Student publications funds released after month long hold

Overdue pay checks for student publication employees will finally be released today after being held up for a month due to legal entanglements.

East Carolina's Publication Board, which is in charge of approving the budgets of the Buccaneer, Fountainhead and the Rebel, cleared the way last night by approving the previous requests of each publication.

SGA Treasurer Mark Browne declared Oct. 10, that all funds for publications would be stopped due to a decision by Attorney General Tomas Durham making the makeup of that board null and void. Since that date, a new Publications Board has been selected. However, a meeting of the new Board was delayed by the trial of Chairman Kathy Holloman on charges of negligence. Holloman was suspended from her chairmanship by a decision of the Attorney General on Oct. 10, but was reinstated after a trial before the Review Board ending Nov. 1.

Following the trial, Holloman declared that the new Board would meet on Nov. 8, after a seven day constitutional delay for sending out notices to Pub Board members. The Pub Board's decision last night approving the budgets for the publications cleared the way for the dispensation of salary checks and operation debts this morning. No checks had been cleared through the Treasurer's office during the month long period except for a requisition from the Buccaneer staff for funds to cover a convention trip during the period.

Activists called 'involved and responsive'

(IP)-Student activists, while small in number, are among the most intellectually involved and responsive students on campus, a University of Michigan study found.

Gerald Gurin, program director with the U-M Institute for Social Research, directed the study of two consecutive freshman classes at Michigan during their four-year college careers. The study period, 1962-67, was one of the most intense periods of campus activism. Gurin says that one of the most striking impressions he gained from study data was the contrast between students' attitudes toward their university experience and the turmoil which swirled about them at the time.

"The great majority of students in our study were fairly satisfied, if somewhat

He suggests that the large university "still fails at least two groups of students-those with the broadest intellectual interests and those most intensely involved in an identity search."

opportunity for intellectual excitement and not with narrowly defined vocational, academic, or social goals are the ones who most often question their multiversity experience and find the Residential College (smaller units) appealing," he says.

Students with the broadest interests, Gurin adds, are most critical of their educational experience, but paradoxically, seem to get the greatest benefit from it. "This group's intellectual interests increased more than any other group of students, and their values became more liberalized," he explains. "Both the dissatisfaction and the greater benefits reflect the fact that the critics are more involved in intellectual and educational issues."

Other students often dissatisfied with development, especially in the areas of identity and intimacy, Gurin reports:

"Students who are particularly involved in the identity search, who are self-questioning and uncertain, and thinking through some of their basic values and commitments, are less satisfied with their multiversity experience. This is also true of those students who find friendship and relationships generally somewhat more problematic, who are less socially outgoing, and who are more sensitive and, vulnerable in social relationships."

Political and educational activists share a high level of intellectual commitment and involvement, but the two groups are distinguished by several noticeable differences, the study found:

"The personal and development issues that are also central to the educational critics, particularly issues around the impersonality of relationships in a multiversity, seem to be largely irrelevant to the political activists. Political activists do not go through the self-questioning and uncertainty about values and life directions that students favoring the Residential College do."

The sex of the students was found to be an important factor in understanding the experiences and backgrounds of activists. The study found that "female radicals experience family conflict which male radicals do not. Female activists also have different personal-identity concerns, unusually strong intellectual values, and are the least self-confident and most anxious students of any group

"The strong rejection of institutional roles, particularly professional career roles, is really a male, not a female, process among radicals," Gurin says. One of the major problems confronting the multiversity, Gurin concludes, "is finding ways to support those students who are so responsive to the educational environment they are likely to be overwhelmed, while at the same time challenging and stimulating other students who encapsulate themselves in familiar environments.

"The limitations of the multiversity are not as clear or one-sided as they are usually pictured. Educational reform must take into account the variety of criticisms and needs that students voice.'

Program seeks graduate work from minorities

(ETS -PRINCETON NJ.)-A new program designed to help the nation's graduate schools seek out potential students from minority groups is underway this fall.

Called the Minority Graduate Student Locater Service, the program is offered by Educational Testing Service. ETS estimates that about 10,000 to 15,000 students could initially use the new service which is offered free to both students and institutions this year.

According to J. Bradley Williams, ETS director of the project, "One of the problems facing graduate schools seeking to increase enrollment of students from racial and ethnic minorities is that of identifying potential students."

Now, students will have a chance to voluntarily complete a special 17-item questionnaire as one step toward entering graduate school.

Information about the academic interests and goals of Black, American-Indian, Asian-American, and Spanish or Mexican-American students who wish to pursue graduate level education, will be available to those institutions seeking to bolster minority enrollment.

Admissions officers may then contact students directly and invite the applications of those whose particular interests could be served by their schools' graduate offerings.

The locater service will be used first by graduate schools in December. According to Williams, some 300 schools are expected to join this year with more offering the program later.

The locater service is open to second-term college juniors, seniors, and

Friday to address professors Tuesday

William Friday, president of the University of North Carolina system, will address the East Carolina University chapter of the American Association of University Professors, Nov. 13 at a special dinner meeting.

President Friday will speak on the new UNC system consolidation and its effects upon ECU. The public is invited to attend the dinner.

