Unfinished Parking Lot Open

By KAREN WENDT

The unfinished parking lot behind Mendenhall Student Center is now open for parking until until the lot is dry enough to complete construction.

The decision was made at a recent chancellors meeting to help relieve the parking shortage near campus.

"I conferred with the engineer of the parking lot," said SGA Vice President Charlie Sherrod. The spokesman for Barrus Construction Company said that until the weather is "dry and warm," they will be unable to work on the lots.

Until now the lot has not been open for parking.

Because of the large amount of wet weather that has plagued North Carolina in recent weeks, it is doubtful if the lots will be completed in the near future.

According to Vice Chancellor Elmer Meyer, the construction company will have to re-grade the lot.

Sherrod thought it made "good sense not to close the lot for months until the conditions get right. It will certainly ease the parking crunch."

Jarvis Co-eds Given Option

By DEBBIE HOTALING
Assistant News Editor

Jarvis Dormitory is going co-ed, and some students are now wondering where the women from Jarvis will go.

Dr. Elmer Meyer, vice chancellor for Student Life, assured the Jarvis women a place to live. "We are planning, and we had always planned, to find equal housing for those girls who are losing their rooms in Jarvis."

The Residence Life Committee will meet in a closed session Thursday, Feb. 7, to discuss options for the women being moved out. Thursday, Feb. 14, an open meeting will be held to discuss the different options and to hear any new ideas from students.

"Everyone is welcome to give their opinions and speculations on the decision to be made," Meyer said. "There are several questions that need to be answered: What's fairest for the girls in Jarvis concerning places open for the girls? Who will have the first choice of rooms in Jarvis? Which girls will have to leave Jarvis?"

Title IX calls for equal housing with no discrimination in facilities. Brett Melvin, SGA president, is a strong supporter of Title IX on the ECU campus. "I worked for making Jarvis co-ed. This was mainly because I wanted to represent all of the students. Why was there a dorm substantially better than the others limited to only females?"

Two dorms on the hill have been named as possible solutions for the co-ed problem. Belk and Scott are the only two dorms with suites. At the open meeting next Thursday, students will be able to voice their opinions on which dorm should be made co-ed.

"I think Belk Dorm is the best choice," Melvin said. "The facilities are more appropos to the females' needs in Belk rather than in Scott. I think the girls will like living in suites."

"To live in a co-ed dorm, one must be an upperclassman, so those students living in a co-ed dorm will have already become accustomed to living on campus and away from home," Melvin said.

Virginia Carlton, president of Jarvis, commented, "As a spokesperson for the Jarvis girls, I can say they want some sort of compromise. They want suites — maybe first floor Scott. The girls on first floor (Jarvis) should be given top priority on the rooms coming open in the dorm on the hill which will be made co-ed. The girls have never been given a chance at suites before and Title IX says equal facilities."

There was much confusion last week concerning the placement of the Jarvis women. Many women were under the impression that they had to find their own place to live without the administration's assistance. They also didn't realize that a fair exchange of dorm rooms will be made.

"The girls were not informed appropriately," Melvin explained. "The problem came in the way that the situation was handled and not in the situation itself."

Local Man Runs For President

Willis Stancill
...for president

With so many presidential candidates running around these days, it's getting hard to remember all the names: Baker, Bush, Reagan, Kennedy, Stancill, Anderson ...

Stancill? Willis Stancill. It might be interesting to remember his name, for this 40-year-old Greenville native says he is going to make mincemeat out of President Carter in New Hampshire's Democratic primary on Feb. 26.

"It sounds preposterous, me running for president, but I've talked to thousands of people in eight different states who have pledged their money and support," said Stancill Wednesday.

Stancill has no working experience in government, but claims to have read enough books on economics, politics and science to have earned several doctorate degrees by now. He said he got his Master's at ECU in 1962, and has since taught high school science while doing various other jobs on the side, including stockbroking and real estate sales.

Although he plans to run on the Democratic ticket, Stancill represents the philosophy of the Clean Government Party. The party line is not hard to guess — clean up the waste, the corruption and inefficiency in Washington. Stancill isn't sure how big the party is, but said there are "thousands of members all over the country."

Stancill said he went to observe the candidates in the Iowa caucuses last month and came away with the belief that he could win in New Hampshire.

Stancill on Carter: "Nobody really likes him, he just doesn't have any competition." On Kennedy: "He's already been eliminated, and won't even carry Massachusetts." Reagan: "Over the hill." Bush: "He won in Iowa mainly because of a lack of Republican candidates." Conally: "No chance."

"I didn't do any campaigning in Iowa because I didn't want to antagonize any of them, I just wanted to wait and let them fight among themselves," Stancill said.

The first impression one gets is that Stancill can't be serious about this. How can an unknown who has never held public office come up against nationally known, experienced politicians?

"How? I'm going to convince the voters by telling the truth," said Stancill confidently. "Everybody knows that politicians never tell the truth. I'm going to be all over New Hampshire, in the schools, the colleges, in town halls — wherever I can speak."

His comments on the ills of America are simple and straightforward. To stop inflation, he proposes a battle against the monopolies that are part of the "international corporate power structure that is breaking the back of the middle class." The Iranian crisis was "staged by some of Carter's people to help cut Kennedy's throat," says Stancill, who also thinks we should cut defense spending because "most of it is wasted."

He added that the Russian invasion of Afghanistan was the "major boo-boo of the century — they think we're pussycats," but he is against any military moves. Instead, the United States must convince world leaders that "the world has become too small for war."

Stancill, who said he has already spent $3,000 of his own money on the campaign trail in several states, has a unique proposal for fund-raising. He only wants $5 from each contributor, and suggests that they offset the expense by selling old clothes or by cashing in on bottle refunds and the like.

As the snow was covering Greenville and Interstate 95 Wednesday, Stancill wondered whether he should go ahead and drive to New Hampshire or wait.

He's anxious to go. Whatever lays in store for him there, he doesn't betray the slightest hint of doubt about his seemingly impossible quest.

"A lot of people think I'm a crackpot," said Stancill, "but if I can get just a few delegates to the convention, I'll have made a mark."

NCR Considers License

First Nuke Since Three-Mile

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.(AP)—The Nuclear Regulatory Commission's staff is ready to license a new nuclear plant for the first time since the Three-Mile Island accident last March, officials said today.

Frank Ingram, an NRC spokesman in Washington, said the commission's Office Of Nuclear Regulation has concluded that the Tennessee Valley Authority should get a restricted license to load fuel in one of two reactors at its Sequoyah plant near Chattanooga.

"The commission presently has time scheduled for Monday to hear a staff review of Sequoyah," Ingram said. "It is the staff's intention to recommend that the commission offer a license for low-power testing."

Officials said NRC's staff has concluded in a 150-page report that Sequoyah satisfies existing license requirements and all new recommendations made by various task forces since the Three-Mile Island nuclear plant accident last March 28.

