JOURNALISM LIBRARY PLANNERS—East Carolina University president Leo Jenkins confers with Henry Belk and Johnathan Daniels, two noted North Carolina newspaper editors who are involved in the beginning of a journalism library for ECU. The collection will be named for Belk and the initial contribution of books was made by Daniels.

Journalism Library Begun By Daniels Collection Gift

East Carolina University announced Friday the establishment of the Henry Belk Journalism Library with the personal collection of Jonathan Daniels as the beginning nucleus.

The new library, according to President Leo W. Jenkins, becomes an important cornerstone of the journalism program East Carolina is seeking to develop.

Henry Belk, senior member of the ECU Board of Trustees, is editor of the Goldsboro News-Argus. He is one of the leading newspaper figures of North Carolina and a consistent champion of progress for Eastern North Carolina and the entire state.

The first contributor to the library, Daniels, is editor of the Raleigh News and Observer and is among America's foremost author-journalists.

The Daniels collection includes many valuable books on American journalism, including some now out of print. Some of the volumes bear the autograph of Daniels' father, the late Josephus Daniels who edited and published the News & Observer for over a half-century, in addition to rendering service to the nation in the Wilson and Roosevelt administrations.

President Jenkins said in announcing the establishment of the library: "We are confident that this is the beginning of one of America's finest journalism collections. It is fitting that the first contribution comes from a fine journalist and that the library bears the name of a beloved and distinguished editor."

Dr. Jenkins added that another leading journalist of the state and nation, News and Observer executive editor Sam Ragan, will serve as chairman of the Belk Library committee and that under Ragan's leadership further contributions and development of the journalism collection will be sought.

When asked about the development of the undergraduate journalism program, Dr. Jenkins said ECU already has professional journalists on the staff and is working toward development of a journalism major within the Department of English. Eventually a separate department will be established.

Alexander Leads Area ROTC Units

East Carolina's Steven Loftin Alexander of Greenville will serve as commander of Area B-2 of the Arnold Air Society, Air Force ROTC, for the next two years.

In addition East Carolina's General Chennault Squadron, AFROTC, will be area headquarters for the Air Society.

Alexander, an honor student, holds the rank of Colonel in the Arnold Air Society. He will be assisted by five other officers from ECU.

Cadet John Davis of Calypso, Lt. Colonel, will be executive officer; Cadet Major John Wilkinson of Durham will be administrative officer; Cadet Major Avery Hightower of Wadesboro will be operations officer; Cadet Major William K. Gainey of Virginia Beach, Va., will be accounting finance officer; and Cadet Major Don Counts of Fayetteville will be information officer.

Alexander selected the officers following his appointment at the national Arnold Air Society convocation in New York recently.

Schools in Area B-2 include Duke University, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N. C. State University, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and A&T University.

The officers from ECU will serve at all area meetings during the next two years.

HOW TO KEEP COOL—Janet Fulbright, a 21 year old blonde junior from Newton, is the EAST CAROLINIAN's Coed of the Week. Janet, a primary education major, is, in addition to looking pretty for photographers, a member of Angel Flight. Any girl wishing to participate in this regular feature is asked to contact Butch Roberts at the newspaper office.

Contest To Kick Off Summer School Dance

Beauty contests traditionally have less than twelve judges. East Carolina University, however, has 3,500, all set to pick one pretty and personable young lady.

Summer is normally a time for pretty girls on the East Carolina campus, and students get their chance to pick the prettiest next week, as the annual Summer School Queen is picked.

The 1968 Queen, whoever she may be, will preside over the Summer School Queen dance in Wright Auditorium next Thursday night, August 1. The dance will feature the coronation of the queen, hopefully by Miss North Carolina, who is East Carolina's Elisa Annette Johnson, and the music of the Inmates from Raleigh.

Each dorm, fraternity, sorority, and the ROTC will submit entries to the contest, after which the queen will be selected by the student body.

Voting will be by the "penny vote" system, with pictures of the candidates and canisters for the "ballots" set up in the University Union lobby. The display will remain from July 29 until August 1.

Applications for the candidates must be completed and turned in to the SGA receptionist's office by Friday, July 26, and must include the name of the sponsor and a picture of the candidate.

Secretary of Internal Affairs Jack Hart, who is in charge of the event, encouraged widespread participation in all phases of the contest, saying, "I would like to ask everyone to vote. There will be very attractive girls running for the honor, so support your choice and the SGA by casting your ballot."

