Music students protest budget cut; get increase

EAST CAROLINA'S SYMPHONIC BAND has been invited to an All-South Band Clinic at Jeckyll Island, Ga., next Jan. SGA funds to the School of Music have been cut, but the SGA and the administration are trying to get more money for the School of Music. The story is on Page 2.

Legislature grants extra funds

By BENJAMIN BAILEY
Staff Reporter

About 100 students from the School of Music were at the meeting of the SGA legislature Monday night when a bill was introduced that would appropriate an additional $4,000 to the 1969-70 School of Music budget.

The students were protesting a cut in the budget they had submitted. Last year the department got $11,300. This year it was cut by about 90 per cent to $1,500.

A hearing had been held on the matter last Thursday night. It came up again in Monday's meeting when the 100 students came to complain.

The money is used to pay expenses for off-campus concerts by groups in the department.

Richard Holloman of the music department said the budget was submitted for approval May 1, but "it was not until about two weeks ago that we found out that our budget would be cut."

The SGA had traditionally appropriated funds, so there was no reason, Holloman said, to believe that anything would be different this year.

Gary Gasperini, SGA treasurer, said at the hearing Thursday that because there were 500 to 1,000 fewer students than expected there was less money, and that the budget had to be cut. Other departments had budget cuts of 30 to 50 per cent, Gasperini told the students.

The reasons for the larger cut in the music department's budget, Gasperini said, other than the shortage of money, was that the activities the money pays for are not under the direct control of the SGA, that participation in the University's music performing groups is not open to all students, and that the off-campus performances do not benefit the entire student body.

Holloman said it is important to the university that the school of Music have a good reputation. He mentioned examples of off-campus performances which he said contributed to the honor of the University and to the cultural development of eastern North Carolina.

Holloman said the SGA "has got to do something about spreading interest" in music department programs on campus.

Then, at Monday's meeting, Gasperini gave a financial report to the legislature in which he recommended that $4,260 previously appropriated for publishing a course guide be returned to the general funds of the Appropriations Committee.

He recommended that $4,000 of this money be appropriated to the School of Music.

He said the publication of a course guide had not been well organized enough to be printed this year.

He said at Monday's meeting that the School of Music needs the money to continue the quality of their program.

Kristi Lusk introduced the bill which would allow the transfer of funds. Jim Watts introduced the bill for the appropriation to the School of Music. Both bills were sent to the Appropriations Committee to study for another week. F.D. Sunan, vice president and business manager of the University, has said that $5,000 will be contributed from the Student Supply Store funds to the School of Music to help get the department out of its financial difficulty.

In other business at Monday's meeting, Steve Sharpe introduced "Richardson's New Rules of Order of the Student Legislature of ECU."

