ECU publications nab awards

By JIMMY WILLIAMS
Production Manager

The ECU chapter of the Society for Collegiate Journalists, (SCJ), received three awards while attending the biennial national convention held this past weekend in Nashville, Tenn.

The ECU yearbook, BUCCANEER 75-76, was recognized for its outstanding coverage of the year in the form of a second place award.

FOUNTAINHEAD editor, Jim Elliott, was presented with a second-place award for his editorial writing.

The three editorials submitted dealt with BUCCANEER funding, SGA spending, and dorm searches by the Greenville Police Dept.

The REBEL, ECU's literary magazine for 75-76, was given an honorable mention in a category where no first, second, or third places were available. Only two magazines were honored.

The delegates attending the convention accepted the awards for the three publications on Saturday, March 12 at the awards luncheon of the convention.

Also during the awards luncheon officers of the SCJ national executive council were electd for a two year term. J.W. Click, Professor of Journalism at Ohio University, was elected to the presidential post.

Willford Kale, from William and Mary College, and Wayne Norton, from Southeast Missouri University were selected as first and second vice presidents.

Executive Secretary Treasurer, John David Reed, from Eastern Illinois University, remains at his present post for two more years when his term expires.

Prior to the awards luncheon, ECU's two delegates, Jimmy Williams and Dennis Leonard, served on the outstanding chapter committee and the constitution committee, respectively.

Williams was also a member of the Executive Council. The Executive Council is comprised of the Society's officers along with representatives from four schools throughout the nation.

ECU and the other three executive member schools were chosen at the 1975 convention held in Atlanta, Ga.

The host school for this year's convention was David Lipscomb College in Nashville.

Speakers included Joseph Cumming, the Atlanta bureau chief of Newsweek magazine whose speech centered on Southern Politics and the press. And John Seigenthaler, publisher of THE TENNESSEAN, who lectured on "The Free Press Concept - an Endangered Right."

The three day convention included workshops and tours for various media interests.

Meals and rooms were provided for all attending delegates by the national committee.

Basketball coach for ECU found

By STEVE WHEELER
Staff Writer

East Carolina University named today as its new head basketball coach, Larry Gillman, an assistant coach currently at the University of San Francisco. Gillman replaces Dave Patton who served for three years as the Pirates head coach and announced his resignation following a game with The Citadel on Feb. 19.

"This young man brings an outstanding record of achievements with basketball programs that are nationally known for their excellence. The choice was the unanimous decision by the committee and he was selected from a list of highly outstanding prospects across the nation," said Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, ECU chancellor.

"We are confident that he will bring success to the basketball program at East Carolina University and add great strength to the overall athletic programs at the University."

Gillman has served as an assistant coach at three major universities: Houston, Minnesota and San Francisco. He has also coached at junior college and high school levels.

The 28-year old Mt. Vernon, N.Y. native will join the ECU staff immediately.

Gillman first joined the San Francisco staff in August of 1974 and served as the coordinator of recruiting until joining the

Controlled disturbance

ECU students 'get rowdy'

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Co-News Editor

Spring fever hit downtown Greenville last Thursday night as student revelers congregated along Cotanche Street, stopping motorists and laying claim to the street.

Pete Podeszwa, an ECU student, said that he believed the excited atmosphere started in Thursday's where Mother's Finest was playing. "I was there for the last set they did and the crowd was going crazy. They loved it," said Podeszwa.

According to Podeszwa, the crowd became uneasy when the group refused to play any more after one encore.

"As I saw it, the crowd left a little bit disgusted. One guy threw a beer bottle on stage."

Following the performance, the crowd moved out to Cotanche Street. Podeszwa estimated the crowd at approximately 250.

"I couldn't believe the amount of people there. They were just carrying on and generally raising hell."

Podeszwa said that the crowd gathered around 1 a.m. and remained on the street until about 2:00.

ECU prof co-authors text books

Dr. Charles R. Coble, assistant professor of science education at ECU, is co-author of two new textbooks for teachers: "Mainstreaming Language Arts and Social Studies" and "Mainstreaming Science and Mathematics."

The books are being released this month by the Goodyear Publishing Co. as part of the Goodyear Education series. Dr. Coble's collaborators are Dr. Anne Adams, professor of education and Director of the Duke University Reading Center, and Dr. Paul B. Hounshell, director of NSF Institutes in Science at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Each book is applicable to college education courses in teaching methods, student teaching and teaching in content areas.

The "Mainstreaming" approach minimizes the difference between special education students and "regular" students, and each book provides teaching plans which enable all students to move forward in the four major content areas: language arts, social studies, science and mathematics.

All activities and ideas have been tested by teachers in special classrooms and at the Duke University Reading Center with students ranging from retarded to gifted.

Professor Kuwana is very well known for his work on the development of spectroelectrochemistry and its application to the study of enzymatic electron transport components, particularly the heme proteins of the mammalian respiratory system. He has also made important contributions to the understanding of electrode surface phenomena by using various electron spectroscopy techniques.

SGA sponsors retreats, discusses bus system

By JACK LAIL
Staff Writer

The SGA legislature Monday appropriated $430 for two retreats this weekend during its weekly meeting.

The English department was appropriated $195 and the Political Science department was appropriated $235 for retreats at Atlantic Beach, N.C.

Both bills passed with opposition. Opponents contended it is too late in the year for retreats.

The Physics and Geology departments will also hold retreats at Atlantic Beach, this weekend.

The legislature appropriated $300 to the ECU Law Society for a trip to Washington, D.C. The Society plans to visit the Supreme Court and talk with some senators and representatives.

A bill passed sending four members of Gamma Beta Phi, an honor fraternity, to Knoxville, Tenn., for a convention, after much debate.

