Chief Has Varied Problems In Running Campus Police

What does a campus police chief do besides write parking tickets? For one thing, he removes mules from dormitories.

It was homecoming weekend, 1965, when Campus Police Chief Johnny L. Harrell was confronted with the most unusual case of his career.

While making his regular dormitory rounds, Chief Harrell discovered a 200 pound mule blocking the first floor hallway of Slay Hall (then a men's dormitory). Harrell recognized the mule as one of a number of mules that had been brought to campus to participate in the homecoming parade. A local fraternity had brought the mules and mule-drawn hearse from Goldsboro and color to the festivities.

After the parade, a fraternity led the mules to a tree behind the maintenance building and left them there while they went to the homecoming football game.

Chief Harrell asked the mule men the hallway out the front of the building and tied it behind the maintenance building. There he found that the other mule was missing.

He returned to the dorm and searched the first floor. No mule was to be found. He climbed the stairs to the second floor where he found the mule.

It took him approximately an hour to back the mule down two flights of stairs and out of the dorm.

In 1961, when Jones Hall was built, Chief Harrell was summoned to the dorm one Sunday morning because a pig from the second floor bathroom.

There was a boy down on his hands and knees scrubbing a pig in the shower. The boy ran and left the pig in the bathroom," Chief Harrell recalled.

"I took the pig home and advertised for its owner to come and get it, but no one ever claimed it. About a month later, I had barbecue," he added.

Background

Chief Johnny L. Harrell has served East Carolina for fifteen years. He began his duties in June, 1953, as the only officer on campus at that time.

Today, Chief Harrell heads the police force responsible for the campus of over 10,000 students. Today there are more cars, more students and more traffic.

Harrell has spent 21 years in police work, including 5 years as a police officer in Turboto. He has attended the law enforcement academy here as well as seminars on fingerprinting, search and seizure, and motor vehicle violations.

ECU's campus police force is composed of 10 men (9 officers and 1 chief); 2 of them have backgrounds in police work.

They work 3 8-hour shifts, 7 days a week.

Duties

For the most part a campus policeman's job is routine. He must protect the lives and property of students, faculty, and administrative officials on campus. He is responsible for locking buildings and turning out lights all over campus. Also, campus policemen must enforce the university's many traffic rules.

How far does the campus policeman's authority reach?

Students come under the jurisdiction of the campus police (or any administrative official) when (and where) their activities reflect on the student body.

How much authority do they have?

They are sworn in by the city of Greenville and are empowered to make arrests any time the law is violated.

What is their connection with other law enforcement officials?

"We are connected by radio with all Pitt county law enforcement agencies, and the State Bureau of Investigation are at our disposal any time we need them," Chief Harrell added that the SBI can come on campus at any time, but the FBI must have the permission of the administration to investigate here.

Problems on Campus

When asked if a drug problem existed on this campus, Chief Harrell replied: "No, narcotics and marijuana are scarce on this campus."

He added that most of the campus' problems could be handled through the campus judicial system. Drinking, stealing, and motor vehicle violations are all handled by the honor councils; however, violators of state and federal laws must be taken downtown to the city police.

Fifteen Years of Confidence

During his 15 years here, Chief Harrell has watched the school grow from 1900 to 10,000 students. He has sent each of his 5 children to ECU. He has faith in the school, and it has faith in him.

Best Buy In Entertainment Is Student Activity Card

By RUTH GWYNN

It is a magic carpet, capable of flying its possessor to a world of entertainment, culture, and enlightenment. Its size is measured in inches, but its powers seem beyond measure. We call it a Student Activity Card.

For just $27 per quarter, it entitles every student at East Carolina University free admission to all home athletic events, popular movies, foreign films, lectures, concerts, dances, and such publications as the EAST CAROLINIAN, the "Key," the "Buccanneer" (if the student is here all three quarters), and "the Rebel."

Excluding the costs of the publications and all athletic events except home football games, the value of an activity card can be roughly estimated at $170. For this students pay only $81 yearly.

For events on which there are moderate service charges, the activity card grants the student an opportunity to purchase tickets.

According to Rudolph Alexander, assistant dean of student affairs, 33 popular movies, which run twice each; 16 international films; five lectures; five travel-adventure films; five concerts from the outstanding artists series; and 14 shows from popular entertainment will be available to students next year, aside from the publications and athletic events.