If the five-member commission approves the recommendation, Ingram said, Sequoyah would become the first nuclear station to receive any sort of license from NRC since the Harrisburg, Pa., accident.

NRC had a team of inspectors at the Chattanooga plant three days last week making a final check of the safety measures implemented by TVA since Three-Mile Island.

Denwood Ross, director of project management in the NRC's Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation, said the commission could impose some conditions on Sequoyah's operation, "but they'd be benign."

"There are no unresolved issues as far as we're concerned, and the only bad thing that could happen would be for the commission Thursday to adopt some new policy in effect requiring us to put Sequoyah off," he said.

The commission is scheduled to hear a staff briefing Thursday on the impact of a 2,000-page report by a special inquiry group into the Three-Mile Island accident.

The NRC commissioned the inquiry, directed by Washington lawyer Mitchell Rogovin, as part of its own investigation of Three-Mile Island. The Rogovin inquiry is independent of a study by the Kemeny Commission appointed by President Carter.

"The briefing Friday is focused on the impact of the report in terms of licensing," Ingram said. "It would be premature to speculate now how that might effect Sequoyah. As of this moment, it is the staff's intention to recommend Sequoyah's licensing."

TVA has contended since Dec. 3 that Sequoyah meets the Kemeny Commission's guidelines for new licensing requirements. The NRC placed a moratorium on licensing of all new nuclear plants after the Kemeny Commission issued its findings last Oct. 31.

Larry Mills, TVA's manager of nuclear regulations, said that even if Sequoyah gets a limited license Monday, it will likely be mid-summer or later before the plant begins commercial operation.

Corrections

In last Friday's issue, two names were left off of the visitation committee in the Visitation Survey Story. MRC officers belonging to the committee are: Grady Dickerson and John Quinn.

In the Tuesday, Feb. 5 issue, a headline was incorrectly placed with an article. On page 3, a headline appeared reading, "Nazi Leader Calls For Right-Wing Demonstration." The article following this headline concerned eight additional staff members being hired at a center for mentally retarded children. We apologize for any confusion this mistake may have caused.

New Iranian President Sadr Denounces Militants' Actions

By The Associated Press

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani Sadr yesterday angrily denounced the Moslem militants holding the U.S. Embassy hostages in Tehran as "dictators who have created a government within a government."

Bani Sadr's attack, his strongest yet on the embassy militants, came after they broadcast allegations that the minister of information and national guidance, Nasser Minachi, had "close links with the CIA." Minachi was arrested by revolutionary guards without government authorization at about midnight Tuesday.

The minister had denied the allegations before being seized at his home.

The new tension between Bani Sadr and the militants arose as Iranian officials gave conflicting signals on whether the establishment of a U.N. investigation of the ex-shah's regime would lead to the release of the approximately 50 embassy hostages.

It was announced Tuesday night that Bani Sadr had been chosen chairman of Iran's ruling Revolutionary Council, strengthening his position and raising hopes among those who expect him to try to get the American hostages released.

The new president, stung by the arbitrary arrest of Minachi, told the Tehran daily newspaper Kayhan that although the militants may not realize it they are paving the way for lawlessness in the country.

"How could you expect a government employee to go to work feeling secure," he said. "When there is no legal or judicial security in the country, that will undoubtedly lead to disorder."

Bani Sadr also attacked the state-owned television network for acting without prior government approval in giving the embassy militants air time Tuesday night to broadcast their allegations.

The militants found documents in the embassy files "proving the existence of close links between Nasser Minachi ... and both the U.S. Embassy and the CIA," Tehran Radio reported in a broadcast monitored in Kuwait.

Until today, Bani Sadr's criticism of the militants had been confined to statements to the effect that the new government alone must make decisions for the country.

Two Non-Credit Courses Offered

ECU News Bureau

Parents, teachers, day care personnel and others who live and work with young children are invited to enroll in two new evening course offerings at ECU this spring.

"Teachers Teaching Art" (Mondays, Feb. 4-March 3) and "Language Development in the Child" (Tuesdays, Feb. 5-March 4) are offered by the ECU Division of Continuing Education's Non-Credit Programs Office. Both are scheduled for 7-9 p.m. each session.

The art course is designed to help adults stimulate a child's artistic attempts during the early years when natural creativity is freely expressed.

Participants will work on a variety of projects which can be adapted to school, nursery or home use, and each will be analyzed and discussed in terms of its ability to help a child reach maximum artistic potential.

Instructing the art course is Roxanne Reep, a graduate student at ECU in metal design and drawing whose work has been exhibited widely throughout the Southeast.

The language development class is planned to help adults understand techniques of gentle, positive and effective guidance as they work with young children learning to use language.

Topics to be discussed include the nature of language, the process by which children learn to talk, the age at which "baby talk" is no longer "cute," what parents and teachers can do to enhance language skills, making play time a learning time, and selection of age-appropriate books.

Instructor is Patricia McMahon, who holds a master's degree in child development from ECU and now works as a training specialist in the Eastern North Carolina Day Care Training Project.

Further information about these and other spring "credit-free" classes is available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, ECU, telephone 757-6143.

Southern Bell Increases Rates

RALEIGH (AP)—Southern Bell was granted slightly more than half the $45.3 million rate increase the company had asked for by an order issued Wednesday by the North Carolina Utilities Commission.

"It's rather difficult to be completely pleased about an order granting slightly more than half of the amount we requested in our application," said vice president Alan E. Thomas in a reaction statement.

"The $45.3 million we asked was well within the president's wage and price guidelines. Every dollar was vital to our continued ability to finance ever-widening and ever-improving communications in North Carolina."

Because of inflation, Thomas said, Southern Bell has been unable to earn the rates of return authorized by Southern Bell in more than a decade. Inflation, he said, "tends to obsolete rate orders, so that they are often too little and too late."

The Utilities Commission granted the company an increase of 5.7 percent, instead of the 10.2 percent the company had asked for. The 5.7 percent will result in a revenue increase of $25.5 million.

The commission's action on Southern Bell's proposal came after seven months of investigation into the request and hearings across the state.

Under the utility's proposal, the residential rate for local service would have increased an average of 45 cents a month for one-party service and approximately 25 cents a month for two-party service.

The commission order allows an increase averaging 35 cents per month for one-party service and 25 cents per month for two-party service, for an average increase of four percent on residential rates.

Bell had asked for an increase from $31.10 to $59.70 for installing a residential telephone for a new customer. It got an increase to $36.75 under the commission's order.

The utility also wanted an increase for installing a business telephone from $40 to $73. The commission's order will allow Bell to increase the charge to $48.10.

The commission ruled that the approved rates under the 5.7 percent rate increase would allow Bell to earn a 10.19 percent rate of return on its property. The commission said the increase was granted because of the impact of inflation on Bell's costs.

Bell's last rate hike went into effect on April 26, 1978, when local service rates were increased by 1 percent.