In other business, the rules were suspended to vote on a bill to shift $239 in the photo lab budget. The money was shifted from color processing to photo equipment.

The reason given for the change was that the color processing equipment is not being used this year and the photo lab wants to buy a light meter.

Tommy Thomason, SGA treasurer, presented the financial report.

The SGA received $80,750 from spring fees, according to Thomason. The SGA has $17,682.49 in unappropriated funds.

Thomason pointed out an error in the FOUNTAINHEAD editorial appearing March 8. The editorial said the SGA has spent over $100,000 this year on the transit system.

The legislature has spent only $78,000, according to Thomason.

The rest of the transit system's $125,000 budget was appropriated by last year's legislature, Thomason added.

Ricky Price, speaker of the legislature, announced that there are still four openings for legislators, including one for day student, two for Belk dorm, one for Scott dorm and one for Fleming dorm.

Homecoming will not come with halloween

The Homecoming Steering Committee met Thursday to hear suggestions for a theme for Homecoming next year and to distribute to committee members proposed operational procedures.

The committee did not decide on a theme for the event, postponing that determination in order to receive more student input.

Committee co-chairman, Barry Robinson, said he hoped students would call him at the Student Union, (757-6611, extension 210), and voice their opinions on what the theme should be.

Co-chairman Dr. Charles Brown distributed to the committee proposed operational procedures which, if passed, would be a first for the body.

The proposal discusses the timetable for the planning of Homecoming activities, determines when committee meetings will be held and sets down the membership of the committee which is by title only.

A clause in the preamble states: "The only restriction for designating a Homecoming celebration is that Halloween shall not fall within four days before or after the day of the football game."

"By 2:30 the streets were empty. You'd never have known anyone was there."

Podeszwa said that the people were mostly just having fun.

"There were a couple of clowns throwing bottles, though."

The Greenville Police Department blocked off the streets between Fourth and Fifth Streets, according to Police Chief Cannon.

Cannon said that his major concern was that no one would be injured.

He also added that he is presently receiving criticism from Greenville residents for blocking off the streets.

Cannon said that he had expected criticism but that he has to do what he feels is best.

Worker dignity denied

The anti-union tactics of the J. P. Stevens textile firm are both a disgrace to the American free enterprise system and an affront to the dignity of industrial workers in the South.

The Southern textile industry is America's last major unorganized manufacturing industry, with fewer than 20 per cent of the region's 589,000 textile workers belonging to a union. With annual sales topping the $1 billion mark, Stevens employs 44,000 workers in more than 80 mills.

In Roanoke Rapids where Stevens operates seven mills, a majority of the company employees voted in 1974 to be represented by the Textile Workers Union of America. After three years of debates and demonstrations by the workers, Stevens still refuses to negotiate a contract with union officials.

The company utilizes a variety of underhanded tactics to crush the union. The National Labor Relations Board has found Stevens guilty of illegally firing 289 employees for union activities. In 1973 Stevens was ordered to pay TWUA $50,000 in damages for wiretapping a union organizer's motel room. Now that the union is a reality with which Stevens must negotiate, the company refuses to bargain in good faith or to submit unsettled grievances to impartial third parties for arbitration.

Unless Stevens begins to respect employee needs and recognize their right to organize and demand proper compensation for their labor, an embittered fight could ensue between workers and management in the rapidly industrializing South. Union supporters have already begun to organized a boycott of Stevens' products to bring the mammoth corporation to the bargaining table—in good faith.

In North Carolina, the scene of Stevens beachhead with the TWUA, industrial workers can ill afford the slowdown. Wages here are already 16 per cent below the national average. If the South is to continue to mature economically there must be more attention paid to its workers, certainly more than is now. One Stevens worker at Roanoke Rapids who had been with the company for over 30 years was asked how much he would receive in retirement pay if he were to retire tomorrow. "Sixty dollars a month," he replied. Over half of a man's productive lifetime is given to Stevens, and to them it's worth only $15 a month in retirement benefits.

Officials pledge support to overpass

By ROBERT M. SWAIM
Asst. News Editor

The much discussed and badly needed pedestrian overpass at 10th St. and College Hill will soon become a reality, and it is long overdue.

Last month I conferred with Governor James B. Hunt, Lt. Governor Jimmy Green, and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten about our need for an overpass.

Governor Hunt was very responsive and appeared to be genuinely concerned about the safety of ECU students. The governor has assured me that he will seriously pursue this worthy project.

Lt. Governor Green was also very attentive and concerned when I explained our dilemma about the overpass. Mr. Green has asked me to gather the necessary data concerning the overpass and forward it to him. Governor Hunt also asked me to personally gather information on the overpass and send it to the governors mansion.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten told me personally that he intends to help in every way possible.

On March 17, I will journey to the state capital and deliver the report that I have prepared to the lieutenant governor.

I owe many thanks to SGA Vice-President Greg Pingston for his unselfish cooperation and help in preparing the overpass report. Greg has done a tremendous job and deserves a lot of credit for his efforts on behalf of the ECU student body.

The need for the overpass is tremendous. It is necessary to insure the safety of thousands of ECU students who daily must cross the dangerous intersection to get to their classes on the main campus. There are approximately 2500 students living on the hill, there are also hundreds of day students who utilize the parking lots at the bottom of the hill. Each of these students must take their life into their hands when they cross the street to get to their classes.

There have been numerous serious accidents at this intersection. Fortunately none have involved pedestrians, although one coed was struck last year while crossing the intersection on a bicycle. Just last week there was another accident, involving two automobiles, both were heavily damaged.

The overpass will benefit not only pedestrians, but motorists as well. Motorists will no longer have to wait and watch for students crossing the intersection. As is quite often the case now, students will begin crossing the street when there is a break in traffic and continue to cross the street in a steady stream, thus blocking traffic.