Polaroid Picked For Colorful Summer ID Card

The Polaroid ID Camera system purchased by the SGA near the end of spring quarter will find its duties increased next summer, as the SGA legislature has decided to use it for the 1969 summer school ID cards.

The system, which takes the ID photo in color and gives a color coded card, was purchased at a cost of $7000, and color cards will become mandatory for all students by the upcoming fall session.

The summer edition of the color ID card will differ from its regular term counterpart in one aspect, however. Since it has to serve as both ID card and activity card, the customary punch numbers will be provided at the bottom.

Like its regular year counterpart, the summer card will have a cost of fifty cents to cover labor and materials. It will be used to gain admittance to both concerts and movies, and will be used for voting in campus elections.

Helping Hand Asked By Rehabilitation Group

East Carolina University students who wish to perform a service to humanity and to themselves have been presented with an excellent opportunity to do so.

Such an opportunity is provided by the Correctional Rehabilitation Center of the Green County Prison unit at Maury.

These special facilities have been set up for the rehabilitation of youthful first offenders between the ages of 16 and 21. The staff workers are pursuing a program designed to prepare their 42 charges to secure meaningful employment after release through vocational training and individual and group guidance.

The staff has expressed a need for the assistance of the East Carolina University community in preparing these young men to take their proper place in society.

Staff members Jerry Hicks and Dwayne Bearbower, in an interview with SGA president Cherry Stokes and the EAST CAROLINIAN, asked for help from both campus organizations and interested individuals in furthering this project.

According to Hicks and Bearbower, the center would like to have campus groups, such as agree to assist in providing lectures, entertainments, and other programs for the boys.

ECU sophomore Whitney Hadden, an accomplished magician, will kick off the East Carolina effort Friday, when he puts on his show for the benefit of the center.

Hicks indicated that there was a great deal of interest in chemistry among the boys of the center, and that they would thus like to enlist the aid to either some group of students or a professor who would give a demonstration in this field. Other activities of this nature would provide excellent training, while having a high interest level for the boys.

He stressed that all kinds of help are needed, both in the actual performance of such projects and in the arrangement of such activities.

Persons who wish to aid in this activity are asked to contact either the center itself at Maury, or to get in touch with the EAST CAROLINIAN Office.

Such A Man

More than twelve years of service, friendship, and unfailing advice from one man is quite a contribution, one that few men make in their lifetime.

Such a man was Lee H. Blackwell, Sr.

He was a friend to East Carolina University for more than twelve years, as he performed his function of representing the manufacturer of the official class ring and the yearbook publishing company.

But Mr. Blackwell was more than a sales representative, as time and time again he went the extra mile to insure that East Carolina University got the best products and service possible.

He gave more than assistance; he gave himself. There were many times that problems arose, especially in the production of the yearbook, when Mr. Blackwell worked around the clock to assure a masterpiece in the finished product. He gave his unfailing energy, his will to succeed, his bubbling personality, and his intense loyalty to all who came in contact with him.

His untimely death in a boating accident Sunday has brought sadness to the East Carolina University community striking students, faculty, and administrators alike.

But even his death, as cruel and unnecessary as it may seem, can serve as an inspiration to all who met him, just as he inspired in the time of his life. His parting, while pointing out the shortness of life, can serve to indicate the fullness that a man can impart to his life, through service and friendship.

His work and his loyalty have brought a tradition to East Carolina University. As long as there is an official class ring, or a school yearbook, he will remain a part of this university. He was a man who put himself into his work, and now that work will keep his memory alive.

Lee H. Blackwell, Sr. was such a man.

A Chance To Give

It is, perhaps optimistically speaking, inherent to the nature of mankind that he is willing to extend a helping hand.

East Carolina students are, as a rule, more than willing to participate in activities that are designed to aid their fellow man.

An opportunity to be of service of 42 young men who, through a lack of better training, have made one mistake and are presently undergoing the penalty for their actions. Included in their penalty, however, is a chance to better themselves, as the Correctional Rehabilitation Center in Maury conducts programs designed to put these young men on the road to a meaningful role in society.

The staff at the center has asked for help from the East Carolina University community. They have stressed that they need lectures, demonstrations, and entertainments to present to these young men, in order to point out to them what life in society should involve.