Award Given

ECU News Bureau

Dorothy Hennigan Bowser of Virginia Beach, Va., senior student in the East Carolina University School of Business, is the recipient of a $100 annual scholarship award from the Greenville Credit Women International.

Ms. Bowser is concentrating on management and plans to pursue a career in personnel or labor relations upon graduation in May.

She is a member of Phi Kappa Phi honor society and the daughter of Gabrielle Hennigan of Virginia Beach, Va.

The Greenville organization presents the award each spring to recognize an outstanding female student enrolled in the ECU School of Business. It was formally presented at the GCW January dinner meeting.

Jarvis Co-eds Are Given An Option

"The girls will definitely have a place to go. Dr. Meyer will see to it that the transition will be made as pleasant as possible for those girls being moved."

Many state colleges have begun the transition from separate living to a co-ed environment.

Until Jarvis Dorm was considered for co-ed living, East Carolina had only two co-ed dorms, Umstead and Slay.

"I'd really like to see a better distribution of men and women on all sides of campus," Meyer said. "It (co-ed living) makes for a better total environment."

"I hope everyone understands that nothing definite has been decided yet as far as Belk and Scott are concerned. There are still a lot of questions to be answered: If Belk is made co-ed, should Jarvis girls have preference there, or should it be open for everyone? This Newspaper's Opinion

Close For Safety

The East Carolina University administration should cancel classes whenever the N.C. Highway Patrol declares the roads in the Greenville area extremely hazardous.

It doesn't make sense to hold classes at this university when snow removal crews are hard pressed to clear snow that has already fallen, not to mention the snow that is falling now. Sidewalks and roads are icy, and everywhere people are falling down or having traffic accidents.

On a campus where at least half of the students live off campus and must drive or find a ride to class, it would only be reasonable to assume that the administration would cancel classes.

The campus administration should listen to those who are specifically trained to deal with road conditions. When local law enforcement agencies such as the Greenville Police Department and the N.C. Highway Patrol say that roads are hazardous, they should heed the warning and close ECU for the day.

Students who live in outlying areas such as Farmville or Winterville would not have to risk their lives to come to class. The recent tragic accident on an icy road in Raleigh which claimed the lives of two young girls—in a car that authorities said was going only 25 miles per hour—should serve as a warning to us all to stay off the roads.

There are some who will say that our purpose is self-serving, that we would rather play in the snow than go to class. For some students, especially those who might have a test today, that might be true.

But from a practical standpoint, think of how many cars would not be on the streets of Greenville if school were to close for a day. That would probably make an extremely hazardous situation a little better. All of the ECU traffic would be off the streets, and essential personnel (such as emergency vehicles) would have almost empty roads for their use.

Remember, the needs of a city the size of Greenville must be placed above the needs of 13,000 people to attend class for one day. Our neighbors in the city number about 35,000, and when they take to the roads in icy weather, it is often to earn a living or perform a needed service. They don't need 6,000 extra college students on the roads when it isn't necessary for them to be there.

The Department of Institutional Research testified last year at a highway right-of-way hearing that 70 percent of ECU students came from west of Greenville. Given this fact, and the fact that a clear majority of students come from the Carolinas and Virginia, it should be considered that most of us have not had a great deal of experience driving in snow in ice. Frozen weather conditions do not come our way often enough to provide experience as in other regions of the country.

Often people have a tendency to boast about their talents of driving in the snow. This bragging can cause overconfidence—and result in traffic accidents and tragedy.

The administration should realize the danger some ECU students will face coming to school when conditions are serious. The highway patrol should be the standard for making the decision to cancel classes.

Scrutiny Is Needed

ABSCAM, the FBI's code name for the controversial congressional investigation, has opened another "Watergate Brand" can of worms. Examining the contents reveals an unhealthy mixture of questionable actions by the investigated and the investigators.

Although Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti has assured everyone that the investigation was "respectable," it will be interesting to discover how FBI agents managed to offer and successfully pay bribes without being guilty of entrapment. If entrapment indeed occurred, the legislators still must face ethics committees.

The nine accused are throwing up the smokescreen of entrapment in an attempt to hide the real crime—that they did accept bribes. Even if the FBI has to swallow their pride with entrapment charges, they can at least enjoy the fact that they exposed dishonest elected officials.

The acronym ABSCAM should stand for something more important than Arab scam: Americans Better Scrutinize Carefully Administrators' Morals.

Mohawk Indians Question Site Of Olympic Winter Games

By DAVID ARMSTRONG

When the Winter Olympic Games begin near Lake Placid, N.Y. this month, the Mohawk Indians native to the region will have more on their minds than whether Soviet athletes should be allowed to compete for gold medals. They're already wondering what the long-term impact of the games will be on their lovely but poor and increasingly polluted region, a stretch of territory they say is theirs by virtue of historic treaties.

Most places that have hosted the summer and winter games in recent years have lost money. There is a sudden influx of high-spending tourists and a leap in local em-ment that looks promising at first. But the tourists go home with that's left of their money and the jobs created to service the crowds soon disappear. The Lake Placid area faces those problems, and one more besides: Housing for athletes in the Olympic village is scheduled to be converted into a federal prison after the games. And a large number of local people, especially the Mohawks, don't like it.

"This area doesn't need a new prison," said John Mohawk, a staff member on the activist Indian newspaper Akwesasne Notes, in a recent interview. "We need decent housing, and jobs, and pollution control to stop the acid rains that are killing the conifer trees and poisoning the lakes around here. The Olympics and the prison were planned with no attention whatsoever to the needs of the area."

The Mohawks can do nothing to stop the games, and show no sign that they want to. They hope to use the Olympics to focus national and international attention on their problems. And they have a dramatically different design for the future of the Olympic Village.

"We got together with the New York State Council of Churches and proposed that the village be converted into a permanent center for the study of 'appropriate technology' after the games," John Mohawk said. "We'd like to see solar power studied there, and what to do about the dying environment and how to put up efficient housing in one of the most difficult climates in the continental United States. We think those are much better uses of the facilities than a prison."

The Mohawks' proposal was forwarded in verbal form to the White House last fall. But, according to Nader Maroun, a New York State Council of Churches staffer in Syracuse, prospects of establishing the appropriate technology center are shaky. "We were making some progress with the White House last fall," he said. "Stuart Eizenstadt sent staff members to Lake Placid to see the complex and they agreed the appropriate technology center could work there. But then the Ira-can crisis broke and we haven't heard from them since."

Just after the Mohawks announced their alternate plan for the Olympic village, the U.S. Olympic Committee, sponsors of the games, hurried to the Indians with proposals of their own. The Mohawks could sell Indian crafts at the games, the Committee said, and make a cultural presentation—speeches and dances—to the world's athletes. The Mohawks accepted the offer. Now the cultural presentation is off. "The Olympic Committee hasn't told us why," John Mohawk said.