The overpass would eliminate the dangerous practice of darting between cars and damn near getting killed in the process. Motorists would no longer have to keep an eye out for pedestrians, and therefore could keep their eye on the road.

It is a shame that it has taken this long to get such a deserving project off of the ground. The students of ECU were simply the victims of partisan politics on the part of the Transportation Department (DOT) under the Holshouser administration. It seems strange that DOT could not find a paltry $210,000 to insure the safety of thousands of students, but there was plenty of money for paving roads in Watauga county (which just by coincidence happens to be the home of former Governor Holshouser.)

Fortunately the new administration under Gov. Hunt has heard our plea for the overpass and they are responding. The governor, Lt. governor, and the attorney general have all pledged their support of this project. And it is because of their concern and willingness to help that the overpass will be built. We should all be thankful that our needs are being met and hopefully there will be no more major delays.

Supporters fight racism

Black youth denied appeal for new trial

(LNS)—Gary Tyler, an 18 year-old black youth charged and convicted for murder, and serving a sentence of life imprisonment, was denied his appeal for a new trial by the Louisiana Supreme Court on January 24. Tyler's case has become a national symbol of the fight against racism, and his supporters plan to continue the fight to reverse his conviction. Tyler is now going to appeal his case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Tyler's defense based the state appeal on two key issues: the unfair composition of the jury in the original trial, and the recantation of testimony by the state's key witness, Natalie Blanks.

Tyler had been convicted by an all-white jury in 1975 which was selected from a predominantly white jury pool in a parish (Louisiana's equivalent to a county) which is 40 percent black. The recent Louisiana court ruling refused to consider this fact on the grounds that the original defense lawyer did not object to it at the time.

The court also refused to accept the recantation, reasoning that the original judge, Ruche Marino was the most qualified to decide when Blanks lied and when she told the truth. Blanks has said, however, that Judge Marino was one of the public officials who forced her to testify against Tyler in the first place.

The murder charges for which Tyler was convicted stem from the shooting death of a white student during a mob attack on a bus load of black students leaving Destrehan High School in October of 1974. Tyler was arrested during the incident after he complained of the brutal treatment received by black students at the hands of the police and was charged with "interfering with the law." This charge was later changed to murder even though available evidence points to the shots coming from the attacking mob, and the usual ballistics information about angle of entry of the bullet, etc. is missing from the autopsy report.

SUPPORT FOR TYLER

Upon hearing of the state supreme court's decision, Tyler's mother, Juanita Tyler said, "The future is to fight. I'm not giving up. I'm asking a lot more people to get involved. We need a national movement. It will take rallies, marches and a lot more. I'll be fighting and struggling until there's no more Mrs. Tyler. Not just for my son, but for all that is coming down."

In a statement from St. James Parish prison in Louisiana, Tyler urged his supporters to continue to fight. "I wasn't expecting a right decision and I wasn't surprised. I also don't expect to get justice in the U.S. Supreme Court. I'm not depending on any court; the people are going to free me."

Last July, over 2,000 of Tyler's supporters gathered in New Orleans and marched down the city's main streets. On October 7, 1976 over 92,000 names were handed to Governor Edwin Edwards on petitions to free Tyler. Despite laws prohibiting demonstrations outside courthouses in Louisiana, hundreds of Tyler supporters picketed the court hearing his appeal on November 10.

In an unusual move, the Louisiana Supreme Court instructed the district court to sentence Gary Tyler to life imprisonment at hard labor with no chance of parole for twenty years. This is the maximum sentence possible in Louisiana at this time.

The defense does not expect the U.S. Supreme Court to grant a retrial and is preparing for another round of appeals on other grounds.

University of Minnesota in 1975. During that year, Gillman brought in the current stars of this year's club: Allen Thompson, Sam Williams, Winfred Boynes, Bill Cartwright and James Hardy.

Gillman's recruiting efforts were tabbed by all national publications as the tops in the country that year.

While at Minnesota, Sept. 1975 to June 1976, the Gophers boosted their recruits such that they were tabbed 15th overall in the country in recruiting and the following year posted a 24-3 record.

The first college experience for Gillman came at the University of Houston from 1973-1974. He worked there as a graduate assistant coach under Guy Lewis during a 19-7 year.

Gillman's first coaching job was at Mt. Vernon High School in New York. He assisted Coach Gus Williams (USC/Golden State), Earl Tatum (Marquette/Lakers) and Rudy Hackett (Syracuse all-America) to two consecutive state championships, something never done in New York before.

In 1972, Gillman worked as an assistant coach at Westchester Community College and guided his club to a 35-3 record, also producing three all-America players.

As a player, Gillman was an all-county guard at Tuckahoe High School. His college career was curtailed as a sophomore due to an ankle injury.

Gillman commented, "I feel East Carolina University's overall situation, with emphasis on help from the administration, community and faculty, can be exceptional. Recruiting is the tough part, but East Carolina has a lot to offer.

"I plan to have a quick tempo style with aggressive defense. I want the defense to make the offense. If one creates turnovers, one gets more shots and scores more points.

"I pride myself in the ability to communicate with all groups. My door will always be open. One must communicate properly to be successful.

"My top priority is recruiting and picking a staff."

Gillman is married and is a graduate of the University of San Francisco with a B.A. degree.

Pitt jail has no room for state prisoners

By ROBERT SWAIM
Asst. News Editor

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said recently that it would be difficult to house state prisoners in the Pitt County jail.

Tyson's comment was made in response to Gov. James B. Hunt's announcement that county sheriffs will be asked to house state prisoners in county jails to relieve overcrowding in the state's prisons.