The youngsters are receiving vocational training while at the center, to assure them of jobs, which should greatly aid in preventing any further activity in anti-social behavior. They now need persons to come to explain and demonstrate graphically many of the aspects of life around them.

The staff reports that science is one of the major interests of these young men, and that demonstrations in chemistry, biology, and physics would be of special interest to them. Drama, athletic performances, and music are of interest.

There are many groups on this campus who have a great deal to offer to these young men. The many clubs of East Carolina could make projects of giving demonstrations and lectures to these young men. Many of the arts groups and the athletics groups could provide entertainment that will never be forgotten by such an audience.

This is an excellent opportunity for East Carolina students to make the word "serve" a functional part of their vocabulary.

The advantages of such assistance are many; practice in later teaching, practice for future performances; experience for future work in psychology and education. But perhaps the greatest result of such an endeavor will be the feeling of knowing you have helped.

By Cherry Stokes, SGA President

On Monday the Legislature met and acted on several needed items. Beth Whetchel and Nonie Austin were elected to serve on Women's Judiciary, while Pat Thompson was elected to an alternate position. There was an appropriation of $42.00 for additional expenses for the Summer School Queen Dance.

The Legislature also passed an amendment to the constitution which deals with the amendment procedure.

This amendment was proposed to clarify a section dealing with approval of an amendment. It states that "any amendment which does not affect the student body as a whole shall be passed by a two-thirds vote of the legislature." To have a check and balance system upon this, a further sentence was added stating "A simple majority of the legislature shall determine whether or not a constitutional amendment would affect the student body as a whole."

Working with me this summer, other than the executive council, are Jack Hart, Reid Overcash, Lee Blackwell, and Whitney Hadden. Jack Hart is serving as Secretary of Internal Affairs, and is in charge of the Summer School Queen Dance and the Student Polls Committee.

Jack also works closely with Reid Overcash, the Secretary of Internal Improvement. Reid's jobs include preservation of Old Austin's Bell Tower, and remodeling of the Soda Shop.

Lee Blackwell is Corresponding Secretary for the President as well as my personal advisor. Lee coordinates the activities of the Secretaries, and gives me reports on what they are doing.

Whitney Hadden, chairman of a group here on campus, is presently doing a job on researching a student bill of rights which will be presented this fall to the Legislature.

These four men are working hard, and they give much of their free time to your Student Government.

There are still many things to come this summer during Summer School. Student Polls will begin the first full week of August, and you, the student, will have the opportunity to express yourself through these polls. The Summer School Queen Dance and Crowning will be held from 8 until 12 if late hours can be obtained. Miss North Carolina will attend to crown the new Summer School Queen.

Ring sales are still continuing. Anyone who wishes to order a ring may see Chipper Linville between the hours of 12 and 1 every day in the S.G.A. Offices. We hope that you enjoyed the Concert Wednesday night, and if you have any comments please let us know so that top quality entertainment can continue to be presented here at East Carolina.

A Sense Of Style

By DON PIERCE

The Man is dressed in a Navy Blue double-breasted blazer. He has light grey pants on, and buckle shoes. He is wearing a floral print tie, and a dark blue shirt. He is stylish, as he always is, but at this moment he is intense. He is listening to his latest group, Bobby Taylor and the Vancoovers, record.

The group finishes the song. The Man nods. No, do it over. The group finishes the song a second time, they have changed the harmony slightly. The Man smiles. They are coming along fine.

The Man is Berry Gordy Jr., president of MOTOWN records, Motown Records-Martha and the Vandellas, Diana Ross and the Supremes, David Ruffin and the Temptations, Jr. Walker and the All-Stars, Stevie Wonder, Marvin Gaye, Tammy Terrell, Gladys Knight and the Pips. The biggest line-up of stars in the business, all under the direction, coaching, influence and touch of Berry Gordy Jr.

There is an unmistakable style to a Motown Record. It is almost indefinable, but it is there. It is that thump-de-thump-thump in the drum beat or the rasping voice of David Ruffin singing "I Wish It Would Rain" or the blantant loudness of Jr. Walker and the All Stars in "Shotgun." The style is the careful choreography of the Temptations, always moving, easily, lightly, as they sing "My Girl," every movement precisely timed, every pause held just a second longer for added emphasis to that MOTOWN style.