Entertainment Committees

Dean Alexander is responsible for booking all entertainment, but he does not select the entertainment. This is done by committees whose members are chosen from faculty and students.

Students elect the student legislature. In turn, members of the legislature approve various entertainment committees. Students have a majority voice on all committees, Dean Alexander said.

The committee members, both students and faculty, deserve much credit. There is a lot of work involved to put on a show once it has been selected and they do the job conscientiously and enthusiastically," he said.

The popular entertainment committee, in which most students are interested, is controlled 100 per cent by students, with students holding about a two-thirds majority on all other committees.

Dean Alexander is ex-officio co-chairman on all committees. However, he never votes, but "I do comment if there is someone especially good who we have an opportunity to get. My main concern is booking the best quality entertainment at the cheapest price."

Activity Budget

To do this, Dean Alexander works with a budget appropriated by the SGA. It will total approximately $96,500 this year, not including the budget for films or the Central Ticket Office. This is four times greater than the same budget four years ago.

The student body has not grown at the same rate, but neither has the cost of the activity card. The cost has risen, however—$3 since 1964. This increase has come as a result of improved permanent fixtures, such as the coliseum.

The large increase in the budget has been made possible by the service charge on some performances and by sales to public, according to Dean Alexander.

The dean favors the activity fee system, rather than having students buy tickets for all events.

In this way, we can plan ahead. We can include programs which would otherwise not pay for themselves.

"For instance, if we charged for campus films, we could not get them so cheaply because we would be in competition with the public theaters."

Unlike ECU, most N.C. colleges offer entertainment on a ticket-for-each-performance basis. The activity fee paid at these schools does not cover entertainment.

At N.C. State, and at most of the colleges throughout the country, the college union, rather than the SGA, sponsors the entertainment. State students pay an activity fee and then may purchase season tickets for entertainment.

At UNC, the students also pay an activity fee. They then pay full price for some entertainment and only a service charge for other.

At Duke and Davidson, also, tickets are sold for entertainment, although a portion of the activity fee is used to underwrite the cost of entertainment.

"I would say that no other school in the state has as large an activities budget as East Carolina," Dean Alexander said. However, this is deceiving. Other schools may actually spend more on entertainment, but this is done through ticket sales.

"Having all full-time students pay the fee helps make ECU's large budget possible. Since they are required to pay the activity fee, every effort is made to see that the entertainers reflect their interests," Dean Alexander said.

Student Surveys

Although the students have a voice in choosing entertainment committee members, surveys are taken in the fall to see what entertainment ranks highest with the student body.

The committees use the rankings to determine their choices. Sometimes, of course, the top student selections in a category may be financially far out of reach in this case, Dean Alexander attempts to book the highest feasible choice.

Some performers, such as Ferrante and Teicher, are booked as much as 18 months in advance. With "pop" groups, which come and go, booking is done on a shorter basis. There is a chance that the group will decline in popularity or that a hit record will raise their fees overnight.

Rebel Wins Grant From Arts Group

The REBEL was recently awarded $9500 by the North Carolina Arts Council to improve and enlarge its publications for next year.

The council has appropriated the money for use in encouraging young writers in North Carolina. It was felt that the best way this purpose could be accomplished was through the endowment of in-state college literary magazines.

When asked what the money would be used for, out-going Co-Editor Nellie Lee replied that the appropriation would allow next year's REBEL to reinstate its traditional literary contest, awarding prizes for prose, essay, poetry, art, and photography." She added that such prizes would "challenge the creative process" and offer a reward for literary achievement.

In addition, the REBEL will be able to add more color features, broaden their publicity program, and encourage more North Carolina writers to contribute.

Freshmen, Welcome!

Following a precedent set by last year's staff of the EAST CAROLINIAN, it is our pleasure to welcome you to East Carolina University and the Greenville area with this Freshman Orientation Issue.

This edition of our newspaper, which goes out bi-weekly during the regular academic year and once per week during the summer session, is directed to you, the incoming freshman.

We have prepared this special edition with the specific hope of acquainting you with the many and varied things that make up East Carolina University. Our advertisers have taken this opportunity to welcome you, and express their interest in your patronage.

But we of the staff have yet another goal to accomplish with the production of this issue. It is our sincere hope to acquaint you with this newspaper, and the service it performs to the East Carolina University Student body.

We strongly encourage you to come by our office on the third floor of Wright Building and talk with us about the function of the EAST CAROLINIAN. We will be more than happy to talk to you and explain all facets of the production of this newspaper.