"Pitt County at the present time is running at full capacity," said Tyson.

"We would like to work with the governor but it should be on a voluntary basis."

Tyson said that the Pitt County jail averaged 65 prisoners per day for February.

"We have to accommodate prisoners from seven towns," said Tyson.

Tyson said that additional staff would have to be hired if the jail has to accommodate state prisoners.

Tyson added that at the present time the jail staff consists of two cooks, four jailers, and four matrons.

According to Tyson, the Dept. of Corrections only comes around twice a week to pick up prisoners and transport them to the state's prisons.

The county jail imprisons those prisoners who are awaiting trial or who are waiting to be transported to the state prison. Some prisoners are already serving their time in the county jail, according to Tyson.

"Anybody who has less than 30 days is pulling their time in the county jail," said Tyson.

Tyson said that trouble with prisoners is usually the result of them having nothing to do.

"We have a library for prisoners. We also have ministers who come in about every day and hold services for the prisoners."

Tyson said that only about two or three ECU students are committed to the jail per month.

"Most of them are usually released on their own bond except in the narcotics cases," said Tyson.

During February the Pitt County jail held 305 prisoners. Of that number 45 were awaiting trial and seven were serving time.

The racial composition of the jail population for February was 55% Negro and 45% white.

Tyson said that five juveniles were held in the jail in February. Some were charged with rape, breaking and entering, and larceny.

The sheriff said that he must maintain cells for males, females, juvenile males, and juvenile females.

According to the sheriff, if state prisoners are housed in the county jail the state will pay for their upkeep.

"We keep prisoners (females and juveniles) for other counties, we're almost a regional jail," said the sheriff.

Concerning the recent suggestion by Attorney General Rufus Edmisten that the governor should commute the sentences of between 500 and 1,000 prisoners who are serving time for minor drug offences, Sheriff Tyson said that the prisoners should remain incarcerated.

"As it is now our courts are very liberal. It's very seldom that a first offender gets time. I feel like if he was bad enough to go to prison then they ought to keep them."

Special paintings, prints on display

A selection of paintings, prints and drawings by Walter Barker is on view at the Wellington B. Gray Gallery at ECU through March 28.

The exhibition, entitled "Small Works from the Years 1947-1977," includes works representative of various periods during the evolution of Barker's style during the past 30 years.

Among the recent works are paintings influenced by Barker's interest in the ancient Chinese book "I-Ching" (The Book of Changes) founded upon aesthetic principles established in fifth-century China.

Earlier paintings reflect Barker's influence by the art and spirit of Greece, Persia and Egypt, and by later European schools of painting.

Barker is an associate professor of art at UNC-Greensboro. He studied with Max Beckmann at Washington University in St. Louis and later taught there after additional study at Indiana University. Tran Gordley, associate dean of the ECU School of Art, studied painting with Barker at Washington.

Barker has traveled and studied throughout the world, and before joining the UNC-Greensboro art faculty, taught at the Brooklyn Museum Art School. His award-winning work has been included in numerous exhibitions and is part of the permanent collection of several museums, including the Museum of Modern Art and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Undergraduates rank faculty

Last spring every undergraduate student who preregistered for Fall Quarter received an IBM voting card—and the opportunity to vote for up to three of the teachers he had had during the 1975-76 academic year whom he believed to be outstanding. More than 34% of the 6,980 students cast votes which rated each of their nominees on an intensity scale of excellence: 10 (highest), 8 or 6. The results are now in.

Based upon the student vote, the Instructional Survey Committee of the Faculty Senate, which designed and carried out the survey, selected 49 faculty members from among the 660 who were statistically comparable. These are faculty whom students believed to be the outstanding undergraduate teachers during 1975-76. Their names are listed below.

The Instructional Survey Committee also surveyed faculty opinion in each department or school regarding outstanding teachers in that unit. More than one-third of the teachers listed also appeared in the top 10% of their colleagues' vote. Ranking in the top 10% of the faculty vote for his/her department or school is indicated by an asterisk next to the instructor's name.

A similar survey of administrators was taken at the same time, but the results were inconclusive. Professor Farr explained "administrators are often teachers too; drawing the line between them therefore becomes difficult indeed. Chairpersons of departments and deans of many schools were included in the faculty survey."

TOP-RANKED TEACHERS IN STUDENT SURVEY

(In Alphabetical Order)

Names marked with an asterisk (*) are those which also appeared in the top 10% of the faculty vote for that department or school.

An important reason for these surveys was to obtain information for the Alumni Association's outstanding teacher awards—two $500 awards for teaching excellence during the previous year. Frances Daniels of Business Education and Everett C. Simpson of the Biology Department received the Alumni Association awards for 1975-76 at the ECU Christmas Convocation. These awards had not been given for several years, Ms. Farr noted, because there had been no acceptable method of evaluating teaching.

"The support of Provost Howell, the cooperation of Richard Lennon and Evans Harris of the Computer Center, and the unflagging energy of the Committee members made this administration and tabulation of these surveys possible," said Ms. Farr. Equally important was the cooperation of the students and faculty in taking the survey seriously.

This spring the Committee plans to survey students and faculty about undergraduate teaching during the current academic year. IBM voting cards for the student survey will be available late in Spring Quarter (tentatively, April 25-27) in the lobby outside the book store. Voting forms for the faculty and administrative surveys will be sent near the end of Spring Quarter. The Committee hopes that the Alumni Association Awards for 1976-77 will then be made at the Faculty Convocation in the fall.

We Need More People Like You!!

Army Nurses work in one of the most stimulating professional environments in nursing today. As an Army Nurse, you'll have the opportunity to practice nursing within the largest health-care system in the nation which includes exciting assignments in major medical centers world-wide.

