Placing emphasis on education. Harper stated that we must "stop looking down our nose at those who earn their keep with their hands." She also stated that she favored putting

"I would like to campaign as a person, but with the political realities beign what they are, I have to campaign as a woman."

So stated Margaret Harper, candidate for Lt. Governor of North Carolina, who brought her candidacy to the ECU campus Wednesday.

Harper, former vice chairman of the Norht

Carolina Democratic Executive Committee and member of the Democratic Study Commission which reformed and modernized the N. C. Democratic Party, spoke to journalism students in the editorial writing class and later to students in the Nursing Building auditorium.

Speaking of why she was running for the office of Lt. Governor, Harper stated that women make up over half the population of North Carolina, but hold less than one per cent of the elected offices in the state. She stated she felt it was time more women became involved in electoral politics.

Harper, who ran unsuccessfully in 1968 and received 150,000 votes, then stated that if she were elected, she would favor the apolishment of the appointive powers of the office of Lt.

She continued by stating that she felt the Lt. Governor should operate as a type of ombudsman who would receive and report grievances to the Governor.

In reference to the ecologically-endangered Bald Head Island, Harper emphasized that she had favored state acquisition of the island, but since the development had already, begun development should be completed if it does not endanger the marshlands.

On the question of out-of-state tuition, she stated that she thought the tuition for out-of-state students to be too high and favored the reform of classifying students 'in-state' and 'out-of-state'

When questioned about the war in Southeast Asia. Harper commented that we "should get out, and shoudl have got out a long time ago." Speaking on the feasibility of having a full-time legislature, she stated her opposition to such a program. She continued by stating that a full-time legislature 'might cause us to lose the non-professional quality that we now have."

She answered a question on capital punishment by stating her "total opposition" to capital punishment.

Speaking m her personal involvement with mental health reform, she emphasized the need for increased help for those who are mentally ill or disturbed

Sanford to speak in Pitt

Terry Sanford, former governor of North Carolina and Democratic presidential hopeful, will be in Pitt County this weekend .

Sanford has tentatively scheduled his activities to begin with a speech Saturday morning at 9:00 at the Holiday Inn in Greenville

Now president of Duke University, Sanford was placed on the presidential ballot by a movement composed entirely of students.

Mrs. Terry Sanford is a member of ECU's Board of Trustees.

National agency asks ban on lead hunting shot

Washington, DC-The National Wildlife Federation has requested that the Secretary of the Interior ban the use of lead shot in hunting waterfowl and its use on some federal lands by the 1973-74 hunting season. An estimated two to three million waterfowl die of lead poisoning each year in the U.S. In an April petition to Secretary Rogers, C.B. Morton, Federation Executive Vice President Thomas Kimball asked that a ban on the use of the controversial lead shot be issued immediately, to become fully effective by the 1973-74 waterfowl hunting season. Morton was urged to issue regulations prohibiting "the use of lead shot in hunting waterfowl and its use on federal lands under Interior Department jurisdiction where waterfowl are likely to ingest it." "Unless you act promptly," Kimball said, "lead shot poisoning will continue to take a needless toll of millions of waterfowl each vear.

The Federation is urging that the use of lead shot be replaced by non-toxic iron shot. According to the petition, "Soft iron shot is non-toxic. It can be mass-produced reliably and economically and could be substituted for lead shot in waterfowl hunting without any adverse environmental effect." For more than a century, lead shot poisoning of waterfowl (ducks, geese, and swans) has been documented. It is estimated that 6,000 tons of lead shot are discharged each year over waterfowl habitat, over 30 billion pellets. Lead shot pellets do not deteriorate after they are discharged and are oftentimes picked up and digested by feeding birds. As the lead erodes from the pellets, malfunction of the birds' gizzards may lead to starvation or highly acute poisoning may occur.

Although losses due to lead shot are likely to be apparent only when a massive kill results, it has been estimated that nearly 25 percent of the Mallard ducks in the Mississippi Flyway ingest lead shot and that nearly 5 percent are afflicted with lead poisoning. Lead shot poisoning has also been found by the Mississippi Flyway Council to be 'an important mortality factor to the waterfowl of the Atlantic Flyway" and has been reported a significant problem in the Pacific and Central Flyways. In recent weeks, lead shot poisoning took an estimated 4,500 geese on the Eastern Shore of Maryland after shot- saturated lake bottoms were exposed near their wintering grounds.

affected and that lead shot poisoning also affects humans, although surprisingly little attention has been given to the effects on human health."