Nader Maroun said he feels the Committee's offer may have been a ploy to draw attention from the Olympic prison and the overriding issue of Indian land claims. The Mohawks claim the site of the games as their own, citing treaties with the U.S. government in 1784 and 1794.

Regardless of how their proposal for the appropriate technology center fares, the Mohawk nation plans to dramatize the Native American heritage of Lake Placid. When runners bearing the Olympic flame reach the outer edges of the original Mohawk lands, Indian runners will be there to meet them, and will escort the torch all the way to the Olympic village, in the heart of Mohawk country.

Pro-Greek Letter Rebutted

To the Editor:

This is in response to the letter by Ricky Cannon that appeared in the Feb. 5 issue of The East Carolinian. I would like to express some feelings that I think are held by the majority of students here at ECU.

I am tired of seeing the numerous advertisements in The East Carolinian that espouse the "Greek" way of life. Re: "Greek Week." Of course, I realize that these are paid for by the fraternities and sororities, or the "Panhellenic Council." If Greek organizations are so noble and virtuous, why do they find it so necessary to sponsor such gaudy self-promotion?

I question the object to the use of student transit buses for the purpose of transporting students to and from rush parties. How in the world did they manage that? Perhaps the fact that "about one third of the major positions of The East Carolinian, SGA, Buccaneer, the school radio station, and other school related functions" are held by Greeks may have something to do with it. I say to Mr. Cannon that it is very possible for the frats to vote their "brothers" in. I ask him to refer to his Poli Sci 1050 notes regarding the "vocal minority." I regret such gross misrepresentation of high office on this campus. To be sure, it is the fault of the silent, non-voting majority of students here.

It is my hope that someday this majority will somehow unite for the purpose of placing the Greek life in proper perspective on this campus. I appreciate and applaud all charitable efforts by Greek organizations.

However, I suspect that the energies used in politicking, partying, and promoting far outweigh those used in humanistic and academic pursuit.

What you stole represented Christmas for me in 1979. It was less than 2 months old. Since I am a graduate student here and have just gotten married it will work a hardship on my family to replace what you took.

Value Of Sacrifice Disputed

To the Editor:

I refuse to believe that the ragged old potato chip van sacrificed to the snow gods early Thursday morning was even worth $2,000.00. It had sat out in front of Aycock broken down since last September and had become an eyesore.

It was also a traffic hazard, being responsible for a couple of fender benders and ugly bike smashups, and smearing powdery, dead paint on passing clothing.

I also refuse to believe Aycock's counselor attempting to cover up the mob's endeavor. I'll bet he enjoyed the story more than anyone.

Dinner Theater Presents Comedy '6 Rms Riv Vu'

By JAY STONE
Staff Writer

"6 Rms Riv Vu" premiered at the Helen Hayes Theater in 1972. It was nominated for an Emmy after being adapted for television in 1974, and Bob Randall, author of the play, received "The Drama Desk Most Promising Playwright Award" in 1972.

It is a play with a pronounced Neil Simon-ish essence. The writing strives to make a statement on the human condition while avoiding odious or cumbersome attempts at profundity.

Randall's characters deliver lines that drip with a banal kind of ludicrousness that satirizes bourgeois sensibilities and Victorian ethics.

"6 Rms Riv Vu" revolves around the characters of Paul Freidman (Mick Godwin) and Ann Miller (Rosalie Hutchins), who become accidentally locked into an empty apartment while shopping for a place to live. After a number of rejoinders, self-reproaches, and false starts, they fall into an adulterous, mad embrace. Their subsequent dilemma transforms the play into a satirical look at American sexual mores.

We are not asked to "believe" the characters of Paul and Ann, merely to laugh at them. They represent the refugees of a maturing process that has left them feeling stagnant and purposeless. It is, in part, through each other that they finally discover themselves. Ironically, because of their lack of credibility as tenants in the real world, we are afforded laughter. Paul and Ann are earthy enough to earn the adjectives "bawdy" and "irreverent," yet they are sufficiently chaste and caricatured to qualify as non-entities.

Dr. Helen Steer's direction of the play was adequately perceptive and acute. Larry (played by Ronald Cherry) had considerable fiasco potential. The character was contrived, awkward, and generally over-acted; however, after the first scene he was never permitted back on stage until curtain call. Mick Godwin did an effective rendition of Paul; however, his performance only began to achieve a plateau of quality drama during Act Two. Rosalie Hutchins' interpretation of Ann Miller was convincing enough to give substance to lines like:

"You're willing to kill yourself for me. How big of an ingrate do you think I am?"

High moments during the production ebbed and flowed until they found themselves beached and subject to inspection. In Act Two the ominous character of "The Woman in 4-A" (Hazel Stapleton) walks onstage bearing a book entitled Things Fall Apart.

The parts of Richard Miller and Janet Freidman were played by Marvin Hunt and Anita Lancaster. Karen Baldwin played a pregnant woman and Eddie was Willie Tyson.

"6 Rms Riv Vu" will be presented in Mendenhall Auditorium 244, Feb. 6-9, as a dinner theater production. The buffet dinner will include: sliced roast round of beef, chicken paprikosh, baked Idaho potato with sour cream, buttered green beans with toasted almonds, glazed carrots, sliced French bread, margarine, congealed lemon-pineapple salad and mixed fruit cobbler.

All other performances will be $7 for students and $9 for others.

Administrators:

"A Complex And Elaborately Designed Hierarchy"

By LINDA J. ALLRED

If you have ever attempted to handle a problem (no matter how trivial) that involved contact with academic administrators, you have no doubt discovered that they are a strange, fascinating, and sometimes exasperating breed who seem to function by a system of logic that is totally alien to the rest of the civilized world.

You may have begun to feel there is no logic to the system other than to make things difficult for you personally. However, this is not the case. Academic administration is actually a complex and elaborately designed hierarchy, whose operational guidelines have been the most carefully guarded secret since the recipe for Kentucky Fried Chicken.

This week a highly confidential document entitled A Handbook for Academic Administrators was discovered in Spilman by an undercover agent posing as a befuddled student attempting to track a "lost" tuition payment. The unidentified agent managed to camouflage the document as a pizza by covering it with tomato sauce and cheese and left the building unnoticed.

Following are a few excerpts from the handbook:

•THE PRIMARY GOALS OF ACADEMIC ADMINISTRATION ARE SELF-PERPETUATION AND PROPAGATION. As an individual administrator, it is your responsibility to keep the system going and growing. This process can be facilitated in a number of ways.

•Maximize the apparent importance of your own position. This may require considerable creative input on your part, but in the long run, the positive effects will be appreciated by everyone in the hierarchy. Keep in mind that the perceived value of any job is directly proportional to the number of people working under you, the frequency of your signature on official documents, the necessity of your approval for an outsider's activity within the system, and the number of file cabinets or computer banks necessary to store your records.

