THE LITTLE PETS

THE beautiful little girl, in the exquisite Picture on the other side, encircling her darling kittens with her dimpled arms, while the little dog eyes them askance, as if his former prerogative as chief favorite was being infringed upon, is a charming type of childish loveliness, health and innocence, which has its counterpart in many happy homes. What mother with beautiful children—and to its mother every child looks beautiful—has not gazed fondly upon some such scene? Yet how speedily might it be changed, how rapidly could sickness wrest from such a fair little form every vestige of its beauty. A bad cough, easily contracted, a derangement of the assimilative functions, involving malnutrition and wasting away of the flesh and vigor, a trouble very common among children; the development of an unsuspected scrofulous taint, might, if unchecked, make that rounded dimpled cheek wan and pallid, cause those laughing eyes to grow dim and lustreless, and that velvety skin, fair as the lily, to become disfigured. Happily, no mother's eye need long rest upon, no mother's heart be long wrung by such an agonizing sight. SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH THE HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA not only eradicates Throat and Lung Diseases of every kind, but checks the wasting away of children and adults and restores or creates flesh and vigor, and expels a scrofulous or rheumatic taint from the system. Sanctioned and recommended as it is by leading physicians on both sides of the Atlantic, what medicine can be more appropriate for family use—particularly where there are children? Its basis of pure cod liver oil is deprived of all fishy flavor, in the process of manufacture, and its properties as a flesh producer are enhanced by the combination with it, in accurate and harmonious chemical proportion of the Hypophosphites. Their main constituent, Phosphorus, enters largely into the composition of bodily substance and tends to increase it when supplied to feeble and attenuated children and male or female adults. For puny, sickly young folks, nervous lady invalids troubled with anaemia, involving loss of flesh and strength, to which they are particularly subject, and for weakness of the back it is wondrously beneficial. It does not, like ordinary preparations of its class, repel the palate. Although attempts have been made, never before has so complete and agreeable a blending been effected of Cod Liver Oil with other nourishing, flesh producing constituents. Consumption, Bronchitis, all Coughs, Scrofula, Rheumatism and Wasting Diseases of Children and Adults are remedied by this "Sheet-Anchor" of the sick and feeble. Palatable as milk.