Unlike lead, spent soft iron pellets would oxidize and disintegrate after being discharged and there is no known study indicating that the ingestion of iron is harmful to waterfowl. "Moreover," the petition says, "soft iron shot is as effective as lead shot in killing birds.' Tests have indicated that the iron pellet is adequate for hunting purposes and, 'at least one company ... has affirmed to us that it has the capability of mass-producing soft iron shot to the sporting arms and ammunition manufacturers' specification both reliably and economically."

anyway.

Discrimination in housing against blacks is a commonly known problem. Another form of discrimination in housing is not. That is discrimination against single college students. Housing discrimination against the students of ECU is not readily apparent. In fact, so many of the students were living off campus that last year University administrators passed a regulation requiring students to live in the dormitories until the completion of their sophomore year.

The problem is not in higher rents for students living in apartment complexes with married couples and working people. The Sutton chuckled. problem is in the ridiculously high rents and Another group of apartments is located deposit requirements in the places that will rent behind John's Flowers on Third Street. to students. According to private tenants, John Causey. Most of the apartments in which the problem owner of the florist shop, also owns and rents occurs are privately owned houses divided into out the apartments. When the surveyor asked him if he rented to single students. Sutton replied, 'No we don't rent to them. You know how they are." When the surveyor called as a married student, Sutton readily gave out information.

However, in a later call, when Sutton was asked why he would not rent to single students. he cited lack of parking space as the reason.

"We tried but it didn't work out," he explained. Single students would tend to rent in groups of three or four and would have an automobile each. The apartment complex has the minimum requirement of parking space--one and one-half parking spaces per apartment.

"Plus their hours are irregular. I don't blame them. Let them live it up while they can."

There is a good side to the housing situation, however. Pappy Whitehurst, as he is called by his tenants, owns several houses aroung Greenville that are divided into apartments. He also owns several trailers located in a park on Pactolus highway, just outside of Greenville.

Whitehurst's tenants are pleased with his rental policy. They claim that his rents are fair and his apartments are maintained quite nicely. Ken Smith, a former tenant of Mr. Whitehurst's said. "If you want to fix something up Pappy will supply the materials within reason or he will have it done himself."

Realtors pose another problem for the student. Most of them will not handle student rentals. Only two or three agencies in Greenville will handle student rentals. The others claim that it is too much trouble. Despite this fact the president of the Greenville Realtor's Association, J.L. Harris, says the organization does not condon discrimination of any kind.

SGA resolution calls for tidiness

By BRUCE PARRISH

Suspense reached a climax Monday as Jackie Holland, SGA Speaker, broke a rare, 16-16 tie vote over a resolution concerning "Use of the Legislature Room by 'Responsible Persons'."

The resolution, which elicited lively debate and three vote counts, declared "all organizations using the legislature room will leave the room 'as found' in order under threat of a temporary bar from using said room "

Tim Wehner initiated the legislation in reaction to the disorderly conditions produced by other organizations using the legislature room.

The procedure and criteria for selecting judicial members was also established in a bill entitled 'Selection of Judicial Members' Kathy Holloman introduced the legislation to provide for the process, which was not provided for in the Constitution.

An additional five day-student representatives entered the legislature Monday to fill those open positions. They were Becky Engleman, Tommy Clay, Bruce Parrish, Johnna Studebaker, and Gerald Lovelace

When Causy was questioned about this policy, he refused to answer.

Another problem is the renting of rooms in private homes. The rents in this area range from $25 to $30 per month to $60 per month. Most landlords will allow the students to have kitchen privileges.

However, they will not let them have visitors of the opposite sex in their rooms. And there is usually a certain time by which the student must be home.

"The realtors don't practice discrimination, but the individuals do," Harris stated.

"I believe it's the individual's right to decide whether he wants single boys, married couples, or single girls," he stated.

James L. Lassiter, director of the Equal Opportunity Division of Housing and Urban Development Department in Greensboro, stated that there are no federal laws covering this kind of discrimination either.

"Discrimination because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin is prohibited. But there are no specific statements about students," Lassiter pointed out.

