Wilbur Hobby stumps for campus vote

THE GOVERNOR'S RACE came to ECU Wednesday full blast with Wilbur

Hobby countering pointed questions with blunt answers.

By BRUCE SAVAGE
Staff Writer

Speaking before a crowd of about 200 students yesterday, Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Wilbur Hobby brought his "keep the big boys honest" campaign to the ECU campus. Hobby, president of the North Carolina AFL-CIO, stated he had entered the race after "listening in vain" for the major candidates to speak on the issues facing the people of North Carolina.

'NOT A NEED?'

He asked, "And is there not a need for someone to speak out on the issues and propose programs that will benefit the people and not the big boys of government and business?" "In the three years Pat Taylor and Skipper Bowles have crossed the state campaigning for governor, they have never addressed the 'bread-and-butter' issues."

TAX REFORM

Hobby continued by claiming that tax reform must be one of the major issues dealt with by a candidate for the office of governor. "The poor, average taxpayer of North Carolina is, over and over, being discriminated against in favor of the big boys. Tax reform must be undertaken in order to help him."

After his formal speech, Hobby then answered questions from the audience.

STUDENT VOTE

On the issue of the student vote, Hobby stated that he supported students voting in their college towns and would fire Alex Brock, executive secretary of the North Carolina State Board of Elections, if elected.

'LESSEN PENALTIES'

He was then asked his position on the legalization of marijuana. Hobby answered by saying that legalization should be handled by the Congress of the United States, but he would work for a lessening of the penalties if elected.

On the question of abortion, Hobby flatly stated, "That's between a woman and her doctor."

'IMMORAL WAR'

Hobby then stated his opposition to the increased bombing in Southeast Asia and support for the immediate withdrawal of all American forces from "this ugly, immoral war in Vietnam."

When asked about the ecologically-endangered Bald-Head Island, Hobby stated that he had been opposed to the commercial development of the island and promised that "no road built during my administration will lead to the golf courses on Bald-Head."

NO-FAULT SYSTEM

Hobby then charged that the insurance rates for automobiles in North Carolina are discriminatory. He proposed a "no-fault insurance system" and up to a 16% reduction in rates for good drivers, regardless of the fact that they're 25 or not."

He was then asked if he favored a four-year medical school at ECU. He responded by saying that ECU should move to a two-year system as soon as the school can handle it, and then move to a four-year system later.

LAW OF THE LAND

Hobby responded to the question of busing by stating, "The busing issue is going to be settled by the law of the land, and I don't care who the governor is, he is going to have to obey the law of the land."

PRESIDENTIAL POLITICS

Asked about his opinion towards presidential politics, Hobby stated that he would support the Democratic nominee. Asked if that meant he would support George Wallace if he were the nominee, he said that if it came down to Wallace or Nixon, he would support Wallace. "Everyone knows Wallace is a racist, but few realize Nixon is one also. He's a sophisticated racist and that is even more dangerous."

JENKINS

Finally, when asked what he thought of ECU President Leo Jenkins, Hobby said, "He's done a lot for ECU. You should see him operate in the Legislature."

Class boycott planned to protest war involvement

By GARY CARTER
Staff Writer

Campuses in North Carolina and across the United States, dormant for months, have come to life again in the wake of the Nixon administration's re-escalation of the Indochina War. Plans for protests and strikes on several North Carolina campuses have been set for tomorrow.

Here at ECU a boycott of classes has been called for Friday by concerned students. SGA President Rob Lusana has endorsed the strike and urges all students to take part. He issued the following statement Wednesday:

"I am one hundred per cent opposed to the bombing in North Vietnam. The killing of the Vietnamese, whether done by infantrymen or bombs dropped from planes is nothing short of murder without cause or reason. The time has come for all of us to realize that our error in Vietnam was not a strategic one but rather, a moral one."

Plans are being made for picketing to take place in front of the Union at 1:00. At 7:00 in the evening, Father Charles Mulholland will lead a candlelight protest on the Mall. At that time, there will be talks, singing and finally, a procession through Greenville which will regroup at the Tar River.

The student president at N. C. State University has called for a statewide boycott of classes and a massive protest march in Raleigh on Friday. Current plans are for the march to begin on the State campus at 12:00, terminating at the State Capital.

