contest. Last year's representative was Carleen Hjortsvang.

EC Language Dept. Installs German Major

By SANDY RABHAN

The Foreign Language Department of East Carolina College is expanding to include a German Major and Minor beginning Fall Quarter 1967. Dr. S. Wanderman & Ivey are planning the new major, first of several new progressive undertakings for the department.

The department has, at present, acquired three new German professors, one of which is coming from Austria. There are still two positions to be filled by Fall Quarter. There will be six native-speaking German professors including Dr. Wanderman, who will serve as acting chairman of the German Department.

Forty hours of German courses will be required for a minor. The student majoring in German will be certified to teach German. The department stressed the fact that there is great demand for foreign language teachers, and the demand for German teachers is among the highest.

New courses to be offered next year will be Advanced Grammar and Composition and Reading in Technical Fields. After taking German I, II, III, and IV, the student will have the opportunity to read German books related to his major field. This course will take the place of German Literature courses which have previously been required to complete the sequence of German for those students taking German for their foreign language requirement.

This fall, Reading in Technical Fields will be offered in addition to the previously offered courses. Advanced Grammar and Composition will be offered Winter Quarter, and Conversational German will be offered Spring Quarter. As soon as possible two advanced courses will be offered per quarter along with regular courses. The foreign language department is very enthusiastic about this change, as it is hoped that after this program gets underway, additional languages will be scheduled.

Summer Theatre Prepares For Open Night, July 3rd

With opening night about a month away, the East Carolina College Summer Theatre is busy rounding up final plans for its fourth season.

Producer - Director Edgar R. Loessin lists this schedule leading up to opening night, Monday, July 3:

Set designer John Sneden will begin his work on Monday, June 12. The regular box office will open the following Monday, June 19, and first reserved seat tickets will be mailed to subscribers the same day.

Rehearsals will begin on Monday, June 25.

Loessin noted that, while the large majority of season tickets have already been sold, some orders are still coming in. He encouraged any interested persons who have not yet purchased their tickets to contact the Summer Theatre office (P. O. Box 2712, phone 752-7565 or 758-3426, ext. 293).

Season tickets are $18 each for the six productions. Single performances are $4.50.

On the 1967 schedule are "Arsenic and Old Lace," "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," "The Music Man," "South Pacific," "The Mikado" and "Any Wednesday."

Summer Opportunities . . .

Another Summer School has begun and with it come the plaintive cries of some students concerning the lack of activity on campus. However, with a little effort this summer can and should be the focal point for a well rounded program of academic and extra curricular activities.

Many undergraduates take the summer terms as a hated requirement. Whether making up lost hours or keeping ahead, summer school is too often placed into the slot of necessary evils—to be endured but not enjoyed.

The conscientious student owes it to himself to make the most of his opportunities. The summer terms are usually more relaxed in atmosphere in spite of the increase in hours. Longer daylight hours allow more time to get out and enjoy the mild weather.

The campus activities during the summer are now more numerous than ever. With the Student Government being enlarged to twenty-one elected positions, many who wish to participate in their own governing may now do so. Filing for office is open in the SGA Offices until 5:00 p.m. tomorrow.

Work on the EAST CAROLINIAN and Campus Radio WECC is available in several areas. Summer campus movies and entertainment are of the highest calibre as they are chosen by the students themselves.

The College Union offers every event from a weekly watermelon feast to summer bowling tournaments.

"Summer Time" is a great time to enjoy those little extras which may prevent during regular sessions. They are available merely for the asking.

An Invitation . . .

I would like to extend a welcome to all students and faculty to come by and visit the EAST CAROLINIAN offices in room 201 Wright Building. Service by this newspaper is aimed to please the most students in the most areas possible.

If you, the student, should decide that reading your campus paper is not enough, you have an opportunity to come and work.

Many areas of work are involved in newspaper publishing from reporting, commentaries, and layout to business, drawing, and circulation.

Any staff member, and I especially, will be more than happy to talk with you either about working with the paper or suggestions you may have.

There are also two news drop boxes located on campus for students wishing to deposit news items, want ads, etc. They are in both the College Union and the Main Cafeteria Lobby.

Whether just looking or working, "Y'all come see us."

'Voice Of The People' . . .