"The only way a student in this situation would have a case is if he or she were refused because of their sex. For example, renting apartments or rooms to men but not to women."

There are no regulations covering the rates of rental fees (charged students either, according to Lassiter. "Your local city government may have some ordinances covering it," he said.

According to the city clerk of Greenville, however, the city has no ordinances covering this area.

Violinist Stern will perform here

By PAT CRAWFORD Staff Writer

Celebrated American violinist Isaac Stern will entertain ECU and Greenville in Wright Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. Monday, May 1 when he appears as the latest feature of ECU's Artist Series.

Born in Russia, Stern was brought by his parents to San Francisco when he was less than a year old, and began studying the piano at six. He switched to the violin and was taught by the late Naoum Blinder, Concert Master of the San Francisco Symphony. At 15 Stern made his public debut, and in 1937 he entered New York music circles.

Stern was the first merican artist invited to play in the Soviet Union after World War II, and he has appeared as far afield as Japan, Iceland, South America and the European capitals. All the major music festivals in this country and abroad seek him as a soloist.

Aside from his solo activities, Stern, pianist Eugene Istomin and cellist Leonard Rose, comprise a trio which in a few years has become the nation's most sought-after chamber music ensemble.

Acclaim for Stern's talent has been far-reaching. "He belongs to that great company of virtuosi "around whose names legends have grown in the course of history." wrote the London Times. Stern has earned the praise of critics in his own homeland as well. Harold Schonberg of the New York Times wrote, "Isaac Stern is the complete violinist--one who has tone, technique, musicianship and, above all, the ability to project, to come right over the footlights and give each listener the impression that the artist is playing for him alone.

"These are the qualities that make a great musician. Stern has them all."

Tickets for the Isaac Stern concert are available at the Central Ticket Office at $1 for students and $3 for faculty and staff. The general public will be admitted by season ticket only.

Northern college shuns convention

PLAINFIELD, VT. (CPS) - Long considered a maverick among institutions of higher education. Goddard College, a small, private school in the woodlands of north-central Vermont, has given notice that it still has no intention of submitting to the branding iron of conventionality.

Effective September of this year, the entire faculty will resign their roles as "teachers" for the new positions of "master learners" or "professional craftsmen." The emphasis for everyone on campus will be one of simply learning.

The move rests upon the assumption that learning is essentially a self-oriented activity and forms the core for a three-year college-wide experiment upon this issue. Correspondingly, the experiment questions the assumptions that teaching is either possible or desirable. necessary or useful.

Faculty members, it has long been observed. find that they learn from students as often as vice versa. The experiment seeks to capitalize upon this common ability to learn by replacing traditional "learning from' situations with those oriented towards "learning with." Consequently, those now termed "students" will be recognized as either "amateur learners" or "apprentice craftsmen."

The idea for the experiment is contained, in part, in these words of Carl Rogers: "I have come to feel that the only learning which significantly influences behavior is self-discovered, self-appropriated learning. Such self-discovered learning, truth that has been personally appropriated and assimilated in experience, cannot be directly communicated to another."

Traditional teaching, Rogers argues, "seems to cause the individual to distrust his own experience, and to stifle significant learning." Describing the outcome of teaching as either "unimportant" or "hurtful," Rogers concludes. "I realize that I am only interested in being a learner, preferably learning things that metter, that have some significant influence on my behavior.

Every form of activity in the Goddard community, be it class course, independant study or field project, is to have a portion of time reserved and specifically devoted to discussion, analysis and evaluation of what is being learned, how and why. Weekly, monthly and yearly evaluations will develop out of these smaller sessions in order to clarify a larger perspective on the experiment.

Finally, in 1975, a "culminating study" will be prepared for publication. By that time the college should be in a position to answer, with documentary evidence of three years' experience, the question of whether the role of "teacher" is necessary for such learning as occurs at the college level.

A popular entertainment group? No. These are music therapy students at ECU bringing joy to people who otherwise are leading dull and rather restricted lives.

At the Walter Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, the students sponsor weekly programs featuring a social get-together in which music plays a large part.

Previously at the center, the patients did not have many opportunities to interact socially. Now, such a therapy program gives former alcoholics a chance to recover from their ailment much sooner than would otherwise be possible.

VALUABLE EXPERIENCE

At the Correctional Rehabilitation Center, under the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, the students have offered a monthly program of singing and musical entertainment.