"We are asking all North Carolina students and members of the university communities to boycott classes Friday and join us in protest against this massive re-escalation of the war in Indochina," stated Gus Gusler, NCSU student president.

Duke University students have stoned a week-long vigil against the war at the ROTC building there. Tuesday, they held a guerilla theater performance with students splashing each other with human blood. Further plans are being made for Saturday when Duke students plan to picket U.S. installations in the Durham area.

Nationwide, the National Student Association has called for a campus strike throughout the United States for Friday. Violence erupted earlier in the week at the University of Maryland where riot-equipped officers broke up the obstruction of U.S. 1 by several hundred protesters. There were no arrests.

Washington, D. C. has also been the scene for several demonstrations against the increased bombing during the past week. Several hundred persons have been arrested there for disruption and obstructing traffic.

Anyone interested in going to Raleigh for the march on Friday, especially those able to provide transportation, contact Gary Carter at the Fountainhead office, in order that plans can be made.

Thonen vs. Jenkins

By BECKY NOBLE

A recent order for a trial for $25,000 in damages against ECU President Leo Jenkins resulted in an appeal to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

As yet no court date has been set to hear the appeal of the order made by U.S. District Judge John D. Larkins Jr.

The damage suit was brought by two former ECU students, Robert Thonen and William Schell. They were suspended by the University Board on May 10, 1971 for printing an allegedly obscene four-letter word in the April 1, 1971 edition of Fountainhead.

STEMMED FROM LETTER

Obscenity charges and subsequent suspension of Thonen and Schell arose from a letter to the Forum section of the editorial page. The letter was published during last spring's drive to obtain visitation in the dormitories. Thonen was editor-in-chief of the Fountainhead when the letter was printed.

The letter, written by Schell, contained as its complimentary close the alleged obscene four-letter word directed at Jenkins. The body of the letter criticized Jenkins and the administration's efforts to regulate students' morals.

COULD NOT CENSOR

Commenting on his decision to print the letter at the time, Thonen said, "The subject of obscenity had been brought up much earlier this year. I said at the time as editor I didn't approve four letter words but could not in good conscience censor four letter words without a specific statute to that effect."

"Regardless of people's views expressed in a campus paper," Thonen explained, "my responsibility is to keep, especially the pages of the Forum, completely and absolutely open."

The University, however, viewed the printed letter as "obscene and abusive" to the dignity of Jenkins.

But Judge Larkins did not agree. At the time the judge called for the damages trial he ruled that obscenity in the campus newspaper is not the type of occurrence which would disrupt an orderly and educational process.

However, his conclusion is being challenged by Jenkins' lawyer, Andrew Vanort, who is basing his appeal on what he considers to be a wrong ruling. "Larkins' conclusion was wrong in that we don't think that the type of speech involved in the case, the vulgar language used by the plaintiff, was Constitutionally protected speech," he said.

"We don't feel a person has the right to direct such abusive language at any individual, as they are fighting words."

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is located in Richmond, Virginia. Both parties contend that they will appeal all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court if possible.

Already Thonen and Schell have won two legal victories in their fight against the University. Just two and a half weeks after their suspension last May they were granted a temporary restraining order by Larkins against the University which, in effect, re-admitted them to classes again. Final exams were already in session.

'We don't think that vulgar language was Constitutionally protected'

Although Schell is not currently enrolled in ECU, he attended classes during second session summer school and fall quarter of 1971. Thonen is presently ineligible for readmission because he is deficient in the number of hours required to return to school.

The other victory came March 30 when Larkins issued a permanent restraining order against any actions of the University against Thonen or Schell, and when he ordered the trial for damages.

These restraining orders show that students are finally gaining ground against the administration in their battle for their rights, and that to gain their rights they have to go to federal courts.

These orders also show that in the field of free speech and press, the double standard which exists between campus newspapers and commercial newspapers is finally being questioned.

Besides Jenkins' appeal to the Court of Appeals, other reaction to Larkins' order for a trial for damages has been in the form of a statement made by Attorney General Robert Morgan, chairman of ECU's Board of Trustees. Said Morgan, "I want to make it clear to the hundreds of people who protested the use of such vulgar language, that the trustees will continue to use every legal means to prohibit such vulgar language from being published in the college newspaper."

