Med school's progress'impressive', accreditation denied for '71 class

By BEV DENNY

(Associate Editor) Impressive progress has been made at ECU toward laying the groundwork for a medical school, an accrediting committee report states. However, provisional accreditation for a two-year medical school was denied for this

The report from a joint committee of the American Medical Association and the Association of American Medical Colleges was made public Thursday when ECU President Leo W. Jenkins presented the report to Gov. Bob

Jenkins said that ECU has been "reasonably assured that provisional accreditation will be granted for an initial class starting in the fall of 1972" if the N.C. Legislature assures funding. The absence of a guaranteed operating budget was the major factor cited by the committee. After presenting the report to the governor, Jenkins said, "The survey report of the liason committee on medical education recognizes the need for increasing the physician manpower available to our people; it also recognizes the vital role that the medical school at East Carolina can play in meeting these needs.

"With the availability of adequate operating budget to acquire the necessary additional faulty and teaching materials," Jenkins continued, "East Carolina University will be ready to implement the School of Medicine authorized by the previous General Assemblies."

ECU had requested $2.6 million from the Legislature to open the school next fall.

An additional $10.7 million, less federal funding, was requested for a medical school building and $664,000 for a medical library.

The report cited that North Carolina stands 46th among the 50 states in the roportion of medical students to population; thus there is a clear need to increase substantially the number of North Carolina students studying medicine.

The establishment of a two-year medical school at ECU may be expected to increase interest of North Carolina students in the study of medicine, said the committee, and by increasing opportunities for such study, contribute to this desired increase in interest.

The shortage of physicians in eastern North Carolina is severe, said the report. The establishment of a medical school at ECU may be expected to contribute in some degree to alleviating this shortage mainly through increasing the number of eastern North Carolina students studying medicine.

The committee also found the plans for interim facilities for the medical school in the new science building "thoroughly adequate for classes up to about 20."

Proposed budget and medical library plans were termed "reasonable" and the proposed number of faculty members "adequate." Qualifications of faculty members already hired were said to be adequate.

Included in the report was a letter from Gov Scott to the committee dated June 24, 1970, saying, "I wish to express to you my support for the medical program at East Carolina and my belief that the 1971 General Assembly will provide funds for operating costs and for new facilities."

The major problem raised in the report was that of transferring students from the two-year curriculum, assuring ECU School of Medicine graduates that they will be accepted in other schools to complete their training.

"Modern developments in the medical curriculum have greatly complicated the transfer of students between schools," says the evaluation.

"It is urged that there be extended discussions with one or more other medical schools to assure that the curriculum at East Carolina can be meshed smoothly with the other school or schools and basic science graduates of East Carolina assured admission for their clinical training."

ECU officials issued a statement saying that the planned curriculum "should mesh smoothly with any of the four-year schools in the state, and, indeed with any school in the country."

Collective agreements reached between ECU and the state's three medical schools concerning transfer arrangements, "is a matter of public record." continued the statement. "To supplement this agreement schools in the southern region are being contacted and some have already expressed a willingness to consider our students for transfer."

The evaluation further cites a need for chairmen of biochemistry, microbiology, and pathology departments. A director and staff are needed for clinical education. Dr. Wallace Wooles, dean of the proposed medical school, said qualified persons have been found to fill most of these positions but cannot be hired until the General Assembly appropriates funds.

Provisions for student counseling and financial aid must also be made, according to the report. "It may be assumed that a medical school will be reluctant to accept a transfer student if the school must provide financial support," says the evaluation.

Gov. Scott said he was "favorably impressed" after meeting with Jenkins and other ECU officials to receive the report.

Jenkins expressed gratification at the favorable evaluation of ECU's accomplishments

White Ball cancelled

By BETSY HEADY

(Staff Writer) The annual White Ball will not be held this year "in order that the dance expenses can be donated to the Pitt County Crippled Children's Association," said George Georghiou, APO

"With the addition of this money to the money made from the contest itself, the organization can better serve the Crippled Children's Association through a larger donation," he said.

However, Alpha Phi Omega, campus service fraternity, will sponsor the 18th Annual White Ball Contest during Carousel Weekend.

The White Ball Queen Contest will run through Feb. 12. Each contestant's picture, along with her sponsor's name, will be displayed in the Student Union lobby during the week. A penny counts as one vote towards the selected girl. The money from this voting and the dance expenses will make up the contribution to the Association.

The new winter queen will be crowned at one of the Carousel Weekend concerts and her court will be presented.

Jenkins to moderate

By JOHN R. WALLACE (Staff Writer)

Tonight at 10:30 on WNCT, channel 9, Dr. Leo Jenkins will co-moderate a discussion dealing with the conservative view versus the liberal view on college campuses.

This discussion is the result of Dr. John East's publication of an article in the Wall Street Journal which was subsequently syndicated throughout the United States.

East, associate professor of Political Science, was a delegate to the Republican National Convention in Miami.

East's article explores the imbalance or preponderance of liberal teachers as opposed to conservative ones. The article deals with the affects on our colleges and society of having a greater number of liberal instructors in studies such as history and political science.

Discussing this article and its implications and also presenting a liberal view of education will be Dr. John Dixon from the Department of Religion at UNC, Chapel Hill.

Dixon sees the difference in political temperament as one's attitude in reaction to continuity and change.

