New SGA cabinet almost completed

By DOUG WHITE
Staff Writer

All but one of SGA President Neil Sessoms' eight cabinet appointees were approved by the SGA legislature at its meeting Monday.

Approved were: Ed Beane, Sec. of Academic Affairs; Wiley Betts, Sec. of International Affairs; Jerry Cox, Sec. of External Affairs; Gini Ingram, Sec. of Student Welfare; Ron Lewis, Refrigerator Manager; Bernard Smith, Sec. of Minority Affairs; and Gene Summerlin, Transit Manager. Not approved was the nominee for Sec. of Information, Kieran Shanahan.

The normal procedure of approval was altered somewhat due to the fact that the Screenings and Appointments Committee did not have a quorum at its last meeting.

Therefore, the legislature voted to dissolve itself into a committee to screen the nominees.

In other business, Speaker Ricky Price read Chancellor Leo

Jenkins' letter relating his decision on the recall petition.

Gary Miller, SGA Transit Manager addressed the meeting on the progress the transit system has made this year and his hopes of opening a night route.

Miller asked the legislature to oppose any attempts to merge the ECU transit system with the Greenville transit system.

Shortly thereafter, the legislature passed a resolution commending Miller for his service as transit manager.

An amendment to the Communications Board by-laws requiring its presidential-appointed members to be subject to the approval of the legislature was passed.

Scott Bright and Monika Sutherland, President Sessoms' recent appointees to the Board were approved.

A resolution supporting the Adams-Ramsey bill before the North Carolina General Assembly which could provide $2.7 million for improvements on McGinnis Auditorium and the old Wahl-Coates building passed, also.

Head photographer, '77-'78 REBEL editor chosen by Board

By MARGARET PHOENIX
Staff Writer

REBEL editor and ECU head photographer for the 1977-1978 school year were chosen Tuesday, May 3, at the Communications Board meeting.

They are Luke Whisnant, presently the associate editor of the literary art magazine, and Peter Podeszwa, an SGA photographer, respectively.

Screenings for WECU general manager were not completed.

Whisnant, past REBEL poetry award winner, has future expansion plans for the magazine.

"If we can get the proper money appropriations, I would like to have two forty-page magazines next year, which could be possible on the semester system," Whisnant said.

"We could have one publication in January, and one in May."

The full-time position of art director would be cut, according to Whisnant.

"We can get along without an art director for the first two or three months. Then someone can be hired to do headlines and pictures."

Allison Thompson, a contributor to the REBEL, was recommended by the board for the position of associate editor.

Voting for favorite teacher continues through this week

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Co-News Editor

Students will have a second chance to vote for their favorite undergraduate teacher this week, according to Marie Farr, chairperson of the Faculty Senate Instructional Survey Committee.

The voting was held on April 26, 27, and 28. However, only about 500 students participated.

Farr said that the committee will need at least 2,000 votes to conduct their survey.

She attributed the failure of the first attempt to several reasons.

"We made a mistake in the location at the old CU," she added.

Also, Farr said that she believes a lot of students were not aware that the voting was taking place in spite of campus coverage.

"We asked all the faculty to announce it and I believe that maybe one out of 16 did."

Farr added that the results of the voting will be published in survey form provided that the Faculty Senate approves. Hopefully, the survey will be published in the fall.

Voting will be held May 10 through May 17 in three locations.

Allied Health majors should vote in the Health Affairs Library during regular library hours.

General College students will vote in the Croatan from 9 a.m. to 2 a.m. daily.

All other students should go to Joyner Library during regular library hours to cast their votes.

Jobs

Entry-level jobs, in the parts, are still available at Kings Dominion (Ashland, Va.), Carowinds, (Charlotte, N.C.), and Busch Gardens (Williamsburg, Va.), according to Dr. Betsy Harper, director of ECU's Co-operative Education program.

Kings Dominion is a one hour drive from Richmond, Va. and 1 1/2 hours from Washington, D.C.

According to Dr. Harper, recent conversations with personnel from these recreational employers indicate that students who perform well during their first summer are given supervisory jobs in following years.

Recruitment for permanent personnel will begin with people familiar with total operation.

Applicants are warned, however, that housing is scarce. One should select a location with relatives or friends to save expenses since minimum wages are usually paid for these entry-level jobs.

Interested persons should contact members of the Co-op staff in Rawl 313 for further information.

PHOTOGRAPH

Podeszwa, whose photography background covers a twelve-year period, plans to make extensive changes in the Photo Lab and the photography staff.

"Twelve thousand students, with two FOUNTAINHEAD's published weekly, cannot be covered adequately by three photographers," said Podeszwa.

"We are going to need a fourth photographer in our staff," Podeszwa said.

"This fourth person could work as a lab technician, along with responsibilities as a photographer," Podeszwa said.

Podeszwa also proposes to have a check system of inventory for the Photo Lab twice a year.