The dinner will be a buffet arrangement, featuring roast beef, ham chicken, assorted vegetables and desserts, and will be held in the South Dining Hall on the ECU campus.

Reservations may be made with Dr. Carol Hampton of the science education department; Dr. Theodore Ellis of the English department; or Anne Briley of the library services department.

All reservations must be made before

Nov. 10.

Rehabilitation program to begin

A monthly training program series on the treatment and rehabilitation of alcoholics will be given by the East Carolina University-based Alcoholism Training Program for North Carolina.

Beginning this month, the series will continue through October, 1973.

Don Watson, Coordinator of Practicum Programs for the Alcoholism Training Program said the series will consist of three day sessions at the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center.

The series is designed for newly employed professionals of the North Carolina mental health system and other Infirmary backlog professionals in allied health and social

"A maximum of 10 people will be admitted each month," Watson said.

"Our training objectives are to acquaint the trainee with the medical, social and cultural dynamics of alcoholism and its impact on the individual, the state's alcoholism program, and the various methods of treatment for the individual with an alcohol problem."

Additional information about the training program is available from the Alcoholism Training Program for North Carolina, ECU, Greenville.

Advocate bill remanded; External Affairs reported

The SGA legislature decided Monday that the new bill for a Student Advocate should be reviewed by a joint committee meeting of the Student Affairs committee and the Appropriations committee.

The bill was first reviewed by the Student Affairs committee alone. The committee returned the bill to the Legislature with the recommendation that it be passed with a change made. The purpose of the "Advocate" being to inform the students, the committee felt they should have a trial period for this onice to see if the students will respond. The suggestion was made by this committee to have a trial period over winter quarter to see if this office works. The bill was returned to the mmittee because it was not referred to Appropriations committee. Timothy erner brought this objection to the Loor. Kathy Holloman substantiated his

Legislature had the power to ropriate funds for this new cabinet office but "it is not authorized to initiate the Cabinet position." The bill was declared out of order by Braxton Hall, Speaker of the Legislature, and returned to a joint meeting of the Student Affairs committee and the Appropriations committee. Ken Hammond gave a report from the External Affairs committee for Joey Horton, Secretary, who was absent. Hammond announced that this year the External Affairs committee would only be interested in the North Carolina Student Legislature. In the past, they had extended much wider to the national level. Screenings for delegates to the North Carolina Student Legislature Convention will be held Wednesday at 7 o'clock in room 310 of the Student Union.

A new committee was formed by Speaker Hall to review the state of the Judiciary branch of Student Government. In addition to this, another committee was suggested by Mark Browne, SGA Treasurer, to investigate the transit system on campus. This proposal was postponed until later.

Pill requests require examination

Infirmary backlogs in supplying birth control pills have been caused by both the large numbers of girls requesting the Pill and by their lateness in applying for

According to Dr. Daniel Jordan, 125 girls attended the first Sexuality Conference held this year. Attendance at the conference is mandatory for those girls requesting the Pill for the first time. Following the conference, girls are schedule for physical examinations at the infirmary.

"Imagine how long it would take to give each of these 125 girls a half-hour exam," said Jordan. "What would we do about the sick people who came in with colds or acute appendicitis?"

Three doctors work half a day each week with those girls now taking the Pill. Lab work, Pap smears and cancer tests, and examinations of ovaries and breasts are required when a girl first applies for the Pill and upon her request for a refill prescription. Prescriptions generally last six months.

"The number of girls coming in is slacking off now," said Jordan. Only 32 girls showed up for the last Sexuality Conference. Occasionally a girl will attend the conference only to find out about the Pill, and will undergo the Pap and other tests for health reasons alone.

"The big problem," said Jordan, "is that girls wait until the last moment to renew prescriptions." Since an examination is necessary before renewals can be given, many girls complain about a lack of instant service."

To offset this problem, girls foreseeing a refill need for the next month should inform the infirmary early in the preceding month.

Women students wishing to see a private physician for the Pill can be referred to one by the infirmary.

"If they want to see a private physician, they can," said Jordan, "but sometimes they'll have to wait a month or more for an appointment."

Jordan said the cost of such private help varied with the doctor, but that upwards of a three week wait should be expected.

According to Jordan, the infirmary is now catching up on its Pill backlog.

"We have a new nurse and some new equipment," he said, "and we're doing some remodeling, moving Dr. Wooten's office downstairs.

"I think we're going to be getting things done much faster now."

Physics profs X-ray devise laser

Two East Carolina University physics professors believe they have discovered the method to produce the highly acclaimed but as yet undeveloped X-Ray laser, a device capable of emitting light rays from the ultrashort wavelengths in the X-ray spectrum.

Dr. Richard A McCorkle, assistant professor of physics at ECU, in collaboration with Dr. James M. Joyce, also of the ECU physics department, described the method in his (McCorkle's) article "Practicable X-RAY Amplifier" published in the Oct. 9, 1972 issue of "Physical Review Letters."

The article relates in detail the formulas and data that the ECU physicists believe would permit the development of a workable X-ray laser. Their research has prompted widespread reaction and inquiry from other scientists and technologists.