Berry Gordy Jr. decides what the Motown style will be. Aided by William "Smokey" Robinson, Berry Gordy Jr. will decide the color of the Supremes dresses for a night club act, the type of limosine for the Temptations, the amount of drum beat in a Stevie Wonder song. Berry Gordy will decide all these things and more, because the Motown style is his creation, his own personal "soul," and, as with all style, it cannot be created or changed by anyone else.

Motown Records released 352 singles and albums in 1967, each one passed on, personally, by Berry Gordy Jr. Of these records, 224 were hits, a percentage of 63.6. By comparison, Capitol records thought it had a good year when it hit a 17 percent total. The Motown style is not only unmistakable, it is profitable.

The Motown style is Berry Gordy Soul Groups who never made it with other companies make it big with Motown and the Gordy style. Gladys Knight and Pips were in the record business for years without a hit. When they switched to Motown, their first release "I Heard It Through the Grapevine" was the number 1 record in the country. The Gordy style transformed Gladys Knight and the Pips from just another group to a hit group.

Berry Gordy listens as Bobby Taylor and The Vancoovers sing. They are cutting their seventh record for Motown. None of the first six have been released—neither will the seventh, Bobby Taylor and the Vancoovers will record until The MAN decides that one of their songs has the Motown style. Then, the song will be released, and the chances are 63.6 that it will be a hit.

The Motown style, molded and shaped by Berry Gordy Jr., will continue to prosper. It proves that style, which is the possession of one may be the joy of many. Style—Berry Gordy, Jr. President, Motown Records, Inc.

Vogue Magazine Job Awaits 28th Career Contest Winner

A job on Vogue magazine in New York is waiting for the winner of Vogue's 28th Prix de Paris, a career competition open to college seniors, class of '69. The new Prix de Paris starts in the August 1 issue of the magazine which also introduces winners of the 27th Prix. Inaugurated in 1935, Vogue's Prix de Paris is an annual essay competition conducted on the nation's college campuses. The talent search was designed to discover young women with Vogue potential — young women with a flair for fashion, writing, decorating, promotion and merchandising.

First-place winner in the Prix de Paris competition receives a year's employment with Vogue as a junior editor, and during that year will go to Paris with Vogue editors covering one of the couture collections. Second-place winner comes to Vogue for a six-months' junior editorship, and each of ten honorable-mention winners receives a $50 U.S. Savings Bond and top consideration for jobs on Vogue and other Conde Nast magazines. The three most recent Prix competitions have netted nine new members for the editorial staffs of Vogue and its sister publications.

Prime requisite for entrants in the Prix de Paris is that they graduate during the 1968-1969 academic year and receive a bachelor of arts degree, or its equivalent, from a college or university within the United States.

Full details on entrants' qualifications, on requirements of the competition, on deadlines, are printed in August 1 Vogue, and will be found in every issue of Vogue from now through October 1.

GETTING TO KNOW YOU—Lillian Sherdal, who plays the part of Anna in the Summer Theatre's production of "The King and I", sings the famous song from the musical to the children of the king. The musical finished out its run this week.

Review Finds 'King And I' 'Beautiful, Masterful'

(Editor's note: Mr. Gollobin, a reporter for the Daily Reflector in Greenville, kindly consented to a last-minute change in plans when the scheduled official critic, Jim McAllister of the Greensboro Daily News, was forced to cancel due to illness. Mr. Gollobin, though a relative newcomer to newspapering, comes highly qualified. He has attended Columbia University, the University of Hawaii, and is a graduate of East Carolina University where he was a member of the staff of the EAST CAROLINIAN. He is presently entertainment editor for the Sunday Daily Reflector.)

All the beauty and mystery of the East came to McGinnis Auditorium Monday in the East Carolina University Summer Theatre production of "The King and I." Framed by two giant, serpentine golden dragons, the land of the lotus blossom glistened in the brilliant lighting of the Siamese decor created by John Sneden. The flashing colors of the bright and gilded costumes of Brooks-Van Horn sparkled their authentic Oriental credentials at the near-capacity audience.

The first act's development was slow and heavy. However, the tempo rose with the curtain for the second act, and the show built logically and deftly, like a Beethoven symphony, to a moving and exciting climax.

The acting and the singing were both good. Unfortunately, several of the better actors could not sing, and the best male singer could not act.