"Right now, things in the lab can be taken and never be accounted for," Podeszwa said.

"This is a waste of the student's money, and an inventory is needed to insure against this type of thing."

He also plans a reorganization of the dark room.

Lost constituency

The crux of Chancellor Jenkins' decision to override the SGA Legislature's vote for a recall election rested with his determination of who represented the democratically expressed wishes of the ECU student electorate: Sessoms and Warren, winners in a legislatively authorized plurality election for President and Vice President respectively; or the SGA Legislature, which, although democratically elected in the fall, becomes nearly 50 per cent self-appointed by the spring.

The screening procedure by which the legislature maintains its membership in the face of an unfortunate turnover rate leaves questionable that body's authority as a representative assembly of students. Many have criticized the system which gives a standing committee within the legislature the authority to weed out or approve those candidates whom it feels are most representative of the student body. Among the "qualifications" which the Screenings and Appointments Committee may seek could be the candidates' acceptance of established opinion within the legislature, thus allowing the members of this committee a virtual stranglehold over incoming ideas.

Under the present constitutional arrangement, however, this procedure for filling vacancies is nearly unavoidable. The only alternative would be to have a permanently established election committee to supervise interim balloting to fill vacant seats. Considering the low turnout in the traditional fall and spring SGA elections, this committee could hardly expect its efforts to draw much student participation, especially when most students never come into contact with their representatives in student government and others are unaware of what "SGA" stands for.

There is an easy solution to the present morass which allows a nearly one-half non-elected legislature to conduct student government business under the guise of being the democratically authorized representatives of student opinion, as was the case in the vote to establish and fund a recall election committee. The answer is to alter the constituency of the legislature. Instead of having "day" and "dorm" students represented, legislators would be elected by the members of the various departments and schools.

Besides the advantages of each "precinct" having its own mechanism for interim elections, this system would put students in closer touch with their elected representatives.

Forum

Football not to blame for soccer's fate

To FOUNTAINHEAD:

I must take a different view on the destruction of soccer at ECU. Football can't be blamed. It is the money sport at ECU. The crowds grow larger each year and the revenue in turn increases each year. The stadium, fortunately, is being financed through contributions separate from Athletic Department funds. The coaches, in my opinion, deserved the bonus money, for they did a great job.

The problem goes deeper than football. I feel like an expert on the subject of the destruction of ECU athletic teams because in 1972 I rowed on the Crew Team and my roommate played lacrosse. One must look at other schools suffering the pains of inflation and higher costs. The destruction of sports is simply not taking place at any other school in N.C. as it is here. As ECU's sports funds grow each year, one would assume the university should be able to add sports, not cut them, and Title IX is NOT to blame, either. Other schools are adjusting without cutting out men's sports.

Look at ECU's football schedule in 1969 and now realize in the last two years we have won the SC championship, been on regional T.V., and beaten three ACC opponents. Quite an achievement.

The only other possible answer seems to be mismanagement of funds. Handling a big athletic program is quite a job. If our current staff cannot make ends meet without cutting sports out left and right, then I propose that Dr. Jenkins clean house in Minges from Athletic Director on down and get a staff in here that can do the job with our athletics. ECU students, fans and alumni deserve it.

The purpose of this University is NOT to have one sport that is a national champ, a direction in which ECU seems headed. The students and friends deserve to have lacrosse, soccer, handball, fencing, any sport they desire. If it were not for students, ECU would probably be a maze of tobacco warehouses. If the students of ECU want soccer, or lacrosse, or crew, or whatever, please call Dr. Leo Jenkins at 757-6212. It could make the difference in life or death for ECU soccer.

Your friend,
Kent Johnson

SGA ex-officer had best intentions

To FOUNTAINHEAD:

To me this whole thing started with the best of intentions. I wanted to continue to work for the Ft-head. And when my head hit brick walls in that area I decided to try my hand at serving students in SGA.

Believe it or not students, the people who I worked with in SGA cared about you. I never saw a single student who came to our offices get put off. The doors were never locked to any student.

But now I have been accused of not caring about international programs on campus, an office I created and offers many diverse services to ECU students. This was said because I resigned from the Sessoms administration—and was signed by people I have never met or heard of.

Believe me, I didn't want to write another letter to Ft-head. When I resigned I explained myself very clearly in writing to Neil and collected his word that my office would not be forgotten. I have repeatedly offered my help to anyone who chooses to work in that office.

I started serving the students with my good intentions but had to say something about what I considered misuse of student money. I continuously hit brick walls. But now I have changed. I now see that poor Ft-head cannot serve students to the best of their ability if SGA ex-officers continue to attack their improprieties. I am truly sorry and wish Ft-head luck in serving the ECU community fairly and objectively.

And so students, govern yourselves. We have the second largest SGA in the nation and they use your money. Climb those stairs and offer your help, but don't look for me up there. I'm tired of fighting.