Drive For Excellence

As freshmen once again come to the East Carolina University campus, the stage is set for the beginning of another phase in the school's drive for excellence.

This excellence for the 1968-69 academic year can best be promoted by one thing from the incoming freshmen—participation. College consists of many things: books, new friends, parties, classes, student government, publications, sports, and many, many more.

Each of them has a worthwhile contribution to make to the new student. Each one will go a long way toward producing the energetic and well-informed citizens our country so desperately needs.

All the many varied activities that make up the bee hive campus of East Carolina University contribute something to the production of quality education. They all will be interesting and often very exciting.

However, there is one thing that very often misses the notice of the new freshman student. All too often freshmen look at these activities as something that can offer, but never need to receive.

This is far from the case. Each of these requires the full cooperation of every student on this campus. Athletics need participation, but even more they need support from every student here. Entertainments need both students attendance and assistance in order to assure success. Student Government can not operate effectively unless students show interest and are willing to work on the multitude of committees needed for excellence of performance. All four publications need, and solicit, more student help.

These things can be of little value to the student if he fails to take advantage of them. Running home every weekend accomplishes little, neither for the student nor for East Carolina University.

The best advice this editor can give any incoming freshman is the old, trite line about getting involved. Despite its triteness, however, the advice is sound, for a college education can be much more than passing grades. It can, and should be, one of the most rewarding experiences of human life, but only through participation can its value be truly realized.

Study Is Fine Art

Being a good college student could possibly be added to the growing list of fine arts. There are many adjustments one must make in the transition from one's home life to life on a university campus, both mental, and physical.

While the Physical Education courses will hopefully take care of the latter, the mental adjustment of a college Freshman can not be directed by anyone outside himself. Instead of being told what to do by his parents, he will have to make his own decisions and live his own life.

There will be many disappointed students this year, but their unhappiness will be mainly their own fault. The main obstacle will be their own inadequacy or refusal to adjust to their new way of life. There will be many criticisms of the school, the Administration, and the professors here, yet conditions can be changed only by actions, and not by idle talk. There are numerous outlets for student grievances on this campus, but they are effective only if the students use them to let their feelings be known.

It is not only the right, but the responsibility of each student to take action against injustices. A campus is not made by the buildings on it, it is whatever the students and faculty make it.

Campus Communications Strive For Informational Excellence

Communications are quite adequately covered on the East Carolina University campus, as six student owned and operated communications media strive to keep the individual student informed of the events and people around him.

Of these, four are publications which release their material in a written form at specified and varying intervals of time. Each of the four has special merits that distinguishes it from the other three, giving students an excellent opportunity to choose which one most interests them.

THE EAST CAROLINIAN

Owned and operated by the students, the EAST CAROLINIAN sets as its goals "to provide each student on the campus with factual, unbiased information, and through the use of its ECU Forum, to provide each student with an opportunity to express his opinions."

Edited by Wes Sumner, the EAST CAROLINIAN is published semi-weekly and is delivered to each dormitory, the main cafeteria, the library, and designated areas in Wright Building.

The newspaper consists of many different facets, including news, sports, commentaries, layout, business, circulation, subscriptions, and art.

Letters to the Editor expressing sentiment for or against an ideal or topic are always accepted for consideration. Letters must be typed and signed to be printed.

Two news drop boxes are provided for student use, located in the University Union and in the main cafeteria.

Any interested East Carolina student may apply for a position on the staff of the EAST CAROLINIAN by contacting the Editor or managing editor on the third floor of Wright Building.

THE BUCCANNEER

The Buccaneer, East Carolina University yearbook, is released in the spring of each academic year, presenting a recap of the events and faces of the school year in book form.

The staff consists of eight section editors. Organizations, Features, Greeks, Fine Arts, Classes, Sports, Academics and SGA, Sports, and Copy, all under the direction of an Editor-in-chief and a business manager. This year's Editor-in-chief is Earle Beasley.

The Editor-in-chief appoints the staff membership, which is open to all interested students, regardless of classification. The staff generally consists of approximately 30 persons. The Editor usually holds an organizational meeting at the beginning of school to obtain interested personnel.

From their office on the third floor of Wright Building, the staff works through Fall, Winter, and Spring Quarters, terminating with the release of the book in the late Spring.

THE REBEL

"The Rebel" is the literary magazine of East Carolina, providing students with an opportunity to express themselves through fiction, poetry, satire, and art.