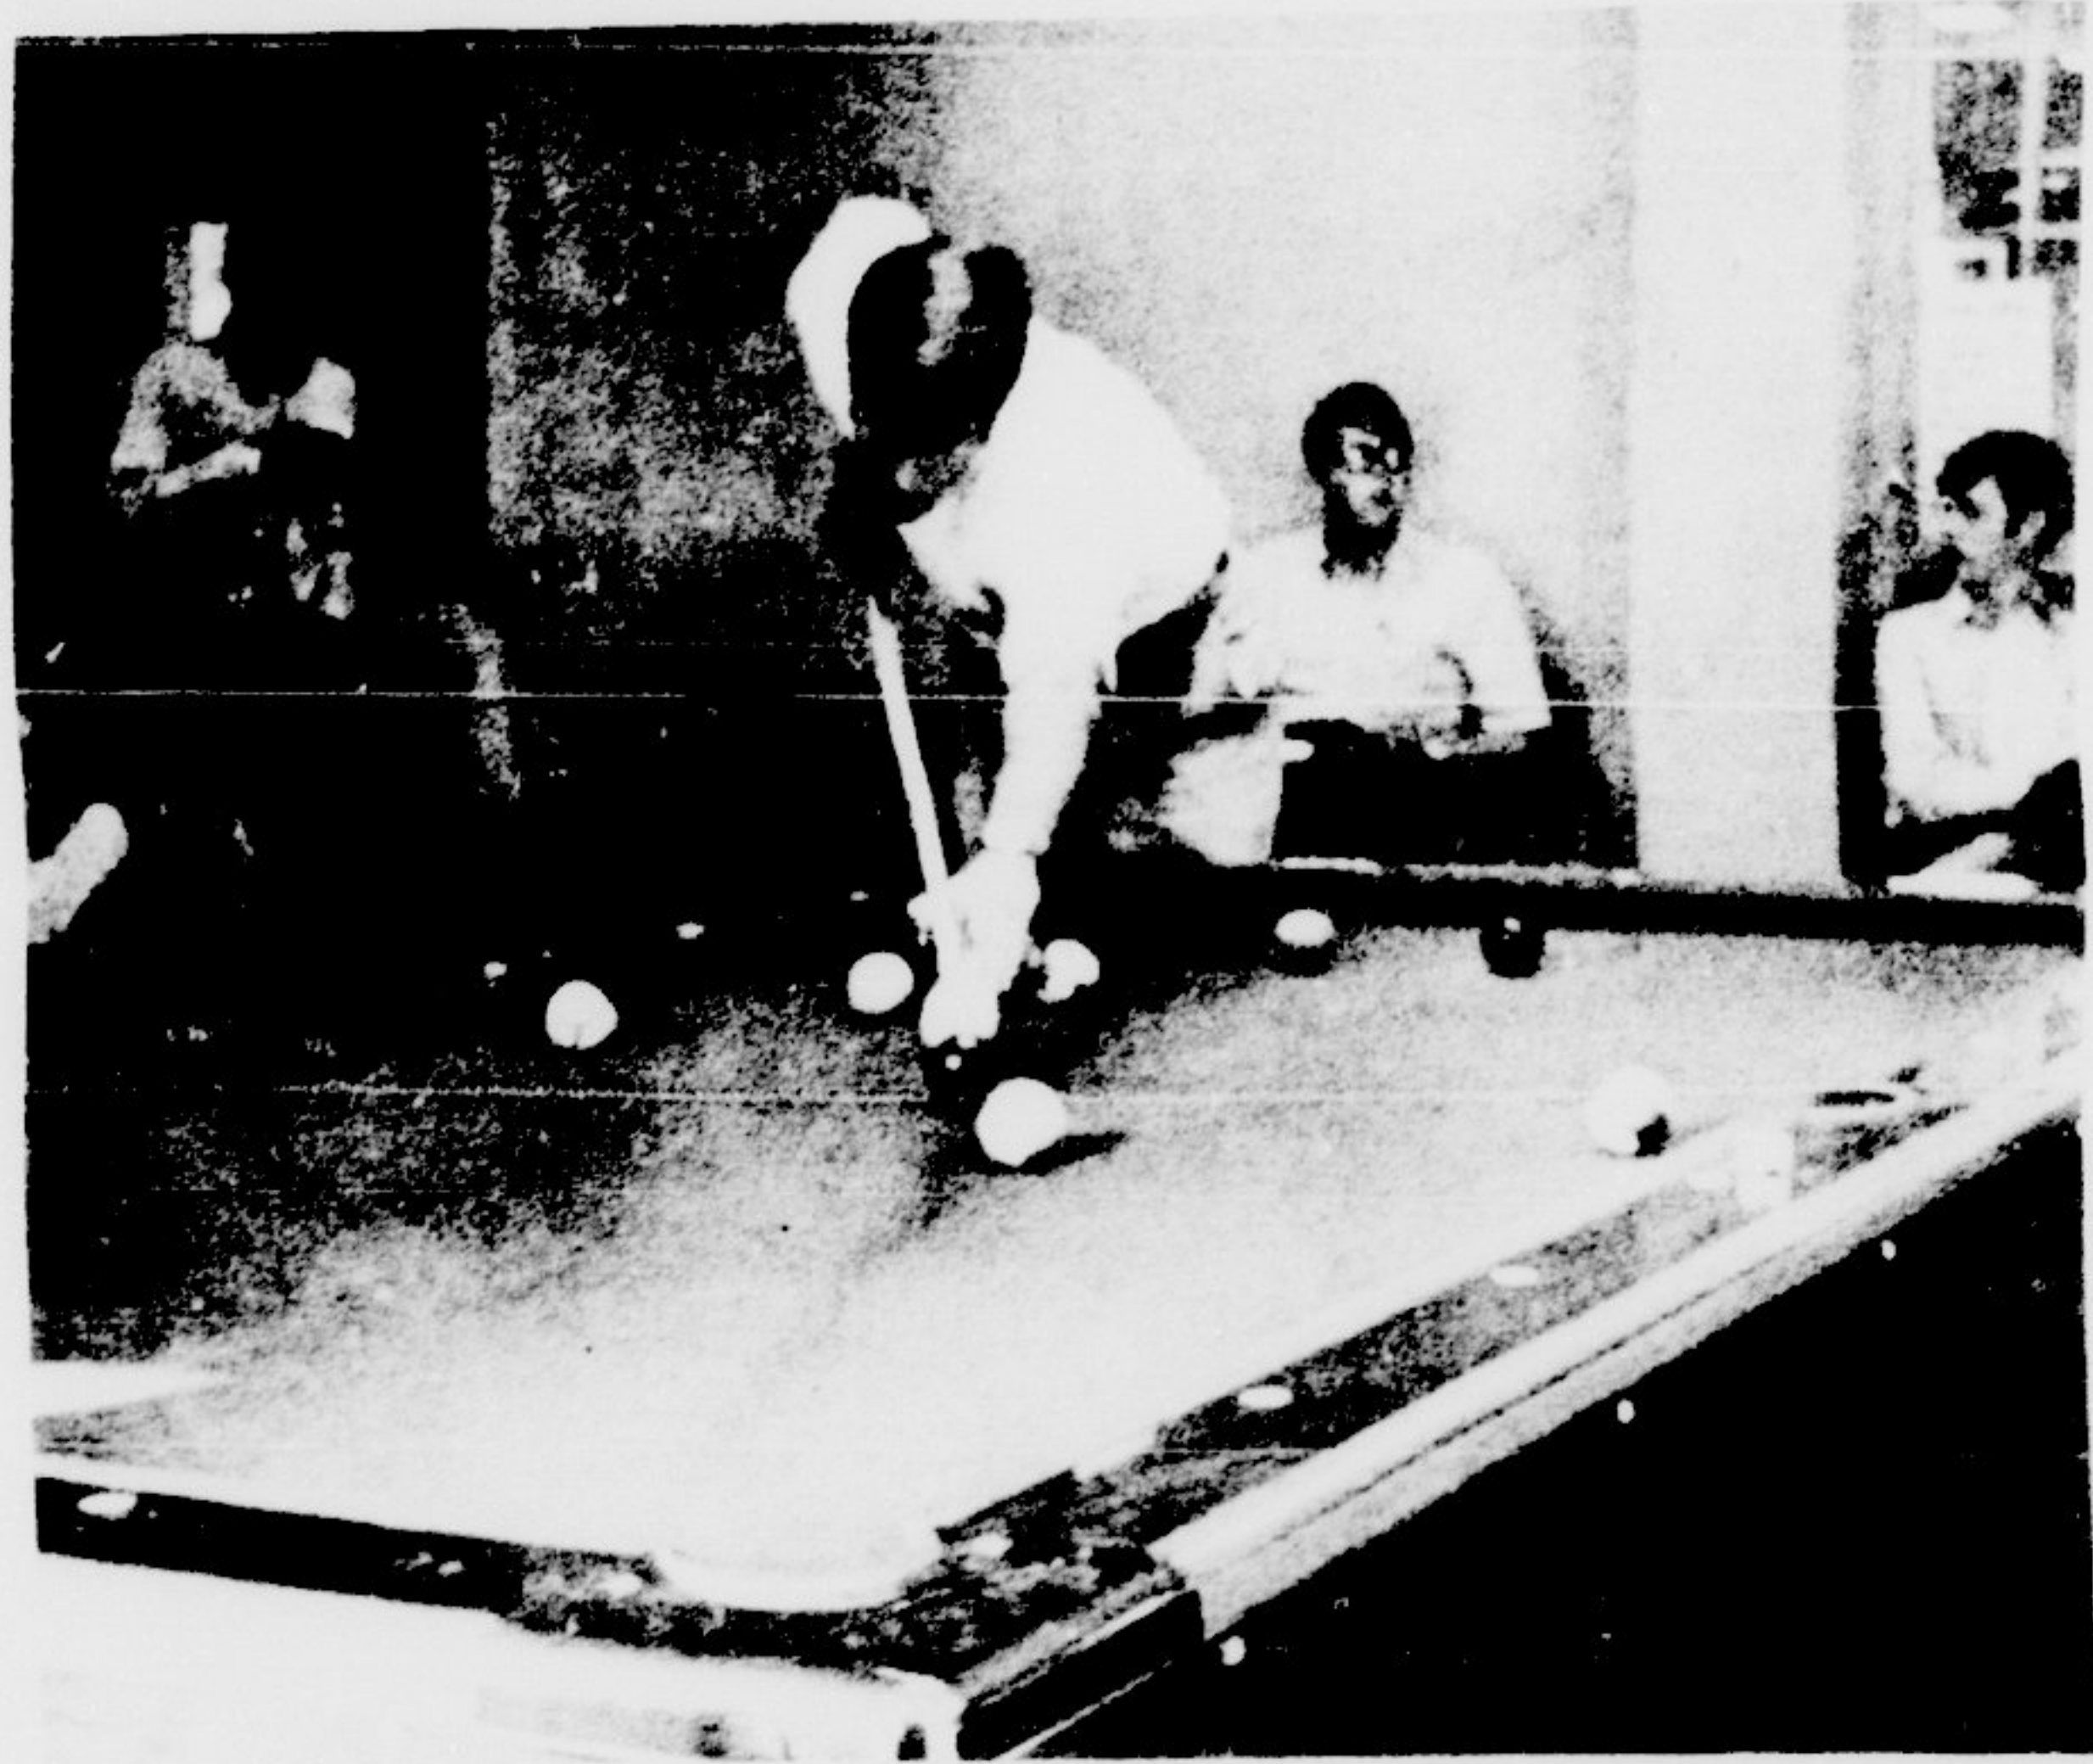

These new rules, named after last year's speaker of the legislature, Bill Richardson, were created chiefly to allow for the extended term of executive officers.

They were approved and will serve as the basis for all legislative procedure.

A bill was introduced that would enable the SGA to become a member of the Association of Student Governments of the USA. The ASG is an organization of 300 student governments throughout the nation. Their purpose is for exchanging ideas and projects.

Len Mancini, Dede Clegg, Robert Adams, Kay Tyndall and Jim Watts were appointed as the legislative representatives on the Joint Legislative-Executive Committee. This committee is to be set up to study the possibilities of improving the student government of East Carolina.

A motion was approved by the legislature that a recommendation be made to the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women that postage stamp machines be installed in the dormitories.

THE POOL TABLE room is one of the most popular spots in the University Union.

Increased Union hours ?

The University Union Committee discussed plans Monday night for extending the hours of the Union and taking over responsibility for the entertainment and artists series, now under the control of the Student Government Association.

Extending Union hours from its present closing time of 10:30 to 11:30 p.m. during the week, and adding an hour on weekends was given unanimous support by the committee.

Conwell Worthington, president, related information which he and other delegates of the Union obtained while attending the recent Association of College Unions International Convention at the University of Kentucky.

"We are certainly in the minority of schools in our six-state district with these early closing hours," he said, "and as an example I constantly hear complaints from those students who have to leave the CU before the nine o'clock movies are over on TV."

Miss Susan Jordan, assistant director of the Union, mentioned factors which would affect the hour extension. One of these, she said, would be the need for more help in operating the Union if the hours were extended.

It would affect janitorial service, too, she said.

Most important in determining later hours, she said, will be the students themselves.

"If the students could use the extra time each night here, it would be justifiable. We are not bucking the order, but if the extension is needed we want it," she said.

Miss Jordan said that Joe Clark, manager of the Student Supply Store and the snack bar, plans to make a survey of the business increase longer hours might bring.

The extension would be congruent with the curfew time of the girls dorms, the committee was told.

Further actions on bringing the time changes into effect will be studied by an appointed committee.

'Finian' achieved goal... joy for its audience

By F. DAVID SANDERS

The world of "Finian's Rainbow" is an unearthly one in which an America exists at the end of the rainbow, difficulties are solved by fairies, prejudice is snapped away by the flip of a wrist, and love comes to all with whom the audience has been programmed to sympathy.

That's America's gift to the world of the theater—the American musical for American taste (or lack of it)—a suggestion of narrative, a dabble of song and dance, and a hundred or two shining faces.

Not enough of anything, of course, and nothing to take home and ponder. That's the show the East Carolina Playhouse presented opening night.

also discussed.

Generally, Unions at other colleges and Universities have control over the campus entertainment, Worthington said. Committees under the SGA now supervise major entertainment on campus.

