

World tobacco production is nearing the twelve billion pound mark. And looking at the statistics, it might seem that supply will soon exceed demand.

But a closer inspection of the situation reveals a somewhat different picture.

U.S. flue-cured and burley tobaccos continue to be the most preferred tobaccos in the world. And the efforts of U.S. growers to increase production are unlikely to fill the growing demand.

This kind of market requires a leaf supplier with world-wide purchasing and processing capabilities.

And that's a good description of A.C. Monk.

Although Monk is one of the major suppliers of U.S. leaf, in order to meet the total requirements of all our customers we are also major suppliers of flue-cured and burley tobaccos from Korea, Italy, Brazil, Guatemala and other countries.

In fact, we deal in all the most preferred tobaccos grown in the world. And these tobaccos are selected and processed by our own people.

Even though it's not exactly a buyer's market, Monk can provide the tobaccos you need to help keep your blend constant and your costs in line.

A.C. Monk & Co., Farmville, North Carolina, U.S.A.

