Jenkins Requests $26 Million For 1969-71 Capital Growth

East Carolina University presented to the Advisory Budget Commission Monday a request for $26,481,500 to finance 18 capital improvements projects in the 1969-71 biennium.

President Leo W. Jenkins made the presentation during an afternoon session in his office with the state budget-making body, now making its biennial round of visits to the various state-supported institutions.

Dr. Jenkins submitted the 18 projects listed in order of priority.

Topping the list was a request for $1,450,000 for the purchase of three tracts of land totaling 31.7 acres in the vicinity of the original campus.

Other high-priority projects: School of Art building, $3,090,000; Joyner Library addition, $2,670,000; language departments classroom building, $3,185,000; student union, $2,945,000; School of Allied Health Professions building, $1,600,000; Department of Psychology building.

Also on the list were requests for a new auditorium, $1,380,000; an addition to the biology-physics building, $1,710,000; and dormitories for 1,600 students, $5,440,000.

Completing the list were: heating plant addition, $175,000; renovation of electrical distribution system, $200,000; air conditioning of Graham Building, $90,000; eight tennis courts, $55,000; heat lines from new heating plant to Minges Coliseum, $57,500; renovation of Wahl-Coates Training School, $398,000; renovation of storm sewer system, $216,000; and FM radio station equipment, $35,000.

The top priority item, land purchase, involves:

— A 13.7-acre tract between Fifth and First Streets and east of Reade Street, owned by the Greenville Redevelopment Commission ($106,000).

— A tract of about 9.4 acres bounded by the main campus, Ninth Street and James Street ($790,000).

— A tract of approximately 8.6 acres east of the campus between Fifth and 10th Streets and bounded by Maple Street ($421,000).

A reserve of $133,000 was included in the request to cover possible error in cost estimates.

Arts Performances Slated

Two special Sunday performances have been announced for the musicals "The King and I" and "Guys and Dolls" in the East Carolina University Summer Theatre.

Curtain time will be at 8:15 p.m. Sunday, July 21, for "The King and I" and Sunday, July 28, for "Guys and Dolls."

Summer Theatre Producer Edger R. Loessin said the two additional performances are being provided in anticipation of high public interest in the two popular musicals.

In addition to the Sunday shows, Wednesday matinees are scheduled for July 17 ("The King and I") and July 31 ("Guys and Dolls").

Tickets for the Sunday performances will be $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children and are available at the Summer Theatre box office in Ginniss Auditorium, P.O. Box 12 or telephone 752-7565, Greenville.

Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The King and I" opens Monday, July 15, for a nine-day run through July 23.

"Guys and Dolls," Frank Loesser's hit musical comedy, based on the fabled characters of Damon Runyon, will open July 26 and will continue through August 3.

Good seats are still available for performances.

William B. Moore, pianist and composer, will give a recital at East Carolina University, Friday night, July 19.

Moore will play three works by Chopin, and single works of Beethoven, Schumann and Liszt.

He will also perform "Three Romances," one of his own compositions which was performed at the Metropolitan Museum in New York in 1967.

The recital, sponsored by the ECU Student Government Association, is scheduled at 8:15 p.m. in the Recital Hall at the School of Music building. It is free and open to the public.

A native of Newberry, S. C., Moore received his BM degree from Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y., and his MS degree from the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

In Rochester he studied under Cecilia Staub Genhaut and in New York under Mme. Rosina Lhevinné.

University Hosts 54 Students For Latin Study

East Carolina University is now hosting 54 students from five states who are participating in the annual Academic Center for Latin American Studies under the auspices of Title III of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

The program, which is the only one of its kind now operating in the United States, is being conducted here this summer for the second time. It will continue through July 27.

Director Roy Phelps is conducting the entire institute in Spanish with the goal of increasing students' proficiency in the language beyond normal classroom levels. Students are expected to use their knowledge in careers of teaching, diplomacy, Peace Corps work or Latin American political science.

East Carolina is providing dormitories and cafeterias for the students. Rose High School of Greenville is providing classroom space.

EC Adds Grad Work To Extension School

ECU is continuously expanding course offerings to various areas of the state. At Henderson a graduate course in education is to be offered this summer. "Applied Phonics in Reading and Spelling," Education 316Ga, will be taught at the Henderson Institute each Monday through Friday evening beginning July 22 and continuing through August 2. Mrs. Betty Long will be instructor.

Education 316Ga gives a systematic presentation of basic ideas and valid techniques in the area of word perception in reading and spelling.