He views the liberal as wanting to bring about change through direct and immediate action, while the conservative would prefer a longer time to view the trends of a situation.

East views the conservative as one drawn to traditional values and one opposed to totalitarianism and fascism. He feels the liberal in education has stressed quality rather than quantity; that we are still living under the influence of the "enlightenment" as it comes down to us through the "New Deal" and the "Great Society."

The program presents the problem of clear definition of terms. The debate touches on many points and develops a genuine tension backing in many of the conversational programs on television

The School of Business has now concluded its research project centering around the Ford Motor Co.'s new car, the Pinto. According to Dr. William J. Kehoe, Pinto coordinating professor, the project has served as a "tremendous learning device" for the three classes it involved. The project has afforded students "the opportunity to bridge the gap between the theory of the textbook and the actuality of a market place," said Kehoe. Advanced classes in advertising, sales management and marketing research have been involved in the project.

These students who are designing advertising and sales campaigns and conducting research belong to the market to which the Pinto is being directed. With the Pinto, Ford is attempting to attract the college student away from the foreign

Ford's idea behind the project is that perhaps college students themselves will provide an entree to the college market.

A Pinto which was loaned to ECU without charge served as the basis of teaching and research for the project.

Participation in the "Pinto Project" makes ECU business students eligible to enter an individual class project in the Regional and National Pinto Project contest. A regional prize of $1,000 and a national prize of $5,000 will be awarded for the best project.

Music dean to assume west deanship

Dr. Thomas Miller, dean of the ECU School of Music, will assume the deanship of the Northwestern University School of Music, July 1,

He was offered the position by Northwestern's board of trustees and chancellor, Dr. J. Roscoe Announcing Dr. Miller's acceptance of the post, the chancellor praised Dr. Miller's "intensive administrative experience" and "widely acclaimed musical excellence as an instrumentalist, arranger, conductor and educator." In a statement regarding Dr. Miller's resignation from ECU, Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, ECU president

"During his years with us, as professor and administrator, Dr. Miller has contributed much toward the progress of our School of Music and his effort and influence on its behalf have helped it to achieve nationally recognized excellence.

The most advanced and most specialized course ever offered through the ECU Division of Continuing Education has been pronounced a success by the chief instructor and the members of the class.

The Head and Neck Anatomy Conference sponsored by the ECU Division of Medical Sciences for physicians and dentists ended last week. Eight practitioners from three states participated in a series of lectures and laboratory and clinical sessions.

The director of the conference, Dr. Michael R. Schweisthal of the ECU Division of Medical Sciences, termed the event "most interesting" and praised the quality of participation of both staff and participants.

Dr. Gerald Edwin Nieusma of the U.S. Naval Hospital at Camp Lejeune, N.C., who was enrolled in the conference, commented,

"The amount of knowledge we have gained here is immeasurable at present. The benefits of such an intense, concentrated study will be evident over a period of time."

Dr. Grover W. Smith of the Kinston, N.C., Clinic expressed satisfaction with the laboratory facilities at ECU and warmly recommended such offerings for medical professionals.

We're here,' says Shepherd

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Two Americans who almost had their landing canceled by a computer problem walked the dusty surface of the moon Friday, ghostly figures seeking the secrets of an alien land.

Alan B. Shepard Jr., realizing a decade-old personal dream at age 47, became the fifth human to plant his footprint in the lunar soil, stepping from his lunar lander at 9:54 a.m. EST Edgar D. Mitchell followed him down the ladder 10 minutes later.

"It's been a long time, but we're here," were Shepard's first words as his booted left foot tested the lunar soil. He described it as very soft.

"This is a very rough place," Shepard remarked as he gazed at the surrounding landscape of high ridges, craters, and boulders as large as 20 feet

Their initial steps, nearly an hour late because of a communications problem that delayed their exit from the capsule, were relayed to earth by a black and white television camera. After Shepard and Mitchell tested their ability to move about with antelope-like strides, they took out a television camera to give viewers 238,275 miles away their first sustained color view of the lunar surface. A color TV camera on Apollo 12 conked out after only a few minutes when its lens was burned by the sun.

The third man in the expedition, Stuart A. Roosa, orbited some 70 miles overhead in the command ship Kitty Hawk, awaiting the return of his companions on Saturday.

Shepard climbed down the nine-rung ladder to the surface after he guided the lunar ferry Antares to a landing only 60 feet from target in the rugged Fra Mauro highlands.

ORONO, Maine (CPS)--A student-sponsored abortion loan fund at the University of Maine has provoked outraged criticism by many of the state's

The Population Control Fund Committee was established in December by the student government, and was given a budget of $5,000 from mandatory student activity fees. Students were told that they could have their individual share of 75 cents taken from the committee and used for other activities. No student has made that Several female students borrowed up to $400 each to help defray abortion expenses in New York, where abortions are legal.

With student opposition to the committee minimal, the fund snailed along without controversy until local papers and politicians seized on it. In the past two weeks, Gov. Kenneth Curtis, admitting the fund was legal, said he was still opposed to it. University police and county attorneys have begun investigations.

Students running the fund say they are trying to allow any woman student who wants an abortion to get a safe, legal one, instead of forcing her to go to "some butcher."