The activities which can potentially require your permission are virtually unlimited, but it is highly recommended that you limit them to only those which can be handled between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. For example, requiring that every student get your written permission for each trip to the bathroom would require your presence 24 hours a day and should therefore be avoided.

•Maximize the apparent importance of all positions beneath you. This is easily accomplished by assuring that every employee under your supervision has at least one employee under their supervision, and that every document that requires your signature or approval be processed through at least one other person before reaching you. It is obvious that such a tactic will produce an infinite number of positions within the system; therefore, this is highly recommended.

•Minimize actual work while maximizing apparent work. Standardized forms, computerized processing and storage systems, rubber stamps and Xerox machines are your greatest allies here. Remember that your goal is only to appear overworked. The more paper you generate, the more impressive and crucial your position will seem to the outsider, particularly if you can keep your desk piled high with mounds of documents which need your personal attention. (It does not matter what the paper actually is, although unopened boxes of blank typing paper and stacks of comic books obviously would not generate the right impression.)

•Remove all traces of economic efficiency. You are not working in a profit-loss situation, and as the cost of operating your division increases, its perceived worth to the system will increase. Remember, however, that to the outsider it must not appear that you are deliberately wasting money, so luxurious office decor should be avoided. Operational cost can easily be kept high if you observe a few simple principles:

1. Never use one form when a dozen will do.
2. Require at least three copies of every document. In addition to increasing cost, this will also contribute to the amount of storage space you need, thereby increasing the importance of your position.

3. Use as many paper clips and staples as possible. (This is a small item but in time can actually be quite expensive.)

4. Update all forms annually and print at least twice as many as you will actually need. At the end of the year, the unused forms can simply be discarded and replaced. (This has an additional advantage in that the constantly changing forms will create confusion for outsiders and thereby increase the importance of your role in "helping" them.)

5. Never use the least expensive product available.

It Came From Outer Space

...A Science Fiction Classic

Special Late Show

3-D Space Film Will Be Shown

"It's something that we've wanted to do for a long time," said Steven Bachner, chairman of the Student Union Films Committee. "Late shows have been extremely successful at UNC and N.C. State."

This Friday night the Committee will present a special late show, the science fiction classic "It Came From Outer Space" at 11:00 p.m. in Mendenhall Student Center's Hendrix Theater. Admission is free with a student ID, activity card or MSC membership.

"It is experimental," continued Bachner. "If it works well, we will try to schedule one or two each semester. But the problem with having a late show is that the Student Center is only open until midnight."

"For 'It Came From Outer Space,' we had to get approval to keep the building open until the movie ends at 12:30, and we had to have the money to pay the ushers and other personnel for their overtime."

"'It Came From Outer Space' has another interesting characteristic which makes it ideal for a late show," said Bachner. "It's a 3-D movie. We've got enough pairs of 3-D glasses for everyone at the movie; there are 800 seats and we have 800 glasses."

Three-dimensional photography is a process based on the scientific principle that the eyes have a slightly different perspective, and it is this change in this perspective which creates depth perception. A 3-D movie takes advantage of this by filming with two cameras, set inches apart.

When "It Came From Outer Space" premiered, the movie required two projectors working simultaneously. But if the two prints were not synchronized perfectly, the result was hundreds of headaches. The more recent process superimposes two different tinted prints — red and green — onto one reel. When viewed through the specially tinted 3-D glasses, the illusion of depth perception returns.

"It Came From Outer Space" was filmed in 1952, making it one of the oldest of the science fiction "invasion" films. It was the success of "Outer Space" which convinced filmmakers that sci-fi was a viable movie market and led to the creation of such classics as "The Invasion of the Body Snatchers" in later years.

The townspeople in rural Arizona suspect nothing when a bright flash streaks across the sky, but soon friends and neighbors change, and people realize something is going on. Further investigation leads to the discovery of the alien beings and to new heights in terror.

Creative camerawork plays an important role as the desert of Arizona becomes an eerie hiding ground for the aliens. Director Jack Arnold also uses a cinematic twist — he changes the viewpoint from the earthlings to that of the aliens, who see the earth creatures as bumbling little folk.

Halloween

...This Week's Free Film

From the opening frames, "Halloween" grabs you by the throat and hangs on, squeezing every possible bit of terror from the audience. It is hardly the type of movie that can be watched while leaning back comfortably.

This Friday and Saturday night at 7 and 9 p.m., the Student Union Films Committee presents "Halloween" in Mendenhall Student Center's Hendrix Theater. Admission is by student ID, activity card, or MSC membership.

"Halloween" begins one halloween eve when a young boy dons a mask, grabs a butcher knife, and attacks his sister and her boyfriend. Then the film progresses 15 years to the time when the psychopathic young man returns to stalk unsuspecting Halloween revelers.

"Halloween" is a horror masterpiece," said Richard Corliss of the New York Times. "It's a horror movie in the classic tradition."

Newsweek called the movie "a superb exercise in the art of suspense.... It is the most frightening flick in years."

The storyline and acting take a back seat to the violence and gore, yet the intense suspense and savagery of the killer are enough to leave the audience gripping the armrests.

"Halloween" is a sleeper that is here to stay," wrote Tom Allen of the Village Voice. "It can stand proud along side of 'Night of the Living Dead' and Hitchcock's 'Psycho.' It is a movie of almost unrelieved chills."

Variety said "a film like 'Halloween' is judged by the number of screams it can raise from the audience.... This one raises quite a few, especially during the last 20 minutes."

...how long will it last?

Record Broken In Greenville

At 10:50 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 3, 1980, a new world record for marathon volleyball was set at the Elm Street Gym. The two six-man teams claimed a spot in the Guinness Book of World Records at 75 hours, 30 minutes.

The teams were led by Jeff Sutton and Ricky Tolstoy, who currently hold the world record for marathon tennis at 105 hours. The two were joined by ten other residents of Kinston, N.C.: Sutton's brothers, Kyle and Kurt; John DeVecchio; Dave Eudy; Gary Baker; Ed Dupree; Ed Smith; and Tolstoy's brothers, Gary, Mike and Mark Baker is a student at ECU.

The marathon, which raised pledged proceeds for the Special Olympics programs in eastern North Carolina, began at 7:20 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 31. The original goal was to break 70 hours and 33 minutes, but during the competition, word was sent that a California group had set a new mark of 75 hours. The teams were allowed five minute breaks each hour for rest and refreshments, which were contributed by numerous local businesses. Deducting the time spent off the court, the teams still played—without sleep—for 68 hours, 45 minutes.

As Congress Debates Issue

Draft Registration Reviewed

College Press Service

If Congress endorses President Carter's Jan. 23 proposal to begin military registration, it will be the Selective Service System's first stirring since 1976. But it will not be the first time registration has been brought back from the grave. The U.S. has employed various kinds of conscription systems periodically for over a hundred years. A brief history, as gleaned from the published works of Boston University Professor Michael Useem:

The nation's first draft law, enacted during the Civil War, was easiest for the moneyed classes to avoid. The law allowed draftees to hire substitutes, and to buy exemptions for $300. Thus the war, according to a popular saying of the day, was fought "with rich men's money and poor men's blood."