At Sanford ECU is also offering a graduate course in education.

Education 415, "Techniques of Teaching," will be taught at Central Carolina Technical Institute each Monday through Friday evening beginning July 22 and continuing through August 2. Dr. Harold Hulon will be the instructor.

Finally the Division of Continuing Education of East Carolina University will offer "Home-School-Community Relations" (Education 334G) and "Music Appreciation" (Music 120) in Manteo beginning Monday, July 22.

The classes will meet from 9 a.m. to 12 noon Monday through Friday for two weeks.

Education 334G is a three quarter hour senior-graduate course. It is a study of the influence of social institutions and forces on the opinions of the public about the philosophy, the operations, and the practices of the American public school.

Music 120 is a three quarter hour undergraduate course. The course serves to initiate and develop a sincere and lively interest in music as an art of expression.

Dr. William Sanderson, assistant professor of education, will teach Education 334G.

Lanier Finishes Doctoral Work

Cene D. Lanier, chairman of the department of Library Science at East Carolina University, this week, completed requirements for the Doctor of Philosophy degree at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Lanier, who has been chairman of the ECU department since 1966, did his doctoral work in the areas of library science, higher education, secondary education and elementary education.

His dissertation, "The Transformation of School Libraries Into Instructional Materials Centers," traces and analyzes the transition school libraries have undergone into media centers across the United States. It involved a survey of the literature, contact with the 50 state departments of education and visits to centers already in operation.

Lanier is also active in library professional circles and is currently serving on an ad hoc committee with the State Department of Public Instruction to study library education in North Carolina. His work with the North Carolina Library Association includes chairmanship of the education for librarianship committee and director of the State Association of School Librarians.

EC Summer Music Camp Hosts 300 High School Students

The 15th annual Summer Music Camp of East Carolina University began Sunday, July 14, with registration at 2 p.m. in Wright Auditorium.

Sponsored by the ECU School of Music, the music camp has a staff of ECU administrators, music faculty, students, plus leading high school band directors and fine art teachers.

The 300 junior and senior high students, who come from all states on the Atlantic Seaboard, Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee, go through a program geared to provide an aesthetic musical background.

For 12 days the enrollees have major activities in band and piano; minor activities in choir, art and stage band. In addition they are to receive instruction in arranging, conducting, theory and music styles.

Also, the camp is offering private lessons taught by faculty specialists in a wide range of musical instruments.

An important feature will be two concerts by the four main student bands scheduled July 21 and July 28 in Wright Auditorium.

Students will live in campus dormitories and have their meals in campus cafeterias.

Camp directors are Dean Earl E. Beach of the music school and Professor Herbert L. Carter, director of bands.

VIVA ESPANA!—This display has been made by the Department of Spanish to publicize the Latin American Studies presently going on in Greenville, sponsored by East Carolina University.

Waiver Of Rights?

A letter in today's ECU Forum cites an instance in which a house mother allegedly removed a poster from the wall of a dormitory room, explaining that the action was taken because the poster was obscene.

A case of this nature brings to mind a host of questions about the relationship of the "dorm counselor" to the student.

According to the information presented in this specific instance the occupant of the room who owned the poster was not present at the time of the removal. This fact, in itself, reveals a weakness in the situation facing dorm residents on this campus.

In the field of extra-campus law, the matter of searches made by law officers is taken up in as high a document as the Constitution of the United States, which, in the Fourth Amendment, allows no searches "... but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched ...".

Modern jurisprudence also requires that the person whose residence or establishment is being searched be present at the time of the search.

This Editor fully realizes that special powers are in fact delegated to the government of state-supported institutions, and that in many cases the acceptance of the rules of that establishment waives the student's legal rights in related areas.

However, law should be a body of standards upholding certain principles, among which individual rights (especially the right to private property) should be highly esteemed. The laws of this nation, and of this state uphold those rights. In this case those rights have obviously been ignored.

Instantly those supporting this kind of action choose to point out that the admission to East Carolina University is in effect a waiver of those rights.

However, East Carolina University has its own set of laws, governing the actions of those who reside in its campus housing. These are, according to campus officials, found in the college rulebook, The Key.

Specific rules for women students are found on page 71 of this year's edition. Rule 12 reads as follows: "The right is reserved to the proper authorities to enter any room at any time for the purpose of inspecting, cleaning, or repairing."