"The Student Government's purpose is for governing, and the Union's purpose is to provide recreation and entertainment to the entire campus community."

The committee decided to postpone immediate inquiry into the entertainment issue for a few weeks "until the student body is acquainted with the issue."

"If we could persuade the SGA, and the student body as a whole that we could do the job better, we should," Worthington said.

But, then, one can't really blame a group for doing what is supported by its constituents, and supported it was, by a near capacity audience that liked what it saw.

And the audience had reason to like it. By deftly playing up current topics and adding present day names, the director and cast made the old show—22 years old now—seem almost fresh and relevant.

(To be sure, it was no "Hair." And even with all the sympathy the play extended to the blacks, it was the attitude of yesteryear to the blacks of yesteryear, not the blacks of today. The world has taken several turns in 22 years.)

All this being so, last night Finian's rainbow shone through these clouds. Sneden's sets, Shank's music, Mavis Ray's choreography, and the cast's performance all contributed to the happy feeling such a show intends.

Mark Ramsey made Finian firmly Irish and likeable. Victoria Summers was a good Sharon, and Nancy Mellichamp's dancing compensates for her silence. Graham Pollick's professionalism was as obvious as his Senator's bigotry. Jim Longacre's strong voice carried the music of the show, and Jim Slaughter's antics went far in creating the joyful tone of the play. The dancers and the chorus were strong.

The aim of the production was joy. The cast seemed to feel it throughout the show. I know the audience did.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Sanders is an associate professor of English here.

Trial postponed for ninth time

Still pending trial is Henry Stevens, a former ECU student from Huntington, N.Y. He was charged last May with possession of narcotic drugs.

Stevens, James Anderson and Robert Lai were arrested at their home. Anderson and Lai were tried last month and found not guilty. Stevens' case was postponed.

Moratorium

The Vietnam Moratorium Committee will meet Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m. in the Baptist Student Center. Persons interested in organizing the Nov. 13 "teach-in" have been invited to attend, as well as those people who want to participate in the "March Against Death" in Washington Nov. 15.

Applications

The SGA office is accepting applications for delegates to the State Student Legislature. Twenty students will be accepted.

The state meeting will be next February. Jeff Mann will be delegation chairman from East Carolina.

The deadline for applications is 5 p.m. Oct. 28.

Congress slices funds

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina office which administers federal funds received for schools through the National Defense Education Act is going out of business.

Congress is withholding NDEA appropriations for non-college uses. Last year, Congress let NDEA officials wait for six months before agreeing to fund the program another year.

This year the picture is gloomier. President Nixon recommended that NDEA be dropped.

The North Carolina office staff handles NDEA funds primarily for elementary and secondary schools. The NDEA also provides funds for college scholarships, administered by individual colleges. Those funds have been sliced by Congress, but not eliminated.

Carlton Fleetwood, who has served as state coordinator of NDEA for schools in North Carolina, said he is having trouble holding his staff together and is closing the office.