OFFENSIVE TO MOST

Defending the University's suspension of Thonen and Schell, Morgan said, "It was the opinion of the administration and the trustees... that the use of such vulgar words not only were offensive to most students of the University but to all the people of North Carolina, and that to prohibit the use of such vulgar words in a college newspaper was reasonable regulation of the freedom of speech guaranteed by the First Amendment."

OPPOSED RULING

Morgan's words were in direct opposition with Larkins' ruling of the day before. Larkins ruled in favor of the students.

Said Larkins, "Publication of newspaper is First Amendment activity in its purest form, and the students do enjoy the right to use school and campus newspapers for expression of ideas. A university may validly limit by direct regulation on exercise of expression so long as such interferes with school discipline."

WOULD NOT DISRUPT

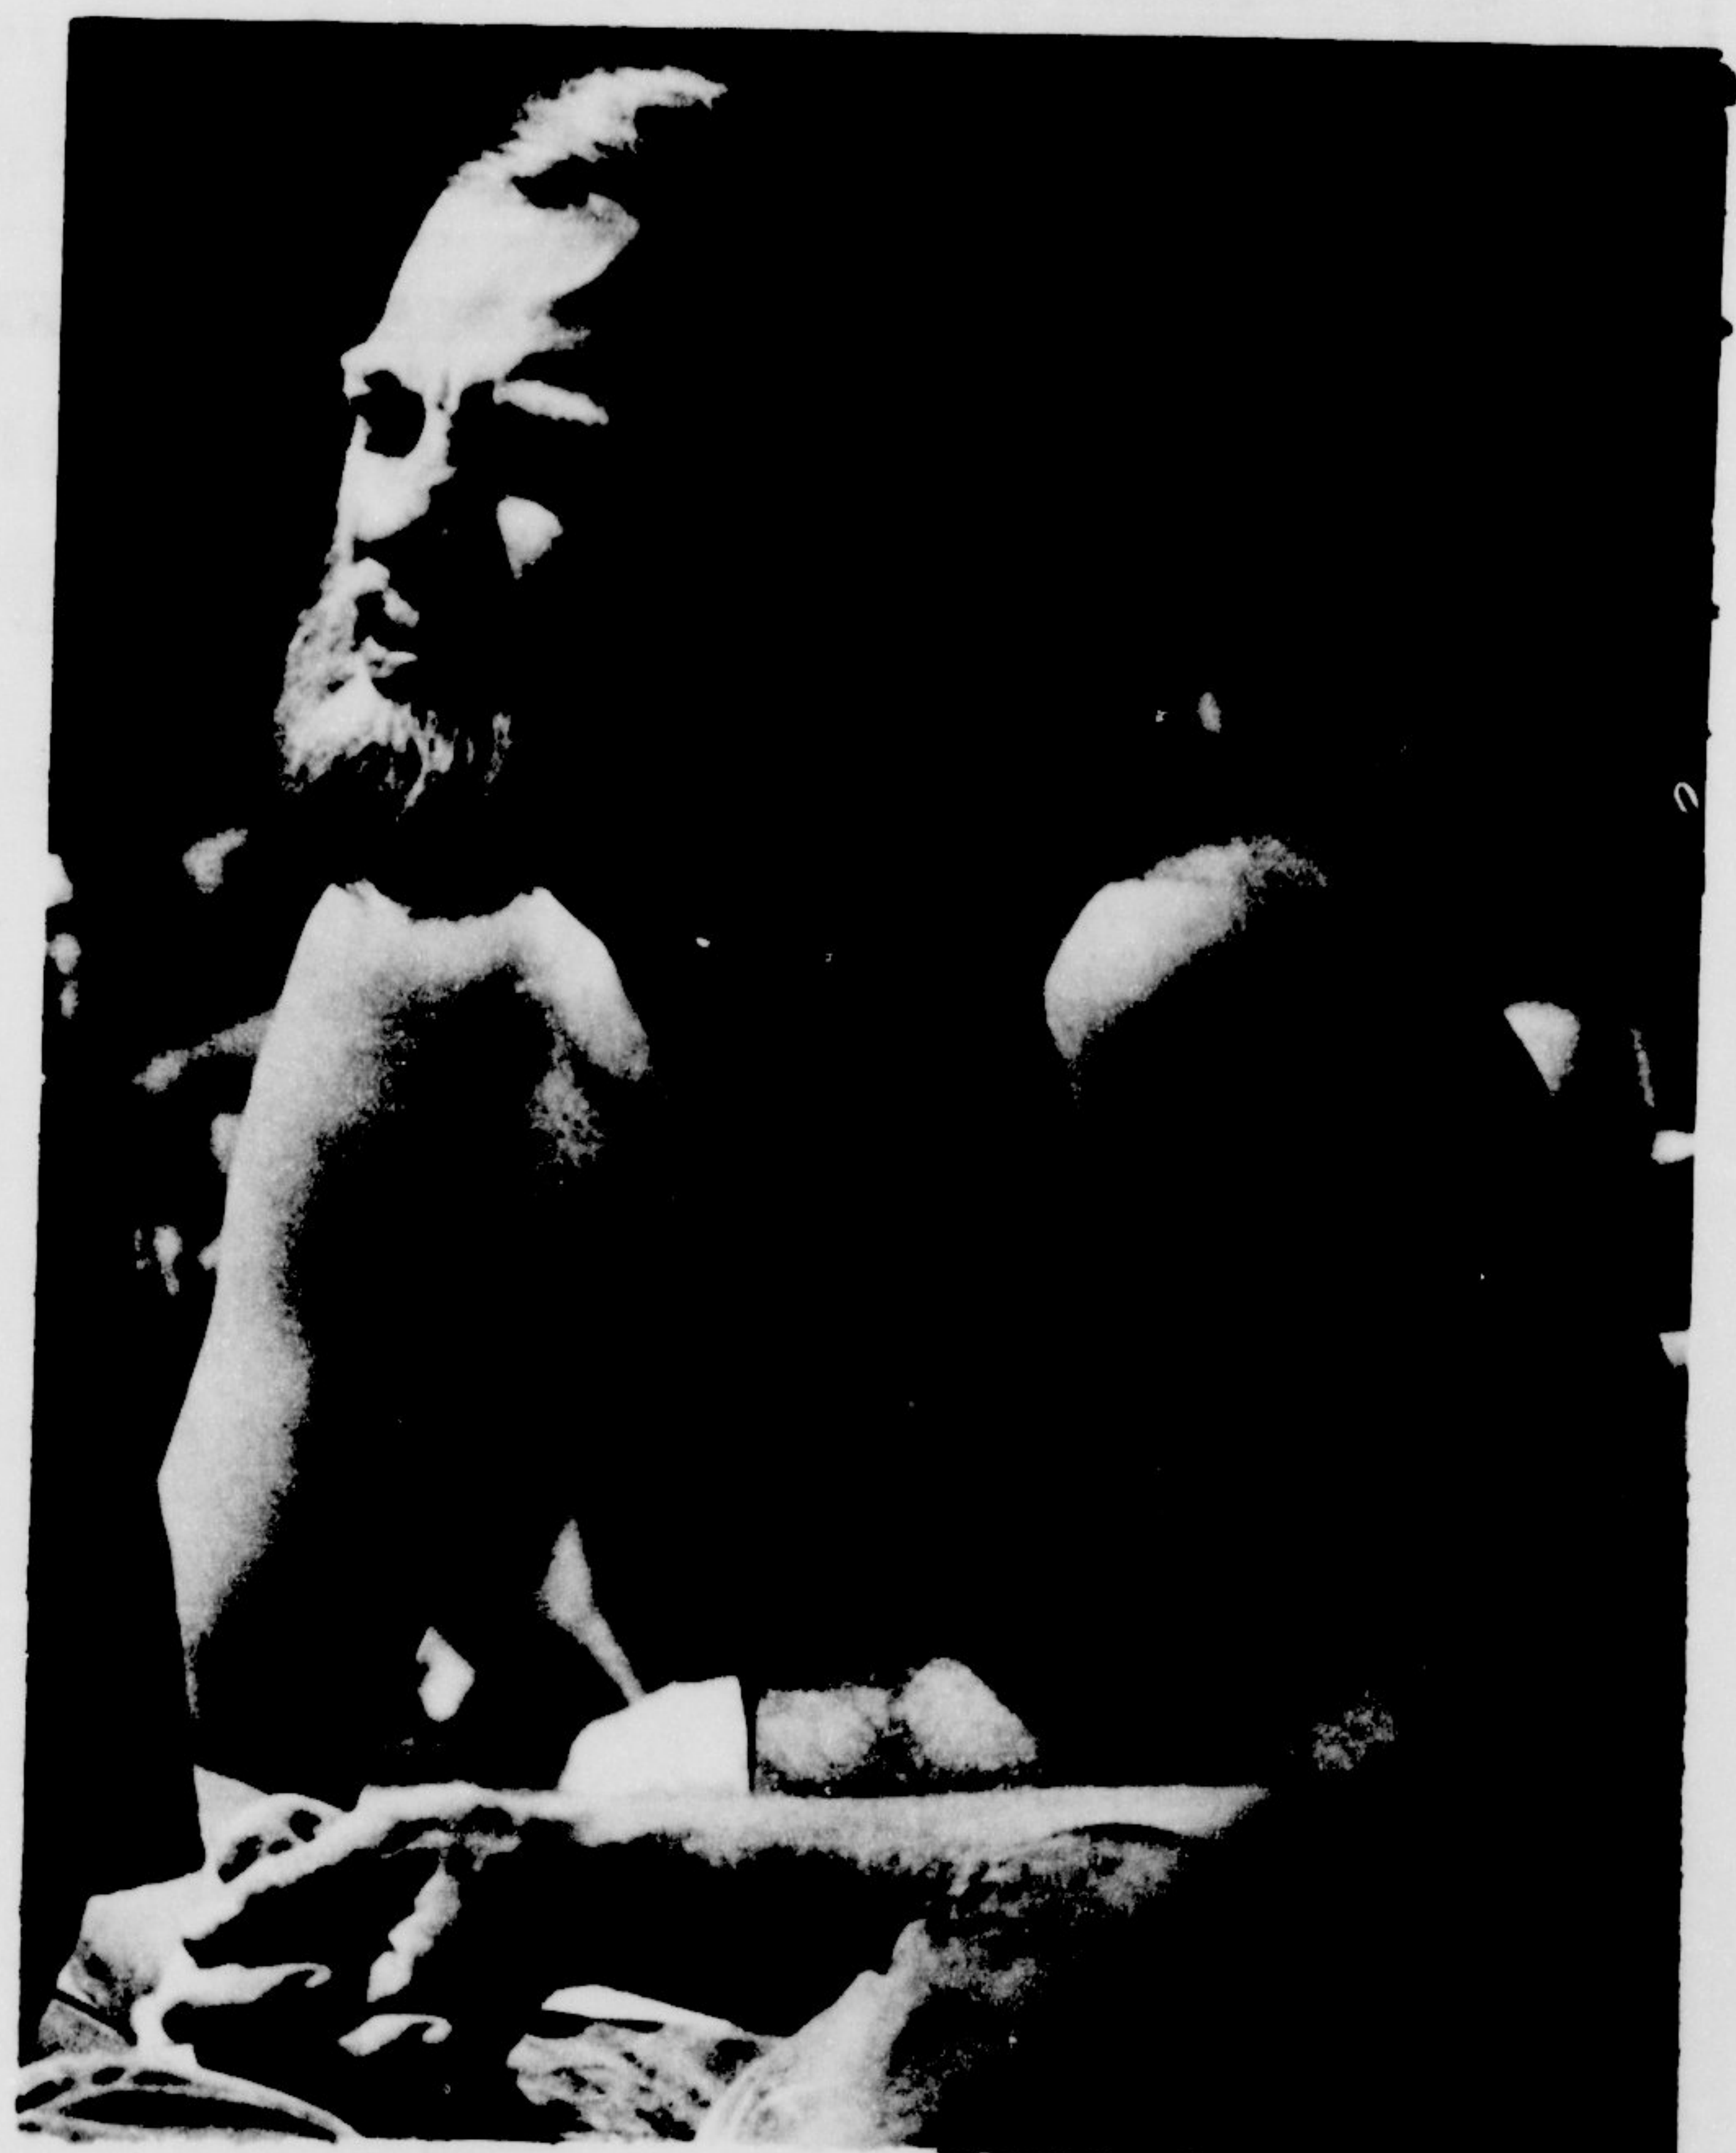

Larkins continued to say that obscenity in a campus newspaper isn't the type of occurrence which would significantly disrupt an orderly and disciplined educational process.