It is generally accepted that a house mother or dorm counselor can be construed as the proper authority to fulfill the above functions. While this Editor finds it hard to accept the "at any time" clause in this rule, he will stipulate for the sake of argument that in this case the counselor was within her prerogatives.

From here on in, however, the action taken in this instance becomes exceedingly hard to justify. Surely removing material, especially without first making a request that such matter be removed by the owner, is not within the bounds of "inspecting, cleaning, or repairing."

The allegation that the material posted on this wall was obscene is actually irrelevant in this case. However, the fact that it is a poster sold in one of Greenville's more reputable stores causes some doubt as to the validity of the charge. But even assuming that the material was obscene, certain procedures should be followed by all authorities, including dorm counselors. Arbitrary seizure of private property without any semblance of due process regardless of justification is not the correct procedure.

Such instances as this assert the need for revision of the rules governing dormitory students. It is about time that all persons, be they administration, staff, faculty, or student realize that the personal rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the state of North Carolina be accorded to college students.

It's a matter of principle.

From The Executive Desk

By Cherry Stokes, SGA President

I would like to welcome the student body to the second session of Summer School. Some of you are here for the first time, but many have been here before. I would like to re-emphasize that your Student Government Association is here to help you in any way possible, and if you have any questions or specific problems, please do not hesitate to call on us.

At this time, I would like to give you a resume of what has been done or started during first session. Numerous constitutional amendments have been made in an effort to modernize and update the Summer School Constitution with the rights and privileges of the students in mind.

The University Union Soda Shop will be remodeled according to previously published plans by this fall. Mr. Duncan, Vice-President in charge of Buildings and Grounds, and Ace Atkins are working on the monument and preservation of the Old Austin Bell Tower. The monument with the Tower will be erected in the Arboretum between Memorial Gymnasium, and Umstead Hall, and Tenth Street. The University has allotted approximately $40,000.00 for the monument and landscaping of the site.

The legislature in conjunction with Dean Alexander has initiated a new I.D. activity card system. Students will pay $.50 as usual, and the card will have ten spots for movies, concerts, theater tickets, and any other activities sponsored by the S.G.A. This system will go into effect next summer.

There are many other plans for this summer and as soon as work is completed on these plans you, the student, will read about them. There will be some vacancies in women's judicial council, and there will be a notice in next week's paper concerning these vacancies.

Start studying now!! The grades you make this session are yours, so hit the books!

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

I feel that fundamental rights of mine as a student and a citizen have been arbitrarily violated by the house counselor of Green Dorm.

The 1968-69 Key states, "Decals, pictures, and posters must not be pasted or tacked on dormitory doors." On the closet door of my room in Green Dorm was taped a relatively expensive art poster titled "Yab-Yum."

Whether or not taping a poster to a dormitory door in a manner that causes no harm to the woodwork is a violation of the previously quoted rule remains to be seen. That is a matter of interpretation and this power is granted to the Women's House Council.

While I was out of my room on July 15, a dorm counselor walked in, tore the poster off the wall and crumpled it into the wastebasket.

This destruction of my private property infuriated me.

When I went to the counselor to ask her about this, she called the poster "obscene." She further stated that unless the administration ruled that the poster was not obscene, she would not reimburse me for my loss.

The poster is a piece of art work on sale in a local store, and it is not in my opinion obscene in any respect. This counselor arbitrarily decided that it was obscene and destroyed it. If I violated a rule in taping the poster to the door, I would have been glad to take it down and go before the House Council for the offense. I can find no statement in the Key that gives the Dorm Counselor any right to destroy personal property.

This strikes me as a clear violation of what is considered a fundamental right — the right to be protected from destruction or damage to my personal property.

I would like to bring this affair to the attention of the students, faculty, and administration of ECU, and let them decide for themselves whether or not a student must surrender all of his rights as a citizen to the University administration.

Dear Crew:

I am learning quite a bit of practical journalism out here. I intend to put it into good use.

I'll be working on a college paper in September and I'm thinking of starting another "Watering Hole." I've revamped the idea a little bit and now when I come back to Greenville, I'll have a fairly well-polished column.

College out here is slightly different than back East. My first day of classes started off with a shock. This girl came to class in a brief bikini. Zowie, I spent more time watching her than the professor??

Then this girl sat down next to me in one of those see-through blouses. She did not have a bra on, and I about melted into a puddle.

The professors give their tests on I.B.M. sheets. No essay questions; all true and false and all buildings are air-conditioned.

Also, they have something called a college hour. This is a free period at noon. Every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday when no classes are held. They have bands in concert on the Quad (like the mall). Pat Paulsen spoke there about two weeks ago. He is great.