"While these are not the same programs a professional music therapist would necessarily undertake, they give the students a valuable and useful experience," said Dr. Ruth Boxberger. head of the University's music therapy program.

Programs at these facilities come under the direction of the Remedial Education Activities Program (REAP), an integral part of the University's Developmental Evaluation Clinic. However, there are other areas in which the students perform their services.

The scene described earlier is a common one in local public schools in which the students perform for classes of educable mentally retarded children.

gain useful experience

to enjoy the programs they have presented.

Several have emphasized that the field work is extremely satisfying and the most enjoyable part of the program. Others feel that the feedback received from the students has made it all worthwhile.

Last year the students gave a special Christmas party for several students. In return, the students sent the musicians homemade Christmas cards and a homemade plaque "which meant much to our students," Boxberger said.

ONLY ONE IN STATE

Use of music as a therapeutic force has been common for centuries. Several incidents regarding music in healing are noted in the Bible.

Yet only recently has music therapy taken on as large a stature as is found in the ECU program. In fact, the program on campus is the only one in the state and one of only four in the South.

The program here is now in its fourth year and has already graduated several students who are working in the field.

A music therapy major is offered in the School of Music for students of at least junior standing. Most of the music therapy curriculum consists of psychology and sociology courses and other sciences which are basic to the program.

The goal of the program is to prepare music colleges and universities for this field," she explained. The clinical fields take many prospective teachers away."

She is optimistic however, about the future growth of the program.

"I think that schools will continue to put in programs," she said. 'There is a great deal of interest in the field."

The development of the ECU program came about largely through the interest of several state agencies which employ music therapists.

Representatives of the agencies approached Earl E. Beach, then dean of the School of Music, who investigated the possibility and decided to organize the program.

Boxberger, then associated with Ohio University, was called upon to become the university's full time director, a capacity she has since held.

"I guess like everyone else I wanted to start a program of my own, and what attracted me to East Carolina was the quality of the School of Music and the interest of the University."

Since then, Boxberger has seen the program grow into one of which she claims the staff has been very proud.

"We have all been very pleased with the progress of the program and the opportunities the students have had for training while doing their academic work," she said.

Through the media of music, children are taught what might otherwise be unteachable. And it is through social interaction with the children that they may be reached.

"Music is used as kind of a vehicle." Boxberger said. "It is used in many ways. College students have many interests and they are different from disadvantaged people with limited educations and perhaps a penal offense. Yet they like the same music and sing the same songs and they can communicate. These things can be useful."

The university students themselves appear therapists for work in hospitals and schools in which mentally deficient and handicapped people are treated and educated.

VOLUNTARY

Upon graduation from an accredited music therapy program, such as ECU's, a student may be eligible to become a Registered Music Therapist (R.M.T.).

Before they can go into the work, however, the students must perform much undergraduate work, the minimum requirement being six months of internship in some phase of a music therapy career.

The field work in which the students offer social recreation for the local facilities is merely on a voluntary basis.

"The students are very enthusiastic about the program,' Boxberger said. "They spend many extra hours in it because they're interested. The reception they've received from the places in which they've offered their services and time has created tremendous pride and interest."

But why haven't such programs developed on a larger national scale if they are so worthwhile?

The reason for this is that there is a definite lack of qualified people to staff and a service and a service of the s undergraduate work in music therapy here, a number the director claims to be a respectable figure considering how long the program has been on the campus.

However, Boxberger explained, no graduate program in the field has yet begun at ECU because the faculty prefers to develop the undergraduate program on a more sound footing.

The university does have financial help in offering its programs. Since the program began here, more than $3,000 in scholarships have been offered by various agencies.

This year, a national scholarship given by Sigma Alpha lota Honor Fraternity was awarded an ECU music therapy student, Marsha Miller.

What does the ECU director feel the future holds for work in music therapy?

"I think in terms of the general growth of the health professions in the area, there will be opportunities open in more fields," she said. "The whole field of mental health is changing rapidly and making a great deal of progress." As more students graduate form the ECU program and other similar ones, people will begin to realize this. And only then will music finally be recognized as the powerful force that it is.

There will be a FREE concert on the Mall on Sunday, April 30, featuring Brass Park, Ground Hog and Jamie McDonald.