The new ECU Bill has again brought hope to many educators in the East. Without counting the eggs before they are hatched, it is reasonable to speculate that this bill will pass.

This bill is one of the finest examples of true democracy at work. As Lt. Governor Robert Scott said this spring, the voice of the people will remain supreme in the final analysis. The statement appears to have been proven correct, for now many legislators regardless of their previous convictions are supporting the Henley Bill for one reason—the people who put them in office demand it.

This same "voice of the people" has combined the completely separate Democratic Party forces of Terry Sanford and the I. Beverly Lake followers along with interested Republicans to form an impressive body for legislation.

Of course it would be naïve to assume that this move is totally without some political overtones. In this day and time every piece of legislation which passes through the General Assembly must, out of necessity, have firm political support.

It has been said many times that when East Carolina proposes a bill it is a political move, but the defeat of ECU is considered merely "educational statesmanship."

The constituents of many state senators are now asking that their representatives apply this statesmanship to fill a great educational need in North Carolina.

Many of these representatives are listening too! They must. As W. E. Debnam replied in WITN-TV's "Comment," "There is a saying a wise man sometimes changes his mind—a fool never does."

An Objective View

The Middle East

By John Sultan

The United States has stated that it will remain neutral for the time being in the Middle-East crisis. Although the Soviet Union is backing the Arabs and the United States is backing the Israelis, the United States is fearful of entering another war in force. But isn't it strange that the United States government under President Johnson commits a half a million men to fulfill a minor commitment, and does not commit one man to a much larger commitment in the Middle-East?

The obvious question is WHY? The answer is not quite as obvious however. The facts about the Vietnam "hot war" are not clear, and it is impossible to distinguish between what is right or wrong. It is apparent, however, that the United States should not have gotten involved in the beginning, but since we are involved the war should be ended as soon as possible. The terms "cold" and "hot" should be eliminated for they give no indication of a crisis culminating in total war. War is War whether one calls it "hot" or "cold", and the United States should conduct the action in Vietnam as war. Possibly when the Communists realize that the United States is serious, peace will be restored in Vietnam. In the Middle-East, the situation is much more serious than Vietnam. The security and interests of the United States are in much more danger in the Middle-East than in Vietnam. But the dangers of an all out war are greater in the Middle-East. Also the Israelis are better able to support a war than the Vietnamese. The result is a grave dilemma facing the government. Is the US willing and able to support another war, and still win in Vietnam?

So far the administration cannot decide whether the country can support another war and win in Vietnam, but, if the war continues, a decision must be made. President Johnson must decide whether to support an area of the world that is crucial to the security of the United States, or to remain neutral. Again remembering that the United States is already greatly involved in Vietnam.

It should now be a little clearer to answer the question WHY. The United States made a mistake by entering the Vietnam war, but they cannot get out now, so as the Middle-East crisis worsens the difficult decision to intervene must be made. One war is very taxing on a country's economy, and two wars are almost unthinkable, especially when the country is in so-called "peace time". But the security of the United States could be in great danger if the Communists gain control of the Middle-East. The administration is taking the wait and see attitude, and possibly this is the right course of action presently, but if the war continues, it seems that the administration has no alternative but to intervene.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

Vastly significant events are now taking place in New Orleans where District Attorney Jim Garrison has been conducting an investigation into the events surrounding the assassination of our late president, John F. Kennedy.

Citizens in the Los Angeles area have formed the "Citizens' Committee of Inquiry", an organization whose sole aim is to find out who killed the President. We feel it very likely that Mr. Garrison has uncovered evidence of a conspiracy. But since Mr. Garrison's jurisdiction ends in New Orleans, whereas the actual assassination occurred in Dallas, Texas his legal powers for prosecuting all those involved are severely limited. It is clear that only an investigation instituted and fully backed by the Congress of the United States will be effective in obtaining convictions of all those involved. Such an investigation would be conducted by independent non-government experts competent in the forensic sciences (criminologists, lawyers, pathologists, etc.), using the adversary procedure, in open public hearings, and further, that the new investigative body be empowered to examine all evidence, including that which is now classified.

The Citizens' Committee of Inquiry is driving toward the formation of such an investigative body, through the massive circulation of thousands of petitions.