You'll be an Army Officer with the appropriate responsibilities, privileges, and salary of a recognized professional. Your minimum starting salary will be over $10,500 with regular increases up to $16,000 in three short years. In addition to the excellent salary, you'll receive other benefits such as educational opportunities, travel, tax advantages, and free health and dental care. To qualify, you need at least a Bachelor's Degree in Nursing from a National League of Nursing accredited school. Also, you must qualify under the Army's general entrance requirements. Senior nursing students may apply during the last semester or quarter of their BSN program.

Rodgers company lacking

Dance without motivation degenerates into mere musical gymnastics. This lack of refined choreography was the basis for the intolerably poor performance of the Rod Rodgers Dance Company. The troupe was composed of prominent dancers, but intelligent choreography is more than mere jumpsuit athletics.

The essence of dance of any type is to create its own energy as it enhances the music. The intent of choreography must be higher than mere orchestral coordination. This company is better suited performing warm-ups for the Ice Capades.

This reviewer cannot comment upon all aspects of the performance, as I chose to leave before the last numbers.

The program was disjointed and poorly planned as constant announcements were made. The best of the pieces was performed by a woman whose name was mumbled through the intercom, but was lost on this reviewer. The dance was basically a series of Katana from the Karate discipline of Aikido. She proved to be the strongest of the troupe in that her movements and motivations were well defined. The music accompanying this particular number was poor, as the discordant guitar intruded on the strength of the dramatic structure of the piece. This early number was the best of the worst.

Rodgers' ineptitude surfaced horribly in the number Interval Two. In this piece, there were several dancers on stage. Rodgers' inability to bring a sense of emotion to the piece left the dancers cavorting about the stage in linear movements that were confused and flaccid. They constantly repeated themselves (though a sense of monotony was intended) until the dance drew mercifully to an inconclusive finish.

The unmotivated movement of the group was epitomized in Love Flower, where a woman in a long white dress made historic fertility movements to the tunes of a poor blues number. This dance of "intimate dedication" was done to the spine of her recalcitrant lover. The number was saccharine and tired; as the woman clumsily fought with her own missteps and misdirection. At times she hopped about like a demented rabbit.

I regret having mentioned this company in my last column. The space would have better been devoted to a seminar on careers in motel management.

MOVIES

Park—If one is willing to accept the promise of an eleven pound fetus leaping out of his laboring mother's uterus and slaughtering the deliverers, then this film is viable. It attempts to comment on the polluting of our environment, but the scenes are blatant and poorly timed. The film chooses to move from cheap horror tactics to unsubstantiated abilities on the part of the infant. The child resembles a bulbous Truman Capote with claws, and proceeds to destroy most of a coastal city in search of family. This film should be dragged out and shot. (Not unlike the infant zero stars.)

Plaza One—Shaggy D.A.—Reviewed in last week's paper.

Plaza Two—Crash—An enormous amount of automobiles are destroyed for the sake of action. This film has no rationale for its existence other than it will perhaps make jobs more readily available in Detroit.

Pitt Theatre—Once is not Enough—Directly from the novel of Jacqueline Susann. Not available for review at this time.

Artists Series sponsors Saint Patrick's dance

ECU's Wright Auditorium will be the scene of a St. Patrick's Day Dance on Thursday, March 17. The dance begins at 8:00 p.m. and features two popular Southeastern bands, BILL DEAL AND THE RHONDELS and THE TAMS.

The St. Patrick's Day Dance is sponsored by the ECU

Student Union Special Entertainment Committee. Advance tickets for ECU students are $1.50. Public tickets and all tickets at the door are $3.00. Tickets are available at the ECU Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center. Call 757-6611, ext. 266 for additional information.

Last Wednesday night, March 9, was to be a good night for country rock fanatics. Cowboy, at one time the premier East Coast country rock band, was to perform at the Attic in downtown Greenville.

Cowboy, however, proved to not be the Cowboy of old, but a band that has moved on to a different sound in order to survive in the erratic music rat-race of the '70s.

A band named Taxi started the evening off with a thump. From Cincinnati, Ohio, this group opened up with Aerosmith and eventually proceeded to fade into heavy metal oblivion. With bands like this, it's a wonder that there aren't more deaf troupes making the circuit.

The group toyed with a McCartney/Beatles medley and made a heavy metal anthem out of "Rollin' In My Sweet Baby's Arms." My personal advice for this band is to call a cab and pull a Howard Hughes until acoustic music makes a mass comeback.

Cowboy, under the auspices of Scott Boyer and Tommy Talton, released their first album in 1970, REACH FOR THE SKY. Their second, 5'LL GETCHA TEN, released in '71 still remains an almost flawless country rock classic. It's only drawback from reaching that plateau is the mix, which was under the direction of Capricorn's Johnny Sandlin.

The second album included Chuck Leavel (now of Sea Level) on piano and a brilliant Southern guitarist named Duane Allman, who played slide dobro on "Please Be With Me." This song was later recorded by Eric Clapton on 461 OCEAN BOULEVARD. The album also included "All My Friends," later recorded by Greg Allman's LAID BACK.

Cowboy released a solid LP in 1974, entitled BOYER AND TALTON. Boyer emerged from this album as the better of the two songwriters, displaying his creativeness with near classic country ballads such as "Everyone Has a Chance to Feel" and "Message In the Wind."

The group played with Greg Allman on his solo tour in '74. The poor ON TOUR LP came from the concert tapes made during this period.

This reviewer was lucky to see Cowboy during the period of the BOYER AND TALTON album. Backing up Wet Willie at UNC-Wilmington, this band added more than one loyal devotee that evening with a fantastic show. Although Boyer has the hand for lyrics and a shakey but deceptively good country voice, Talton exhibited a tour de force on lead and slide guitar that night.