New Pitt County hospital receives first 103 patients

By CINDY BROOME
Assistant News Editor

The move of 103 patients from the old Pitt County Memorial Hospital to the new one Saturday, April 30 went smoothly, according to Jack Richardson, hospital director.

"As far as I'm concerned, it went beautifully," Richardson said.

"The uniqueness of the whole group - doctors, nurses, students, everyone - was great. It was just one effort together."

Richardson said he was pleased to have been a part of the move.

"The two hours and 52 minutes it took to move the patients was the most beautiful part," he said.

"We had been told by others who have been involved in patient moves that the actual move would be the smoothest."

Richardson also said the community involvement was great.

"We asked that the visitors not visit on moving day, and they were very cooperative."

Jean Owens, administrator for nursing and in charge of the patient move, said the move went "fantastically well."

"I don't believe you'll find anybody who thinks it didn't go well," said Owens.

"I don't think anything could have been better. I wouldn't have changed a thing."

"That's a pretty good record," Owens said of the time it took to move the patients.

"I think everybody at Pitt County Memorial Hospital can be proud of that move," she said.

This hospital staff began moving equipment about 5 a.m., and the first patient was admitted around 7 a.m.

The three-hour move ended when the last patient was admitted about 10 a.m.

The move from the old hospital to the new was rather sad for some hospital staffers, especially for Mabel Baker and Vera Smith, R.N.s.

Both had moved from the old Pitt County General Hospital to the "new" Pitt County Memorial Hospital in 1951.

"We're sad to leave this old building," said Smith, "but we're excited about the new one."

"This old facility has outgrown its purpose and we know the new facility is necessary with the growth of the community," Baker said.

In comparing the two patient moves, they agreed that this move was much more organized due to long-range planning. They said patients were moved more rapidly.

The recent move only took about three hours, but the 1951 move took approximately eight hours.

The new hospital has 370 beds, in comparison to the 205 beds of the old hospital.

Pepsi manager predicts doom for diet drink

By CINDY BROOME
Assistant News Editor

Jack Minges, Pepsi-Cola plant manager in Greenville, said that if saccharin is banned, the diet soft drink industry will die.

"It's never been proven to cause cancer in humans," said Minges.

"I think those who want to ban saccharin should leave it up to the general public," he said.

"I think they (the public) should be given the right to make up their own minds."

Saccharin has been used safely by millions of people worldwide for 80 years, according to a paper written by the Pepsi industry.

"Any call for a ban of saccharin is an outrageous and harmful action based on flimsy scientific evidence that has absolutely no bearing on human health," said Marvin E. Eisenstadt, executive vice-president of Sweet 'n Low.

"It could cause great harm to the millions of Americans who need an artificial sweetener for medical reasons and as an aid to weight control."

Saccharin was proved to cause bladder cancer in rats used for Canadian government tests.

The Delaney Clause, an amendment to the federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act of 1938, states that any substance which is found to cause cancer in animals or man must be banned from the market.

"The Food and Drug Administration's (FDA) law says that any substance shown to produce cancer in animals or man is required to be removed from the market," said Dr. Eugene Furth, an ECU Medical School professor.

"The FDA got the report from Canada and has no choice but to follow the law."

Thomas A. Craig of Abbott Laboratories in Chicago, the manufacturer of Sucaryl, an artificial sweetener composed entirely of saccharin, said a few of the animals receiving highest doses developed bladder tumors.

"This action (the ban) would appear to be based on a study in Canada in which rats were fed extremely large doses of saccharin," said Craig.

"We have no evidence that saccharin causes cancer in humans," said Dr. Guy R. Newell, Jr., acting director of the National Cancer Institute.

According to the Pepsi-Cola Co., a human would have to eat over 4,000 packets of saccharin every day, or drink 1,250 twelve-ounce diet soft drinks daily for the rest of his life to equal the amounts of saccharin given to the rats.

The camp consists of three weeks of intensive instruction at ECU's A.J. Fletcher Music Center, for students from kindergarten through high school.

No previous musical instruction is required.

During the morning, music campers attend classes in music theory, sight-singing, music history, orchestra, violin and class piano. The final morning of the camp will feature a program demonstrating the musicianship and skills campers have acquired.

String camp is designed equally for the young person with no musical background and the more musically advanced.

Hardee's founder begins new chain

By MICHAEL FUTCH
Assistant Trends Editor

Many Greenville citizens are unaware that the original fast food Hardee's hamburger stand was built in their hometown.

These same persons are also probably unaware that the man responsible for the national chain-store which bears his name, as well as other restaurants in the area, is very much alive and is now attempting to establish another fast food chain.

"This is my last chain," said Wilbur Hardee, 58, a Greenville resident.

According to Hardee, Beef and Shakes has been very successful. In fact, he said, another restaurant is now being constructed north of the Tar River where the old North Side Lumber Company originally stood.