The X-ray laser according to Dr. McCorkle offers tremendous potential to many fields of science and the impact on society would be enormous. For example: The development of the X-ray laser would give medical technology a diagnostic tool that would permit tumor therapy with a minimum of damage to surrounding tissue and organs.

Although past efforts to develop the X-ray laser have failed, the ECU physicists are convinced that their method will work.

THE FLOWING DESIGN mural in White Dormitory reflects a new creativity and unity in the residence hall programs. The mural flaunts a new enthusiasm.

Even keel of life Flowing design mural symbolizes creativity

BY KATHY KOONCE

If you have walked into the lobby of White Dormitory lately you most likely came to an abrupt stop. Posing before visitors, dates and residents is a large mural created by enthusiastic residents and personnel of White Dormitory.

Interest grew to have something colorful in the lobby. A group assembled a small example and presented it to Dan Wooten, director of housing. The idea was approved and people in White Dorm began to really get involved. Kathy Kleptinger, residence administrator of White Dorm, originated the idea. She thought a design and color type thing would be most appropriate, something not too deep or involved, but not dull. Amy Nock, an interior design major, developed the design suggested by Kleptinger. The orange and blue mural is "a color design using an economy of line to get a flowing design."

IMAGINATION STIMULATED

The mural lends itself to the individual imagination for interpretations. Many have responded, "Well, it's different." Kleptinger specifically remembered a student commenting upon the mural as "the long, winding, hilly road to graduation." Another student analyzed the mural to be "The Lord's Supper." Some comments were not so inspiring. Dan Wooten's opinion was "a penny arcade."

Both Kleptinger and Nock agree that the color and design should be appreciated. The mural was not designed with a particular expression in mind After the completion of the mural, Nock interpreted it as "a flow in the even keel of life and events that interrupt it." She further stated the mural was "kind of a subtle abstract of a mountain or river."

PROGRAM REPRESENTED

White Dorm's mural is more than just a mural. It is a symbol of the new residence hall program as a whole. No longer is the dorm just a place to live. Students have the right to expect and demand various programs be offered in the dorms. The dorm should be a place to grow, expand, learn and express creativity. According to Kleptinger, "Learning does not come from books alone." The primary goal is to develop a good source of dorm programming here. The university is trying to build up dorm programs with trained personnel. "With the new residence hall program, the dormitory is a living learning experience which is also a very valid support of co-ed dorms. Men and women learn to interact as people on a more natural basis," Kleptinger noted.

BASIS OF NEW THINGS

White Dorm's mural could very well be the basis of new things to come on campus. It has made many people "come alive." The mural has brought a strong sense of unity to White Dorm. Fourteen girls participated in the actual work producing into the mural. They along with the other residents and personnel of White Dorm are very proud of the mural which flaunts the enthusiasm they think should be a part of every campus dorm.

Wealth of unusual experiences

Bonn students view future events

By SHEILA THROWER ECU-Bonn

Thirty-six East Carolina students arrived in mid-September at Haus Steineck, the baronial residence on the Rhine where professors and participants mingle in pursuit of European studies.

During the next nine months, we anticipate traveling thousands of miles in search of a better understanding of Europe, its people, its politics and its social and economic problems.

Looking ahead, there will not only be a cognative minor in European Studies, but also a greater fluency in German, a wealth of unusual experiences, and a more sophisticated outlook on life.

The program has been in operation for less than four weeks and already there have been many exciting events. Initial orientation included a beautiful trip up the Rhine to Rudesheim and a chairlift ride to the top of a mountain. The bus took us along vineyards to an old castle with torture instruments and a free swinging toilet. Then came Trier, the oldest German city with the best preserved Roman monuments.

SEASON OF WINE

October is also the season for wine festivals and brassband competitions. Konigswinter, a mountain town opposite Haus Steineck, gave freely of its 1971 vintage, which was pouring forth from an old fountain. Some of the students even used a short weekend to slip off to Amsterdam, only a short train ride away. The more sports-minded purchased bicycles to explore the immediate environs.

BONN STUDENTS relax in an informal atmosphere at Haus Steineck.

The Study Center is again under the direction of Dr. Haus H. Indorf who initiated the project successfully last year. For the first time, inter-university cooperation brought about the participation of Dr. Bennett, a sociology professor from Appalachian State University. The other five instructors will be coming from various departments of East Carolina University. All students are exclusively from Greenville. But their home surroundings are soon forgotten as they expand their circle of German friends and begin to visit with German families.

One of the most interesting aspects of our programs are the weekly field trips. These will be taking us to large industrial establishments in Cologne, Aachen. Essen and other major cities. KRUPP FACTORY VISIT

Of particular historical significance will be our visit to the Krupp factory, the former armament manufacturer now producing bathtubs. On the reverse side of the picture, we had many German government officials visiting us, adding local expertise to our program. Soon we will be off for Paris and Brussels before the Fall Quarter closes—all too soon.

Mass Communications major underway

By BRENDA PUGH Staff Writer

Phase One of creating the mass communications major has come to an end. Now that the program has been structured, it is ready to be considered by the various committees which must approve the new major before it can be offered by the University.

Erwin Hester, Chairman of the English Department, described the preposed major as a "composite or radio, television, journalism and public address courses with some additional field work or internship.