Iago De Corrado delivered a forceful performance as the lusty king of Siam. He played the role with gusto. His powerful voice as an actor truly had the majesty befitting a king, and more than made up for his lack of singing ability.

John Ryan clearly had the best male voice on stage, but was the least convincing actor.

Lillian Sherdal as Anna, combined a beautiful voice and diction with a very convincing stage presence. Miss Sherdal sings with the authority of the classic opera star, projecting into every cranny of the auditorium. As an actress, her role is difficult. She successfully maintains the delicate balance between the strong-willed English gentlewoman she is supposed to be, and the dominating, head-strong shrew a lesser actress might portray. Miss Sherdal seems destined for greatness in the footlights.

The ballet scenes contained all the grace and color inherent in Oriental dance. Mavis Ray's choreography was faultless, and so were the dancers. "The Small House of Uncle Thomas," a satirical ballet of Harriet Beecher Stowe's controversial novel was one of the high points of the evening. This story within a story gave the performance the depth, perspective, and polish that the show needed.

The wealth of good songs in this show is really unusual. The John Ryan-Anne Weaver Schooley duet of "We Kiss In A Shadow" was simply beautiful.

Edgar Loessin' masterful direction was evident throughout the entire musical.

The lighting by H. Michael Byron was well done. The backlighting of the sky with the silhouetted spiral towers of Siam lent beauty and realism to a more than fine set.

Music Director Roger Stephens managed his troupe with subtlety. He refused to allow the orchestration to compete with, or to drown out the vocals. Perhaps the music missed out on a chance to provide a more Oriental backdrop to the show, but the special effect sounds, when in evidence, were authoritative, particularly the violin section. "The King and I" is not without its faults and weaknesses. These faults pale, however, in the second act when the audience is caught up like leaves in a windstorm, as the show moves compellingly to its climax.

Though Siam no longer exists as a country, it will continue to exist in the hearts of theatre-goers as long as they remember "The King and I."

— Ronald W. Gollobin

'Refreshing' Suits 'Yours, Mine, Ours' Motion Picture

We have now reached the point where all good movies have some deep underlying social moral tied into a usually dull, senseless story. Not so in "Yours, Mine, and Ours."

Henry Fonda stars as a widowed father of ten children who marries Lucille Ball, a widowed mother of eight.

The problems are numerous with more complications to come as the newly married couple have another child to add to the confusion.

This picture was not what I was expecting. There was no slap-stick comedy, no corny humor; in other words, it was not the typical "I Love Lucy" story. "Yours, Mine, and Ours" turned out to be a very refreshing motion picture in contrast to the pseudo-intellectual skin-flicks of late.

Parking Car To Take Special Fee For Fall

As of Fall Quarter, 1968, all students who desire to operate and/or to park a motor vehicle on the East Carolina University campus will be required to pay a non-refundable registration fee.

Registration fees are: Four-wheeled motor vehicles - Fall - $5.00, Winter - $4.00, Spring - $3.00, Summer School - $2.00; Two-wheeled motor vehicles - Fall - $3.00, Winter - $2.00, Spring - $1.00, Summer School - $1.00.

There shall be no charge for the replacement of a sticker issued in the same academic year if such replacement is needed because the motor vehicle is traded or sold. However, it will be necessary for the sticker originally issued to be returned to the Housing Office.

If a student loses his motor vehicle sticker, he will be required to re-register his motor vehicle and pay the full motor vehicle registration fee.

Students may apply for temporary permits (valid for a maximum of seven days). Such applications must be made at the Housing Office before bringing the vehicle to Greenville. The charge for a temporary permit is $1.00 per week except in cases when a student needs to register a motor vehicle for a short period of time due to medical reasons. At the request of the University physician, a special sticker will be issued and the fee will be $1.00 per month or fraction thereof.

If a student needs the use of another automobile while his registered vehicle is being repaired or is otherwise unavailable, he must secure a temporary registration permit at the Housing Office. Such permits are issued without charge.

In relation to the fee, Dan R. Wooten, Director of Housing said that "the money would be used for the building of new parking lots on campus."

Also in relation to the fee, F. D. Duncan, Vice President, said that legislative committees in charge of appropriate money for the parking facilities recommended to him that the resources closer to home should be taxed first. "About $20,000 is needed for a new parking lot between the creek and Jones dormitory."