The university has budget problems with the legislature. Curtis said he was for liberalization of the state's abortion law, but questioned whether the student's action was in the best interest of the university. "The students would suffer from taking the easy way out," he said.

Despite criticism from politicians, some of it in the form of outrage, the student fund is not the only group in Maine paying for abortions in New York. Welfare recipients can have abortions in New York, according to Commissioner of Health and Welfare, Dean Fisher, with the state of Maine picking up the tab.

Communication economic

By SUZY STOCKS (Staff Writer)

Lack of communication between the President's administration and the Federal Reserve Board (FRB) was one problem of economic instability brought up by Jimmie Monhollon, guest speaker at the economics symposium held Wednesday, Feb. 3. Speaking at the symposium, sponsored by Omicron Delta Epsilon, were Dr. L.H. Zincone and Dr. James Knipe of ECU. Their subjects were monetary and fiscal policy.

Monhollon of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, officer in charge of the Charlotte branch, gave a review of the stabilization policy for the last five years.

In mid-1965, the President announced a rapid build-up in Vietnam. At the same time, Johnson had his domestic program, The Great Society, blooming. So here were two costly, expanding programs which produced full employment, said Monhollon. But overproduction creates excess demands and rising price levels.

The FRB tried to press on the administration that some fiscal policy was needed. In December 1965, the FRB raised the discount rates of banks.

The next year was one of increased monetary restraint on the economy. In November 1966, the economy-turned-industry fell. According to Monhollon the problem was with the defense department, who had not supplied the FRB with adequate information.

By the spring of 1967, the monetary and fiscal situation was somewhat steadier. Mid-1967 and 1968 the budget was much too expanded, said Monhollon. Money needed to be tightened up. It was not until July that a tax increase bill was passed in Congress. By then inflationary trends had started. The long-range outlook for 1969 was one of continued inflation. By 1970 the monetary policy eased up and did not fall into a recession. "Now the economy is on an upward swing," said Monhollon.

All three speakers disclosed the fact that some drastic changes are needed. They concluded that Congress is too slow to act when tax bills should be passed because they are afraid of public outcry: so here is the need for educating the public more in the ways of controlling our economy.

hope for students Last quarter two classes were involved in the dual-track program. This quarter there are four classes. Professor Marqueritte A. Perry and Mrs. Monika Gauglhofer, who teach the French version, say student response has been "very good."

One student, recalled Mrs. Perry, remarked that the new system has the regular method "over a barrel."

"Since each student changes classes every three days, students feel as if they are checking it off," Mrs. Perry explained.

For students who always seem to "get behind" early in the quarter, the dual-track system offers new hope. "If they don't like what they're studying," she said, "it will be over in three days."

Richardson feels that the new method offers the student a chance to "turn over a new leaf" every three days.

A few schools are beginning to answer the challenge of making languages meet the specific needs of the student. Dual- and multiple-track programs at the intermediate level are now being tried by many universitites.

wide variety of activities - public appearances, social engagements, meetings - which comprise my duties as president of East Carolina University.

On Wednesday night, Jan. 27, I returned from New York City, and spoke to the Goldsboro Lions Club the following night. On Friday, I attended a reception for our basketball players and went to Greensboro, to serve as a judge in the selection of the North Carolina Jaycee Young Man of the Year on Saturday morning. That evening, in Charlotte, I spoke to the annual convention of Painting and Decorating Contractors of America.

My schedule for the first week in February is equally full. On the agenda are a television appearance for one of the local stations, a dinner in Ahoskie, a banquet in Farmville, an address before the ECU members of the American Association of University Professors, speeches to public school officials in Williamston and Monroe, and a meeting of the ECU Foundation. During the second week, I will attend the executive session of the Legislative Study Commission in Raleigh, address the UNC 5 Faculty Club in Chapel Hill, and attend a Carolina Telephone and Telegraph dinner in 2 Tarboro.

We have planned two receptions also for the 5 second week in February, for ECU honor students and for ECU students from Guilford 2

By JANE KELLER

(ECU News Bureau) Medical doctors and those who teach them, a minister, and a population consultant and legislator will discuss some aspects of human sexuality and abortion during the 11th Family Life Conference to be held Feb. 10 and 11 at

The conference is sponsored by the Family Life Committee, a committee of students and faculty who work together to bring to the campus outstanding professional people for the purpose of discussing the role of the family.

The theme for this year, selected by the committee, is "Human Sexuality and Abortion." "The Family Life Committee has played an important role in encouraging scholarly analysis of the role of the family as a part of our democratic American heritage." said Dr. Robert Holt, dean and vice president of ECU.

"The University is pleased with the standard of excellence evidenced by the eminent professionals participating in the Family Life Conference this year, and I am sure that this will be a rewarding experience for all of those students who participate.

The two-day conference has scheduled lectures, general discussions, special sessions for faculty members and ministers, and special sessions for students to ask questions. The interested public may attend.

Topics to be discussed will include abortion law, emotions and morality of abortion, contraceptive efficiency, and sex attitudes and behavior.

Dr. Mary S. Calerone, director of Sex Information and Education Council of the United States (SIECUS), will be a major participant in the conference. Dr. Calderone has served as Medical Director,

ABORTION COUNSELING, NFORMATION AND REFERRAL SERVICES

Abortions up to 24 weeks of pregnancy are now legal in New York State. There are no residency restrictions at cooperating hospitals. Only the consent of the patient and the performing physician is required.