According to Karl Faser of the Drama and Speech Department, there would be 48 credit hours required from the courses above, more than 20 of which would be electives relating to his specialty—a drama student might choose speech and literature courses.

The internship advocated by both administrators would give a student practical experience in his field while he is still an undergraduate. Faser suggested, "It is possible that the major will require internships comparable to student teaching. Students might work at radio or television stations, or on newspapers, or speak to civic clubs." Hester noted, however, that there are such problems as getting the cooperation of the newspaper.

Faser feels that the mass communications major will probably come into being. "What we hope to achieve is to have the communications major without incurring additional faculty above that already here at the time the major gets underway. Since the existing faculty could do the job, there would be no increased expenditure of funds."

ENDORSEMENTS

Whereas Faser feels that the mass communications major might possibly be available for the fall 1973 term, Hester thinks that winter 1973-74 is the earliest feasible date According to Hester, however, that is not a likely date because the committee endorsements consume a great deal of time.

Before the new major can be offered, it must have several of these endorsements. Both the English Dept. and the Drama and Speech Dept. must state their approval. Already, both departments have done so.

Several faculty committees must also favor the measure. These are the Curriculum Committee of the College of Arts and Sciences, the University Curriculum Committee and the Faculty Senate, if the measure is challenged.

Finally, since the mass communications major is a new degree program, it must be endorsed by the Board of Regents of the UNC system.

The proposal will meet its first test on Nov. 9 when the Curriculum Committee of the College of Arts and Sciences will consider it.

CLASS CLOWN, George Carlin (Little David Records LD 1004.)

Every good review of a comedy album should answer two questions: "Is the album funny?" and 'Is it worth buying?" The answer to both of these questions is "yes" for "Class Clown."

George Carlin is a master of "stoned humor''; as an impressionist and monologist, he's fantastic.

This set, recorded live at Santa Monica Civic Auditorium, might be his best yet. The title piece explores the funky world of classroom cutups, featuring "Hawaiian nose-humming" and the bi-labial fricative" (better known as the Bronx Cheer.) Hidden sounds, cheek-popping and kunckle-cracking are a few other fine points of class-clowning.

"Wasted Time" center on childhood fantasies, with a digression into the art of swallowing water. Society's perversion of "Values" provides the subject for the remainder of Side One. As the subtitle-"How Much is that Dog in the Window?" indicates a lot of the rap has to do with novelties (like fake vomit) that civilized man creates to entertain himself.

Side Two satirizes Roman Catholic doctrine and education with: "I Used to Be Irish Catholic," "The Confessional," "Special Dispensation-Heaven, Hell, Purgatory, and Limbo" and "Heavy Mysteries."

"Muhammad Ali-America the Beautiful' is a double-edged thrust aimed both at the hypocrisy and corruptness of the military-industrial complex and at the flaws and foibles of counterculture heroes.

Be forewarned of "Seven Words that You Can Never Say on Television" will "infect your soul, curve your spine, and keep the country from winning the war!" But it's a good way to wrap up the album even if the material on this cut does remind the listener a little too much of Lenny Bruce.

Special to Fountainhead HEAVY CREAM, Cream (Polydor PD 3502).

This greatest hits package is really the "best" of Cream, that volatile combination of Eric Clapton (flashing, brilliant guitarist), Ginger Baker (frenetic, if sometimes uninspired drummer), and Jack Bruce (bruising bass player/vocalist.)

The classic electric blues are all here: Willie Dixon's "Spoonful," Muddy Waters' "Rollin' and Tumblin'," C Burnett's "Sitting on Top of the World," the traditional "Cat's Squirrel," Skip James's "I'm so Glad," and "Born Under a Bad Sign" by Booker T. Jones and William Bell.

All the major Cream originals (with the exception of Ginger Baker's "Toad" which has already seen too many pressings and too many tired repetitions on other Cream albums) are here, including "Strange Brew," 'White Room," 'Badge," 'I Feel Free," "SWLABR" "Tales of Brave Ulysses," "What a Bringdown," 'Politician," "Sunshine of Your Love," and "Those Were the Days."

"Passing the Time," "As You Said," "Deserted Cities of the Heart," "Take It Back," and "Doing the Scrapyard Thing" are thrown in for good measure.

This imaginative and inexpensive package was designed and collated by Shelley Snow, with a minimum of frills and a maximum of music. The selections are excellent and representative of one of the finest rock groups of the late sixties.

O'KEEFE, Danny O Keefe (Signpost SP-8408.)

Danny O'Keefe has built a smooth, tightly-arranged country/rock album around his Top-40 single "Good Time Charlie's Got the Blues." This L.P. sounds alot like a "first album" (even if the jacket doesn't say so): the lyrics are a trifle pretentious, and motley at times; and the musical potential for some of the melodies is unrealized.

Side One leads off with "Good Time Charlie's Got the Blues," followed by "Shooting Star" (pretentious lyrics but a nice arrangement) and an up tempo rocker "The Question (Obviously)."

Then Hank Williams' "Honky Tonkin" " salutes O'Keefe's country roots; and the Memphis sidemen who provide the instrumental backing for the album come into their own.