Fleetwood has already resigned to become director of federal-state relations for the State Department of Public Instruction. He will continue to operate NDEA as a sideline activity from his new office.

DDT invades Everglades

MIAMI (AP)—DDT, the killer of birds as well as the insects it is sent out to fight, has invaded the last U.S. refuge of the bald eagle, a biologist says.

In fact, says Dr. William Robertson, a recent check shows that the level of DDT and similar pesticides is so high in the Everglades that the bald eagle may become extinct there.

Robertson, a biologist with the U.S. Park Services, said Friday that poison pollution is causing female eagles to lay eggs with shells so thin that they crack during incubation.

"The pesticide levels are much higher than we would have anticipated. I would call them 'alarming,'" Robertson told a group of scientists at the University of Miami.

"The levels are at the point where they are interfering with the reproductive process."

Robertson said the poisons interfere with the birds' formation of calcium, a basic ingredient in egg shells.

The remnants of a once-great bald eagle population nest in the southwest corner of the Everglades National Park, near Flamingo. Robertson has spent many hours studying the nests.

Vietnamese satisfied

MOSCOW (AP) — North Vietnamese vowed again Tuesday that the people of South Vietnam and North Vietnam will fight on until all U.S. troops are removed from Vietnam.

North Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong and Premier Alexei Kosygin signed a joint communique after a week of talks.

"Carrying into life the beliefs of Ho Chi Minh, the people of South Vietnam, together with their compatriots in the North of the country, relying on the support of all progressive forces of the world, are determined to carry forward their armed political and diplomatic struggle until the national aspirations of the Vietnamese people are fully satisfied and until Vietnamese soil is cleared of the American aggressor and their henchmen."

DR. EDGAR HECKEL, assistant professor of chemistry at East Carolina University, shows off his new gamma irradiator, which arrived here last week for use in his research and for his course in nuclear chemistry. The instrument, which cost about $4,000, was purchased from departmental funds and from a grant obtained through the Atomic Energy Commission. The radiation source is cesium 137 which has a half-life of 30 years. The instrument, Dr. Heckel assures, "features safety and simplicity of operation."

Clinic overcomes speech and hearing defects

By DONNA PERCE
Staff Reporter

An awkward little boy with a shy grin holds a miniature fishing pole uncertainly.

Cards printed with simple words stand before him on a table.

The boy fumbles with the pole until he hooks a card.

Then with the help of his instructor, the awkward boy pronounces the word.

To say the word might take about five times. But his smile is big and he is ready to try it all again.

An elementary school girl puts on earphones and eagerly answers questions about her trip to the State Fair.

For them, overcoming serious speech and hearing defects has become a game.

These two are among the many people receiving aid for speech and hearing problems in the East Carolina Clinic.

The clinic, under the direction of Dr. James Hume, is located in the Speech Pathology Department, and serves a seven-county area.

A session with a patient usually lasts for one hour.

The patient may have one to three sessions a week, depending on the severity of the case and the needs of the person.

Much of the therapy is done by juniors and seniors in the Speech Pathology Department, but all work is under the direct supervision of the 11-member staff.

To be a certified speech and hearing therapist, one must hold a Master's degree and pass an examination.

Dr. Hume emphasized the diversity of problems treated by these therapists.

Among these are the organic causes such as aphasia which is a loss of speech because of some outward cause, such as a gunshot wound, deafness, brain disorders, and cerebral palsy.

Also treated are functional problems such as stuttering and articulation, and problems arising from failure to put together information and normal thought patterns.

In addition to treating speech and hearing problems, the clinic serves many other vital functions.

This summer the clinic held a program for 20 deaf, pre-school age children and their mothers.

The purpose of the program was to orient the parents to the problems their children will have to face.

Besides doing all their own evaluation and diagnosis, the clinic also acts as a consult-evaluation center. Many of these cases will be treated at the East Carolina Clinic, but some will be referred to some other clinic.

The clinic also provides aid to any college student with a speech or hearing disorder.

East Carolina offers an undergraduate and graduate degree in speech pathology. To get the degree, a student must have 120 clock hours of training in the clinic, be good through the stages of observer, junior therapist, and senior therapist.

The East Carolina program focuses on the training of clinic and hospital workers, rather than teachers.

Nixon proposes lighter drug penalties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration, with a bow to its own medical specialists and the realities of enforcement, is proposing much lighter penalties for possession of marijuana.

The administration's new proposal, which backs off considerably from the more stringent recommendations made by Attorney General

John Mitchell, sets the maximum sentence for first-time possession at one year in jail, or $5,000 fine, or both.

The proposal also calls for considerable discretion on the part of the judge, allowing him to impose lesser sentences or none at all.

Currently the law provides a jail sentence of two to 10 years for a first-time possession conviction. A second offense results in a mandatory 5 to 20 year jail term.

Under the new proposal, a second conviction would be made a felony with penalties of up to two years in prison and a fine of $10,000, with comparably higher sentences for marijuana sellers.

Campus girls compete in miniskirt contest

SHERIDAN, Wyo. (AP)— Cludia Ziegel is proud of her 2.2 ratio.

It won for Cludia the contest last week to determine the coed with the shortest miniskirt.

Judging was based on a ratio from knee to hemline and inches from floor to knee. Clyde Smith, president of Circle K, the campus organization which sponsored the contest, said the ratio was necessary to equalize judging among tall and short girls.

"At first the girls were pretty shy of my tape measure," Smith said with a grin. "But as the day went on they became friendly and didn't mind too much."

Bessie Rettinghouse was second with a 2.25 ratio and Joyce Fuller third with 2.34. All three were awarded honorary membership in the all-male organization.

And Smith said the group gained 35 members.

NC Model Security Council prepares to meet in December

BY BEVERLY DENNY

The United Nations began its existence in 1945 and the majority of the people alive today were born since that time.

Today, young people comprise 54 per cent of the world's population and more than 75 per cent of them live in the developing countries of Africa, Asia and Latin America.

The significance of these figures cannot be overstated. Feeding these thousands of millions is already one of the great problems confronting the world. It can also be foreseen that world opinion will gradually become, in a real sense, the opinion of the present young. Also, with a younger population, it is to be expected that the world will develop and change at a more rapid rate than ever before. For it is already evident that this kind of population is more open to new ideas, prepared to assert itself and ready for change.

To be sure, the young movement of today is neither new nor unique. Its roots go deep into history. However, the widespread character of the movement today has been a phenomenon peculiar to the mid-twentieth century, even though the content and aims of the movement may vary greatly between highly industrialized and developing countries. It is certainly interesting to note that, in the academic year 1967-68 alone, youth protests and demonstrations occurred in more than 80 countries all over the world.