Approximately 6,000-6,500 cars were registered in the Housing Office last year. However, with increased enrollment each year, the total number of cars can also be expected to rise.

This will give approximately $30,000 income each year for the "increased parking facilities."

Supporting roles are played by Ken Waller, James Slaughter, Gregory Zittel, John Ryan, Suse French, Madge Bunce, Martin Vidnovic, Arthur Cain and Cullen Johnson. "Guys and Dolls" is one of Frank Loesser's most tuneful and colorful works. The book is by Jo Swerling and Abe Burrows. The musical opened in New York City on Nov. 10, 1943 and enjoyed a long, critically acclaimed run.

The musical is produced and directed by Edgar R. Loessin, Summer Theatre producer. Choreography is by Mavis Ray, sets by Peter Gould, lighting by H. Michael Byrum and costumes by Brooks-Van Horn of Philadelphia. Roger Stephens is musical director.

Following the nine-day run of "Guys and Dolls," the final musical production of the season, "The Desert Song," will open a six-day run Aug. 5. "Season 5" will close with a non-musical comedy, "The Odd Couple," Aug. 12-17. Ticket information is available from the Summer Theatre box office, phone 752-7565, Greenville.

PRO HURLER—East Carolina fans will be a long time forgetting the hardwood and diamond performances of Vince Colbert, who was a stand-out player on both the Pirate basketball and baseball teams for the past two years. The ex-Buc is now pitching professional baseball in the Western Carolina League, where at last report he had a 3-0 record. (Photo by Quade)

ECU Has Six Titles Since Entering Loop

Since East Carolina's entrance into the Southern Conference, the Purple and Gold have racked up six conference championships, with the swimming team leading the way with three first place finishes. The Pirates have also come through with six second place finishes and three third place finishes in the eight team conference.

Biggest improvements have come in track as Coach Bill Carson has now completed his third year as track coach. He has coached the cross country, indoor and outdoor track teams to greater heights than these sports have ever enjoyed before. His cross country and outdoor track teams came in second in their respective conference meets, while the indoor track team finished fourth.

Golf, soccer, and wrestling have also taken great strides forward in the conference. Under the leadership of Coach Johnny Welborn, these teams have moved up from the bottom of the conference to record one second place finish and two third place finishes.

The basketball team is the only sport now currently below fifth place in conference standings as Coach Tom Quinn is in a rebuilding program in an effort to make East Carolina a basketball power.

The baseball team, under the leadership of Coach Earl Smith, won conference crowns outright in 1966 and 1968, and tied for the crown in 1967.

In football, the Purple and Gold tied for the conference championship with William and Mary two years ago and came in second last year. They are favored to win it all this coming year.

With several Pirate teams at the top of their respective sports, there are many bright hopes for a better year in athletics. In the 1967-68 season, there were six Pirate teams holding the number one or two positions in the 11 conference sports. That will be a hard record to beat, but to hear the coaches and their athletes talk about their upcoming seasons, it should be an even better year in sports for East Carolina this coming year.

Four More Signed To Frosh Squad

The Athletic Department has announced the signing of several outstanding boys to football grants-in-aid. Four boys comprise the list which raises the total of announced signees to 19 over the past month.

Ronald Peed, a 6-3, 190 pound fullback from Hurdle Mills, North Carolina, is the only Tarheel of the four signees.

Coach Harold Bullard, who recruited him said, "Peed has speed, and he is agile. He is tough and durable and has been outstanding in all sports."

Ted Thurston Salmon, from Richmond, Virginia, is a 6-2, 195 pound offensive and defensive tackle. He won eight athletic letters in high school with four coming in football, and two in both basketball and track.

"Ted is a very outstanding man, a fine student, and an athlete with tremendous ability," said Coach Henry Vansant. "His agility and overall athletic skills make him a fine college prospect."

Salmon was named for honorable mention on the All-Central District team and the All-Metro team in Richmond.

A four sport athlete, Thomas George Gammache is a 6-1, 181 pound end who played for coach Harold Absber in Radford, Virginia. Gammache played football, basketball, golf, and track while in high school.

Coach Vansant considers Tom to be, "an outstanding young man who is a fine student and has a great potential as a football player."

Charles Michael Brown, is a 5-9 and a-half, 185 pounder who played both fullback and linebacker for Kellam High in Virginia Beach, Virginia.