Published by students once a quarter with occasional supplementary issues thrown in, the magazine has repeatedly received recognition as one of the nation's best.

Recruiting for this year's staff will begin this fall, by co-editors Chip Callaway and John Reynolds.

THE KEY

In an attempt to keep students informed about organizations, policies, and activities of East Carolina University, and to serve as a reference book on those things, the "Key" is distributed to each student once a year.

Included in the publication are short descriptions of all services, activities, departments, and organizations on this campus. Also covered by the "Key" are the regulations for both male and female students, an explanation of the judiciary system, the General Election rules, and the constitution of the Student Government Association.

Edited this year by Bev Carawan, the "Key" is sometimes called a cross between the student's "bible" and his law book.

WECU RADIO-AZ

Located on the second floor of Joyner Library, WECU Radio is owned and operated by students under the direction of the Speech and Drama Department.

The station operates on the "carrier-courier" method of transmission. Thus the station can only be received on this campus, through the electric outlets by using an electrically powered radio.

Open to all students who wish to work, the station also sponsors dances and a UNICEF radiothon each year.

WECC-TV

The campus television studios are used for classroom instruction and special programs, such as the student government presidential debate this past spring. Operated by students under the supervision of qualified instructors and engineers, the television station is open to all interested students.

The EAST CAROLINIAN will accept all notices of interest to the student body subject to the approval of the staff. Notices for the Tuesday issue must be in by 4 p.m. on Sunday; and by 4 p.m. Tuesday for Thursday issue.

The ECU Forum is intended to provide the students, faculty, and administration of East Carolina University with an opportunity to express their opinions in writing.

Letters to the Editor, which compose the Forum, may be short, opinionated articles or rebuttals to previous articles. Letters must be typed and signed by the author, in order to be considered for printing in the Forum. They should be addressed to the ECU Forum, c/o the EAST CAROLINIAN.

The editors reserve the right to edit for clarity and length, but the intent of the article will not be altered.

Such signed opinions on this page reflect the opinions of the author, and not necessarily those of the EAST CAROLINIAN.

Little Boxes

By Richard Foster

As college freshmen, many rich opportunities are open to you. You can have various wonderful, fun courses here at ECU.

For your first quarter here, I strongly suggest that you don't miss "Meet the Coaches," commonly known as Health I, aired on WECU-TV every morning at nine. After a thrilling hour of listening to these fine orators expound upon the wonders of a strong body (they may even offer you a scholarship to play badminton), you will feel much better when you understand how a hangover really works.

Next in your day, I recommend "Daily Travels with Captain Cramer," better known as Geography 15. In this course, you will learn how vastly important earthworms really are to the economy. Later in the course, after your mind has adjusted to the general way of thinking, you may even learn how a labor supply can cause a hike in beer prices.

After these two demanding courses, you must trot back to your dormitory and dress in your Formal Attire for lunch at the cafeteria. The prices are a little high, and the food, a little low.

For a bit of rest and relaxation in your afternoon, you might want to add culture to your otherwise meaningless life. For this, I highly advise "Fun with Jimmy," otherwise known as "Music Appreciation." In this nice, progressive, middle-class conservative class, Mr. Parnell will expose to your uncultured mind such meaningful elements of music as pitch, loudness, melody, and counterpoint. These elements can be easily noticed any night of the week in the local establishments of ill repute in the uptown Greenville area.

As a finishing touch to your day,

"Nudies, Collectively," or Art 217, will finish your day off with a bang. After this satisfying course in the fundamentals of artistic ideals, i.e., free love, reform, rotng, etc. you will truly be on your way toward becoming an educated individual.

Furthermore, you will be doing what you like best, watching TV all day long. Of course, you must realize you need an hour break between each class in order to sit on the UU wall and look cool. This is a most important part of your day.

There will be a new course offered at ECU this fall, due to popular demand. This course will be taught at night in order for everyone to be able to attend, and to give the freshmen girls somewhere to sign out for instead of the fraternity houses.