This phenomenon can be regarded as a reaction against the many inadequacies, complexities and crises of the age. The questioning of systems of values in the industrialized societies, the conflicts between and inside societies with different social, ideological and economic systems, the tremendous problems of developing countries, the dread of a nuclear holocaust, and the many forms of hatred, injustice and discrimination conjure up feelings of frustration and anxiety in many young people. It also awakens in them the need to do something, to "change the world."

The increasing impatience of youth to benefit and to participate can become development potential of the finest and most productive kind. For it is one of the most positive aspects of the novel trends confronting the present day world and it affords exceptional opportunities for the promotion of international understanding, fellowship and peace.

In both the developed and developing countries, young people are necessarily the focus and mainstay of development. The demographic shifts, the increased education of the young and the need for the involvement of those who can more readily meet the demands for rapidly changing conditions all serve to emphasize the vital importance of youth in the development process.

It is most urgent that young people actively play a role in securing the development of their country or region. Since, tragically, the gulf is rapidly widening between the rich and poor countries, it is depressing to note that projections for the 1970s once again show there is a real possibility that millions of youngsters in the developing world will remain illiterate, underfed, ill-housed and unable to gain adequate employment. This is a massive waste of human material, a waste which is morally indefensible and politically dangerous.

This battle for the welfare of most of humanity can only be won with the active participation of millions of individuals who can see the dangers of the times. Here, youth can play a vital and effective role. The many kinds of national and international services—the youth brigades, civic services, youth councils and development groups—represent ways of directly involving youth in all types of development work, within their own homeland and on foreign soil. They can also provide the young with a chance to learn and an opportunity to live up to the ideals they espouse.

The generation born at the end of World War II has witnessed both the beginning of the nuclear age and the creation of the United Nations and these two paths, the paths of war and peace, lie before them. If the quest towards peace is to be effective, then the world's young must have minds which are independent, free of subjective bias and capable of empathy. For herein lies the power to free men's minds of old myths and perspectives and to stimulate new political and social ideas.

The young generation of today will soon inherit the United Nations as a legacy embodying the fondest hopes of the generation that preceded them. They should recognize that the United Nations represents all the principles and ideals young people are striving for and that it is their best opportunity to realize them. Their goal should be a world where the whole of mankind can go forward with an understanding, a skill and a generosity which will vastly enrich the quality and dignity of their lives.

U Thant,
Secretary-General

Friday is United Nations Day. The SGA office of External Affairs will spend the 24th as they have many other recent days in preparation for the fourth annual North Carolina Model Security Council (NCMSC) to be held here Dec. 6 and 7.

Youth involvement with model United Nations is worldwide. It's like a game. College delegations represent various countries and try as closely as possible to simulate the real UN Security Council activities with resolutions, debates, and voting on current issues.

Game is for real

Model Security Council is a learning experience. Through the "game," students are given an idea of the limitations and powers of the United Nations.

A more thorough understanding of foreign countries is gained by the student delegate. During the conference he must completely immerse himself into a country and become a man from the country he is chosen to represent.

When a representative of a Communist country, the student is not supposed to even see the American point of view on questions that come before the Security Council.

New identity

Having changed identities, he can view the position of the United States more objectively.

Participating in the NCMSC takes preparation on the part of each delegate. He must have an understanding of the general operation of the United Nations. He must also understand the country he is representing well enough to vote the way that country he is representing well enough to vote the way that country would vote in the actual United Nations.

A knowledge of the country's economy, internal political situation, and foreign policy, especially within the last few years, is imperative. Rep-

United Nations records need to be checked to see what positions the country assumed on debates.

The most difficult country to represent is one whose government has recently been overthrown since no precedence has been set.

Passive Big Four

The United States is also a hard country to represent because the delegate cannot deviate from its established past positions. The Big Four countries (US, USSR, France, United Kingdom) usually play a passive role in Security Council. They rarely introduce resolutions since it is easy for them to offend someone.

The upcoming NCMSC will draw students of 15 colleges and universities from North Carolina, Washington, D.C., Tennessee, Virginia, and as far away as Illinois.

John Dixon, secretary of external affairs who is also acting as secretary general at the NCMSC, has issued invitations for the conference and is now awaiting replies.

UN delegate

The highlight of the two-day conference will be the appearance of a United Nations delegate at the Friday night banquet. The External Affairs office is hoping to have a delegate at the Friday night banquet. The External Affairs office is hoping to have a delegate from a country in the Eastern block.

At the end of the conference, delegates will award the Best Delegation and Best Debator awards by secret ballot voting.

While in Greenville, delegates will be housed in the dormitories on campus.

The 1969 NCMSC has been altered somewhat from previous conferences. The old format provided for inclusion of bills that had already come up in the real United Nations.

Since debating the Vietnam war, the seating of Red China, colonialism in Africa, and the Arab-Israeli dispute has become stale, the ECU staff has planned to create two hypothetical yet possible international situations.

The delegates will be informed of one of the problems before the conference and given the second hypothetical problem during the conference.

"This will give the delegates the freedom of action and initiative that they have often wished for," said Dixon.

Designation of country assignments are being made on a "first come, first serve" basis. Those schools who accept the invitation to attend the NCMSC earliest will get their choice of countries to represent.

NCMSC staff

The NCMSC staff's duties are varied and have already required many hours of work.

Dede Clegg, conference coordinator, must supply pages for the conference and two typists from the social sororities on campus.

Bruce Britton's duties as vice president include pre-conference co-ordinating.

Tommy Robinson is chef de cabinet. Working closely with the conference coordinator he is responsible for all delegate services including accommodations, banquet arrangements and refreshments during the conference.

Council President

Bob Robinson, NCMSC president, will preside over the debate at the conference and is responsible for maintaining order.

Secretary General Dixon must maintain the general direction of the conference and see that the delegate stay within United Nations procedures.

"We've had very good cooperation from EC students so far," said Dixon. "Although we have more than enough delegates for the December Security Council, we are always looking for new people to involve in model United Nations activities."

"TOMORROW THE WORLD..." joke John Dixon, Tommy Robinson, and Bruce Britton as they plot the N.C. Model Security Council strategy.

Baby Bucs Score Win

STAUNTON, VA. — East Carolina's Baby Bucs scored their first win of the season here Saturday night, stopping Staunton Military Academy, 24-7.

The Baby Bucs took the lead early in the game when Bill Daniels booted a 30-yard field goal. But, Staunton came back after recovering a fumble to score in the second quarter to take a 7-3 lead at the half.

At the start of the third quarter, the Baby Bucs began to move. Bert Shoffety put the East Carolina eleven back in front for good with a six yard run off tackle and Daniels added the extra point to give the Bucs a 10-7 advantage.