Therefore, on behalf of the Committee, may I request that you print this letter, so that interested individuals who desire to circulate petitions and/or to form a new committee in that area may so inform us. Petitions and further information are available by writing the Citizens' Committee of Inquiry, Box No. 150, 38 Westwood Plaza, Los Angeles, California 90024.

Sincerely,
John Horrocks

Flip Wilson, Anita Sheer Entertain At First Concert

The first concert for this summer will be held Wednesday, June 21, at 8:15 p.m. in Wright Auditorium. Students, faculty, and staff will be admitted on their ID cards. Tickets for the public will be available at the door one hour prior to curtain for $2.00 each.

Flip Wilson

The first summer concert features Flip Wilson, one of today's most outstanding comedians.

How did Flip come about? Although some people think Johnny Carson discovered him, that's far from the whole story. Actually, the exposure of six 'Tonight' shows brought Flip into the homes of millions, but the real fact is that he was a constantly working comedian for 12 years prior to his first spot on the Johnny Carson show.

Flip is not just a happy-go-lucky comedian. He has invested much time and study to the art of humor. When he got out of the Air Force, he traveled the circuit for awhile, writing his own material. During this time, Flip read just about everything written on humor in order to absorb as many approaches to comedy as possible.

Flip places great value on the time he spent on the circuit. It was rough but it offered him a chance to face different types of audiences. He felt this was tremendously stimulating to his imagination, which is now reflected in his work. It developed one of those things so valuable to a comedian — originality.

Wilson is known as a 'Jazz Comic' because he has appeared in clubs and on many bills with such famous jazz performers as Ray Charles, Cannonball Adderly, Oscar Peterson, Miles Davis, and Dizzy Gillespie. He is the only comic to ever appear at Birdland, where he played three times a year from 1962 until it closed.

He has played the Village Gates, the Gaslight Club, and Carnegie Hall in New York; the Hungry i in San Francisco; and Playboy Clubs all over the country, to name a few of his showcases.

Anita Sheer

Anita Sheer will appear for the first half of the first concert. She has an unusually gifted talent in presenting folk music. She carries the audience through time and space to a dozen romantic climes with her uninhibited vocal passion and guitar virtuosity.

Anita's folk singing is not of spurious, over ethnicized nature, but rather is artistry based on respect and affection for the music and traditions from the many lands of which she sings. Her facility with foreign tongues, including French, Spanish, Hebrew, and Italian, gives her performances a cachet of authority that ably complements her considerable vocal abilities.

As an instrumentalist, she could very well get by with her guitar playing alone, for Anita Sheer is without doubt one of the finest female guitarists in the world today. The New York Magazine calls her 'the best girl Flamenco guitarist in the world.'