ECU Recognition Recognizes Area

Ed. Note — Reprinted from "The Herald," Ahsokie, N.C.

When the announcement was made that beginning 1970 East Carolina University and North Carolina State University would begin a football series, the announcement represented far more than the playing of football games between two institutions.

The announcement represents a public recognition of one fine institution to another. For a long time East Carolina University in the eyes of so many people has been considered a "little" institution. The very fact that N. C. State and ECU are to play football contests at least serves to say to the people of North Carolina that the fine institution at Raleigh recognizes another fine institution in Greenville, and that by playing athletic contests a great and wholesome rivalry can be started.

In the 1965 session of the legislature when East Carolina University was seeking a two-year medical school, one legislator stood up to speak and he called East Carolina a "one-horse" school. The legislator was from Forsyth County, and when reminded that at the moment he was speaking East Carolina University had a greater enrollment of students than the two colleges in Winston-Salem, namely Wake Forest and Salem College, the legislator seemed greatly surprised.

To football fans a top notch game accompanied with a first rate rivalry can serve not only the two educational institutions well, but the people of the state also. If N. C. State is willing and happy to schedule ECU, then the time is sure to come in the future when UNC at Chapel Hill, Duke, and Wake Forest will be happy to do the same. After all, N. C. State surely could have scheduled many teams with a more powerful football reputation than ECU has right now. But looking to the future, the time is sure to come when ECU's team won't have to take a back seat to any football team.

So in reality the football games represent far more than merely athletic contests between two schools. They are recognition and if football can serve in that capacity, then it becomes ever more valuable not only as a sport to entertain fans but as a wedge to cement better relations. These upcoming games are more than football contests.

With ECU now a member of the Southern Conference, we can look forward to an ever better athletic program and even greater recognition year by year.

The truth is that recognition for East Carolina is recognition for our own area and our own students here in our part of North Carolina.

Judiciary Gives Enforcement Through Co-op

Men and Women's Judiciary bodies have been in operation for a full week and are working effectively in handling the disciplinary problems of the student body.

The members of the Women's Judiciary are: Jackie Daniel, chairman, Ellen Greer, Jackie Orlando, Georgette Kahdy, Barbara Bright, Jane Berger, Margie Bufford and alternate Cecelia Gully.

The Men's Judiciary is composed of Jimmy Greene, chairman, Bill Mosier, Wes Sumner, Bill Dluguid, O. D. Regan, Paul Brietman, Dean Hamond and alternate Patrick Williams.

These two bodies try all cases of violations of University regulations which do not involve a breach of the Honor Code. Judiciaries work in co-operation with the SGA and the administration to enforce school laws.

Members are selected after having been presented in list form to the SGA Executive Council. The Council then interviews the candidates, and the Legislature votes on the list. Students having any questions about procedures, are asked to contact any of the aforementioned, Dean Mallory, or Dean Fulgum.

'WARM' MUSIC—Summer brings with it warm weather in the Greenville area, as evidenced by the casual attire of this young musician in the Fifteenth Annual East Carolina Summer Music Camp, which is going on this week. More than 300 junior and senior high school students have enrolled and are going to classes that are aimed at improving their musical proficiency.

Diversified Duties

Chief Even Rescues Mules

What does a campus police chief do besides write parking tickets? For one thing, he removes mules from dormitories.

It was homecoming weekend, 1955, when Campus Police Chief Johnny L. Harrell was confronted with the most unusual case of his career.

While making his regular dormitory rounds, Chief Harrell discovered a 230 pound mule blocking the first floor hallway of Slay Hall (then a men's dormitory). Harrell recognized the mule as one of a pair of mules that had been brought to campus to participate in the homecoming parade. A local fraternity had brought the mules and a mule-drawn hearse from Goldsboro to add color to the festivities.

After the parade, the fraternity tied the mules to a tree behind the maintenance building and left them there while they went to the homecoming football game.

Chief Harrell backed the mule down the hallway out the front of the building and retied it behind the maintenance building. There he found that the other mule was missing.

He returned to the dorm and searched the first floor. No mule. Then he climbed the stairs to the second floor where he found the missing mule.

It took him approximately an hour to back the mule down two flights of stairs and out of the dorm.

Background

Chief Johnny L. Harrell has served East Carolina for fifteen years. He began his duties in June, 1953, as "the only officer on campus at that time."