Coach Vansant, who recruited Brown said, "Mike is a fine young man with a superior attitude, and he will probably be used as a fullback or as a linebacker."

Brown also participated in wrestling and track in high school.

Colbert's Pitching Strong In Pro Diamond Debut

Vince Colbert, who performed on the hardwood courts and the baseball diamond for East Carolina, has signed a professional contract with the Cleveland Indians' farm club in Rock Hill, South Carolina, a member of the Western Carolina League. Colbert, who signed for a small bonus, was doing well, and had a 3-0 record at last report.

Recruited by Coach Quinn
Colbert was recruited by basketball coach Tom Quinn after he heard about the Washington, D.C. native from friends in the Washington area. Colbert was attending the College of Eastern Utah, and was one of their top performers. Quinn recruited Colbert after he took over the Buc helm after serving as the coach at High Point College.

As a hardwood star for two seasons, Colbert was the team leader on and off the court and was elected the team captain by his teammates in his senior year.

Went Out For Baseball
He also went out for baseball after coming here, a sport he also played at Eastern High School in Washington, D.C. In his first season, Vince wound up with a 3-2 record which was mostly in relief. In 11 games, Vince started three times, going the route once, while hurling 42 innings for the Bucs and Coach Earl Smith. Colbert struck out 36 batters while walking only 16 in racking up a 2.15 ERA.

In his junior year, Colbert posted a 4-1 record, with most of his work as a starter. Vince appeared in 12 games, eight as a starter, finishing in three of those games. In 66 innings, he struck out 78 while walking only 15 in ending up with a sparkling 1.91 ERA.

Has Good Slider - His Out Pitch
Known as "the whip" because of his blazing fastball, Vince nevertheless considers his "out" pitch to be one of his two sliders. Against a righthanded batter, the slider breaks down and away from the batter, while against a lefty, the slider breaks down and away. Vince also has a good curve, and he uses it and his fastball to help set the batter up for his slider. While Vince does have a good fastball, he only uses it when he thinks the batter least expects it.

Colbert joined his new teammates on June 14, and pitched in his first professional game four days later on the 15th. In that game, Vince went all the way to beat Spartanburg by 3-2. Vince showed his stuff by pitching out of a tough jam in the ninth inning as Spartanburg had runners on second and third with only one out. After a talk with his manager, Vince then proceeded to strike out the next two batters to record the win.

In two later appearances, Vince upped his record to 3-0 with consecutive wins over Greenwood in late June and early July.

Innocent American Boyhood Gone To African Catfish

From Sports Illustrated comes this story:

Hunting Fish?
If there has ever been anything good and clean and American and true that one could always count on, it has been the catfish. Yes sir, that solid citizen of the Mississippi, that reminder of innocent boyhood days with line and hook. They'll never get to the honest old catfish, right? Well, guess what?

The crisis started in Florida a couple of weeks ago when a lady called a game warden to report that a catfish was out in the yard fighting her dog. She was right. Then a night watchman found another one in Boca Raton, more than a half a mile from the nearest water. In the past 30 days or so Biologist Robert Goodrich of Florida's Game and Freshwater Fish Commission has found seven more ambulatory catfish. "The population has just exploded," he said.

Near as anyone can figure out, the pugnacious critters are in the CLARIDAE family, originally African or Asian, probably imported by tropical fish dealers for home aquariums. Evidently some got away, somewhere, sometime, and now they're loose and multiplying. Fishery Biologist Vern Ogilvie says it is possible this fish won't get over 16 or 18 inches long — "but then there are members of the CLARIDAE that get five feet long and weigh 50 or 60 pounds."

The creeping catfish comes with dual breathing equipment and can stay away from water for extended periods of time. It then moves around eating snails, frogs, and presumably, anything else that gets in its way.

Ogilvie knows a monster when he sees one. Because the fish are so mobile, he warns, they cannot be controlled by present methods. Dump fish toxin into the water—and they can crawl away from it. "It's unbelievable," he said. "I've got two at home in an aquarium. But they jump out of it if I give them an opportunity. They will come into the living room. They move like men on their elbows, like you're trained to creep in combat. You get a net after them and they avoid the net."

Ogilvie and Goodrich are rushing a report recommending a ban on importation of fish to Florida. It may be too late already; it may be time to head for the hills.