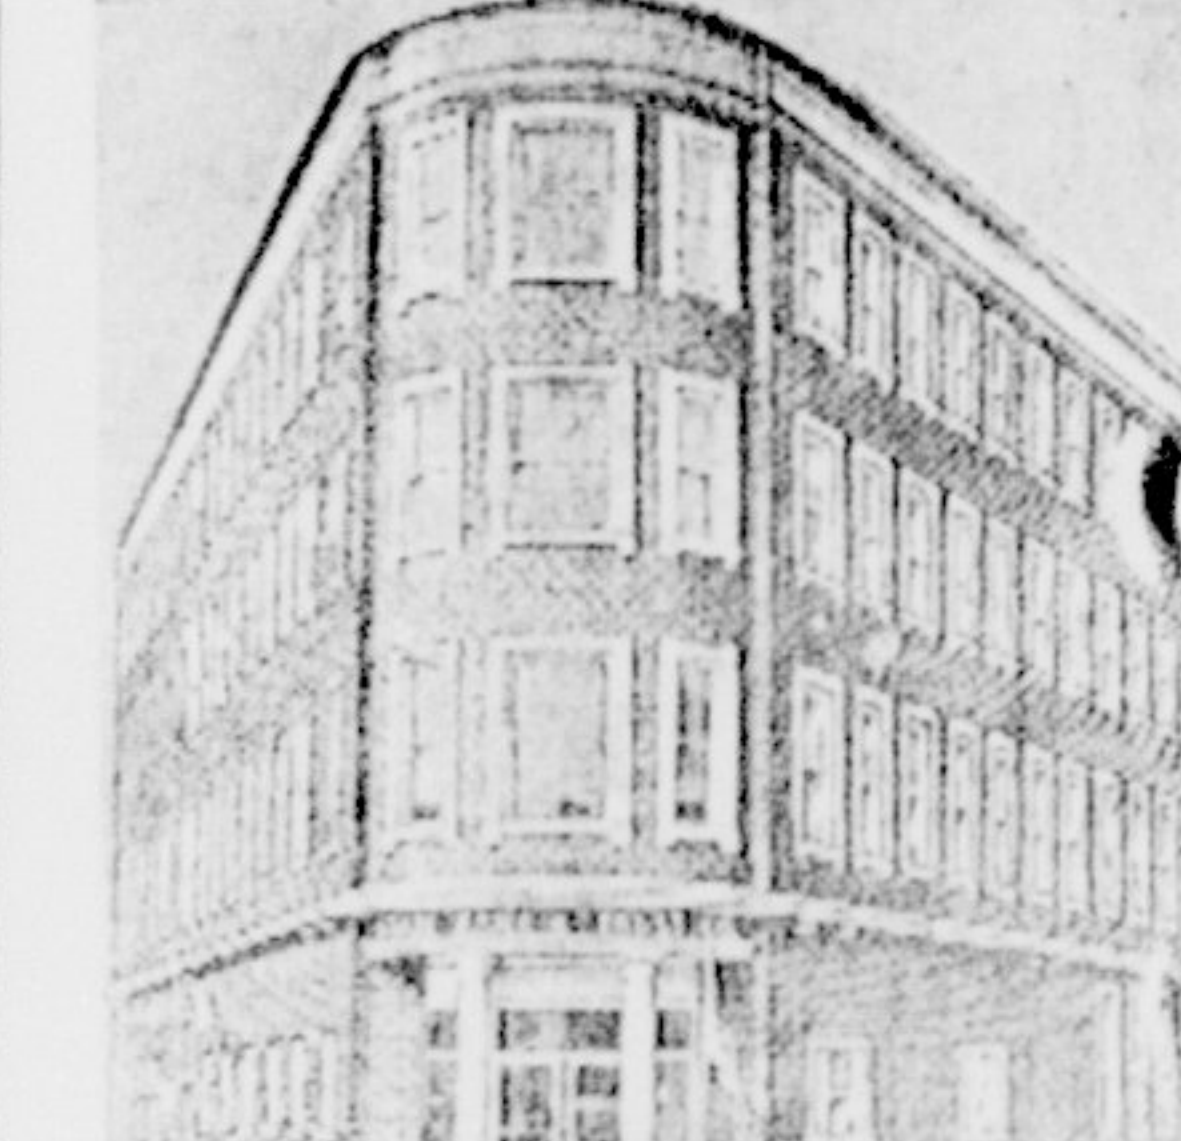

The first person ever to be accepted as a pupil of the great Carlos Montoya, Anita also studied the guitar in Spain, learning the art of Flamenco from its creators — the gypsy minstrels.

She has demonstrated her art at such notable bistros as the Blue Angel and Number One Fifth Avenue in New York; the Gate of Horn in Chicago; and the Hungry i in San Francisco; as well as throughout Europe.

Television viewers have seen her on such highly popular fare as the 'Garry Moore Show,' the 'Jack Paar Show,' 'Hootenanny,' and 'P. M. West' here in the states, as well as on the BBC in London.

ECC Campus Hosts Head Start Group

About 50 child development workers from eight North Carolina counties are at East Carolina College this week for a Head Start training program.

They are the first of four such groups to be trained for Head Start work in a four-week period. They will return to the various counties this weekend to begin child development programs under Head Start.

Their time here is divided between classroom sessions and observation of a model child development program based on approved Head Start purposes and procedures.

Twenty of the trainees are from Pasquotank County, 12 from Gates, eight from Cabarrus, three from Washington, and two each from Chowan and Dare. One is from Camden County and one from Perquimans.

Dr. Josephine A. Foster, ECC home economics faculty member, is program director. The administrative director is Dr. Alton Finch of the ECC School of Business faculty.

Head Start is a child development program of the Economic Opportunity Act. The training project at East Carolina is sponsored by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Dr. Foster is assisted by Anne Moore of Ahoskie. Five specialists on the staff include Mr. Nancy K. Ginnings, Mrs. Willene E. O'Neal, child development specialists; Dr. Thomas E. Long, Dr. Charles Mitchell, psychologists; and Mrs. Carolyn P. Milam.