The law, moreover, was inefficient. Of the 300,000 men called up in 1863, nine percent hired substitutes, 18 percent paid the deferment fee, and a whopping 70 percent resorted to medical and other exemptions. Only three percent of the draftees were formally inducted.

Peace ended the draft, which was not reinstated until World War I. It was considerably more efficient the second time. Draftees accounted for the majority of American soldiers for the first time in American history.

Around 145,000 college students served instead in the Study Army Training Corps during the Great War. Almost half the draftees claimed physical or occupational exemptions.

Others protested more directly. Numerous anti-draft marches on Washington ended with the jailing of the march leaders. Various unions — notably the Industrial Workers of the World — organized resistance, and were nearly destroyed as the result. Charles Schenck, an officer of the then-formidable Socialist Party, was arrested for merely circulating a petition arguing the draft violated constitutional strictures against involuntary servitude. His case ended with Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes' historic ruling that limited freedom of speech in times of national emergency.

In all, the War Department listed 325,000 missing war resisters two years after the Treaty of Versailles was signed.

The draft ended with the war, and remained inactive until 1940, when the U.S. began its first peacetime conscription program.

The draft expired in 1947, but the Truman administration worried that volunteer rates would be too low to sustain Cold War military policy, and successfully sponsored another law which, with certain modifications, remains in force today. But the nation's second peacetime draft did excite protest. Resistance was loud enough to force a liberalized deferment system.

Indeed, the deferment system was so discretionary that a disproportionate share of the 1.5 million men drafted into the Korean War were from working class families.

The pattern continued through the Vietnam War, when draft resistance hit its peak. Some studies suggest as many as 250,000 men illegally failed to register, while another 300,000 either refused induction or emigrated to avoid induction.

Resistance was so broad that by the early seventies the military system was under attack by a large proportion of the young men who were supposed to staff it. In 1973, President Nixon ended all physical exams and inductions. Registration was suspended on April 1, 1975, and the Selective Service System was officially put on standby status in January, 1976.

•Avoid talking on the telephone. If you can be easily reached by phone, it will appear that you have nothing better to do. Have your receptionist follow these simple guidelines:

1. Never put unscreened calls through to you.
2. Ask who is calling. If it is your superior, the receptionist should be instructed to state that you are in a meeting but that you requested to be notified if that person called. The caller should be left on hold for about 30 seconds before you answer.

b. Calls from your stock broker, realtor or lawyer should be put through immediately.
c. If the caller is a faculty member of student, the receptionist should state that you are not available and that the caller should leave a message. Calls from students may be disregarded. Calls from faculty members should not be returned until the faculty member has called back at least twice.

d. If the caller refuses to identify himself (or herself), the receptionist should place them on hold indefinitely. Eventually the caller will give up. (This tactic may also be used on students who persist in trying to reach you.

•Always answer negatively to any student's request. Most of the time the issue will simply be dropped. If the student persists, resort to the next tactic.

•Always answer positively to any faculty member's request. This does not mean that you must actually act on the issue. If the person contacts you about the progress of their request, respond that you're working on it, but these things take time.

•Always follow through on requests from your superiors. After all, they are trying to maintain the system too.

Host Illinois State Saturday

Pirates Travel To USC

By CHARLES CHANDLER
Sports Editor

The East Carolina basketball team begins its toughest week of the season tonight (Thursday) when it visits South Carolina, a team the Pirates upset last season 56-55 in Minges Coliseum.

Following the matchup with the Gamecocks, ECU hosts powerful Illinois State on Saturday, Delaware State on Monday and travels to sixth-ranked Maryland the following Wednesday.

"This is a tough stretch for us," admitted Pirate coach Dave Odom. "We'll just take them one at a time and hope for the best."

The South Carolina matchup is a most interesting one considering the Gamecock loss at ECU last season must have been a grave disappointment to USC coach Frank McGuire. He would like nothing more than to avenge that loss.

The game is also of interest because the present season is the last at USC for the legendary McGuire. The man who once led North Carolina to a national championship (1957) and brought the Gamecock program to national prominence in the late 1960's and early 70's is being forced into retirement by the USC administration following this season.

"I'm sure their players will be fired up," said Odom. "I know last year's game lingers in their minds. They would just love to avenge it."

"Also," Odom continued, "they will be doubly tough because it is McGuire's last season. They'll probably be giving that little extra just for him."

The Gamecocks have fared exceptionally well at McGuire Arena, losing only to Marquette.

"They're probably playing at home as well at home as any team we've played," proclaimed Odom. "They offer us quite a challenge, but I look forward to it."

The Gamecocks are led by 6-8 senior forward Cedric Hordges, who leads the team in both scoring and rebounding with 20.3 and 8.7 averages, respectively.

Guard Mike Doyle averages 12.3 points while burly 6-11 center Jim Strickland averages 9.3 and 8.5 rebounds.

"They have the biggest front line we'll play," said Odom. "We'll have a tremendous matchup problem."

To compensate Odom noted that Mike Gibson and Frank Hobson, two 6-8 post men, would see more than their average playing time.

"Mike and Frank will have to play to compensate for their size advantage," claimed Odom. "I also expect to use Kyle Powers a great deal for the same reason."

In the Saturday matchup in Minges with Illinois State, the Pirates, 11-8, face one of the top teams in the country. "They could well be one of the nation's top twenty teams," Odom said sternly.

The Redbirds, 16-5, are led by seven-foot center Joe Galvin, who averages 10.9 points and 6.1 rebounds per game. Guard Ron Jones is the leading scorer with a 17.3 average. Forward Del Yarbrough tallies 12.6 and 6.7 caroms.

"They're probably the best team to come into Minges Coliseum since the Jacksonville team that Artis Gilmore played on," Odom said. "People holler about getting name teams in here—well, this team is the surge of the midwest."

Odom had special praise for the seven-foot Galvin. "He's a super player," said the first-year Pirate coach. "N.C. State wanted him badly when he came out of high school."

Of the Redbirds on the whole Odom said he expected to see them play much in the same style as Indiana.

"Bob Donewald (ISU head coach) served as an assistant under Bobby Knight at Indiana for a while," he said. "I think you'll see a lot of Bobby's coaching in him."

Odom noted that his team would have to be mentally ready for the Redbirds. "It must be an emotional game for us," he said. "That's the only way for us if we are to have a shot at winning the game."

Rosie's '10' To Be Retired

By CHARLES CHANDLER
Sports Editor

It all began with a talk from a coach and will begin coming to a close this Saturday night.