Cowboy, sadly enough, was an entirely different band Wednesday night. There were flashes of the past, but the majority of the work was new material. The band remains in its country roots, but there was a great deal of experimentation in other fields. Much of Cowboy's music seemed to be oriented to a dance hall, playing funky and at times, disco inclined material.

A lot of the music seemed to be an extension of Talton's disastrous '76 fling with Johnny Sandlin and Bill Stewart, in an album entitled HAPPY TO BE ALIVE. The album has to rank as one of the most extreme cases of vinyl waste in our generation - it was and remains a horrible album. Talton must have been happy to embrace Boyer again for this Cowboy tour.

Cowboy played an extremely good version of Boyer's "Please Be With Me." Another moment of hurrah was "Where Can You Go," which opened with a catchy guitar intro by Talton.

Boyer showed his guitar versatility on an unnamed instrumental number which Cowboy used to excel in. The band jammed a good bit, but much of it sounded uninspired and blatantly dull.

Cowboy has refused to live in the past, as many bands do, and possibly may suffer for it. The new material fails to match the old Cowboy's inventiveness and melody.

The old Cowboy sounded fresh and very much alive, as if playing for fun. The new Cowboy seems to be out to earn that badly needed dollar - music has become an income for Boyer and Talton. Consequently, their music suffers for it.

NATIONAL THEATRE OF THE DEAF players perform a scene from "Four Saints in Three Act," one of three pieces they will present at McGinnis Auditorium tonight, March 15, at 8:00 p.m. The National Theatre brings together music, dance, mime, sign language, and spoken dialogue to form one of the most exciting programs ever developed. Advance tickets for ECU students are $1.50, faculty and staff-$2.50. All public admissions and tickets sold at the time of the performance are $4.00

S.C. inns ready for fest

CHARLESTON, S.C.—People who know Charleston know that unlike most tourist destinations Charleston is not dominated by hotels. In fact, Charleston's skyline consists almost entirely of 18th and 19th century houses and churches nestled together in the city's 789-acre historic district.

So where will the thousands of visitors to the Spoleto Festival this May 25-June 5 stay? Can there possibly be enough rooms?

According to Sallie T. Kramer who is managing the Spoleto Housing Bureau for the Chamber of Commerce, the answer is "Yes."

"There are plenty of rooms," says Ms. Kramer. "There are hotel rooms as well as rooms in people's houses. Ms. Kramer points out that even though late May is a typically popular time in Charleston, 22 Charleston hotels have committed rooms to the Festival and an additional 57 hotels from Myrtle Beach to Savannah have also reserved rooms for allocation by the Spoleto Housing Bureau.

To date, over 3,100 hotel rooms are available for Spoleto visitors. All of those rooms will be booked through the Spoleto Housing Bureau.

The Housing Bureau will also arrange accommodations in private residences for visitors upon request. Homes, apartments and beach houses and rooms with private baths in homes are available for rent through the Bureau.

The Spoleto Festival Accommodations Guide lists all available public accommodations and tells you everything from what the price range is to whether pets are allowed. The Guide is available free from the Spoleto Housing Bureau, P.O. Box 975, Charleston, S.C.

When the thousands of visitors do arrive and become comfortably housed, they will be able to participate in a Festival which will surely live up to its reputation as "the world's most comprehensive arts festival." Events already scheduled include opera, ballet, drama, chamber music, visual arts, choral music, lectures, films, and mini-festivals with poetry, crafts, story telling, instant theatre, mime and music. The Festival schedule is arranged so that visitors can participate in a variety of events over a 2-3 day period.

Many events will be free. Ticket prices for most other performances range from $1 to $10. Ticket application forms will be available in early March and may be requested by contacting Spoleto Festival U.S.A., P.O. Box 704, Charleston, S.C. 29402.

ANTIQUITY AND TRADITION of old Charleston will enhance the pleasure of visitors to the Spoleto festival this Spring.

Waverly Consort Ensemble coming

THE WAVERLY CONSORT will perform at ECU's Mendenhall Student Center on Wednesday, March 16, at 8:00 p.m. The appearance of this critically acclaimed ensemble is sponsored by the ECU Student Union Artists Series Committee. THE WAVERLY CONSORT is a group of musicians and singers presenting music of the thirteenth through the seventeenth centuries. The CONSORT has taken infinite pains to recapture the spirit in which the music was originally composed and performed. They use over fifty unusual medieval, renaissance, and baroque instruments creating an altogether unique program for their audience. The New York Times called this group "one of our best ensembles."

Tickets for the Waverly Consort are $4.00. Advance tickets for ECU students are $1.50. Contact the ECU Central Ticket office in Mendenhall Student Center for additional information.

New basketball coach

East Carolina has a new basketball coach, Larry Gillman, formerly an assistant at the University of San Francisco. Gillman jumps into a job that has kept only three coaches for more than three years during the 44 years of ECU basketball.

The 28-year old native of Mt. Vernon, N.Y., who bears a striking resemblance to Clemson's coach, Bill Foster, feels he can make a winner out of East Carolina, not just on the present level, but against the top competition in the nation.

"This is ACC country right now, but we're going to try and change that. San Francisco faced the same problem trying to compete with UCLA, but it was successful. The kids gravitate to UCLA and the big schools, but I think we can change that."

"I want to rise and I want to rise quickly. Some people in North Carolina are going to laugh at that, I know."

That is a very tall order for Gillman, but he has been successful in the past with recruiting and hopes to continue.

In a television interview recently, Gillman said, "I'm going to try to bring in some of the kids I have been recruiting for USF in here. And we are going to continue to recruit the same people the past staff has been recruiting."