Police strike again

To Fountainhead

An incident which I witnessed Tuesday morning is really the last straw as far as I am concerned. One of our upright and well trained campus policemen was riding his motorcycle in the Tenth Street parking lot at the same time a dog was crossing the lot. The dog was not even chasing the pig, but he stopped the bike, pulled out his can of mace, and offered to give the dog a shot. If spraying mace on an innocent dog is that cop's idea of a big man, then we're all in trouble. The incompetence is astounding. The really revolting thing is that the pig just stopped the cycle for absolutely no reason. That these defenders of the faith are allowed to carry guns is more than a little scary to me. Maybe they'll just start shooting the dogs and solve all their problems.

discuss or explain their actions. Now, this is just one example of employees being treated as chattel. Employees have hours cut despite their need to work, employees are refused pay raises which were used as inducements (bait) to work, and employees, especially full time, are layed off without two week notice. By the way, student or part-time help are never eligible for pay increase, regardless of experience or length of employment. Some may claim that I have distorted the facts, or that this letter is one of sour grapes. Simply ask any regular evening customer of the grill and they can truthfully corroborate my claims as to our past performances. Also, I am not bitter towards this episode because I have stood my ground and resigned. I was not fired. The unfortunate aspect of this situation is that it will never change. There is a large demand for these jobs, and if one student quits his place will quickly be taken. This allows the policy of faithful little robots to continue. Students who plan to work for the Campus Food Service can expect to find a relatively easy job burdened with unnecessaary and assinine interference. Pete Pross Bob Apple giving twelve to a single administrator is incomprehensible.

We had supposed that the old "Boss Tweed"-ish days of dispensing favors to obtain support had all but disappeared in this day and time. Such practices conjure up images of bowler-hatted heavyweights with nickel cigars muscling their way down the back corridors of the SGA office complex.

However, the only charge that time has brought to our scene is that nobody smokes nickel cigars anymore.

But we aren't talking about nickel tickets, either. When students are paying two and three dollars, yet administrators and SGA big-wigs who have nothing to do with organizing the concerts are getting in free, there needs to be a drastic change in the philosophy of those responsible.

The gravy train for big-wigs doesn't end there, unfortunately. The choicest parking spaces are reserved for staff and faculty. Faculty enjoy many of the benefits of the academic community without paying the student fees which supports these benefits.

Where does the gravy train end? Or, rather, where does it begin? We'd like to get on.

The mataphysical department of the Nick and Dave Incorporation would like to proudly announce a feature presentation. On the evening of May 4, 1972 in spacious Wright Auditorium there will occur a "battle of the bands" featuring the now world famous Greenville Cloggers and their supporting entourage versus the reincarnated rock and roll extravaganza, Rocky and the Flying Squirrels. Donations will be thankfully accepted at the door for those of you in our audience who would like to help out the Greenville REAP Program which works with mentally handicapped children in this area. Nick and Dave are making an open challenge to any and all-come out and see if you can have a good time on a Thursday night for a change. Dave has indicated that he will be the rowdiest individual in the hall, but we're all sure that Nick might contest that allegation. Why don't all of you come on out and get happy (after all, it's for charity)? There is even an unconfirmed rumor that those two metaphysical hams may even cap the evening's festivities with a rendition of some old and beloved spiritual classics. Wouldn't that alone be worth the price of admission which is 50 cents (of course we are counting on your conscience to never let you get in that door without digging in your pocket first for more). So you've got the word and it is expected that you be there. Roll will be taken - that is rock and roll.

It is time to make sure North Carolina has a well managed state government. It's time to apply some managerial talent to appropriations and to appointments.

It's time to raise the education budget to 50% of state revenue. North Carolina needs an honest effort by its governor to accomplish these ends. Skipper Bowles can do it.

He is a man with the ability and integrity to govern North Carolina and govern it well. He has served in both the administrative and legislative branches of our state government.

He has supported student voting rights and sponsored the ecology amendment to North Carolina's Constitution.

Skipper Bowles does not evade questions nor does he resort to fiery rhetoric. Skipper Bowles offers his undisputed integrity and ability to the voters, he offers logical programs and administration.

To Fountainhead

I have recently, along with a fellow student, departed the contented family of employees who work for the Campus Food Service. My services as part-time cook, bus boy, and martyr are over, and we feel that future student workers should be informed of the reasons leading to our departure.