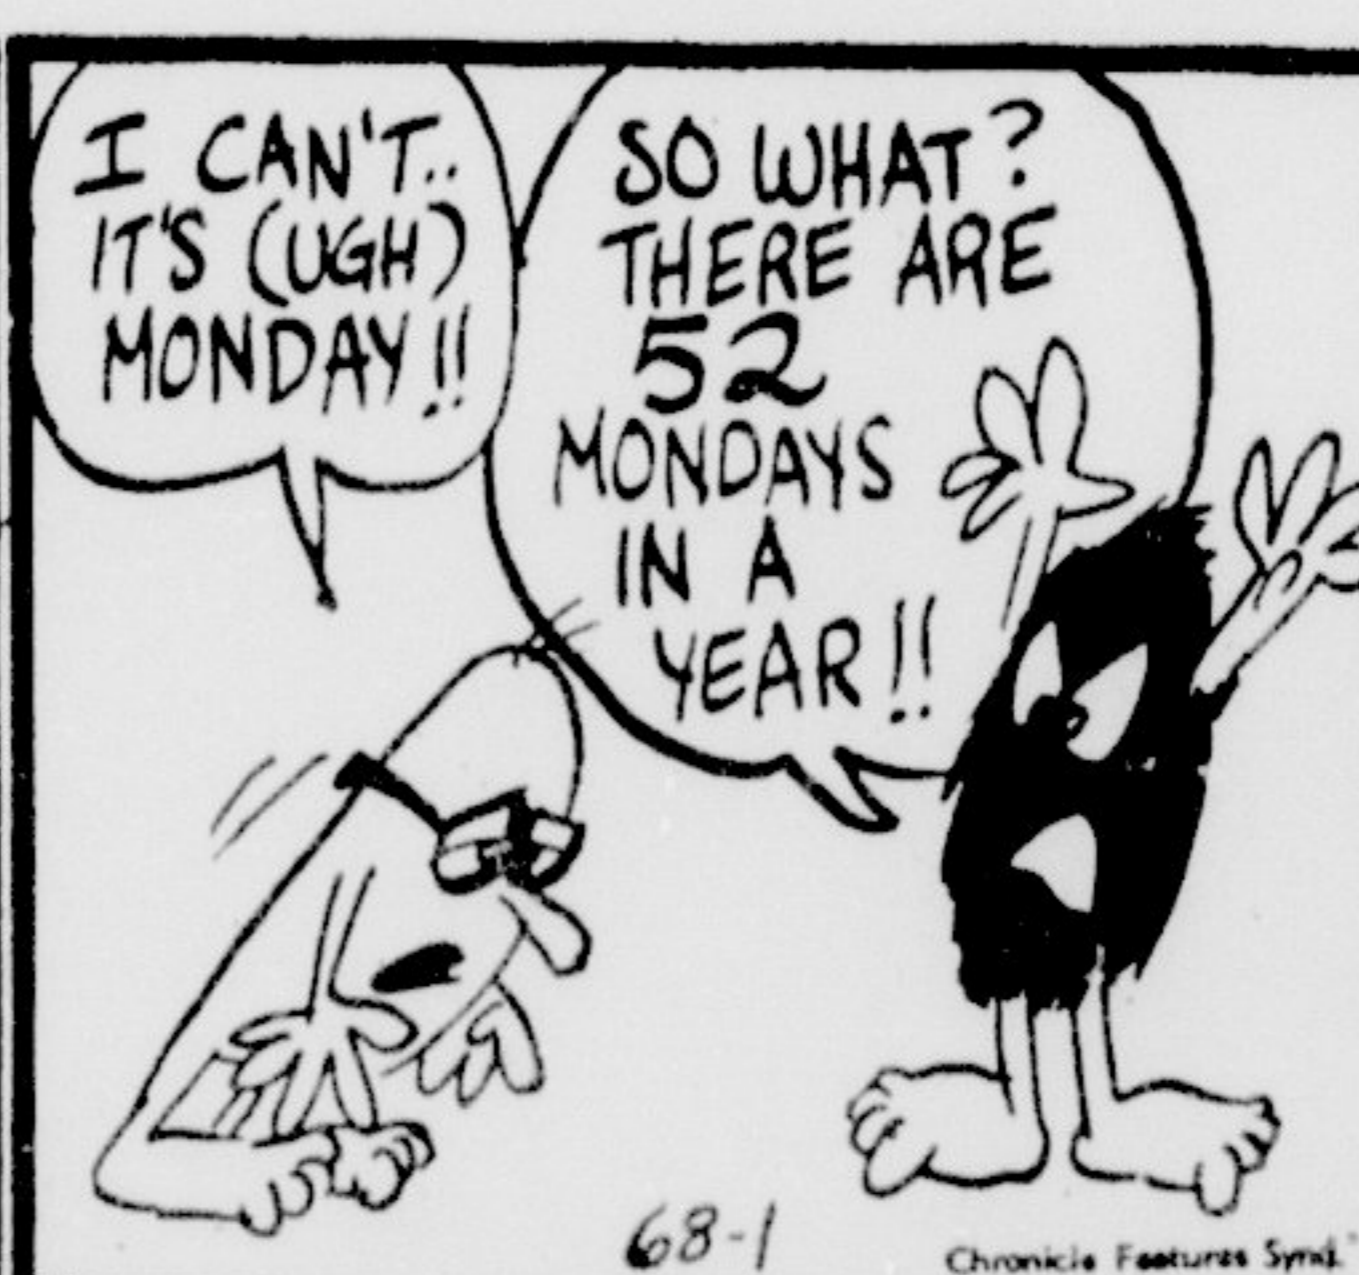

The course will deal with the fine art of suitcase-packing, and will have weekly quizzes to keep your attention. Although this is listed as a freshman course, don't be surprised to find many upperclassmen in there with you.

Although this above-listed course of study may seem strenuous, it is really only fourteen quarter hours. This should not interfere with your life or your education too much.

Some of our professors allow students to cut their classes occasionally without severe penalty; however, the owners of the beer halls take roll almost every night. The penalty for skipping a night of fun and frolics is often quite stringent. Some of the owners even take your favorite song off the jukebox if you cut two nights in succession.

Whatever you do with your daylight hours, always remember that the night-time hours must be spent on the local beer parlors in order to show your maturity and how well you can't hold your beer.

New Polaroid ID Camera System Catches EC Students In Color

For all you pretty people of ECU, the SGA is providing a chance to have your picture taken in living color and mounted on a colorful card encased in plastic.

For this project, $7,000 of Polaroid camera equipment has been purchased. SGA photographer Walt Quade has been taking the pictures in Wright Auditorium this week. He says there will be a wait of only about two minutes. This is a vast improvement over the two-to-three-week waiting period for black and white cards in previous years.

The idea for the new cards originated with Dean Rudolph Alexander and the executive council of the SGA. One reason for the change is that students who have dropped out or transferred have been using their old cards to attend functions on campus for which they have not paid.

Lloyd said another reason for the change is "the picture on the black and white cards are blurred and a student can 'get away with using another person's card.'" The pictures on the new cards will be clearer and it (the new system) will be easier for ushers."

Lloyd said it is hoped that eventually the new system, with the card color changing each year, will eliminate the need for activity cards. This idea is still in the planning stage, and the final decision will be determined by the success or failure of the new system.

