

It seems that Marco Polo wanted to take monks with him as ambassadors to the court of Kublai Khan.

But the monks turned back, and Polo went on to the Far East without them.

Well, it took a few centuries, but we're happy to report that a few Monks from the West have finally arrived in Asia.

In fact, A.C. Monk representatives now deal with almost every country Marco Polo may have called on, as well as a number of lands he might have somehow overlooked.

You see, wherever choice leaf is sold, you're sure to find Monk buyers.

And wherever there's a need for high-quality tobaccos, Monk is going to find some way to supply it, no matter what.

Even if sometimes, in some places, we've got to walk miles to catch the next train of camels.