After taking a Staunton punt, the Baby Bucs began to move again and scored on a 30-yard pass play from Terry Kelley to split end Bebo Batts. Daniels kicked the conversion and the Pirates led 17-7 as the third quarter ended.

In the fourth quarter, the Baby Bucs put the icing on the cake when fullback Bill Croiseterre rambled three yards off tackle for the third East Carolina touchdown of the night. Daniels booted the point after.

Head coach Bill Cain had praise for Lou Vaughn a defensive halfback who led the Baby Bucs' defensive charge. Vaughn also picked off an enemy aerial. "Overall, I thought we played well," Cain said. "Anytime you when you havt got to be pleased."

The Baby Bucs will travel to Chowan Saturday eyeing their second straight win of the season against one loss. Game time in Murfreesboro is 8 p.m.

Jenkins comments on war—

Most thinking Americans realize that the Vietnam War is unfortunate for all concerned. They have come to this conclusion after several years of reappraisal that was urged by young people. That young people should regard the question as urgent is understandable, for they are called upon to do the fighting and dying. That young people have exerted considerable influence on the course of public opinion is to be expected, for the simple fact of life is that more than half of the world's population was born after the Second World War ended in 1945.

A great many of us who are over twenty-five years old sense this urgency of our times.

The Secretary-General of the United Nations expressed the views of the older generation recently when he said that the members of the United Nations have perhaps ten years left in which to subordinate their ancient quarrels and launch a global partnership to curb the arms race, to improve the human environment, to defuse the population explosion, and to supply the required momentum to world development efforts. (Press release May 9, 1969)

Disentanglement

Our task today is not to decide that something has to be done. We have already decided that. We now face the problem of implementing the public decision. Regrettably, it is often easier to decide to take a course of action than it is to carry it out.

After months of argument over our involvement in Vietnam, after heated debates and demonstrations over various aspects of that war, after striving to adjust and accommodate the various points of view, we now must proceed to a task that is fully as tortuous, if not more so. This is an open society with freedom of expression. We must therefore discuss and agree on a method of disentanglement. This second stage is even more complicated than the first, for we not only have to agree among ourselves on this one, we must remain aware of the position taken by the Vietnamese—both North and South. We have received no assurance that the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong will allow us to disengage ourselves just by saying so. In his column of October 8, Jack Anderson reported on the bitterness of some South Vietnamese generals over what they consider American "appeasement" of the North. He warned of the danger that these generals might order their troops to attack withdrawing United States forces...one of the many problems our President must face.

Withdrawal or appeasement

It is all very well to respond with comments ranging from

"with friends like that, who needs enemies" on to something more salty. But this possibility is a factor that any American President and the American public must face in making plans to get out of Vietnam.

Furthermore, even though the people in this convocation may overwhelmingly favor withdrawal, an American President must accept as an input of his decision processes that fact that some Americans want to stay in Vietnam and others want to escalate the war there. He must take into consideration the possibility that some who urge disentanglement today may call it "appeasement" at some future time.

looks for way out

It was not until Hitler expanded his demands that the world began to blame British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain for his earlier efforts to achieve what he called "Peace in our Time" at Munich.

Will not "bug out"

The current administration has been elected to serve until January 1973 and Mr. Nixon has made it clear that AT THIS TIME he has no intention of "bugging out" in Vietnam.

We will be wasting our time if we simply shout for unconditional withdrawal.

The present administration might respond to such a demand on the eve of the 1972 elections. But all of us, including the President, want to get out sooner than that date.

In short, we must make a plan for withdrawal that can be accepted by the American public and convey it to the President.

Jenkins challenges young

I realize that I am setting an extremely difficult task. I am asking for a solution which, apparently, has not yet been devised. Nevertheless, I challenge you who are under twenty-five years old to work on it.

Although I will not concede that you have the majority of all experience and knowledge available, I readily admit that you have a majority of the brains available to do the job.

Some of the knowledge that you will need to process through your individual brains is available in courses at ECU and in the Joyner Library.

I challenge you to absorb it and to put your fertile thought processes to sorting it and to generating a workable and acceptable plan of action. "Storming the White House will not be accepted by the American public as a workable solution to Vietnam..." But you are the generation rising to take over the control of this land, to become "The Establishment," whether you relish the title or not. I also have confidence that as a group, you will be better equipped to do the job than my generation, for my generation has worked hard to increase the quality and the quantity of the information needed by you to shoulder that burden.

Pirates suffer fourth loss

RICHMOND, VA. — Quarterback Charlie Richards led a rebounding Richmond Spiders team to a 24-7 victory here last Saturday night over East Carolina's Pirates.

The loss for the Pirates was their fourth straight of the season without a win and their fifth straight over the past two seasons. Richmond got back in the win column after being upset 37-7 by Davidson the weekend before.

The junior quarterback led the Spiders passing for 218 yards and rushing for 74 yards for a total offense of 292 yards. He fired touchdown passes of 49 and four yards on the night.

In the first half, the Bucs moved the ball well against the strong Richmond defense. Early in the first period, senior fullback Butch Colson set an East Carolina career rushing record, breaking the old mark of 2,002 yards set by Dave Alexander from 1963 to 1965.

Colson, playing what head coach Clarence Stasavich called one of his better games, finished the night with 65 yards rushing and 60 yards passing. In the Pirates' only touchdown drive of the night, the bulky runner led the way in the 72 yard drive with runs of 16 and 27 yards, moving his career rushing total to 2,044 yards.

After Richmond jumped in front 10-0 on a field goal by Mike Dussault and a pass from Richards to speedy split end Walker Gillette, streaking down the right sideline, the Pirates began to move.

With Colson and tailback Billy Wightman, who contributed a 15 yard run in the scoring drive leading the way, the Bucs hit paydirt when Colson plunged over from the one. Earl Clary booted the conversion.

Then, it was all Richmond. Whatever the new wrinkle in the Pirates' offense was that stumped the Spiders early in the game, it was corrected and the Richmond defense stopped the Bucs cold for the remainder of the evening.

In the third quarter, the Spiders added to their margin behind the passing and running of their quarterback. When Richards could not find an open receiver, he simply threaded his way through the Pirates' defense on foot.

But, when he did spot an open receiver he threw strikes. Gillette caught six passes for 92 yards and wingback Jim Livesay hauled in three for 63 yards. Running back Pat Morris scampered 82 yards with four screen passes.

The first drive for Richmond in the third period began at their own 21 yard line and got most of its momentum when halfback Frank Olejack tossed a 37 yard pass to Livesay at the East Carolina 15. A personal foul penalty against the Pirates put the ball at the five for the Spiders before Richards hit fullback Jerry Mauro all alone in the right flat for the touchdown.