Today, Chief Harrell heads the police force responsible for this campus of over 10,000 students. Today, there are more cars, more students, and more traffic."

Harrell has spent 21 years in police work, including 5 years as a police officer in Tarboro. He has attended the law enforcement academy here, as well as seminars on fingerprinting, search and seizure, and motor vehicle violations.

ECU's campus police force is composed of 10 men (9 officers and a chief); 8 of them have backgrounds in police work.

They work 3 8-hour shifts, 7 days a week.

Duties

For the most part a campus policeman's job is routine. He must protect the lives and property of students, faculty, and administrative officials on campus. He is responsible for locking buildings and turning out lights all over campus. Also, campus policemen must enforce the university's many traffic rules.

How far does the campus policeman's authority reach?

Students come under the jurisdiction of the campus police (or any administrative official) when (and where) their activities reflect on the student body."

How much authority do they have?

They are sworn in by the city of Greenville and are empowered to make arrests any time the law is violated.

What is their connection with other law enforcement officials?

"We are connected by radio with all Pitt County law enforcement agencies, and the State Bureau of Investigation are at our disposal any time we need them. Chief Harrell added that the SBI can come on campus at any time, but the FBI must have the permission of the administration to investigate here.

Problems On Campus

When asked if a drug problem existed on this campus, Chief Harrell replied: "No, narcotics and marijuana are scarce on this campus."

He added that most of the campus' problems could be handled through the campus judicial system. Drinking, stealing, and motor vehicle violations are all handled by the honor councils; however, violators of state and federal laws "must be taken downtown to the city police."

EC Summer Theatre Presents 'The King And I'

"Season 5" of the East Carolina University Summer Theatre moved into its third week Monday night, with the opening of one of Rodgers and Hammerstein's most popular musicals, "The King and I."

Certain time for the second musical production of the season is 8:15 p.m. Box office reports indicate that good seats are still available for remaining performances.

"The King and I" will play nightly through Saturday, July 23.

Starring are Iago De Corrado of New York City in his first appearance in the ECU Summer Theatre as the King, and Lillian Sherdal as Anna.

Miss Sherdal last week starred in "Season 5's" first musical production, "The Boys From Syracuse," bringing her singing talent to Greenville for the first time.

Top supporting roles are played by Anne Weaver Schooley as Tuptim, John Ryan as Lun Tha, and Carolyn Munson as Lady Thiang.

An added attraction to Summer Theatre audiences is the scheduled appearance of a group of local children who will portray princes and princesses, children of the King.

"The King and I" is under the direction of Summer Theatre Producer Edgar R. Loessin. Mavis Ray is choreographer, Roger Stephens is musical director and John Sneden is set designer. Costumes are by Brooks-Van Horn and lighting by H. Michael Bvrum.

Attending Monday's opening performance was Jim McAllister of the Greensboro Daily News, official critic for "The King and I." Mr. McAllister, who has a reputation as one of the most candid drama critic in the state, will review the musical for newspapers throughout the state. In addition, a capsule summary of his impressions will be video taped and broadcast on WNCT-TV, Channel 9, Greenville.

Following "The King and I" in "Season 5" will be "Guys and Dolls" (July 26-Aug. 3), "The Desert Song" (Aug. 5-10), and "The Odd Couple" (Aug. 12-17).

Quinn Signs Eight To Cage Grants

Coach Tom Quinn has signed eight basketball players to grants-in-aid, it was announced.

Three of the players are junior college transfers and three others are 1968 high school graduates. The other is a veteran returning from service who was a starter at East Carolina before going into the Navy.

The tallest of the lot is Rich Collins, a 6-9 center from the College of Eastern Utah in Price, Utah. Collins averaged 12 points and 14 rebounds a game. He played high school basketball in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Aubrey Williams, a 6-4 forward from Detroit, played junior college ball at Sue Bennett Junior College in Kentucky. Two years ago, he was a teammate of Earl Thompson, who led the Pirates in scoring last year. Williams averaged 17 points and 16 rebounds per game last year at Sue Bennett.

Jim Kiernan, considered to be a good floor leader, played for the last two years at Sullivan Community College in South Fallsburg, New York. He is from New York City and averaged 12 points a game last year.

Returning from the Navy is Richie Williams, a 6-2 guard from Muncie, Indiana. He was a starter for the 1963 Pirate team and was considered to be a top defensive player.