Cedric Marks, Art Collector, Donates Primitive Shields

A New York art collector has given to the East Carolina College School of Art, six primitive war shields from the South Pacific, for its permanent collection.

The gift, valued at nearly $700, came from Cedric H. Marks and his wife. Marks is known as a collector of primitive art objects.

The six wooden shields given to East Carolina were made by natives on New Ireland, one of the islands in the Bismarck Archipelago off New Guinea.

The shields range in length from five to seven feet. Each is decorated with tribal carvings and natural native colors.

Dr. Wellington B. Gray, dean of the art school, said the shields are valuable additions to the art history section of the permanent collection.

The entire collection, which now includes nearly 100 pieces, includes a number of works by well-known artists — among them Pablo Picasso, Leonard Baskin and Rudy Pozzatti.

Eventually, Dr. Gray hopes, the collection will have its own gallery. It now is displayed at various places on the campus.

15th Alcoholism Workshop Convenes Here This Week

Five North Carolina authorities on the study of alcohol and the problems it creates will lecture to teachers and future teachers in the 1967 version of East Carolina College's annual summer workshop on "Alcoholism in Health Education."

The 15th annual workshop is conducted jointly by the ECC health and physical education department and the North Carolina Department of Mental Health. It began Tuesday, June 6, and will end Friday, June 16.

Visiting lecturers are Dr. Fred Ellis, associate professor of pharmacology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; Dr. Norbert L. Kelly, director, and Clyde Johns and Pauline Woods of the N. C. Department of Mental Health; and Mrs. Helen Barrett, director of the Pitt County Alcohol Information and Service Center.

The course offers regular college credit. Its sessions are meeting daily from 1 to 4 p.m. in Joyner Library on the campus.

According to Dr. N. M. Jorgensen, workshop chairman, the purpose of the 10-day course is to help teachers and other community workers "gain a better understanding of the many problems — sociological, psychological and physiological — which arise through the use or misuse of beverage alcohol."

"The workshop is especially designed for teachers, whose responsibilities include teaching about alcohol," Dr. Jorgensen says. "They will gain an objective and constructive approach to the problems of alcohol that they will be able to use in their teaching."

EC Offers Public Tickets To 1967-'68 Artist Series

East Carolina College is offering the off-campus public 1,000 season tickets to its 1967-'68 Artists Series with the idea that bigger and better things might be in the making for future seasons.

Working through representatives in various communities of Eastern North Carolina, the college is offering subscribers these seven programs for $10:

1. The Czech Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Karel Ancerl and Vaclav Neumann, Thursday, Oct. 19.

2. LaSalle String Quartet, in residence at the University of Cincinnati (violinists Walter Levin and Henry Meyer, violist Peter Kamnitzer, cellist Jack Kirstein), Tuesday, Oct. 31.

3. Chamber Symphony of Philadelphia, conducted by Anshel Brusilow, Thursday, Nov. 9.

4. Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians in their 51st season of "Music as timeless as the spirit of America," Thursday, Jan. 18.

5. The National Ballet, 70-member company from Washington, D. C., directed by Frederic Franklin, Wednesday, Feb. 14.

6. Alma Trio, pianist Adolf Balzer, violinist Andor Toth, cellist Gabor Rejto, Thursday, April 18.

7. Ferrante and Teicher, popular duopianists, Friday, April 26.

The first six programs will be held in Wright Auditorium, but the Ferrante and Teicher concert will be in the new Minges Coliseum. The coliseum is to be used for all programs in future series, according to present plans.

College officials say they would take 1,500 subscribers for the '67-'68 season as signal to go ahead with a more ambitious series for 1968-'69. They would make as many as 5,000 off-campus season tickets available, and would be possible because of the larger seating capacity in Minges Coliseum (some 7,500 for concerts).

The whole idea, they say, is to serve Eastern North Carolina better by bringing in the world's best performing artists at moderate ticket prices.

Season tickets are available while they last from the Central Ticket Office on the campus (Greenville P. O. Box 2722, phone 758-3426, ext. 324), or from various representatives throughout Eastern North Carolina.