"I have a lot of studying and thinking to do before I go too far," Hardee said when referring to his new restaurant venture. "I want to get a sound footing before I branch out."

This sounds a bit ironic for the man who is responsible for Hardee's Hamburgers, The Little Mint, Greenville's Three Steers, and the unsuccessful Wilbur's.

But Hardee's business moves have not always worked out for the best.

"Looking back on things I've been into while making other people rich, I know today that if you take one good thing and stick with it, things will be better," remarked Hardee.

"That's what I'm trying to do today."

Wilbur Hardee was born in Pitt County, on Washington Highway, on Aug. 15, 1918.

Hardee quite school in the eighth grade after attending Hamilton Elementary and Bell Arthur High School.

He became involved in the restaurant business in 1940, in Parmele, N.C.

"I began in business at the age of 13 with my brother-in-law," said Hardee.

"I ran a service station with a hot dog business."

Later, Hardee joined the Navy in 1941, just after Pearl Harbor was attacked, and spent four years in the service. He served two years in the southwest Pacific and left the service as Chief Petty Officer.

Hardee has lived in Greenville since 1945. Besides the restaurant business, Hardee has worked in other fields.

"I've been in real estate," said Hardee. "I ran some service stations, grocery stores, a bowling alley, and a pool room."

Hardee first began his restaurant business in Greenville with the Silo Restaurant, now known as Three Steers. One of his daughters now manages the restaurant.

"I started with the fast food business in September of 1960 with Hardee's," said Hardee. "I patterned myself after a McDonald's restaurant which I saw in Greensboro in 1959."

"The charcoal broil idea was different. We also used fresh ground beef in the first restaurants."

According to Hardee, he started the first apple turnover factory on the East coast in 1961. The factory was located in Ayden, N.C.

"I had a contract to sell six million turnovers to Hardee's," Hardee said.

Hardee then brought in Jim Gardner and Leonard Rawls when the Hardee's restaurant was just getting off the ground. He later sold them the rights to Hardee's in 1962, which they later made into a national chain.

Hardee said he sold the restaurant for a profit. He has no stock in Hardee's today, but said that he should have held the rights of one-eighth of one percent of the gross international take-in.

Hardee also created the Little Mint Chain of 1964, and opened the chain to the public in 1969. He remained president of the chain from 1964 to 1973.

Hardee had some financial difficulty with his two Wilbur restaurants in Greenville. These restaurants closed in 1976 after a loss.

Now Hardee is attempting a new fast food empire with Beef and Shakes.

"The opportunity today is just as good as it was in the '60s with the right food and system," said Hardee.

"The trouble with most small chains today is that they will open a lot of locations at once and lots of them make no money. They then go broke."

Hardee believes he was an early front-runner in the fast-food business. He feels that his first efforts have been copied over the years.

When asked about the stigma that is placed on fast food, sometimes called junk food, Hardee admitted that there is a lot of room for upgrading the food.

"I've started something here (Beef and Shakes) with a better grade hamburger, milkshake, and french fries," said Hardee. "The day is coming when the burger will be made as the customer wants it."

So Wilbur Hardee has started what he calls his last chain. With one Beef and Shakes already operating on the corner of Greenville's Fifth and Reade St., and another on the way, Hardee could have the ultimate success he has often let escape for him.

"The future holds a lot of hard work as does the past," said Hardee. "There are a lot of systems to be studied, and I have to make sure each location makes money."

Big week for flicks

For perhaps the first time in the history of Greenville cinema there is not a loser in the bunch.

This week in Greenville there is a plethora of fine movies. Two of the best films of '76 are in town with the others being "Young Frankenstein," and a recent release, "The Child." This reviewer feels that this is the finest collection of films in Greenville this year and this week's column will be a brief synopsis of each.

Network: In the opinion of this reviewer, but for "Small Change" and "Faces," this is the best movie of '76. It is the finest cinematic example of satiric humor.

The action of the film revolves around the Network exploitation of Howard Beale (Peter Finch), a neurotic newsman whose televised rhetoric turns him into "The Mad Prophet of the Airways." The film is pure satire, at the expense of itself, and therein lies its genius and its flaw.

The film, in the effort to be true to its intent, constantly satirizes itself. The screenplay lends itself to the perceptions that much of this movie, of life, is little more than the stuff soap operas are made of. This continual self-effacement turns the movie from a production to the cumbersome stumbling of a symbolic giant. It is awkward, yet vivid.

Much has been made of the performances in this film and it contains some of the best acting of '76. Faye Dunaway is excellent as the hyper though fragile female production manager and Robert DuVall is fine as the epitome of the company man.

I do not agree with the premise of this film. I do not think that television is the all-pervasive force Chayevsky would have us believe, but Networks are affecting and powerful. And so is the movie. Three and one half stars.—Now appearing at Pitt Theater through Thursday.