If you think you are pregnant, consult your doctor. Don't delay. If you choose to have an abortion, early abortions are simpler and safer.

Abortions should be performed by Board certified obstetricians and gynecologists, with Board certified anesthesiologists attending, in fully licensed and accredited general hospitals. You should not have to pay exorbitant charges for any of these services.

If you need information or professional assistance, including immediate registration into available hospitals, telephone The Abortion Information Agency, (212-873-6650), which has helped counsel and place more than 22,000 women for safe, legal hospital abortions.

Editorials and Commentary

Students should take action now

great deal of controversy concerning the use of four letter words by this newspaper.

Perhaps the most interesting aspect of this situation is that various members of our academic community expect this writer, as editor-in-chief. to perform the censorship duties to which they feel this paper should be subjected.

In addition various pressures have been brought to bear to insure that reasons we feel that the academic community should be fully informed concerning our policy on four letter words and the nature of current censorship.

Although there are considerable differences of opinion among members of the newspaper staff regarding the use of four letter words, we feel that the imposition of arbitrary censorship by the editor-in-chief is no different than arbitrary censorship by President Jenkins, the SGA Legislature, or any other person or group.

This writer seldom uses four letter words in copy and feels that the use of these words often decreases the efficiency of communication; however, it must be kept in mind that there are various opinions on this subject just as there are various opinions on newspaper it WILL remain open to the subject of politics, religion, or even sex.

If this newspaper is to maintain the standards it has set in its policy of presenting the views of all who desire to be heard then it cannot arbitrarily rule out the use of four letter words just as it cannot rule out conservative or liberal opinion, or the subjects of religion and sex.

Freedom of the press is founded upon the presumption that a free interchange of ideas and opinions is vital to the freedom of those who live under the system in question even if there is extreme disagreement with the views presented.

In addition, if a campus newspaper with a readership supposedly of a higher intelligence cannot operate under this basic freedom then it is hard to imagine the continuance of freedom of the press in our nation as a whole.

If this writer, as editor-in-chief, was to refuse to include in this newspaper anything with which he disagreed, the readers would receive only one side of any question - a situation describing not a free newspaper but a propaganda sheet.

Until recently most members of the academic community saw the logic of this position although they may have disagreed with the views ultimately presented. Now, however, it seems that somebody of higher position than any in this community has voiced extreme displeasure with this policy.

As editor-in-chief this writer was suddenly informed by Dr. Jenkins

Dave Ittermann

Managing Editor

There seems to have developed a that the use of four letter words would cease or else.

The "or else," according to Dr. Jenkins, is that should the newspaper fail to follow this procedure it will either be shut down or this writer will be subjected to the student

At least one of these actions will take place for this writer received a notice to appear for a preliminary student judiciary hearing in the Dean of Men's office, with the notation this censorship takes place. For these that "the charges will be explained at the hearing."

Dean of Men, James Mallory, stated at the hearing that this case is the same one which he and the SGA behind-the-scenes attempts at attorney general, Henry Gorham, earlier referred to an impartial board to be drawn from all judiciaries. The determination was to be whether this newspaper can maintain a checking account off campus as has been previously approved by the Publications Board.

> Now, according to Gorham, the matter is being referred to the SGA Men's Honor Council for a determination of individual responsibility as a question of honor. The "trial" is to be held Thursday at 5:30 p.m. on the third floor of Wright Building.

> In spite of this entire situation, it is this writer's firm conviction that as long as he is editor-in-chief of this ALL who wish to be heard, subject only to the laws of this city, state, and nation and the ethics of journalism, regardless of intimidation. We might not agree with what you say or how you say it, but we will

This University now has a free and representative newspaper, something which cannot be said of its student government.

At this point we must advocate a course of action long honored by the American tradition. The present structure of government on this campus does not appear to represent the students and gives no indication that it will. Revolution seems to be the only answer.

It will defeat the purposes of this action, however, if violence is used. The revolution can very easily be non-violent and take the form of a concerned group of students forming an election committee and holding a new election for the SGA offices with of course the current members eligible to run as all other students.

This political revolution could dramatically show that there are students on this campus willing to take action to have honest representation and representatives of integrity. Le will be necessary, however, for the student body to rally behind the idea if it is to work. Your representation in the student government has melted to a mere grease spot. It is up to the students whether it will completely evaporate with the curtain of censorship slamming down on the campus paper.

Edwards responds to Whitley

Editor's Note: This article was received under the same circumstances as Bob Whitley's in the last issue of Fountainhead. The length of this article, as did Whitley's, precludes publishing it in The Forum. We are therefore printing it, as we did Whitley's article, as a personal column.

> By DAVE EDWARDS (SGA Legislator)

I am writing to comment on letters to The Forum submitted by Mr. Harper and Mr.