What's closing out is the college career of ECU's all-time scoring scorer, man or woman, Rosie Thompson. Following the Lady Pirates' game Saturday with George Mason, Thompson's jersey number "10" will be retired.

For Miss Thompson, the honor is one that has yet to sink in. "I don't know if it has hit me yet," she said. "I haven't thought about it that much yet."

The 5-8 Miss Thompson said that no one actually told her that her number would be retired before she saw it in print. "I found out on Tuesday," she explained, "when we were going to Chapel Hill. I saw it on one of the flyers (info sheets put out by SID office). That sure was a strange way to hear about it."

Among the many records held by the Blounts Creek native are ECU all-time scoring and rebounding totals. For her career, Thompson has tallied 2,214 points and 1,119 rebounds.

This season she is averaging 18.3 points and 9.6 rebounds per contest.

The scoring average would be higher had she not experienced a scoring slump during the past month. For a string of ten games, Thompson rarely scored in double figures, much less score her customary twenty points per game.

It was just this past Tuesday at North Carolina, when she tallied 25 points, that she broke out of the slump.

But, Miss Thompson says, there is a good reason for her recent lack of scoring. "Our guards and forwards have been hitting their perimeter shots real well," she said.

"They were making the shots. There was really no need for us to go inside to me."

"I tried to concentrate more on defense. Honestly, I feel during that stretch that I was playing as well all-around as I ever have. I just wasn't scoring as much."

Miss Thompson's contributions to the East Carolina women's program have surely been many, not only on the floor but off.

Few people realize, for example, that she has never had an athletic scholarship until this season. "They always told me I could have one," Thompson explained, "but I refused because I already had an academic scholarship. I wanted our coaches to use the scholarship that was offered me to be used to get quality players in here."

How did Miss Thompson, a "quality" player herself, arrive at ECU? Believe it or not, former Pirate football coach Pat Dye had a tremendous influence on her decision.

"Coach Dye encouraged me to come here," she said. "I had planned to wait a year after I graduated from high school."

Though she did not wait that year before coming to ECU, Miss Thompson is finishing out her career at the same time as if she had.

"I only played four games my sophomore year," she explained, "because of an injury."

The experience is not one that she likes to think of. "It was horrible," exclaimed the senior forward. "We were 6-16 that year and I couldn't stand just watching. I don't know if our record would have been better had I played, but at least I could have tried."

That was four years ago. The Lady Pirate program was come a long way since then, now owning a 16-8 record.

Rosie Thompson

"The major change," said Miss Thompson, "is that Coach (Cathy) Andruzzi is getting good caliber players in here. You really need that now because everybody we play is tough. You can take nothing for granted."

One thing Thompson is not taking for granted is her own future. She is presently engaged and has ambitions to play professional basketball.

If she makes it in the Women's Basketball League (WBL), she will join fiancée Zack Valentine to form a family of pro athletes. Valentine, former ECU defensive end, is a linebacker for the World Champion Pittsburgh Steelers.

Miss Thompson said that though she had not spoken with scouts, she felt her chances at a pro career are good. "Coach Andruzzi has a lot of connections," Thompson said. "I just hope some of them will pay off."

Something else in her favor is the fact that two former ECU mens' coaches, Larry Gillman and Terry Kunze, are coaching in the WBL. Gillman, who ended a stormy two-year ECU tenure last season, coaches the St. Louis Streak while Kunze, Gillman's assistant last season, coaches at Minnesota.

"I guess it will help me since they've seen me play," Thompson said. "I used to talk some with both of them."

As for Saturday's game with George Mason, Thompson said she had no extra feelings because of her number being retired. "I'll treat it just like any other game and any other night."

She may, but the fact remains it will be more than just another night. It marks the end of an era.

Lady Pirates Fall To Heels

By JIMMY DuPRE
Assistant Sports Editor

CHAPEL HILL — After having led by one at the half, East Carolina's women fell to North Carolina 85-71 Tuesday afternoon at Carmichael Auditorium.

The lead changed hands twelve times in the action-packed first half, with neither team able to mount more than a three point advantage.

Aprille Shaffer opened the second half with a bucket to regain the lead for the Heels, but ECU forward Kathy Riley quickly answered with a drive once again shifting the narrow edge. Center Marcia Girven added a field goal to put the Pirates up by three.

Then the poised Tar Heels combined a pair of field goals from leading scorer, Kathy Crawford, another from Shaffer and a follow shot by team captain Bernie McGlade to post a 39-34 advantage, apparently taking command of the game.

The teams exchanged field goals before Girven added a three-point play and Lydia Rountree chipped in a 15-footer to knot the score at 41-41.

Crawford drilled home three straight for UNC, countered by a pair from Rosie Thompson to set the score 47-45 in favor of the hosts. But then the nightmare began for the visiting Pirates.

UNC capitalized on four Pirate turnovers and blitzed to a 63-45 gap on 16 unanswered points to silence East Carolina's hopes of victory.

Riley posted 12 of her 19 points on the evening in the final eight minutes of play, as the Lady Pirates made one final run for the money. Heidi Owen's jumper with 1:40 on the clock cut the score to 79-67, but it was too little, too late as ECU suffered their eighth loss with 16 wins.

Crawford established a new UNC women's record of 30 points with her victory-icing performance. Toni Berry added 20 points from the perimeter and Shaffer 18.

Thompson, recovering from a recent scoring slump, led the Pirates with 25 points and 10 rebounds, while Riley drove in 19 and Laurie Sikes 12.

"They certainly deserved to win," commented ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi, whose team owns a 1-3 NCALAW mark. "We just weren't intense."

"We don't have the depth Chapel Hill has. You need experienced ballplayers."

"Crawford picked up in the second half and hurt us; their whole team picked up in the second half. We had to play behind her and hope she missed the shots she was getting; unfortunately she didn't."

East Carolina hosts George Mason Saturday at 6:15 p.m., a change from the previously announced tipoff time. "Rosie Thompson Night" will be celebrated, with her famous number '10' jersey being retired.

Willie Mays Set To Visit Greenville

February is usually a month for snow and valentines. But for East Carolina and Greenville, this February will be a month highlighted by baseball.

The Eastern North Carolina Baseball Clinic will be held at ECU on Saturday, Feb. 9 with several big names expected to be present.

Ex-Kansas City Royal and Oakland A's manager Jack McKeon, now the assistant general manager at San Diego, headlines the elite group of guests. Also participating will be Jack Krol, third base coach of the St. Louis Cardinals; Bobby Guthrie, assistant coach at UNC-Wilmington; Tony Guzzo, head coach at NC Wesleyan.

Also, ex-Atlanta Braves' manager Clyde King, now pitching coach of the New York Yankees; Boston Red Sox scout Wayne Britton; plus ECU coaches Hal Baird and Gary Overton.

The clinic is open to all persons junior high school and high school age.

Later in the month of February, one of the truly great baseball players of all time will be in Greenville.