Any hopes the Pirates had of getting back in the game were lost when Clary missed his second field goal of the night from 45 yards. He missed his first in the second period from 43 yards.

From their own 20, the Spiders methodically marched 80 yards for their final score of the night, with Maury cracking off right tackle from four yards for the touchdown. Dussault kicked all three extra points for the Spiders.

BUTCH COLSON set an ECU career rushing record of 2044 yards, breaking the old record of 2002 set from 1963 to 1965.

Still, Stasavich said after the game that the Pirates were greatly improved. "If we had played this well earlier in the season we would have one a game or two," the Pirate coach said. "We have been playing some fine teams; between the last three we have faced they have only lost one game so far this season and of course Richmond has a fine team. They are the best we have faced."

The Pirate mentor was pleased with the play of Colson in addition to sophomore wingback William Mitchell. Defensively, he thought defensive end Mike McGuirk, linebacker Wes Rothrock and rover Mike Boaz did fine jobs.

Next Saturday, the Pirates will be after their initial win.

Protest does not exclude patriots

FAYETTEVILLE, (AP) — Protesting the war in Vietnam may not seem patriotic to many people, but two leading opponents of the conflict believe a person can love his country even if he objects to its policies.

And they think their opinion is gaining favor with the young.

"Say a kid today is opposed to war, not just the Vietnam War, but any war," Donald Duncan, a former Green Beret, said, "This doesn't mean the kid is un-American."

"He is opposed because he believes war is immoral," Duncan said. "A kid can still love America and oppose war. Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird's kid is opposed to war. Where does that leave us?"

"A kid today thinks his parents are un-American for not being opposed to the war in Vietnam. The parents think the same with the kids," the 10½ year Army veteran said. "It's an oversimplification to say it is a communications gap, but that has something to do with it."

Duncan and Dr. Howard Levy, a former Army captain who was imprisoned for refusing to train Green Berets at Ft. Jackson, S.C., discussed their ideas of patriotism after a peace rally in Fayetteville, home of Ft. Bragg.

"Most people will not look at it this way," Levy said. "The man from World War II didn't question the government's reasoning, they just did it. The kids today ask questions."

Because of the draft, Levy said, many persons who object to the war have been inducted into the Army, and they have formed a resistance within the ranks.

"The protest is now within the service, from the GIs," Levy said, "where until two or three years ago, it came from the civilian ranks."

"People would have said you didn't know what you were talking about two years ago if you said that we would have an organized rank within the service."

"You'll have to expect more and more protests from within from now on," he added.

These young men not only object to the war, he said, but to what they consider unfair treatment from superiors.

"The GI has to have rights, civil rights," Levy said, "the military is not going to be able to overlook these rights from the Constitution when there is organized labor in the military."

"This is something they haven't had to contend with in the past," Levy said. "It's something that's present now and will be even more so in the future."

"We don't enjoy being the bad guys," Levy said, "and we would like to wear the white hats for awhile."

Levy said the Army has become cognizant of the resistance, and has become more sophisticated in its handling of them.

"The Army is getting smarter," Levy said, "it doesn't court-martial doctors now, they are usually given a discharge for the good of the service."

Levy served all but 10 days of a four year sentence in the Ft. Jackson case. The U.S. Supreme Court is expected to rule on his appeal this week.

Duncan, author of a book on the Green Berets, said most South Vietnamese aren't interested in pursuing the war.

"You can't appeal to them and make them fight for the South Vietnam government," he added. "Most of them know what the Thieu government is like. It's corrupt."

He expressed doubt that current troop withdrawals are meaningful peace gestures. "Nixon's pulling troops out of there for one reason. We have too many over there now and they are getting in each other's way. Every guy who is pounding a typewriter in Saigon is drawing combat pay. It's all got to end."

Albright urges continuing opposition

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Alan Albright, president of the student body of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said Monday night last week's Vietnam Moratorium should be followed up by further demonstrations in November.

"Vietnam is a tremendously complex question that cannot be settled by an expression of opinion on one day," Albright said in an interview of the University of North Carolina's educational television stations.

Albright said students feel they can influence the government by taking their protests to the nation's capital where decisions are made.

He said demonstrations in the past few years, especially on the Chapel Hill campus, have become a "learning experience" because experts on the problems being discussed have been called in to give students a better understanding of what they are protesting.

Buccaneer Queen to be Selected

Forty coeds will compete for the title of "Buccaneer Queen 1970" at the annual Buccaneer Tea, to be held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Leo W. Jenkins on Tuesday, Oct. 28 at 2:45 p.m.

The coeds who represent various campus organizations will be judged by a panel of five judges from the Greenville area.

Each contestant will be judged on poise, posture, charm, and photogenic quality.

Miss Patsy Simmons, Buccaneer Queen 1969, will crown her successor.

Former Miss North Carolina, Miss Anita Johnson, will assist Miss Simmons in the crowning.

The winner will reign over the 1970 Buccaneer and will receive a trophy and a double-page color spread in the yearbook.

Police suspect arson

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Extra security guards were ordered out for the second straight night on the University of North Carolina campus Monday as police sought a suspected arsonist.

A university spokesman declined to reveal exactly how many guards were patrolling the 125-building campus, but he said the number was "far more than usual."

Police said they had no new clues in their investigation of fires which caused an estimated $25,000 damage to four classroom buildings Sunday.

"There's no doubt about it being arson," said Chapel Hill Police Chief W.D. Blake.

The fires were in Peabody Hall and the Bingham, Murphy and O. Max Gardner buildings.

Nixon may propose cease-fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon may offer the enemy an American-initiated cease-fire proposal when he addresses the nation on Vietnam next month, it was learned Sunday.

Nixon is weighing recommendations from some advisers that American forces in the war zone hold their fire unless fired upon.

One White House source indicated Nixon's television-radio address scheduled for Nov. 3 would be the logical occasion for him to either announce a unilateral cease-fire or, by making no mention of it, signal that the idea had been rejected.

Newsweek magazine said in its latest edition that Nixon's military advisers have been urging him to declare an immediate and unilateral cease-fire in Vietnam so any enemy violations could be used "as evidence of the enemy's reluctance to end the war."

The magazine added in its Periscope section of the Oct. 17 edition that the Pentagon now thinks even a unilateral cease-fire "would create no great risk to U.S. troops in the field."

Before returning to the White House Sunday after a weekend stay at the Camp David in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains, Nixon had conferred there on Vietnam policy with Secretary of State William P. Rogers, Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, Atty. Gen John N. Mitchell, and Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, the President's assistant for national security affairs.