Gillman was an all-county player in his high school days at Tuckahoe High School in Mt. Vernon, N.Y. and played a year and a half of college basketball before ending his career with an ankle injury.

While still an undergraduate, he assisted with the team at Mt. Vernon that won two successive New York state titles. No other team has ever done that. That team included Earl Tatum, formerly of Marquette and now with the Los Angeles Lakers, and the Williams brothers - Gus of the Golden State Warriors, Ray of the University of Minnesota and Sam, now with San Francisco, as well as former all-America Rudy Hackett of Syracuse.

"There is another Williams around in junior college," Gillman said. "Maybe we can bring him in here."

From Mt. Vernon, Gillman went to Westchester Community College, serving as an assistant on a team that went 35-3 in two years.

Gillman worked as an assistant at the University of Houston for year before moving on to San Francisco. There in 1974, he recruited the team of now-sophomores that was ranked first in the nation for much of this season.

In September, 1975, Gillman went to Minnesota to work on the staff the year after the recruiting scandal of 1974-75. After a year at the Big Ten school, Gillman moved back to San Francisco, where he has been the past year.

When asked about plans for a staff at ECU, Gillman said he had no comment, although it has been learned that Billy Lee, a graduate assistant on the Dave Patton staff, will likely receive a full-time position with Gillman. Gillman said he would have two full-time assistants and one grad assistant.

Gillman said he thought he could gain support from the students and from the community, a community where ACC basketball is king. "If I didn't think I could do the job, I wouldn't be here. A winning team will bring the people in and that is what I plan to have—a winning colorful team."

Gillman said he plans to use an aggressive offense and defense, pressing as much as possible.

"We want to make the other team make as many mistakes as we can. The more they turn the ball over, the more chances we'll have to score. And, with more chances to score, we'll get more points."

Gillman plans to work with Athletic Director Bill Cain to build the schedule up. East Carolina already has Indiana for an opener next year at Bloomington, Indiana, as well as four ACC teams on the road.

"I haven't had a chance to meet with the players, but I'm going to tell them right away that our first objective is to beat Indiana."

Gillman thinks being an independent will help with recruiting, because "we'll be able to play anyone."

TALL ORDER

Gillman has a tall order bringing a winning basketball program to East Carolina. There are several reasons: a limited budget; competing against the TV audience of the ACC schools; and changing the attitude with which ECU basketball is taken by its fans.

Gillman is a most energetic man with a lot of new ideas—good ideas. If he can overcome the odds of the budget, the ACC and gain support within the campus and community he could do the job.

Open with win

Pirates beat Baptists, 3 move to nationals

By KIP SLOAN
Staff Writer

Under Saturday afternoon's threatening skies East Carolina's track and field team soundly defeated Baptist College by a score of 77-63.

The first events of the day were the field skills, with George Jackson taking the long jump with a 22'10" leap.

Robert Bailey won both the shot put (46'7") and the discus events (151'), and was the only double winner in the meet.

ECU sprinters swept the 440, with Charlie Moss winning in 48.84, Terry Perry next at 49.01, and James Freeman third at 49.70.

ECU's relay teams started the day off with a dropped baton in the 440, but turned in a better performance in the mile relay.

ECU's uncontested mile relay team (Moss, Perry, Freeman, Franklin) ran the distance in 3:19.1, with alternate relay squads 2nd and 3rd.

In the high hurdles, Bobby Phillips (ECU) took the 120 yard event in 14.92.

ECU took 2nd and 3rd in the 220, then came back to win the 100.

Carter Suggs took the 100 yd dash in 9.54, followed by teammate Alston at 9.58 to grab the first two places.

ECU swept all three places in the triple jump. Herman McIntyre easily took the win with a flight of 49'11", with teammate Mike Hodge grubbing second with 47-1 3/4", and George Jackson taking a close third (47'1").

A surprise showing of strength in the distance events by ECU kept the score close, although Baptist had the Easter men of the day. Lenny Phelps ran in his first mile race since high school to press Baptist's Wradwell all the way to the tape. Wradwell won in 4:15, with Phelps finishing less than a second behind with a career best time. Jim Willett moved up from the 880 to also run the mile, but was slowed with a throat infection.

The final event of the day was the three mile run, in which Baptist again took the win. ECU's Jim Dill led the race from the 6th lap over Baptist's Mwobobia as the two pulled well away from the rest of the field.

At the gun lap Mwobobia took the lead for good and pulled away to take the event in 14:32, followed by Dill in 14:40 (career best). Lenny Phelps came back from his earlier mile to finish 5th for ECU.

Although the team still has rough edges, their first home meet showed individual strength. Some improved considerably, while others maintained fast performances.

The sprinters put on a good show as usual, but it could have been even better—three of the fastest men were absent.

Marvin Rankins, Larry Austin, and Otis Melvin were with coach Bill Carson in preparation for the National Indoor Championships at Detroit.

Melvin and Austin both qualified for the 60 yard dash while Rankins qualified for the 60 yard high hurdles. (Melvin was subsequently injured and will not compete). Rankins has run the hurdles in 7.2 seconds, with Austin clocking a 6 second performance last year.

Avoiding injuries, East Carolina's team should definitely improve this year.

East Carolina will host ten other teams next weekend at the ECU Invitational Meet. Both men's and women's teams will begin competition early Saturday.

Coach Frye hopes this weekend's meet was a good tuneup for the team and was content with the win over Baptist.

LENNY PHELPS HELPED lead the Pirates to a 77-66 win over Baptist. Phelps ran second in the mile, a career mark for himself. [Photo by Kip Sloan]

From the moment the man begins to talk, he is impressive. His presence as he speaks, the manner in which he weighs what he plans to say, and finally, his actual words; all these lend to the imposing air which surrounds him. Yet Bill Carson is approachable.