O Keefe changes moods again with "The Road," a ringing, haunting lyric that approaches poetry "Grease It," a thumping putdown of manager/hustlers who attempt to buy superstardom for their clients, wraps up the "A" side.

"An American Dream" which leads off Side Two, is an overlong, unnecessarily obscure opus that suffers from too many changes of tempo.

"Louie the Hook Vs. the Preacher" shows O Keefe s sardonic wit at its best. The song lampoons the phony conversions of street hustlers into "children of God," implying that the hustlers just move on to greener pastures in the Jesus movement.

A mawkish introduction spoils "The Valentine Pieces," an otherwise first rate effort. "I'm Sober Now" ("inspired by Clarence Pinetop' Smith") and "Roseland Taxi Dancer" show two more sides of the versatile O'Keefe. The former places blues lyrics against a decidedly folkish melody; whereas the latter is a Randy Newmanesque romp.

The all-too-short "I Know You Really Love Me" (0:59) completes the album on a bright note that makes us look forward to O'Keefe's next effort.

The Bucs' first meet of the season is tonight, and the season. Scharf looks forward to the event with a degree of confidence because, as he puts it, "This is one meet that we're absolutely certain to win."

The Bucs' coach describes the upcoming Purple-Gold Meet as an important test for each member of the team, particularly for the newcomers. In fact, several positions on the varsity swimming team may be at stake in the event, Finish year 4-8 according to Scharf.

Racial minorities lose ground in election results

The "forgotten man of politics" award should surely go to minority races, in this year's elections.

While Italian, Jewish, Irish and other foreign ethnic groups were wooed with considerable ardor by both parties, racial ethnic group support has been regarded as a plague. Nothing cost Democratic candidates more dearly than the party's identification with civil rights.

Chicanos, Indians, Blacks and other groups have failed to emerge as the great political force they potentially could be. Perhaps these racial communities have no more in common than Irish and Polish, but their status as recognizable minorities prevents them from escaping stigma by dropping a letter from their name or moving to the suburbs. These sole binding force of color is made effective only while the white race discriminates against color, therefore the white race alone holds the power to defuse the bomb it has created. With major political candidates waving the red flag of 'busing' and making thinly veiled racial slurs against 'welfare loafers". American politics seems to have struck a new low. The facts about busing, and the reasons behind it, are undoubtedly sound, however inconvenient to suburban America. The white man shows remarkably little remorse for his years of ill-gotten gain at the black man's labor. Years of discriminatory housing and employment patterns have created a minority stereotype that Americans can comfortably categorize and live with. Americans are all too willing to strike a posture of masturbatory self congratulation about "this great American way" we have, but few can find enough real courage in their hearts to face a future that lacks such agreeable assurance.

Indians seek a fair shake

With a group of American Indians seizing the Bureau of Indian Affairs and declaring war on the United States, Campaign '72 rolled to an unspectacular finish without a whisper about the plight of Native Americans.

Granted, the issues that the candidates focused upon may have greater public interest, but the arousal of that public interest which was lacking was the duty of the candidates.

There is no cause more just of clear-cut than that of improving the lot of the American Indian. While previous governmental actions have been limited to administrative and placative dimensions, the Indian has suffered under both political parties' policies of benign neglect.

Daily the Indian condition grows worse. A famine in India draws prompt U.S. government reaction, but famine is the diet of a great number of our own "Indians."

Undoubtedly public sympathy for the Indian cause has been cut in the bud by unrealistic dramatic portrayals of the Indian, as an historical figure. Efforts have been made in recent years to depict Indians as objectively as possible, but "Tonto" projects a nearly indelible stereotype.