Mr. Harper, first of all, I probably knew more about the recall petition circulated last fall than you and Mr. Whitley put together. I did hours of research on the petition and on my bill before I submitted it to the Legislature. I went all through our constitution checking on the constitutionality of the question and in the process found the constitution vague not only on the issue of recall, but on nearly everything

Secondly, I still say there is no real constitutional way anybody including myself could be recalled as the way the constitution states it. There is no format provided at all. If you want to go into minute detail the section of the constitution states:

"... The petition to recall ... shall not be valid unless it contains the signatures of at least fifteen (15) percent of the student body." That is the format, Mr. Harper. The petition circulated last fall did go by that format. It was not the persons who petitioned, but rather the Review Board and the attorney general who violated the constitution. I'm sure that those who petitioned thought that they were going about it in the right manner. And if I may add, I don't think it would have been anymore trouble to do it the way the Review Board the attorney general, and yourself say it should have been done.

But unfortunately, Mr. Harper, I do not care about minute details, or unlimited red tape. I did not sign the petition particularly because I liked it. I signed it because I know at least fifteen percent of my constituents did. And isn't my job to represent not only all of my constituency but also that segment.

Lastly, Mr. Harper, my bill called for a vote of confidence from the student body (I would have agreed even on an individual precinct basis). I feel that the majority of the students do not care for me or Mr. Whitley as politicians, rather for what we can do for them. I sincerely believe I have more of the students' interest in mind than my own.

I have a suggestion. That is that you go to the next legislature meeting and observe. You may not agree with what I do, but I don't think you'll agree with the rest of my fellow legislators. Just watch and see whose interests are promoted at the meeting. Not yours, I assure you.

As for Mr. Whitley, I am flattered that a bigshot like himself would take out time to even comment on me. I appreciate it.

Mr. Whitley, I have some questions for you. Were you not put into office by the Fountainhead when it printed every mistake Len Mancini ever made? Were you not its political ally in the election last spring?

If more students signed a petition to recall you than there were voters who put you in office, is it not your place to ask for a legitimate recall? (I believe you could)? Isn't everything you've ever instigated while you have been in office been a political move, mainly to promote Bob Whitley?

Did I not introduce a bill to have a voluntary referendum vote of confidence from the student body with a provision of recall if only the students did not have confidence in us as representatives in their government, not ours. Think about what I've asked, Bob. Is not all of it true? You are a good president, Bob, but I just think if you asked the students what they want you would be a better one.

As for you referring to me as an ally of the Fountainhead, I guess I am. But I have not always been. Since I've been in the SGA, I havefound out the horrible truth that most of what they say is true. That they genuinely have more of an interest in the welfare of the students than a majority of the student government.

As for its coverage, especially that of Jim Eichling and Jackie Stancill of SGA meetings, it is very compromising. That is why I ask students to attend these meetings (Monday, 5 p.m., 3rd floor Wright Building). If they do not believe what they read, let them go take a look. I believe these students would leave laughing at triviality but horrified as to what is supposed to be a representative body. (If I may add here, Mr. Harper has never to my knowledge attended a meeting and Mr. Whitley seldomly has sat through one of these meetings).

As a last course of action, I will, as I have before, ask the students to take an interest in their government. And your voice will be heard if you want it to be. Agree or disagree with me, or anybody else who is a student representative, just give a damn about something other than yourself as individuals.

I don't blame students such as Edward Harper for questioning me. I welcome it. At least they care. That is all I want for people to do, only to care.

The Doctor's Bag

By ARNOLD WERNER, M.D. (Copyright 1970 by College Press Service)

QUESTION: My problem is that I can't seem to get out of bed in the morning. When my alarm goes off, I seem to automatically turn it off, put my head under the covers and go back to sleep. I'm late for classes, appointments... everything! Somewhere I read that people who hate to get out of bed in the morning are actually hiding something and don't want to face "reality." Is there any truth in this? I have destroyed three alarm clocks in the last three years. I am a senior.

ANSWER: Oversleeping can be caused by a number of things. Your letter is sketchy on detail and you do not mention what time you go to bed, how well you sleep or whether the condition varies in severity from time to time. Some people do sleep late as a means of avoiding responsibilities, but in my experience, they usually avoid responsibilities in other ways

People may have difficulty getting up in the morning because they sleep poorly or have gone to sleep too late. Paradoxically it would seem, if one sleeps too many hours, it can be very difficult to get up. There are different depths of sleep and rising from a very deep slumber can result in confusion and persistent lethargy. Most people have experienced this when they have been awakened suddenly soon after falling asleep. Deep stages of sleep occur rhythmically throughout the night and if your normal waking time tends to fall in the middle of one of these deep sleep periods it may be hard to get out of bed. As a beginning, I suggest you set your alarm for a half hour earlier than you usually do. If you still have difficulty getting up, I'd try an hour earlier. If this fails you can try other techniques such as leaving the shades up so that the morning light will tend to gradually awaken you. You could also try an alarm clock device which turns on an electric appliance and hook it up to a bright lamp placed across the room.

Since this has been going on for three years and you are now a senior, I wonder if an alarm clock that would turn on a tape recorder of your mother yelling at you might not solve the problem!

QUESTION: Why would a male who has been stimulated enough to have an erection not be able to ejaculate with further stimulation. Every so often this happens to my boyfriend and it bothers him immensely. Could he have some sort of mental block or is it some sort of physical condition?