In twelve years that he has been coaching track, Carson has seen a number of good teams, including his 1965 Southern Conference championship Furman team and his 1976 Championship East Carolina squad.

To him, though, his current team ranks as one of the best.

Composed mostly of freshmen and sophomores, the emphasis might seem to be on rebuilding. But with young talent providing the basis and returning veterans providing stability and maturity, the East Carolina team has turned the future into the present.

Carson himself expressed his opinion on the strength and talent of the Pirates: "I don't think there are fifteen, twenty teams in the entire United States that we can't take or that are any better than us talent-wise."

Coach Carson seems happy about his talent; "We've got so many people ranked in the top twenty, top thirty in their event, in the nation...it just shows how much these kids want to win and how much they hustle."

Such nationally-ranked standouts as hurdler Marvin Rankins and sprinters Otis Melvin and Larry Austin lead the array of ECU's talent. Herman McIntyre has been ranked in the top twenty-five nationally all season in the triple jump. In fact, the list of great talent on ECU's team would exactly equal the number of people on the team.

With the outdoor season just beginning, look for the Pirates to continue to win. They open their season at home this Saturday against Baptist College.

Tennis heads to the top

By JEFF BROOKS
Assistant Sports Editor

One of East Carolina's most beleaguered sports in the past has been tennis. Pirate tennis teams have not done well, but in keeping with the strength currently exhibited by ECU's spring sports teams, the tennis program has come into its own.

Now 2-1, the Pirates face the remainder of their demanding 19 match schedule with an amazingly well-balanced blend of junior and senior experience and freshman enthusiasm. Led by head coach Randy Randolph and assistant Rich Friedl, the Pirates look to be one of the most improved teams in the Southern Conference.

Headlining the team at the number one singles spot is junior Tom Durfee, from Toledo, Ohio. Durfee, who was named "most improved player" in 1976, has played number one for the Pirates the past three years. Quick and strong, Durfee is an excellent athlete with an excellent attitude.

Senior Jim Ratliffe of High Point is currently number two in singles. His consistent baseline game is greatly enhanced by his hard, twisting serve. Coach Randolph said Ratliffe "has really improved over last year. He's left-handed and has one of the best forehands I've seen."

Consistent Doug Getsinger is a very steady player from Goldsboro. He is constantly counted on for a good match. Versatile, he is able to play all types of games; either baseline or serve and volley. He plays number three singles while being matched with Tom Durfee at number one doubles.

Playing number four singles and number three doubles with Jim Ratliffe is Mitch Pergerson, a senior from Roxboro. The "Most Valuable Player" for the Pirates in 1976, he is one of the current crop of Pirates who can play a steady and consistent baseline game. Very competitive, he has come back from bad situations to clinch crucial wins for the Pirates.

Coach Randolph describes his number five player, Henry Hostettler as "doing all his talking with his racket." Hostettler was a walk-on last fall, and has beaten everyone on the team at least once in challenge matches. Another player capable of playing the steady game, Hostettler has unbelievably quick reflexes and can hit almost anything back.

One of the hardest workers on the team is the number six singles player, Kenny Love. He teams up with fellow freshman Hostettler to form the number two doubles team. His competitiveness can be seen in his style of play and his actions on court. Injured against High Point, he wouldn't give up and almost had to be dragged off the court. From Winston-Salem, he is vital to the team as a spark-plug. Robert Motten holds down the number seven position. A freshman from Gastonia he will be counted on heavily for leadership of the Pirates in the future.

Number eight Mike Murrad is a freshman who is recovering from a serious illness. Sidelined during fall practice, he is coming back with determination and patience. His attitude, like all of the Pirates, is "just super."

Freshman Thomas Lipe is the team's manager. From Albermarle he has been indispensable to the team. As Coach Randolph related, "We just couldn't have a team without Tommy."

Running throughout the coach's comments were the words consistency and attitude. When asked about that, he gave this reply: "Well, one or two people with bad attitudes can hurt the team, it can rub off. Half of a player's game is his attitude; he can't win with a bad one. Consistency can be affected by a bad attitude; and consistency is so important. As an individual sport, tennis can be repetitive; it is essential that a player be able to consistently hit the ball down the line, or to consistently hit his first serve in."

Coaches Randolph and Friedl relate well to the blended team they assembled; this will be an additional factor in the season ahead. With impressive victories over Salisbury State and Campbell tucked away, the Pirates are looking no further ahead than Southern Conference for William and Mary Wednesday. It should be an interesting match for the visitors from East Carolina. It could be the start of something great; tennis at East Carolina.

Football practice begins, look for winning season

Spring football practice will open at ECU Thursday, as Coach Pat Dye begins preparations for his fourth season with the Pirates. Over the previous three years, Dye has fielded teams with records of 7-4, 8-3 and 9-2, winning the Southern Conference Championship last year.

The coaching staff has four areas of major concentration during spring drills, each considered to be a question mark for 1977.

"Our top priority has to be in the secondary," said Dye. "We must find three players that can be winners to replace the three graduated seniors."

"Second, we must have one or two quarterbacks to step forward. I'm confident in the ability of our players at the position, but someone must step up and do the job."

Leading candidates for quarterback are Jimmy Southerland, Leander Green and Steve Greer. Other possible candidates are Joe Powell and Tony Tripp.

"In the offensive line, we have to find a replacement at center, left guard, left tackle and tight end," continued Dye.

Overall depth at all positions will also be an area of concentration during the spring drills.

The final two weekends of spring drills will feature scrimmage games in Ficklen Stadium. On Saturday, April 2, an Alumni Game will be held, pitting the 1977 team against various members of previous teams at East Carolina. On Friday, April 8, the annual Purple-Gold Game will be held.