The three students who had been operating the Pamlico Grill, without any direct supervision, were working quite efficiently as a team. The customers were kept as contented as possible, the grill and floor areas were kept very clean, and the food was cooked as well as quality would allow. We were doing the work of perhaps four people and a manager. Yet, a manager who visited us maybe twice a night, and the Food Service Director were not pleased with our performances. We were told that we were enjoying ourselves. I admit, we did have fun working. but since when is it a mortal sin to enjoy yourself while working. But, I must admit, we didn't constantly stand our posts with spatula in hand, or wash cloth in motion, or cash register at attention. Therefore, we were shirking our duties as loyal, programmed robots. Students, like all children are faithful robots which are seen, ordered around, but not heard. This occurred Wednesday, April 12, and on April 13, I was ordered to work upstairs without explanation. Another student was sent to the grill, and my job as cook was assumed by a good worker, but an inexperienced cook. Our bosses knew that this was not an effective or sensible system, and that service (oh, precious customer service) would suffer. Still, in order to prove their dominance and tremendous power over their employees' actions, I was to remain upstairs. After I was informed that this arrangement would be permanent (April 17), I trendered my resignation because my superiors refused to

Another resister goes to prison-but the war goes on

By RICK MITZ

My best friend is going to prison in five days. We don't know exactly where he' going. There's been talk about Missouri or Michigan or Minnesota. But it will be a work camp or prison. We do know that he will be back in six months-180 days. And nights. We don't know what he'll be doing; what he'll be remembering or forgetting; if he will be permitted to read our letters in their entirety, or censored, or at all. We do know that he'll be separated from his wife and family, the few people he cares about. his job and his education.

And why? Because he refused to step forward. Or because he stepped forward.

After being denied a conscientious objector deferment, he was drafted. On induction day, he refused to step over that invisible line that indicates one's willingness to go into the armed forces. Instead he stepped forward and said he would rather serve his country in another manner. Now he's going to prison.

At his sentencing two days ago, he stood before the judge in a routine Mondav morning courtroom appearance. There were bigger things to adjudicate than the problems of a routine resistor, and his sentencing took only a few short minutes. But the judge-one of the more "liberal" ones made himself perfectly clear as he handed out the 'standard' sentence: "You are hereby sentenced to six months in a federal institution and to 18 additional months on probation."

I couldn't understand it. It all seemed unreal. My only experience with courtrooms had been on television, in movies, in a Kafka novel. And my only experience with prison was none. I couldn't understand it. Why was all this happening? Because my friend had refused to "serve his country."

I've thought a lot about that since Monday. I don't know what ' serving one's country' means anymore.

I have seen quadraplegics-paralyzed from their necks down who wear the living scars forever to remember how they "served their country." I have seen pictures of corpses of men who had "served their country." And I have seen men making decisions concerning the sincerity of others judges, probation officers, members of draft boards who are "serving their country."

My friend doesn't fit the stereotype of draft resistor. He would never think of leaving the country, because he likes this country. He wants to serve the country-but in a way in which he can feel comfortable. Until he goes off to prison, he'll continue working at his job-a public service position helping blind people. So he has been serving his country, but in five days he'll have to stop so he can serve his country in prison.

It all seemed so illogical. My friend is mild and gentle and sincere. Old military men have written letters to draft boards attesting to this. His father-a military educator- has vouched for his son's sincerity. He has good credentials. But he broke the law. At the sentencing, he was given one week to "get things in order." Like priorities. I can't help but question the legitimacy of a country that puts men on trail to test their pacifism, their sincerity, their degree of opposition to a war. They did this to my friend. And he lost. I can't help wondering if there's a difference between serving and servicing our country. Why must someone's personal convictions lead to convictions? I guess I'm talking about all this now because I just talked to him on the phone. He's at work now, finishing up some final projects. He's delighted that they've promised to give him his job back when he returns. But a strange thing has happened to him: he's turned into a martyr. Not in his own eyes, but in the eyes of people he rarely talks to who've suddenly dropped over, invited him for dinner and turned his six-month sentence into cheap radical chic, with my friend in the role of the folk hero. They are treating him with the same indignity and impersonality that the judge did. I don't know what any of this means. But I keep thinking of the letter my friend wrote to his parents, who live in Italy."By the time you read this, I'll be in prison ... "