Willie Mays, the "Say Hey Kid", will speak at the Greenville Sports Club on Feb. 28.

Charles Chandler

Mays, a real superstar for the New York and San Francisco Giants before spending his last few seasons with the Mets, ranks as the third leading home run hitter of all time, just behind the immortal Babe Ruth and Henry Aaron.

Recently, Mays was named to one of the top three outfielders in history when he was named on baseball's all-time all star team.

Mays has a controversial side of him to that will almost surely be discussed at the Sports Club meeting. Recently the Hall of Famer was banned from his baseball connections due to his ties with a gambling ring.

Some have supported the move made by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn while others claim Kuhn gave Mays too grave a punishment.

Nevertheless, the man who made the "shoestring catch" famous, and made baseball a sport of all-around athletes will speak on the 28th. Mays had earlier been scheduled to speak on the 14th but had to cancel for business reasons.

ECU head basketball coach Dave Odom faces a stern task on the 13th of this month when he takes his Pirates to College Park to face the sixth-ranked Maryland Terrapins, ACC leaders at this point.

He seems to realize just this. "Heck, I guess we're 48 point underdogs at least, aren't we," said

Odom with a chuckle. "We were beat at Duke by 19 and Maryland just beat Duke by 19. That's 38 and add the ten points for the home court advantage and you've got 48."

Who says basketball coaches don't have good common sense?

An interesting note concerning Illinois State, a team that comes to ECU for a Saturday night game in Minges Coliseum concerns an early-season loss.

The Redbirds, an impressive 16-5, lost a 72-70 overtime decision to second-ranked Syracuse earlier this season. Syracuse has a sparkling

By FREDDIE FRAZIER
ECU Intramural Department

The intramural basketball season is off to a fast-paced start. The season is now in full swing although the top teams have yet to be matched against each other. Most of the games involving the top teams were one-sided.

The dorm division does not have many top teams, but the ones they have are excellent. The top-ranked Belk Pleasers destroyed the Super-shots 90-27 while the Belk Stylons beat the Aycock Desolation Angels 55-35 and the Jones Nads 56-40.

In the fraternity division, the two top-ranked teams had no trouble in their first games. Kappa Alpha demolished Delta Sigma Phi 77-13, while Tau Kappa Epsilon trounced Sigma Nu 44-18.

The independent division contains most of the better teams. The second-ranked team on campus, the Super Eight, had no trouble in beating the Village People 84-34. Various Artists easily got by the Bouncers 62-21, while the White Hope was cruising past Lambert's Lunatics 61-20. The Joint Fight handled the Golden Buds 85-43 while the Freshmen Sensations defeated the Village Green Buds 52-29.

The basketball quality should only get better as the season wears on. The teams will work better together and the competition will become stiffer.

ECU Hosts ODU

By CHARLES CHANDLER
Sports Editor

The East Carolina wrestling team hosts Old Dominion Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Pirates' next-to-last home match of the season.

ECU, 5-3-1 in dual matches, faces the Virginia state champs in the Monarchs, via their win in last week's Virginia Intercollegiate Tournament.

"They'll really be tough," said ECU coach Ed Steers. "We lost to Virginia Tech earlier this year and they finished second to Old Dominion in the Virginia tournament."

Leading the way for the Monarchs is All-America candidate Buddy Lee. The 134-pounder has been nationally ranked for the past two seasons and has won the NCAA's Eastern Regional championship two years in a row.

Going up against Lee will be freshman Grey Sours, who owns a 10-9 record this season. "Grey has done a nice job for us," said Steers. "Most of the year he has just been getting his feet wet. But he's come a long way. He'll go at 'em. Lee will know he's been in a match when it's all over."

Leading the Pirate grapplers in the match will be heavyweight D.T. Joyner, 28-2, and 177-pounder Butch Revils, 30-1. Both are ranked sixth nationally in their respective weight classes.

Of the match with the Monarchs, Steers said the key for ECU was balance. "We can give them a good go," said the first-year Pirate coach. "If we have a well-balanced attack, I wasn't able to recruit much because I arrived here in the spring. Because of that we've relied on good effort. I just hope that will be enough Saturday."

Steers noted that a change in his lineup should be a big help to the Pirates. "Steve Milanese has decided to trim down and wrestle in the 118-pound class," he said. "He had been a 'light' 126-pounder. Now he'll be a 'heavy' 118-pounder. That should make a big difference for us."

Top IM Teams Dominating

By FREDDIE FRAZIER
ECU Intramural Department

The intramural basketball season is off to a fast-paced start. The season is now in full swing although the top teams have yet to be matched against each other. Most of the games involving the top teams were one-sided.

The dorm division does not have many top teams, but the ones they have are excellent. The top-ranked Belk Pleasers destroyed the Super-shots 90-27 while the Belk Stylons beat the Aycock Desolation Angels 55-35 and the Jones Nads 56-40.

In the fraternity division, the two top-ranked teams had no trouble in their first games. Kappa Alpha demolished Delta Sigma Phi 77-13, while Tau Kappa Epsilon trounced Sigma Nu 44-18.

The independent division contains most of the better teams. The second-ranked team on campus, the Super Eight, had no trouble in beating the Village People 84-34. Various Artists easily got by the Bouncers 62-21, while the White Hope was cruising past Lambert's Lunatics 61-20. The Joint Eight handled the Golden Buds 85-43 while the Freshmen Sensations defeated the Village Green Buds 52-29.

The basketball quality should only get better as the season wears on. The teams will work better together and the competition will become stiffer.

ECU Hosts ODU

By CHARLES CHANDLER
Sports Editor

The East Carolina wrestling team hosts Old Dominion Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Pirates' next-to-last home match of the season.

ECU, 5-3-1 in dual matches, faces the Virginia state champs in the Monarchs, via their win in last week's Virginia Intercollegiate Tournament.

"They'll really be tough," said ECU coach Ed Steers. "We lost to Virginia Tech earlier this year and they finished second to Old Dominion in the Virginia tournament."

Leading the way for the Monarchs is All-America candidate Buddy Lee. The 134-pounder has been nationally ranked for the past two seasons and has won the NCAA's Eastern Regional championship two years in a row.

Going up against Lee will be freshman Grey Sours, who owns a 10-9 record this season. "Grey has done a nice job for us," said Steers. "Most of the year he has just been getting his feet wet. But he's come a long way. He'll go at 'em. Lee will know he's been in a match when it's all over."

Leading the Pirate grapplers in the match will be heavyweight D.T. Joyner, 28-2, and 177-pounder Butch Revils, 30-1. Both are ranked sixth nationally in their respective weight classes.

Of the match with the Monarchs, Steers said the key for ECU was balance. "We can give them a good go," said the first-year Pirate coach, "if we have a well-balanced attack. I wasn't able to recruit much because I arrived here in the spring. Because of that we've relied on good effort. I just hope that will be enough Saturday."