ANSWER: The term used for the situation you describe is ejaculatory incompetence. The occasional inability to ejaculate is nothing to cause alarm. It can be due to fatigue, a temporary decrease in interest in sex, a little too much to drink, or a variety of preoccupations. When this condition occurs continually, the person has a psychological disturbance and is in need of treatment. Although this disorder is quite rare, it is suffered by men who have had experiences in life which have made ejaculation unpleasant. For instance, some men raised in puritanical circumstances have come to believe that ejaculation for other than reproduction is evil. In other situations, the condition stems from a fear of making a woman pregnant; or, concerns over the cleanliness of the vagina assume an obsessional quality with resulting disaster.

Once the symptom becomes established it tends to be self-sustaining and treatment is designed to decondition a man to the fear of ejaculation. This is discussed in Master and Johnson's book, "Human Sexual Inadequacy," Little, Brown, & Co., 1970.

The level of stimulation necessary to reach orgasm is considerably higher than that necessary to obtain an erection. Most men (especially young men) will testify that erections are easy to come by, but there is more work involved in orgasm.

QUESTION: Is there any truth to the rumor that it is possible to ignite intestinal gas with a match? If so, what chemical reactions would cause this phenomenon? A friend and I have a sizable wager riding on this matter and decided you would be the definitive authority. We were afraid of experimenting on ourselves for fear of bodily injury.

ANSWER: Every once in a while I wonder if writing this column has had any effect on my professional reputation. The confidence that you express in me offers little reassurance. The gas you refer to has the medical name of flatus. which is at least as good a sound as the more frequently used vernacular term. The composition of this gas is primarily carbon dioxide, although generous amounts of hydrogen, methane, and hydrogen sulfide are also present. The latter three substances are ignitable. Blue and yellow flames are possible. I have seen a demonstration of this but cannot recommend experimentation because of the obvious dangers. It is probably against some dormitory rule anyway.

Sobbing letter

To Fountainhead:

In reference to Bob Whitley's sobbing letter, Feb. 71, I would like to say that if Mr. Whitley wishes to attack the Fountainhead in print, that's fine because it's the paper's job to print and print it will. But as for his attack on -Mr. Edwards--well, this is against a judicial policy, that of the right of the accused to face

True, it is very nice to be able to write down one's opinion of another student because the accused cannot defend himself until the following issue of the paper at the earliest.

If Mr. Whitley is as eloquent a speaker as he pretends to be on "Open Mike" he should at east be able to talk to a fellow human being in

As a resident in Scott, I believe that Mr. Edwards is representing me. And as for Mr. dwards' "protest" against his fellow students, what protest? Mr. Edwards is trying to rally the pathetic students on this campus to action. He loes not tell them what action to take, he imply wants them to take some form of ction. Pro, con, up, down, left, or right, he oesn't care. He only asked for the students to et off their duffs and take part.

Also, Mr. Edwards does worry about his onstituents' confidence as it is plain to see that Whitley does not. Why should Mr. Whitley worry? He has been elected and the Review Board will not let him, THE PRESIDENT, be Maybe it would be nice if Mr. Whitley worried a little more instead of being the omnipotent leader of a government that considers itself infallible. Print on Whitley but you better take a poll to see who reads, much less believes, all you say.

Just one more thing, Mr. Whitley. If you are afraid that Mr. Edwards will receive more column inches than you do, then why don't you try to get the students involved and try to pass some things that this school needs? For you see, Mr. Whitley, you are a politician in the middle of the road.

So live on, print on, and stay like you are and the school may remember you for a day or two after you leave.

Sincerely, Robert J. Barrow

Contest

To Fountainhead:

The question I raised in the Feb. 2 issue of the Fountainhead concerning the Women's Residence Council and visitation had been answered by the time my letter was published. A sheet of rules for visitation was circulated to the dorm residents. It stated how, when and where visitation would be enacted. The WRC seems to have done something towards achieving visitation.

This still does not solve the problem of abundant apathy among the women residents. For example, in the elections for White Ball Queen, only some 150 girls even bothered to vote. The elections were taken to each floor where the hall procters held mandatory hall meetings. When the unconcern spreads to even the elections for a beauty contest, then it has gone too far.

Eileen O. Smith

Med school

To Fountainhead:

I just finished reading the Feb. 2 issue. It was the best yet. There is no doubt in my mind that this University, at last, is ready for the "big time."

I realize that this University is often judged by its publications since they portray an image to people who are not familiar with our students.

I want ECU to have the medical school and especially a new art building. What better way is there to impress our state legislators with ECU's readiness for these things than to send them each an issue of the Fountainhead? I'm sure that they will enjoy reading it, especially the K. Finch cartoons. Maybe you could do a feature on the legislators, you know, to make them feel good. Better still why not get Finch to do a cartoon showing them all finding themselves with cases of VD and not being able to find medical attention because of the lack of doctors.

Maybe they would then realize that ECU must have the coveted medical school.

Lack of rights

To Fountainhead:

About 5 p.m. Sunday I called the Plaindealer collective to check out a story. The only information they had at that time was that Madame Binh of the Provisional Revolutionary Government had told some of the larger underground newspapers in the United States to spread the word that 10,000 American troops had invaded Laos on Saturday. "The PRG has asked for nation-wide demonstrations and protests on Wednesday." That night on the news South Vietnamese troops officially crossed the border into Laos.

Now some will argue that Madame Binh cannot be as reliable as UPI or AP, but I know from past experiences that when PRG breaks some news to the People, Uncle Sam usually says the same thing in different words shortly thereafter. I don't intend to argue this point to anyone.