To have their pictures taken, students are required to show their Permits to Pay Fees for Fall Quarter and pay a fee of 50 cents to cover the cost of materials and labor.

Freshmen can have their cards made in the summer during orientation, and transfer students can get theirs in the fall.

Campus Organizations

By NELDA S. LOWE
Features Editor

It has been a standard observation that new freshmen arriving on the campus of ECU are filled with queries and confusion. It is hoped that this article will answer some of your questions and help prepare you as a contributing member of the East Carolina family.

Student Government

The Student Government Association is made up of representatives elected by the student body from within its own ranks. This organization oversees the disbursement of student funds, enactment of student policies, and establishment and enforcement of student regulations. The SGA also serves as the supervisory agent for all campus publications, the entertainment series, and all recognized organizations and activities.

David Lloyd will serve as SGA

President for the 1968-69 school year. Freshmen are urged to seek positions as SGA legislators or class officers during the fall elections.

For those interested, the campus has two political parties. These are the Student Party and the University Party. Efforts are being made to start a third, the Academic Party.

ECU Judicial System

The Men's and Women's Honor Councils, the Men's and Women's Judiciaries, and the Review Board compose the Judicial Branch of the SGA. The Honor Councils hold jurisdiction on all cases which involve direct violation of the Honor Code. The Judiciaries hold original and appellate jurisdiction on all cases which do not involve an Honor Code violation and which do not involve the suspension or expulsion of a student.

If a student is dissatisfied with the decision of any of these bodies, he may appeal his case to the Review Board, whose decision is subject to change only by the president of the university.

Greek Life

Greek fraternities and sororities are intimate associations of students living, working, and having fun together. College is the best place to develop moral, social, and intellectual character; therefore, Greek organizations have aided this development by offering good living conditions, congenial surroundings, and many facilities for social life to their members.