Levy freed on appeal bond

WASHINGTON (AP) — The case of Dr. Howard Levy, the Army Captain who was jailed for refusing to train Green Berets at Ft. Jackson, S. C., was kept alive Monday when the U. S. Supreme Court agreed to let him remain free under $1,000 bail until the courts act on his appeal.

Levy, now 31, served more than two years of a three-year sentence before he was released under bail last Aug. 4.

Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas signed the release order.

Douglas' move came after fellow Justice William Brennan denied Levy's request for bail.

Douglas acted a few days before Levy completed his prison sentence at the federal penitentiary in Lewisburg.

Levy was granted time off for good behavior.

Justice Douglas said the case presented questions which should be reviewed by the Supreme Court.

Levy, a dermatologist from Brooklyn, N.Y., was convicted by a court-martial panel in June, 1967, of refusing to train Vietnam-bound Special Forces troops in the treatment of skin ailments.

Supreme Court examines self-incrimination in draft case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed to hear another challenge to the draft—the one that requires self-incrimination by those who refused to register initially.

The petition, filed on behalf of Robert C. Toussie, a 28-year-old Brooklyn business tycoon, also contends that without the continuing registration requirement the federal five-year statute of limitations would apply, beginning with a youth's 18th birthday.

Toussie was convicted in New York City of failing to register and sign up for the draft. He admitted refusing to register and said he could not do so for reasons of conscience.

The Supreme Court is being asked to apply its 1969 Marchetti decision which held that gamblers could not be prosecuted for refusing to register and to incriminate themselves to the continuing registration provision of the draft.

The government contends that, although the draft statute does not spell out the continuing offense, it was in the best interest of Congress, as ruled by the district court.

Journalism frat meets

Members will discuss a high school journalism workshop planned for spring quarter.

Bylaws will also be discussed.

No, Mr. Nixon, you can't recall Agnew

Responsibility for Nixon's last week's moratorium Day was not unexpected. Rapid and emotional response to the proceedings was anticipated by the planners who made every effort to clarify their motives and avoid misunderstanding, both before and after the event.

Even so, there were those who attempted to distort the moratorium's goals and its meaning for the American people. The American Legion and the National Guard condemned the action, as did the military and the Saigon regime. The Young Americans for Freedom threatened professors and schools with legal action if they canceled classes on Oct. 15. President Nixon announced three weeks before the moratorium that he would not in any way be affected by the moratorium.

The forces who support the war machine failed their indifference and predicted frightful results for the peace negotiations in Paris. Many endorsed the American people's desire for peace—and again refused to accept the President's terms.

The nations of the world were encouraged by the popular support for the moratorium and dismayed by the Administration's reactions. Clearly, the people could support peace, but only the President could end the war.

President Nixon's announced indifference to demonstrations of public sentiment is regrettable—but Vice President Agnew's vitriolic denigration of the moratorium and its planners is intolerable.

Agnew, who has never been known for his syntax or logic, called the moratorium planners "an effete corps of impudent snobs who characterize themselves as intellectuals."

Such a display of domestic diplomacy did not go unnoticed at home or abroad. It is ironic that the thinly educated Agnew should feel himself qualified to call Nobel Prize winners, such as Dr. George Wald of Harvard, "impudent snobs," but, then, he also included Noam Chomsky and John Kenneth Galbraith in his "effete corps," as well as 17 senators and 47 members of the House of Representatives who supported the moratorium.

Attempts by official administration spokesmen to recall and qualify Agnew's statements have failed to lessen the impact that the Vice President's calculated illogic has had on the nations and the press of the world. The proximity of such a mind to the policy-making process is just cause for alarm—and might, in fact, hold up the negotiations in Paris much longer than any demonstration the people of the United States might make for immediate peace.

Welcome scholars... hope you like us

Fifty-five National Merit Scholarship semi-finalists arrive today for the annual "Scholarship Weekend." These students come from throughout North Carolina and Virginia and represent the academic "cream of the crop" for the two states.

We would like to welcome these students to our university. We hope they like what they see and will call ECU "home" next year.

We would also like to compliment those officials of the University who have planned this weekend to introduce these students to our campus. This is a step in the right direction.

Too often in the past, the University has given too much emphasis to recruiting athletes and far too little emphasis in attracting scholars. We hope that this weekend is only a part of an intensified effort to bring fresh, gifted and new minds into our academic community.

Welcome scholars! We hope you like us.

AND HERE'S A TROOP REDUCTION AND HERE'S NO DRAFT CALL FOR OCTOBER AND HERE'S ...

The forum

Dear Editor:

In response to the letter from Madeline and Mike Frake in the Oct. 21 issue of Fountainhead.

1. No one wants to support a war in which they have lost relatives or friends or fellow countrymen. But no one wants to remember the ones lost for useless efforts either.

2. To die in any kind of war for the principles of this country is the greatest contribution any person can make.

3. If only men over 35 were drafted, this country would suffer far more than it has from the war.

4. To stop now would mean those lives lost would have been lost in vain.

5. Since when have the American people not felt compassion for our fighting boys? No one sympathizes with quitters.

My boyfriend is in Vietnam right now fighting so that we can be sure of having a future in which we may raise children.

I'm proud to be an American and I'm proud that my boyfriend is involved in a worthwhile cause rather than in a meaningless moratorium.

Dear Editor:

Residents of Belk Dormitory have absolutely no space available where a standard 28X36 inch poster can be hung.

Is it not possible that the housing office would rescind the ruling against posters, etc., being taped (not pinned, tacked or stapled) to the closet doors or some other tape-resistant surface?

Before the housing office gives a cursory "impossible," I ask only that they personally inspect bulletin board space in Belk rooms.

J.G. Freeman, III

Dear Editor:

In his column of Oct. 20, Pete Alexander propounds a series of questions concerning the financial situation of the SGA, which show his complete ignorance of the principles of student government finance.

1. There is no such thing as an SGA debt. The student government has not borrowed any money from any source.

The SGA is, however, over appropriated. This does not mean that the student government will borrow money to make these appropriations good. If the bank balance gets to the point that it cannot take care of the request of student organizations the treasurer will simply stop signing checks.

2. Over appropriation is the business of the legislature.

3. The SGA does not consider a percentage of the students activity fee when appropriating money. It considers what organizations will be more important to the students and appropriates on that basis. To answer his question though, about a third of the activity fee goes to entertainment and related activities (Central Ticket Office, ID's, etc.), a third to publications, and the remaining third takes care of everything else.

4. The Rebel and the Buccaneer lose money along with all the rest of the organizations subsidized by the SGA (with the possible exception of Fountainhead). Nothing the SGA subsidizes makes money because if they did, there would be no need for a subsidy. However, both of the publications return some money to student government as do all other organizations of the SGA with the exception of the cheerleaders and the School of Music which are total monetary losses.