Three guards and a forward make up the freshmen signees. They are Jim Fairly, a 6-6 All-East product of Scotland High School in Laurinburg, N. C. Fairly, who will be playing in the East-West All-Star game, averaged over 20 points a game his senior year; 6-2 Julius Prince played at Central High School in Washington, D. C., where he averaged 16 points a game. He is from Seat Pleasant, Maryland. Bill Combs, a play-making specialist who comes from the basketball hot-bed of Eastern Kentucky, averaged 23 points a game his senior year at Hindman, Kentucky. This is the same area that produced Pirate captain Jimmy Cox. The fourth signee's Greg Crouse, who had signed earlier, Crouse, a 6-2 guard, averaged 14 points a game for Sterling High School in Camden, New Jersey.

"All of them carry outstanding credentials," Quinn said, "and they are expected to play key roles in the elevation of our program to the high level of competition we are undertaking in our regular schedule and in the Eastern Carolina Classic.

"Considering the fact that this is only the second year we have had here in our recruiting program, I am quite pleased with the progress we are making."

"Our working nucleus is quite young and inexperienced, but I feel confident we are on our way to better things."

The 1968-69 season will be Quinn's third at East Carolina, but he assumed his duties after the recruiting campaign for 1965-66 had been completed.

"We have had to patch up the varsity with junior college talent while attempting to build a team from the freshman program up," Quinn said. "But it is beginning to take form now."

An indication of the junior college talent that has come to East Carolina with Quinn were the two outstanding players on last year's team. Capt. Vince Colbert, a Washington, D. C. native, and Earl Thompson, the leading scorer on the team, both were junior college transfers. Thompson will be back this season, but Colbert has used his four years of eligibility and has signed a professional baseball contract.

Grid Tickets Out Amidst High Hopes For Top Team

Season football tickets for East Carolina University went on sale to the general public Monday, Athletic Director Clarence Stasavich announced.

The Pirates, who had an 8-2 season last year, have been picked to win the Southern Conference championship this year, despite the loss of eight offensive and five defensive starters from last year.

Returning to the offense, however, is All-America candidate Butch Colson, who as a sophomore set a Southern Conference rushing record and was named player of the year by the league's sportswriters.

The Pirates open the season September 14 with Parsons College, a team they beat 27-26 last year in Fairfield, Iowa, and follow with home games against William and Mary, Richmond, Tampa, and Marshall University.

The price of a season ticket for all five home games is $17.50. Mail orders should be sent to Athletic Department, Mingos Coliseum, East Carolina University.

Clinic Set For Student Trainers

A clinic for student trainers will be held at East Carolina University August 3 from 1 until 3 p.m.

Terry Wills, trainer for East Carolina's Athletic Department, said the clinic is being co-sponsored by the Bike Training Room Foundation at the University's Athletic Department.

"Any high school coach and student trainer is welcomed," Wills said. "If enough interest is shown, we hope to make it an annual thing and possibly expand our instruction. The theme of the first clinic will be the prevention and care of athletic injuries with Wills and Dr. Lionel Kendrick, a professor in the Physical Education Department conducting lectures.

Also appearing on the program will be Dr. Leo Jenkins, president of East Carolina and Clarence Stasavich, athletic director.

Three Sign Grid Grants-In-Aid

Recent signees in football hit 15 as three more boys signed grants-in-aid with East Carolina University.

Joseph Pascarella, a 6-1, 190 pound defensive end from Brooklyn, New York, is considered to be one of the top defensive prospects signed.

Pascarella played at Lafayette High before prepping at Frederick Military Academy in Portsmouth, Virginia, under Coach John Matlock.

Coach Henry Vansant, who signed all three boys, said of Pascarella, "Joe is a fine defensive player and should enjoy four successful years in the East Carolina program."

Michael McCarthy Lewis, from Richmond, Virginia, also prepped at a military academy last year. He is a 5-11, 175 pound offensive and defensive halfback.

Lewis won six athletic letters while in high school before going to Staunton Military Academy in 1967. He was named to the All-Metro and All-Capitol District teams while in high school.

Robert Leroy Hileman, a 6-3, 190 pound offensive and defensive end from Alexandria, Virginia, graduated from Groveton High School and then prepped at Staunton Military Academy with Mike Lewis.

Hileman won many honors, including being named to the 1967 All-Military League team as an end in football, All-Alexandria District, and All-Fairfax County in basketball as a high school athlete, and the "Outstanding Athlete" at Staunton Military for 1967-68.

"Bob is a fine pass receiver and defensive end and will be used at these positions in the East Carolina program," Coach Vansant said.