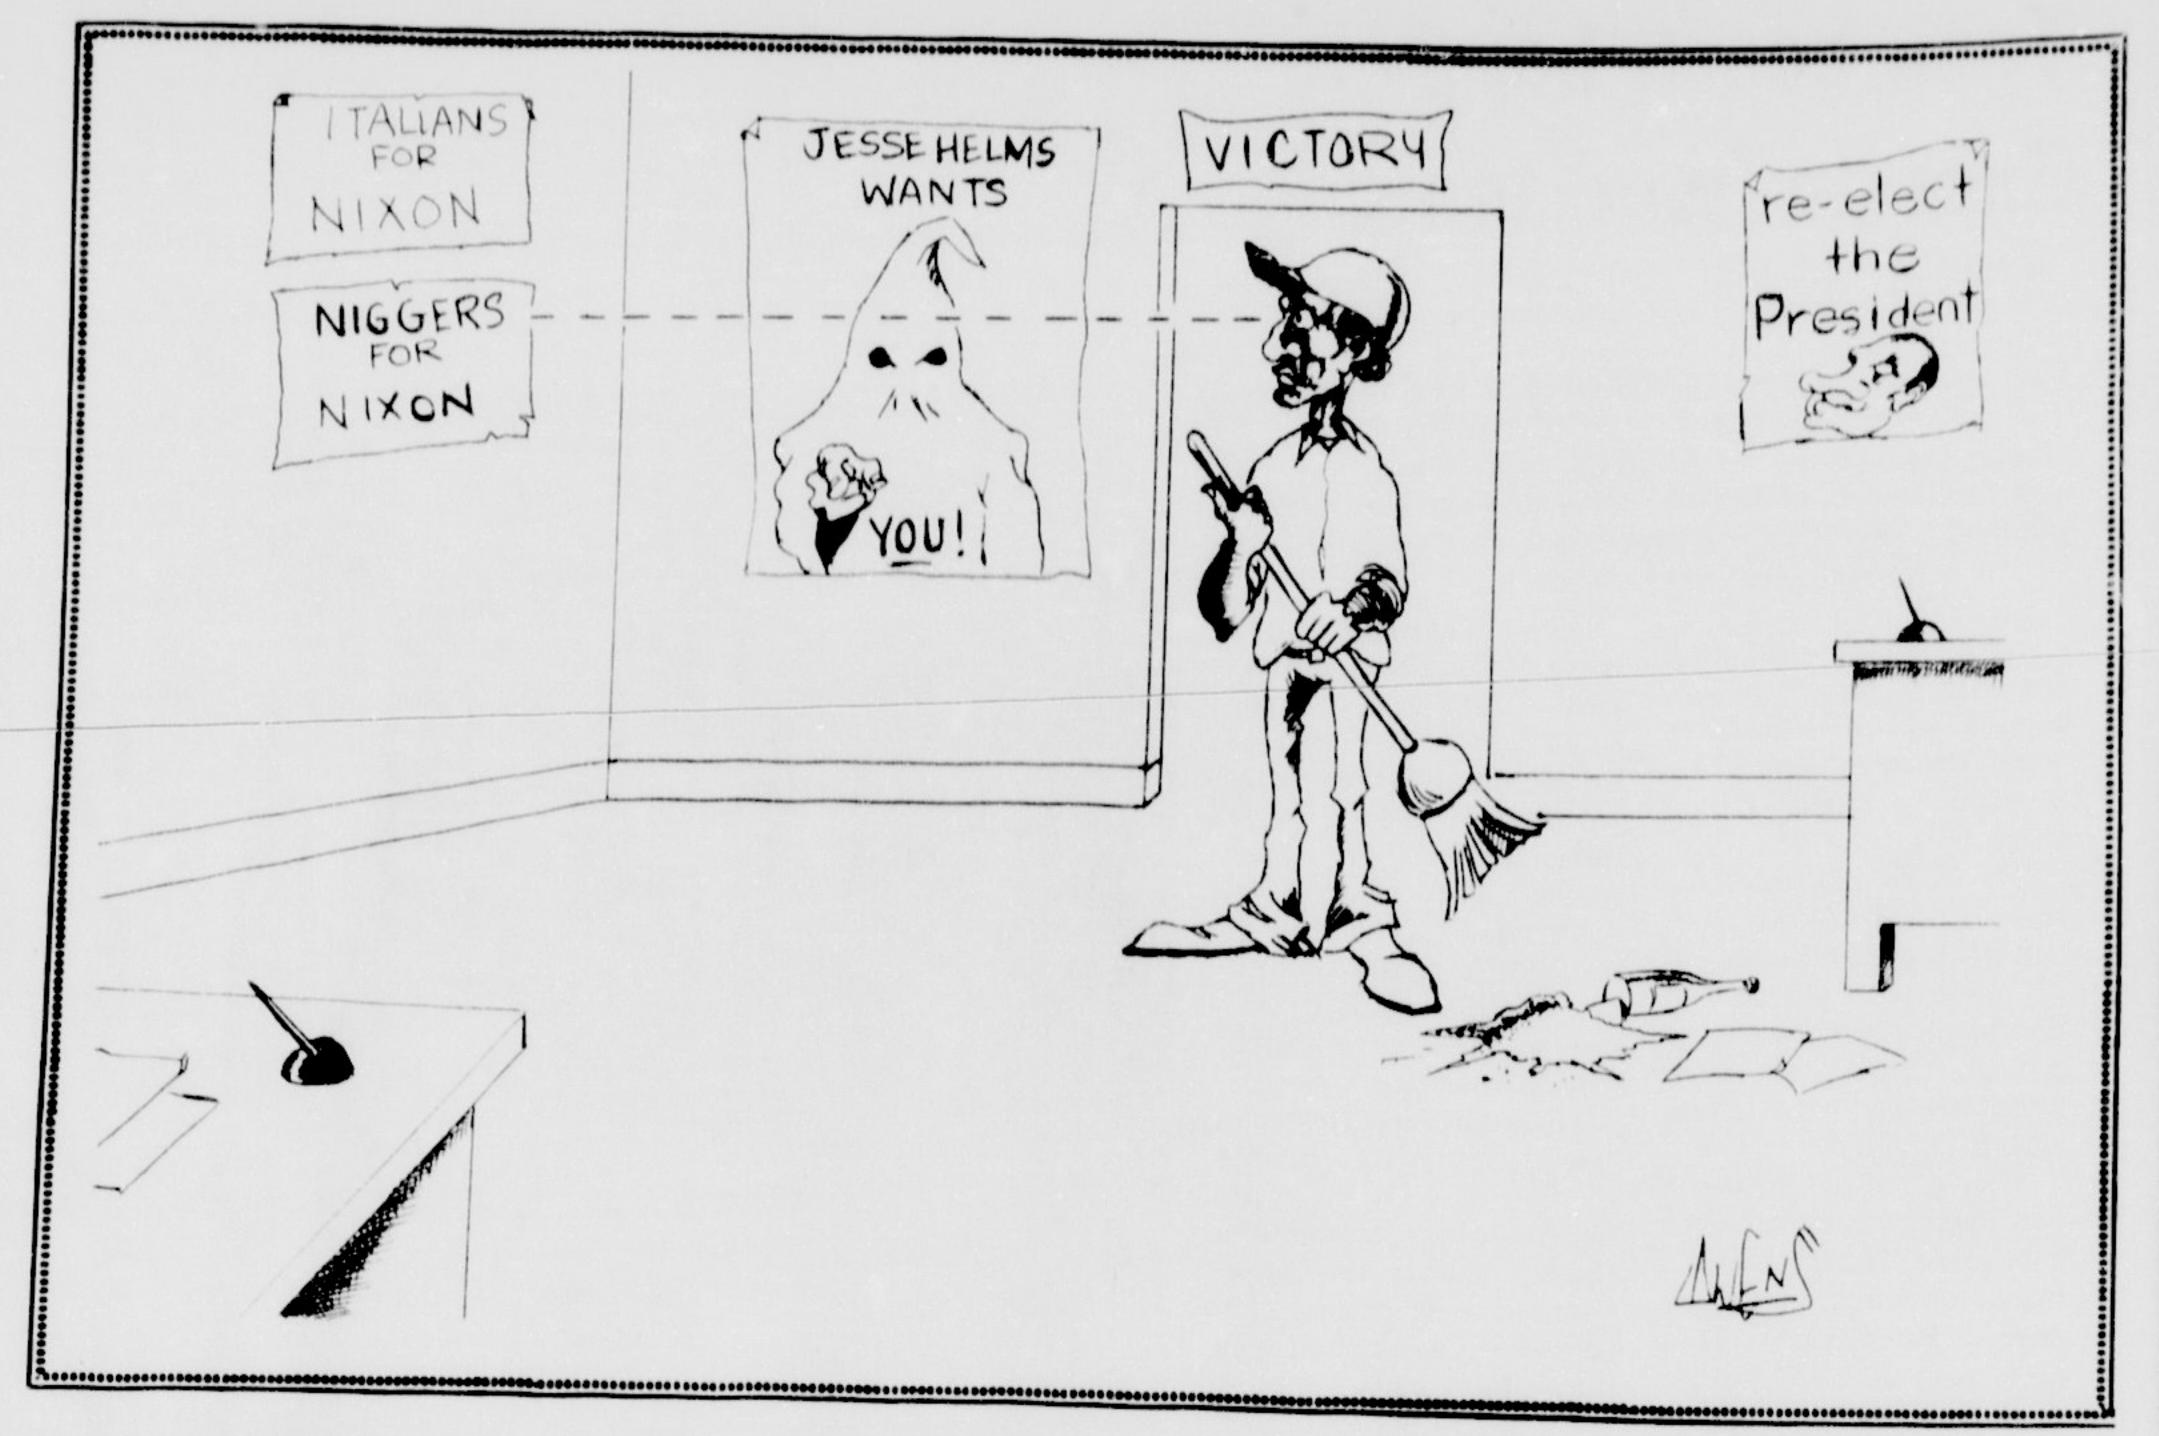

The real culprit in this matter is not the Indian, or even lack of white empathy. Actions of the United States government displaced and disenfranchised the Indian so severely as to make his culture and historical image a blurry mixture of native and technological confusion. In pushing the Indians westward, in dispossessing peaceful natives of their tribal lands, in hunting the red man like bison, an insatiable imperialism has demolished a once proud race.

When actions of a nation, no matter how far removed or restrained, have caused an irreversible harm to a race, that nation owes the human race the debt of restitution.

Doctor's Bag

Column supplies earthy answers

BY ARNOLD WERNER, M.D. QUESTION: Ever since our marriage, over two years ago, my husband has complained of an irritation around the anus. He itches constantly. I believe he has worms, but when he went to the doctor to see if he had worms, the doctor laughed him out of the office. I keep trying to get him to go to another doctor but he is too embarrassed from the first experience. He only has time to take two showers a week but he wipes well after each bowel movement. Do you have any idea what the problem can be? He is getting desperate because he scratches himself raw.

ANSWER: An itchy anus can be caused by many things. There are certain parasites, pinworms, for instance, that cause very severe itching and if you have pets or if your husband has contact with other animals, it is certainly a worthwhile thing to consider. Rather than have laughed him out of his office, the doctor should have obtained a stool specimen for parasites and their products and checked the anal area for the presence of the eggs of parasites that cause itching. Children not infrequently pick up pinworms from pets and pediatricians are very skillful at making such a diagnosis.