He added, "The fact that certain language might offend and displease school officials is not enough to overcome the right of freedom of expression."

Concluding, Larkins said that there was no evidence that publication of Schell's letter could interfere with discipline.

"There is no showing of disruption as a result," he stated.

Also named in the suit along with Jenkins, are James H. Tucker, dean of student affairs, James Mallory, dean of men, and Henry Gorham who was attorney general of the Student Government Association at the time Thonen and Schell were suspended.

FORMER EDITOR BOB THONEN is still pressing his suit for damages against ECU President Leo Jenkins for his suspension of last spring. Thonen and a co-plaintiff seek $25,000 remuneration from Jenkins and other school officials.

Walk aims for hunger relief

The Greenville Walk for Development will take place on Saturday, April 29, as concerned hikers with strong feet attempt to combat world hunger in a unique way.

The purpose of the walk is to raise money for the fight against hunger. Sponsored nationally by the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation, the "walk" concept began in 1963 when the United Nations appealed to European students to raise money for the hunger battle.

The students responded with an unusual technique—each walker solicited one or more sponsors who promised to donate a certain sum for each mile he walked. The technique spread, and Greenville's Walk for Development will follow a similar format.

Between 100 and 150 hikers have already signed up for the Walk, according to Bob Clyde, Baptist chaplain and one of the project co-ordinators.

"We hope to get up to 300 by the time it starts," said Clyde.

All potential volunteers—those with the concern and physical ability to make the walk—are urged to pick up a walk card from the Baptist Student Union or the Walk table in the Union lobby. Hikers must secure any number of sponsors each—composed of family, friends, or businessmen—who will pledge a certain sum for each mile walked. The card includes a map of the Walk route and checkpoints where the card will be stamped and validated, and where hikers may rest or find food, medical supplies and toilet facilities.

After registration, between 7 and 8 a.m. at Ficklen Stadium, the fun begins. The 25-mile hike route circles in and out of Greenville proper, beginning at the Stadium and ending many turns later at the Baptist Student Center.

The route is intended to provide a view of different living conditions in Greenville. Hikers need not complete the entire walk, but will be paid by their sponsors for each mile covered. Police will accompany the group for security and traffic control.

Should a hiker feel the need to stop before reaching the 25-mile point, he will be taken in a designated car to the Baptist Student Union. Nurses and medical aides will be on hand during the walk, lunch will be provided, and nothing will be postponed because of weather conditions. The walk will go on despite anything Greenville's erratic skies may drop.

The Walk for Development is not a race. Hikers may proceed at their own speed, so long as their walk cards are validated at each checkpoint. Volunteers are urged to wear comfortable, light-colored clothing, woolen socks and walking shoes.

Following the Walk, hikers will return home, undoubtedly to soak weary feet. Within one or two days, they will contact their sponsors for collection of donations. The tax-free donations, in check or money order form, will be brought with the walk cards to the Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. on Fifth Street. Donations should be made out of the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation.

Donations received through the Walk will be put to use in a number of projects. The performances will be at 8:15 tonight through Saturday. Information and reservations can be obtained at the McGinnis box office or by calling 658-6390. Tickets are $1 for students and $2 for the public.

Meadowbrook Day Care Center, begun to combat local poverty by giving children educational and nutritional support, will receive 42.5 percent of the funds.

Another 42.5 percent of the donations will go to an international project, the Ghana "25 Villages" effort, an attempt to bring about social and economic development.

The final 15 percent of the funds will go back to the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation to continue the "walk" program elsewhere in the country. This will help pay for publicity and resource materials, education and publications.

Protests

Rain fell, and the protesters marched Friday to protest the Vietnam War in recent weeks. Composing a group of students from the Hillsborough State University, the march began at 10:00 a.m. and proceeded down the two-lane road for more than three miles. Despite the protesters' onlookers and children, both of whom flashed two-fingered fists at the march. The group of Vietnam Veterans marched arm-in-arm, carrying a banner that read, "Nixon's March on Crucifixion." The group was led by an amputee who lost his leg in the Vietnam War. He was wearing a prosthetic leg that was displayed upside down. Behind this