Rocky: One of the top of five films of this year. The film revolves around the attempt of a young man to garner self-respect in the only means he can truly understand. It is a film about media exploitation, the morality of money, and the world where men beat each other up for $41. Sylvester Stallone gives a convincing, if single-faceted performance, as Rocky, the underdog, good natured street kid. The movie is murky and slow at the start yet finishes with energy and sincerity. It is an amusing film that is blatant and strong. Three and one half stars.—Held over at Plaza Two through Thursday.

Young Frankenstein: This is the usual Mel Brooks set of affairs, replete with slapstick and Jewish jokes and puns. The movie brings together the grandson of Frankenstein (Gene Wilder), Igor (Marty Feldman), and the monster (Peter Boyle).

Gene Wilder is the new Dr. Frankenstein and the funniest scenes are with his fiancée (Madeleine Kahn) and the teaching sessions with the monster (Peter Boyle). Marty Feldman is Igor, his is perhaps the best performance of the lot. The film is abundant with the Mel Brooks style of humor. It is raucous, yet subtle, like leprosy, but it has some excellent moments. Three stars.—Plaza One through Thursday.

The Child: Taking advantage of the recent surge of supernatural horror flicks, this Novack release is a young "Carrie" who calls upon demons and natural forces to annihilate those who annoy her. It is occasionally suspenseful. The plot and acting are average. In a normal week in Greenville, this would be the pick of the litter. Two stars.—Park Theater through Thursday.

CHILLY STUDIES HAVE been the name of the game this week, as a cool front forced last minute studiers back inside.

Powerful new film drama

Film experience aids creators of 'Brothers'

As co-producers and authors of the powerful film drama "Brothers," a Warner Bros. release starring Bernie Casey and Vonette McGee, Edward and Mildred Lewis bring a wealth of movie-making experience to their newest project.

During his nearly thirty years of involvement with the film industry, producer-writer Edward Lewis has been associated with many of Hollywood's most important films. His credits include "Spartacus," "Lonely Are the Brave," "The Fixer," and "Grand Prix," among many others.

Mildred Lewis became involved with film production when her husband agreed to produce Dalton Trumbo's "Executive Action" while at the same time serving as executive producer for the American Film Theater's first season of features. As his duties multiplied, Mildred assumed increasing responsibility for "Executive Action," ultimately sharing the role of producer. The cult classic "Harold and Maude" became her next project, followed by the current "Brothers."

Predisposed towards films dealing with social issues and events, Edward and Mildred Lewis found themselves involved in the struggle for prison reform, characterized in recent years by explosive events which were given tremendous media exposure in prisons such as Attica and Soledad.

"We live in California," Mildred Lewis explains, "and the case of the Soledad Brothers received a lot of press. We followed the story, not with the intention of doing a film, but more in terms of curiosity and information. We soon found ourselves absorbed however, and the issues involved became very important to us."

"This was in conjunction with other things that were going on," Edward Lewis adds, "such as Attica and other violations of rights, particularly of blacks. That was really the thing we were zeroing in on. There was a series of incidents that you would hear about on radio or watch on television that collectively provided a drive to tell a story."

"I think it's important that people understand that this is not meant to be the Soledad Brothers story because if we wanted to do that we would have made a documentary. This picture is fiction, although many of the incidents and many of the characters are derived from the actual events of the times."

An original screenplay soon emerged from their collective efforts, with Mildred Lewis gaining additional insight by watching Angela Davis in classroom situations.

"I started reading the autobiography of Angela Davis because I had attended some of her classes at UCLA and although I wasn't really ever part of the class I was struck by this woman's ability to practically mesmerize an audience. She is a very impressive person, and, of course, in the book there is the story of her relationship with one of the Soledad Brothers, which we incorporated into our film."

The actual shooting of the movie took place within North Dakota State Penitentiary, which created a few problems for the cast and crew.

"The biggest problem," Edward Lewis explains, "was the mechanical limitation on space and the strict budgeting of time because we had to build our schedule around their routines, such as meals, exercise periods and so forth. We thought security would be a big problem, but it wasn't, although the warden, the day before we started, got all of the cast and crew together and passed around releases that everyone had to sign. He then made a speech in which he informed us that should anyone be taken hostage the state would not allow any prisoner out the front door under any circumstances. They would do everything they could to see that no injuries occurred and that tear gas would be used first, but ultimately the state would not assume responsibility in this instance. Everyone signed the piece of paper to this effect and they were all very uptight. It was a strange way to begin a film, but everything couldn't have worked out better."

Perhaps the central issue involved with "Brothers" is the concept of an indeterminate sentence for committing a crime. Edward and Mildred Lewis were opposed to this idea from the very outset of their film.