The point I wish to make is that while the majority of the registered voters in the United States are supposedly against the war in Southeast Asia, our elected Commander-in-Chief continues to expand the war at will, and the American people refuse to become outraged by this misrepresentation. We are afraid even to go so far as to question the purpose for any such actions as the President sees fit to take. Dissent has become Un-American rather than a basic right in a free society.

Please put aside the fear of being un-American this Wednesday. Come to the Post Office downtown for one short hour between 12 and 1 p.m. and protest the needless killings that go on day after day. If you don't do it nobody will. How many more will have to die before we open our eyes and raise our voices?

Pray for Peace, George Holmes

Confidence

To Fountainhead:

We do not feel that Mr. Edwards should worry near as much as Mr. Whitley and most of the others in the SGA about lacking confidence from the students.

If they would begin speaking out for the students and try to get them involved with their student government, we could endorse them as student representatives too.

Unfortunately right now we have no STUDENT government.

Not 'damn'

To Fountainhead:

Haven't you heard? God's last name is not "damn." Your "Fountainhead Follies" (Feb. 2, p. 4) added nothing to our student newspaper; it only detracted. We can understand neither the necessity nor any logical reason for such profound obscenity. Obviously, there was no social value for printing that particular cartoon.

We are by no means prudish or closed-minded; in fact, we're quite liberal Those of us who have signed this letter have supported your efforts to bring East Carolina's newspaper to the forefront of campus publications. Black cloud

To Fountainhead:

Upon later investigation, I discovered the smoke to be originating from (grab this eco-freaks) our own physical plant.

It seems to me that if the science department students can detect and stop chemical pollutants in the distant Tar River, then noticing and halting the pollution in the air above ECU should pose no problem.

Although I am not aware of the chemical properties and affects of the smoke, I doubt its healthful benefits.

Also, Lowry, who considers it his duty to condemn eyesores, remove safety hazards, and protect our ecological system, stopping his own, black belching smoke should be right up his chimney. Or alley. Ironic?

We the undersigned feel that David Edwards. SGA Legislator, has done more in behalf of the students than you Mr. Whitley. And if you ever come down from your ivory political tower to fight for the rights of the students that put you in your office, we will be happy, but yet surprized.

Exactly how?

To Fountainhead:

At one of the last SGA meetings, David Edwards brought up a vote of confidence bill which was found unconstitutional because with a legislator behind it, it would be politically ramming a recall election down the students

I as a student disagree. I think there has been enough turmoil within the SGA to warrent possible consideration of a recall election or in other words a vote of confidence.

It was brought up at the meeting that only a student could set up a confidence vote. If I as a student wished to have representatives recalled how EXACTLY would I go about it constitutionally?

I thought the attorney general at the meeting tactfully avoided answering this question when it was put to him several times.

I support David Edward's concern for the students rights which I feel are not being adequately represented. I still wish students would take the time to attend the SGA meetings and see how they are being used as a stepping stone for their representatives to politically and socially promote themselves. I say this out of general concern for the student's

Their business

To Fountainhead

Brenda Forbis, in her editorial, showed a complete lack of understanding of the bill to limit campaign expenses. The money that is being wasted is the money of the candidates and the party. How they want to spend it is their business, isn't it?

Miss Forbis seems to think it is a shame that they should spend the money to "con" the American public. Why not? Ford, GM, IBM, Hunts, Gulf, and others spend millions every month to con the American public.

You see. Miss Forbis, it is not the amount spent to con the public that is important. The American public would be conned if it was $5.1 million or $5.00. The important thing is who gets money for campaigns, where do they get it and how is the money spent.

This bill that you seem to support is but a bone thrown to an ignorant mass (you and me). still come from areas of The $5.1 million special interest (oil, gas, dog food, etc.) and thus the politician would still be in the debt of the money men.

This bill only assures us that the Democrats and the Republicans will spend the same amount of money. Big deal. There is no method to keep accounts in this bill. Besides, who is going to check on it? Why, the Democrats and the Republicans, naturally!

We all know that the government does have its regulatory agencies and every red blooded American knows how honest and efficient they are. Don't we?

What is needed is an amount of money calibrated by area according to cost, provided by the federal government to each candidate for national and state office who can get his name on the ballot, not just the Democrats and the Republicans. This of course would be paid for by the tax payers. Too heavy a tax load for J.Q. Public: well let's just eliminate the oil depletion allowances thus broadening the tax base, but, that's another letter (also revolution!).

Judicial system needs changing

By JIM EICHLING (Staff Writer)

The SGA Constitution is being re-written by a special legislative committee. Hopefully, the judicial section will receive more than a mere face

The Key states, "The heart of ECU's judicial system is the Honor Code." Article II, section 2 of the SGA Constitution says, "It shall be the responsibility of every student at ECU to obey the Honor Code prohibiting lying, cheating, or stealing. It shall be the further responsibility . . . to abide by the Campus Code by conducting himself or herself as a lady or gentleman at all times. The attorney general shall be appointed by the respective deans to investigate and prosecute for the judicial system." Our present judicial system entails 12 different courts and councils; 6 deal specifically with violations of the Honor or Campus Code. These 6 courts should be eliminated. "Stealing" is a civil offense and should be treated as such in civil court and not on campus. "Lying" and "conduct" are moral offenses and one cannot legislate morality

As a state citizen in a state school the only determining factor for disciplinary action should be academic in nature. A state school has no authority to impose pentalities for offenses in the realm of "ungentlemenly" conduct. One can be a citizen in good standing and still not be a gentleman. Are there not men in business, tax payers at that, who are not ethical in their financial dealings? Certainly this is "ungentlemanly"; nonetheless, it is condoned by the state.