However, there are other causes of bad anal itching. Sometimes it is a case of simple anxiety but at other times, it may be the result of a residue of soap left in that area, especially if he takes hasty showers and doesn't rinse off completely. If he is wiping himself especially vigorously after each bowel movement, he could be causing irritation which is also resulting in itching. Two showers a week is just about enough to keep clean in cool weather, so it would be hard to invoke the usual matter of personal hygiene unless he sweats quite profusely or there are some other unusual circumstances. In any case, most situations of rectal itching can be defined and treated rather easily by most physicians who are willing to look rather than laugh.

QUESTION: My wife and I like to sleep in the nude. I am not quite sure what our two-year-old daughter thinks about this. Particularly, I wonder if it might arouse her or affect her attitude toward us as she grows older.

ANSWER: Ideally, children should have an opportunity to grow up feeling unembarrassed and knowledgeable about people's bodies and how they function. So much of this depends upon attitudes which are instilled in the child at a rather early age. With nudity and sex being as linked as they are in our society, parents are often confused as to how to handle being undressed in front of their children. The ingenuousness of a child's inquiries often leads to further embarrassment on the part of the parents. Fairly negative attitudes can be fostered in a child by using highly artificial means to avoid appearing undressed in front of the child, or, by making the child feel guilty or uncomfortable for the observations it makes.

A common sense approach to questions of nudity works fine, and one need not invoke fancy psychological theories to decide what to do. The child and the parent have a right to feel comfortable with whatever arrangements exist. In addition, the parents have a responsibility to provide the child with some guidelines that will be applicable outside of the family setting where different amounts of exposure and privacy are acceptable. Thus, it becomes perfectly sensible that a child sees both parents in various stages of undress until the child reaches an age where it begins to indicate some appreciation of privacy for itself. This is usually in the preschool or beginning school age child, and may be as early as three years. From such a point onward, it becomes more appropriate to help the child understand that parents, among others, enjoy some degree of privacy, especially the parent of the opposite sex. Commonly, parents and children of the same sex appear undressed before each other in a variety of appropriate circumstances. Gradually, the child can learn standards of personal behavior based on the role presented by the parent of the same sex. One can often recognize the child who is having difficulty with matters of undress by his or her excessive preoccupation and inquisitiveness which can mirror parent's uncertainties.

In the above framework, sleeping in the nude may be no more different for your child than seeing you appear in the nude in other contexts. You will still have to answer questions as to whether or not this provokes excessive curiousity on the part of the child and whether or not it causes you any discomfort. The likelihood is that by the time your child is a little older, if you continue to sleep in the nude, you would at least have something of a closed door policy with regard to your bedroom. I have assumed that your child has its own room and is not in the habit of sharing your bed with

QUESTION: I just bought a bicycle and have been riding 12 to 15 miles per day. How does bicycling compare with jogging as an alternative exercise? How much bicycling in miles or hours is equivalent to a mile in jogging? And how much bicycling would be recommended as a minimum to help improve one's physical fitness?

ANSWER: Translating bicycling miles into jogging miles would be very difficult to do for a number of reasons. In both cases, factors such as the fitness of the person, the terrain, the wind, and in the case of the bicycle, the quality of the machine you were using, would all influence such comparisons. However, the amount of bicycling that would be equivalent to a given amount of jogging would equal the amount of bicycling that would produce the same amount of out-of-breathness. To turn it around a bit, equivalent amounts of bicycling or jogging should have the same influence on increasing one's respiratory capacity. Twelve to fifteen miles per day of bicycling should be ample to keep you in good shape. Bicycling may have several advantages over jogging as a means of keeping in shape as it conditions one to produce effort over a more sustained period of time. In addition, it is a more purposeful activity in that it can be used to transport oneself from one place to another. Some people feel that purposeful exercise is more beneficial than nonpurposeful exercise.

No 'Nixon now'

To Fountainhead:

President Nixon. Now more than ever.

This campaign slogan, which implies (though it does not say directly) that Nixon is needed now more than he ever was, strikes me as being apropos to describe the coming "four more years": Now more of the same than ever. For example:

-Nixonomics seems likely to give us: Now mor unemployment than ever, (What progress has been made in the last four years?)

-Nixon's foreign policy in Indochina may well lead to: Now more war than ever. (Nixon has sidestepped his chance for a settlement, and 150,000 troops are still there.)

-Nixon's coziness with big business will surely give us: Now more. monopoly than ever. (Remember

-Nixon's "law and order" policy will probably lead to: Now more crime than ever. (Take the time to check crime figures, not administration rhetoric, for the last four years.)

-Nixon's paranoia of "radic-libs" and his stifling of political foes will surely yield: Now more wire-tapping and political subversion than ever.

-Nixon's federal spending policy, which could be described as "billions for defense but not one cent for clean water" could lead to: Now more inflation than ever.

The president will probably interpret Tuesday's victory as an approval of his policies and as a mandate to govern as he sees fit, this term without the nicety of reelection to consider. I dread "Now more Nixonism than ever!"

Concerts prevail

To Fountainhead:

Contrary to popular belief, there will be continuing concerts in Minges' gym here at EZU. Unfortunately, neither Lawrence Welk nor Guy Lombardo are available anytime soon.

Names will have to, for now, remain unknown. But the Committee promises to feed your music-hungry little bodies in the New Year.

A hearty slap on the ass to you all for your cooperation during the Homecoming concerts. Stay with us we're with you.