"Fortunately, the indeterminate sentence has been just recently repealed in California, although it is probably the crux of our whole story," Edward Lewis points out. "We almost called the movie 'One To Life' because of this device which allows prison authorities, in the most brutal fashion, to control the behavior of their prisoners. For a minor sentence, like the young man in our story, a prisoner could be kept for the remainder of his life or until such time as the penal authorities felt he was ready to be freed, based on his behavior. It was simply a way of forcing people to adhere to the arbitrary standards of the individual prison. Thus the men who are serving time had no idea as to how long they will be in prison and this generates tension and resistance which we demonstrate in our film."

Mildred Lewis summarizes the goals and objectives in the picture which she and her husband have written and produced, giving special emphasis to the feelings which she hopes they have effectively portrayed.

"I think that it's a tremendously uplifting notion that a man can be put into a cell, have all of his liberties taken away from him, be treated like an animal and still find the fortitude and resolve to emerge a heroic figure. Before he goes into jail, our character is essentially illiterate. By the time he emerges as a leader, however, he has become a far more educated human being, able to involve himself with a woman with whom he has never been alone, and share a love with her based on an idealism, mutual respect, and humanity. I think this is a tribute to the potential within us all and I find that inspiring."

Southern wants ECU

East Carolina and William and Mary have been asked to reconsider their plans to withdraw from the Southern Conference at the end of the current school year.

Dr. Frank Bonner, president of the league, announced Friday at a Charleston, S.C. news conference that "the Southern Conference presidents have asked that the conference forward letters to the presidents of William and Mary and East Carolina and stress to them that we want both schools to remain as members of our league."

Both William and Mary and East Carolina indicated last spring that they would leave the Southern at the end of the 1976-77 school year. Both schools will compete as independents.

Bonner said the conference was hopeful both schools would stay with the conference.

With East Carolina and William and Mary apparently leaving, eight schools will be left: The Citadel, Furman, Davidson, Appalachian State, Western Carolina, VMI, Marshall and Tennessee-Chattanooga.

For the conference to survive, it will have to provide better promotion of the league members in the future and also secure more publicity for the conference.

Whether ECU will turn around and stay in the league is up to the Board of Trustees.

DYE WANTS DUKE ON SCHEDULE

Duke University announced a couple of weeks ago that they have suspended their four game football series with Penn State. The games were slated to be played in 1977, 1978, 1981 and 1982.

Pat Dye, ECU's head football coach, said last Wednesday night after a speaking engagement in Durham, that he would like East Carolina to fill the open date on Duke University's schedule next fall.

"It would mean a great deal to us and to the state of North Carolina," Dye said. "I would give anything if I could do something, buy a contract or something, so we could play Duke."

Duke now has an open date for Sept. 10, while East Carolina has Texas-Arlington scheduled for that date. Duke has been trying to schedule Villanova for the open date, but Athletic Director Carl James said the date is still open.

"As of now, we don't have a game," James said. "We hope to have an announcement in a few days. We plan to play on Sept. 10 and East Carolina has a game on that date."

The Pirates are slated to play their home opener on Sept. 10 against Texas-Arlington, but Dye said it's not too late to change the schedule if Duke is interested.

SCHAEDE IS ALL-AMERICA

Frank Schaede, 150 pound freshman on the East Carolina wrestling team, was named to the third team of Amateur Wrestling News freshman all-America team last Tuesday.

Schaede finished 19-9 on the season and competed in the NCAA Championships for East Carolina.

FOUNTAINHEAD congratulates Schaede for this honor.

RECRUITING GOOD IN ALL SPORTS

East Carolina has had its best recruiting year for all sports this year thus far.

Coach Pat Dye's football team had probably its best recruiting effort ever, signing one of the best players in North Carolina in James (Tootie) Robbins of Bertie Central High School. Dye signed six players with heights of 6-4 or better. He also has several freshman coming in next year that weigh 250 and over.

New basketball coach Larry Gillman has already signed two national blue-chippers and is expected to sign a big man soon. There's not a team in the nation that didn't want Oliver Mack of San Jacinto Junior College in Texas. Marquette wanted Wisconsin all-stater Walter Moseley very much, but Gillman signed him also. Both players are originally from Queens, N.Y.

Catherine Bolton, coach of the Lady Pirates basketball team, signed Lydia Rountree of Elm City, who many feel is the best prepster in North Carolina this year. Bolton has also signed Marcia Girven of Northern Virginia.

Cynthia Averett, new coach of the women's tennis team, has signed Debbie Spinazzola of Pennsylvania, one of the top prep players in the four state region, encompassing Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey and Delaware.

Bill Carson has signed James Field of New Bern, probably the cream of North Carolina sprinters this year.

Wrestling and swimming are on the verge of signing blue-chippers in their respective sports.

Pirates sweep track meet, Freeman sets two records

By ANNE HOGGE
Sports Editor

Debbie Freeman led the Pirates to a win in the ECU Women's Invitational track meet Saturday.