What has our present system given us? Jeff Bowman was student manager of the Union soda shop and had an argument with his boss, Joe Clark, head of the student book store. Bowman had said, "Mr. Clark, I think you are a bastard." For this use of the word "bastard" Bowman was brought to the Men's Judiciary Council. If this labor-management disagreement had happened off campus, the person would have lost his job and that would have been the end of it. Robert Lai lacks only his student teaching hours to graduate. The Student Teachers Committee ruled that he not be allowed to student teach because he had been associated with drug abuse. In civil court, Lai had been found "not guilty" of any drug violations. Lai appealed to the Review Board who affirmed the Student Teachers Committee. In decision made by a state court. SGA Vice President Phil Dixon was subject to a form of "double jeopardy" earlier this year. He was found "not guilty" of assault in civil court. yet was tried on campus for "conduct effect, the SGA judicial system over-ruled a unbecoming." Should ECU be viewed as something apart from society? If this were a private school, I'd say. "Right on. Have a ball with your kangaroo courts." But this is not a private school, it is a state school, incorporate in, and not apart from. the state. I will readily acknowledge that the abolition of student courts may be impractical since the state courts are already overloaded.

However, the ideal of the "best judicary judges least" should be recognized. If there must be a student judiciary, it should be limited to one body, a body selected with stringent qualifications. The archaic Honor Code should be redefined to deal specifically with academic matters. The Campus Code should be abolished altogether. The proper function of a state school must be recognized. The SGA Constitution can no longer be a front for insidious maternal rule; it must be a showcase in purity of the democratic process. Thoreau said, "The best government governs least." If we are incapable of purifing the entire SGA, we certainly can start the process by the purification of one segment of that government.

I hope that in the rewriting of the Constitution an effort is made to initiate vital changes, not just an effort to placate the administration.

Benign and vacuous describes material

By JACKIE STANCILL

On Friday of last week we read on the front page of the News and Observer an article about Apollo 14's preparation for descent to the moon, and beside this article we found another about three fundamentalist preachers trying to have certain reading material banned in Rocky Mount schools. There is irony in the fact that such progressive and regressive activities should take place at the same time, and the irony says a lot about human nature.

The preachers have claimed that children in junior high and high schools are being subjected to subversive literature in textbooks and parallel books. Their targets for disgust range from John Steinbeck and Somerset Maughm to Martin Luther King and Dick Gregory. The preachers point out in horror what they consider examples of "Communist sympathies, profanity, violence, and teachings against parental authority." In particular they object to the words "damn" and "hell." All of which serves to reemphasize that man's sensibilities do not necessarily keep up with his capabilities. It has become almost standard to ask, "If we can put men on the moon, why can't we get rid of poverty?" We might also ask, "If we can break the bonds of earth atmosphere and the pull of gravity, why can't we break the bonds of narrow-mindedness and the pull of the past?"

If anything, reading material in public schools, and even on the college level, is benign and vacuous. There is not enough to stimulate and challenge young readers, not enough to wring from their minds the insight and perception that result from genuine thought. The developing mind must be exposed to valid issues and relevant ideas of all kinds or there will be no learning process and no legitimate value judgments.

The good preachers are incredibly naive to believe they could force shallowness on young people through banning school books, even if shallowness were desirable. Television, radio, magazines, and simple daily conversations are far more "corrupted" in their definition of the term. And life itself can be far more traumatic. when we consider poverty and war and pollution. We can only feel relieved that the preachers failed in their book-banning attempt and hope that some day man will be as wise as he is intelligent.

Frosh initiation

To Fountainhead:

Every school has its own policy of initiation for its freshmen. Most follow the same old trend such as eating poison ivy or having your hair burned off, but ECU has a policy that is far superior to any I have ever heard before. Some students may not even be aware that this practice exists, but all should know of it for it is a classic example of originality.

My roommate and I have no heat in our room. What a thrilling idea. When it is 12 degrees outside, it is 13 degrees in our room. We have been delighted with the results.

Each morning as my teeth chatter, I check my bite. I have teeth that are aligned fairly well, but my roommate has found that he has crooked molars. Such are the facts of life.

If we were some of those long-haired hippie-type weirdos, there could be assets for the security of ECU in freezing a room. Hippie-weirdos are always trying to get people to do what they do - smoke trees and shrubbery, eat small animals, and take lots of drugs. This leads to big trouble on many campuses. But, if the hippie-weirdos were blue from cold each morning as my roommate and I, they would not be heeded by the student body. People would just say, "Don't listen to them, they are blue." So that would straighten out that mess.

We can also put water on our face and chest and leave the covers off when we go to bed at night. The true artist would appreciate the intricate designs that would be found the next morning. I'm going to do a profile of Leo Jenkins tonight.

We are thinking of covering our floor with water and opening a skating rink. Does that conflict with state housing regulations? Please let us know. It would be free, of course.