One must make his own decision about joining a fraternity or sorority, basing his decision on his knowledge of the Greek organizations on campus. To acquaint interested students with Greek life, the twelve social fraternities and eight social sororities have devised a system of rushing. This system includes informal parties during fall quarter. Prospective rushers are encouraged to visit the fraternities and sororities to gain an idea about which organization they prefer.

These are just a few highlights of college life. Answers to many questions can be found in THE KEY along with the rules and regulations by which the student must abide.

Entertainments Feature Vinton, Royal Guardsmen

1968-1969 students can look forward to a "rilly big" year of entertainment. Rudolph Alexander, Assistant Dean of Student Affairs, announced a schedule of the upcoming events for East Carolina.

The popular entertainment series for summer school features Bobby Vinton on either June 19 or 26, Spanky and Our Gang on July 24, and Flatt and Scruggs on July 24.

The first night of fall quarter, September 10, ECU hosts the Royal Guardsmen of "Red Barron" fame. Also for the fall we have The Platters and Paul Anka on November 8th and 9th which is Homecoming weekend, and on November 15, The Four Seasons will entertain ECU students.

Next year's International Film Series will include a double feature with "The Phantom of the Opera", and "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligar" on October 22, "David Copperfield" on February 17, and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Wolfe" on December 4.

The 1968-1969 East Carolina University Artist Series proudly presents five of the most outstanding concert artists of our time including: Roger Wagner Chorale, November 6; Rober Merrill, December 10; Andres Segovia, January 27; The Detroit Symphony Orchestra, February 5; and Van Cliburn, March 14.

NEW PIRATE — Graham Jones, whose beard and Confederate flag have become famous on the East Carolina campus, has been selected to serve as next year's version of the Fighting Pirate for the cheerleading squad. Jones succeeds Chipper Linville, who becomes a member of the regular cheering unit.

Graham Jones To Head 1968-69 Cheerleaders

By NELDA S. LOWE
Features Editor

The lady came to a stop beside the stationwagon and asked the girl in the back, "Is he a caveman?" Graham Jones answered, "No, I'm a Pirate."

A freshman art major from Reidsville, N.C., Graham was chosen as the 1968-69 Pirate. He succeeds Chipper Linville, who takes a new position on the main cheering squad.

Graham commented, "I came down for the Homecoming ballgame when I was a senior in high school and saw the Pirate for the first time. I have had my eyes on his position ever since. Now that I am the Pirate, I can hardly wait for the first ballgame."

"I feel that it is a necessity to increase student enthusiasm and support at football games as well as at all sports event. Only with reciprocal student support can cheerleaders function at their best. We have a new set of concrete stands and students should make the best use of them.

"I'd like to thank the judges for their selection. I also request that there be no more gin bottles thrown on the field. My tricorn isn't a hard hat."

Also chosen were the following members of the cheering squad. The men are Danny Bland, Tim Kesler, Chip Linville, Pat Prather, David Batts, Bob Rankin, Walter Dudley, and Layton Getsinger. The Men's alternate is Ronald Moore. Sherry Robertson, Susan Walton, Gail Robinson, Patsy Simmons, Debbie Sheehan, Beverly Bolton, and Cathy Coakley make up the rest of the squad. Alternates are Pam White, Donna Ramsdell, and Mary Jo Wozelka.

Judges for the selection were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Saunders of the ECU faculty; Wayne Lineberry of the football squad; Jim Modlin of the basketball team; Eric Krautler and Dottie Swan of the 1967-68 cheering squad; and Rex Meade SGA Vice-President.

Pirate Teams Demonstrate Winning Habit With Six Southern Loop Championships

Since East Carolina's entrance in the Southern Conference the Purple and Gold have racked up six conference championships, with the swimming team leading the way with three first place finishes. The Pirates have also come through with six second place finishes and three third place finishes in the eight team conference.

Biggest improvements have come in track as Coach Bill Carson, now finishing his first year as track coach. He has coached the cross-country, indoor and outdoor track teams to greater heights than these sports have ever enjoyed before. His cross-country and outdoor track teams came in second in their respective conference meets, while the indoor track team finished fourth.

Golf, soccer, and wrestling have also taken great strides forward in the conference. Under the leadership of Coach Johnny Welborn, these teams have moved up from the bottom of the league to record one second place finish and two third place finishes.

The basketball team is the only sport currently below fifth place in the conference as Coach Tom Quinn is in a rebuilding program in an effort to make East Carolina a basketball power.