The Pirates took the meet with 101 points. Their closest opponent, NCSU, placed second with 77. North Carolina A & T was a distant third with 18, and South Carolina rounded out the field with 16.

ECU claimed nine first places and eight second places in the meet.

Debbie Freeman won three events and set two new track titles in the Invitational.

Freeman set one of her records in the discus event, her winning 129-3 throw breaking teammate Linda McClellan's 1977 record of 118-5. McClellan was second in the throw with 116-0.

Freeman topped her own 1976 shot put record of 37-5, breaking both the track and school titles. Freeman's 38-11 throw won the event, which saw teammate McClellan once again come in second.

Freeman's third win came in the javelin toss, which she won with a 114-11 throw. ECU's Debbie Knight took second with 100-8.

The Pirates' mile relay team, Joy Forbes, Kathy Smith, Minnie McPhatter, and Cassie Jones, took first place in their event over NCA&T with a winning time of 4:13.2.

NCSU won the long jump, with ECU's Minnie McPhatter taking second. McPhatter's jump of 16-2 set a new school record, breaking the 1976 one of 16-0.

Two Pirates took the top wins in the two mile event. Sherry Rape won with a 14:01.0, while Ann Forbes finished second with a 14:35.0.

McPhatter took second in the high jump with a 14-0. Her 1977 high jump track record of 5-0 was broken by NCSU's Jackie Jones, who placed first, scoring 5-2, to set the new mark.

NCA&T won the 880 relay, the Pirates taking second with a time of 1:49.2.

NCA&T also took first in the 110 yard hurdles. Pirate Linda Mason placed second with a 18.1.

Mason won the 440 hurdles with a time of 1:12.2.

Two Pirates scored in the mile. Kathy Addison took first with a 5:43.6, while Linda Christian placed fourth with a 6:08.5.

NCA&T placed first in the 880. Pirate Carolyn Moss was second in the event with a time of 11:9.3, with teammate Jeanette Whitfield finishing fourth.

Whitfield finished first in the 220, breaking the 1976 school record of 27.2. She won with a 26.6 mark.

NCSU's Vicki Bryant won the 880, breaking the ECU track record set by Barbara Brantly of 2:22.7. Pirates' Kathy Smith and Joy Forbes took second and third with a 2:25.1 and 2:30.2, respectively.

The Invitational was scheduled to be the Pirates' last of the year.

Alston, Britt selected as Athletes-of-the-Month

By STEVE WHEELER
Staff Writer

[Editor's note: This will be the last Athlete-of-the-Month for FOUNTAINHEAD this year. Mickey Britt and Calvin Alston, leaders of Southern Conference Championship teams in baseball and track, respectively, tied for the honor for the month of April. On Thursday FOUNTAINHEAD will announce the top star of each spring sport and FOUNTAINHEAD's Athlete-of-the-Year will be announced in next Tuesday's year-ending issue.]

The voting for April's top athlete was very close among all of the nominees. Baseball's Mickey Britt and track's Calvin Alston came out at the top of the list with eight and one-half votes apiece to tie for the honor. Sonny Wooten, also of baseball picked up three votes for third place, while Henry Hostetler of tennis was fourth with two. Pete Conaty of baseball and Mitch Pergerson of tennis picked up one vote each as each nominee received at least one vote.

Britt led the East Carolina pitching staff with a 9-0 record. The freshman from Hope Mills, N.C. had a 6-0 record for the month of April, including the title clinching 3-2 victory over The Citadel on April 30.

The 6-3 righthander had eight appearances for the month, with six being starts and five of the starts resulting in complete games. He ended up leading the Southern Conference in earned run average with a sparkling 1.50 mark.

Britt ended up with the second best number of victories in the league and gave up the least number of walks of any leading pitcher.

He did not use overpowering pitches to get his batters out, as his 26 strikeouts show, but rather used a wide array of pitches and good control. A characteristic game for Britt would show more than two-thirds of opponents' outs being groundouts to the infielders, as he had good control around the batters' knees.

In 72 innings of pitching, Britt did not give up a home run.

ALSTON SHINES IN LEAGUE MEET

For Alston, it was the conference meet which was his biggest accomplishment for the month. Earlier in the month, Alston led the ECU 440 yard relay team to a new school record with a 40.4 time.

But it was the conference meet in which Alston really came through. The 5-7 dynamo won the sprinter's dream double, the 100 and 200 meters, as well as starting off the mile relay team to a new conference record.

In the 100 meters, Alston upset favorite John Burson of Western Carolina in winning in 10.5. Alston thought he had run a faster time than he was given.

In the 200 meters, Alston qualified for the NCAA Championships next June by being clocked in 20.8.

Alston ran a 47.3 opening leg in the mile relay to propel the Pirates to the record of 3:12.6.

He also started off the 440 relay in 10.17, which is considered a super leg, especially coming out of the starting blocks, but the Pirates were later disqualified when Otis Melvin stepped out of his lane on the anchor leg.

Alston earned two big honors by virtue of his performances. He was the overwhelming choice for the meet's outstanding performer and was named by the Greensboro Daily News as the Athlete-of-the-Week in the state of North Carolina, winning the award over NBA all-pro David Thompson, who is a native of North Carolina.

These two athletes are two of the most deserving of the honor given them by FOUNTAINHEAD as they came through with the performances needed by their respective sports to gain the conference championships.

Veteran Durham leads Pirates

There is only one man on the current East Carolina baseball team that was around for the last Southern Conference championship, in 1974. He now can lay claim to the fact that he played on two championship teams in his ECU career. The man is Pikesville's Terry Durham.

Although Durham did not personally have one of his best ever years at ECU, he did come through with a couple of top-notch performances when it was absolutely necessary.

The biggest of the season was the second game of a double-header against Western Carolina. The Pirates had dropped the first game by an 8-4 score, and were in jeopardy of falling from first place in the Southern Conference standings. Terry had experienced a couple of bad outings, but was given the starting assignment for the second game.

"I was really glad to get that start," admitted the ECU senior pitcher. "I had not pitched well in several games, but I was determined to do well," he said.

He was facing a team that was batting over .300 and playing on its own home fields. "Pop," as he is known to his teammates, came up with 1 run, six hit performance as East Carolina defeated Western Carolina 4-1, to remain on top and eventually go on to clinch the championship of the Southern Conference.

PIRATE PITCHER LARRY Durham will lead his team when they compete in the Atlantic Regionals of the NCAA tournament.

"I knew we had to win that game," Durham related. "Being a senior, I wanted to contribute something to the team this season, and I figured I could do the job that day. As it turned out, we won that game, and I pitched pretty well."

For the year, Durham's record stands at 5-3, with an E.R.A. of 2.70. He feels this championship team is better than the '74 squad.

"We're much deeper in pitching than we were then," he stated. "There are four proven starters this year, and a good bullpen, whereas in '74, we had basically a three man pitching staff."

"There is also much more team speed," he added. "We have been able to do many more things at bat because of our speed, it's incredible."

Durham says that although this is the second time he has been involved with a championship baseball team at East Carolina, the title means more to him this year.

"Since I am a senior," related Durham, "this championship is always going to be special. I can look back in future years and remember that my last ECU baseball team won the Southern Conference championship."

"In 1974," he continued, "I was just a freshman, and did not get a great deal of playing time. We went 12-2 in conference that year and won the title going away. This year, though, the entire conference is much stronger. We had to win 15 out of 16 games just to win the conference by one game."

Even though the Pirates are preparing to enter the NCAA tournament with a 30-10 record, there was a time when things did not seem so rosy for ECU. After 13 games, the team record was 7-6, and Monte Little's squad was heading for a streak of 10 games in 10 days.

"We all did a lot of re-examining of ourselves at that point," reflected the tall right-hander. "All of us knew that we were better than 7-6, so the seniors on the squad got together and decided we'd lead by example."

They set a fine example for the others, as the Pirates then set off on a 14 game winning streak, setting a new school record for most consecutive wins. The eventuality was the current 30-10 mark, and a berth in the Atlantic Regionals of the NCAA tournament.

"We have confidence in ourselves as a team," said Durham, "and we're not going to be awed by anyone. Our pitching will carry us a long way, I think."

"We've come a long way from 7-6," he noted, "and I believe we'll see a good bit more playing time. It sure would be great to go out with a trip to Omaha" (site of the 1977 NCAA College World Series).

For Terry Durham, it may have been the second time around, but this year's ECU baseball team has recorded what for Terry has been a very special championship season.

Gillman signs prep standout Moseley

New head basketball coach Larry Gillman has announced the signing of Walter Moseley to a grant-in-aid with ECU. This marks the second signee within a week for Gillman.

Moseley is a 6-1 1/2, 175-pound point guard from St. John's Military Academy in Delafield, Wis. He's originally from Queens, N.Y., same home as Oliver Mack, the all-America guard that signed last week at East Carolina.

As a senior at St. John's Military Academy, Moseley led his team to a second place finish in the state tournament and a 20-5 record. As a junior, St. John's finished 19-3 on the year.

Moseley was named all-conference, all-state, all-county, all-metro and was mentioned on several all-American teams as a senior. He led his team in scoring with 24.4 points per game. Post-season honors also included Most Valuable Player for the Lancers, Most Valuable Player in his conference and Most Valuable Player in the country.

As a junior, Moseley was named all-conference and all-county in basketball, as well as, all-conference, all-county and all-state as a tailback in football, breaking school records in rushing and scoring.

"Walter Moseley to me was one of the finest prep point guards available in the country this year," said Gillman. "I was very impressed with Walter's poise and leadership ability."

"Among the schools seeking Walter were national champion Marquette, Iowa, the University of Arizona and Wisconsin."