The baseball team, under the leadership of Coach Earl Smith, won the conference title outright in 1966.

and tied for the crown in 1967, and in 1968 won the crown.

In the coming year, there are many bright hopes for a better year in athletics. In the 1967-68 season, there were six Pirate teams holding the number one or two positions in the 11 conference sports. That will be a hard record to beat, but the coaches and their players expect to do better, so it should be a good year for sports at East Carolina University this year.

Two Sports Camps Set For High School Boys

This summer, two summer camps will be held on the East Carolina campus. Joining the Tri-State Football Camp will be the Buccaneer Basketball School which starts on June 16th, and runs through June 29th.

Head basketball coach Tom Quinn and assistant coach Kirk Stewart have started the first basketball school of any type in Eastern North Carolina.

The school is unique in that its teaching techniques are individualized, instead of the mass instruction usually found in basketball schools. Each boy will be individually screened and give thorough tests to determine his strengths and weaknesses as related to all phases of basketball.

Aside from their basketball instruction, the campers will be counseled by Physical Education and Recreation majors who will live-in with the campers in the dorms.

The Tri-State Football Camp, headed by Coach Clarence Stasavich starts its sixth season on July 28th, and runs through two one-week sessions until August 10th.

Fundamentals are stressed in the camp, as the varsity coaching staff here at East Carolina are the instructors.

As in the Buccaneer Basketball School, all boys in junior and senior high school are eligible if they have not started their senior year of high school.

Campers will be allowed the use of Minges Coliseum, the new Natatorium, the weight-training room, and all the outdoor fields for tennis, football, and baseball.

The campers will also be allowed to use the student center and the student theater.

Pirates Boast Top Coaches For Eleven Loop Sports

Dedication to athletics and athletes is a primary requirement of any good coach, and East Carolina University is blessed with a coaching staff that are willing to put their whole heart and soul into the Pirate sports program.

Three major sports share most of the East Carolina athletic spotlight. Football, under the coaching of Athletic Director Clarence Stasavich, is perhaps the biggest from the spectator point of view. Basketball, coached by Tom Quinn, is in a period of rapid growth and has a new Christmas holidays tournament scheduled for Minges Coliseum this year. Baseball, coached by Earl Smith is usually a strong sport at East Carolina in terms of conference championships.

A Host of Other Sports

In addition to the three major sports, there are a host of other activities that, judging from the performance of East Carolina teams, can not accurately be called "minor" sports. Among these are eight other sports in which East Carolina fields Southern Conference teams. These are outdoor and indoor track under the direction of Bill Carson, who also coaches the cross-country squad; tennis, headed by Jimmie Grimsley; swimming, which is under the direction of Ray Scharf, who recently succeeded Dr. Ray Martinez, who was appointed to the new post of Director of Aquatics here at East Carolina; and the soccer, golf, and wrestling teams, all of which are coached by John Welborn.

East Carolina also fields teams for intercollegiate competition in crew and lacrosse.

Stas Continues With Single-Wing

Athletic Director and head football coach Clarence Stasavich has become a virtual legend among gridiron buffs across the nation. He promises to retain his use of the single-wing formation, the parting of his hair down the middle, and his love for football until the day he dies.

During his coaching career, which spans over twenty years, he has compiled a masterful 164-50-8 mark, which puts him in a class with the top five coaches in the country with over twenty years of coaching.

Quinn Begins Rebuilding Program

Basketball Coach Tom Quinn is a relative newcomer to the East Carolina coaching family, coming here from High Point College in the fall of 1966.

While at High Point, Quinn's teams became known for their vertical-stripped stockings and their winning ways, as his squads piled up three conference crowns, two district crowns, and went to the NAIA tourney twice.

Since coming to East Carolina, Quinn has been held back by the need for rebuilding the basketball program, and has not been winning games with his accustomed regularity. However, this year's squad, his second here, showed a vast amount of improvement over that of last year, and hopes are bright for the 1968-69 campaign.

Baseball Led by Earl Smith

Baseball coach has been associated with East Carolina University sports for over 25 years. While in college here, he played three sports:

baseball, basketball, and football.

He has also coached all three major sports here, taking his present position here as head baseball coach in 1962, after coaching football and basketball.

Smith has compiled a 229-87 college record in baseball, winning three loop titles since taking over the Pirate helm, and leading his 1963 team to a third place finish in the nation.
