Phthisic Beats Forbes; Other Races In Doubt

By PAUL COLLINS
News Editor

Wednesday's SGA election has resulted in only one clear winner, and a recount will be held Thursday morning in three of the races.

Denise Phthisic has been declared the winner in the race for secretary. Phthisic received 1,866 votes to 780 for her opponent, Lou Anne Forbes.

The tallies in the races for president, vice president and treasurer were close enough to call for a recount.

The top two candidates in the races for treasurer and vice president were each within two percent of one another, and, according to SGA rules, a recount is automatic.

A recount will also be held in the presidential race. Though the vote between the top two candidates was not within two percent it was close enough for the elections committee to call for the recount.

In the race Lester Nail finished with an unofficial count of 1,070 votes, and Russell Overman had 1,012. Ben Singleton finished a distant third with 500 votes, and Guy Dixon had 108.

The top two vice-presidential candidates were Marvin Braxton and Peggy Davison. Braxton received, unofficially, 906 votes and Davison 892.

Byron Nickens finished with 530 votes and write-in candidate Jay Nichols trailed with 347.

The two candidates for treasurer finished within 20 votes of one another. Incumbent Kirk Little received 1,418 votes to Angela Pepe's 1,398.

If, after the final count, the top candidates are within two percent a run-off election may be requested by the trailing candidate.

If held, the run-off would be March 18, the first Wednesday after spring break.

A total of 2,816 votes were cast, with 26.8 percent of the student body voting.

Polls at the Croatan, Jarvis and Tyler were late in opening, but Patrick said all were open by 9:30 a.m.

"It took us longer to get all the ballot boxes to the polls than we anticipated," he said. "Also a couple of poll tenders were late. That was the main problem."

Patrick added that the late openings would not affect the results. "It affects all the candidates equally."

He felt that overall the election was a success. "I thought the election went real smooth. It was an excellent turnout."

Reagan Administration May Reinstate Draft

WASHINGTON (SPS)—The Reagan administration may be moving toward resumption of the draft because of the failures of the all-volunteer force, according to Washington lobbyists and military policy experts.

"We see a real possibility of a draft reinstituted at the end of the year," said David Rosenfeld, staff member of the Committee Against Registration and the Draft. Added Washington Peace Center Co-Director Joe Miller, "It's in the cards."

Since the election, Reagan has refused to end registration, although he promised to do so during the election campaign. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told the Senate Armed Services Committee last month that the administration wants to keep the registration system in place.

The secretary assured the panel that he and Reagan would not hesitate to recommend the draft if they thought it was necessary.

Some military experts, however, worry that the decision has already been made. "There's no question that he would like to bring back the draft," said Miller. "The question is whether he will have the opportunity to do it. He could use international issues—like the struggle in Poland—as a pretense to bring back the draft."

Meanwhile, the Selective Service has recently issued proposed regulations for a fast mobilization draft which would require young men to report for induction within 10 days of notification. The Selective Service says that these new regulations are part of the military's quick response plans for dealing with third world conflicts.

The National Interreligious Service Board for Conscientious Objectors is concerned that the 10 day time period is too short. Draft Counselor Charley Maresca said, "The limitations of time will not allow registrants to look into exemptions and deferments."

The call for reinstitution of the draft in recent weeks has come from Capitol Hill as well as from lobbyist organizations. Said Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman John Tower, R-Tx., "We may ultimately have to face the problems of serious shortages in active duty and reserve personnel. All signs point to this and we might have to go to a draft."

"In any case," Tower said, "we should keep the registration program in place. The biggest reason is to have it for mobilization purposes. It could save us some more critical start-up days in a crisis. Any move now to abolish the program would send the wrong kind of signal to our allies and our enemies."

"Registration has only been a token," said Gen. J.M. Roberts of the Reserve Officers Association. "What we need now is classification for a draft, which would involve physical and mental tests so we could see who we really have. A lottery system would be the only fair way—if your number is called, you're classified."

"The real question behind reinstitution of the draft is whether we want to increase the size of the military structure. Our military involvement should not be large scale enough to warrant a draft."

Former Secretary of the Army Clifford Alexander agrees. "At this time there is no need to return to the draft. If we get involved overseas, though, the Reagan administration will call for the draft."

Reinstitution of the draft is a sensitive political issue that could result in widespread protest across the country. Concedes Defense Secretary Weinberger, "It might dissipate the kind of atmosphere in which we could re-arm America. It would not be possible to do everything that needed to be done to beef up U.S. defenses in a totally hostile environment."

Opponents of the draft are already gearing up to fight advocates of the draft in Congress. A national convention to counter the "renewed and dangerous spirit of militarism in Washington, D.C." was sponsored by CARD last month. At the convention, anti-draft leaders called for national demonstrations in March and April to counter the new pro-military initiatives in Congress.

Because it is such a controversial issue, Reagan will not officially call for a draft until after his economic proposals see congressional action, according to White House staffers. Said Doug Bandow of the Domestic Policy Staff, "The economic package is of prime consideration now. By April we will see some action on this issue."

Bandow said some of Reagan's options are continuing registration, calling for a draft, or looking at some other alternatives like pay incentives and educational benefits.

As the Reagan administration takes command of the Pentagon, these options are being considered because of their view that the all-volunteer force is faltering under the burden of increasingly severe manpower, morale and management problems.

The renewed call for a draft comes at a time when the Army's own internal studies indicate that it may now be dangerously unprepared for combat. The report, Human Readiness No. 5, concludes that among the Army's most severe

Aycock Keys Open Unusual Doors

By Elaine Poole
Staff Writer

It may be wise to pack up your valuables along with the bathing suits and skis this spring break.

Some residents of the men's dorms, especially Jones and Aycock feel that the security isn't all it should be.

Art Hinton and his roommate Craig Lamm said that many of the room keys in Aycock will open other doors in the dorm as well.

"Lots of guys can open someone else's room with their own room key," said Hinton. "Some keys will slip into other locks very easily, others you just have to jiggle a bit."

Hinton had several pieces of stereo equipment and a color television removed from his room over Thanksgiving. He said that no evidence of a forceful break-in was apparent.

According to Hinton, the door wasn't damaged and the transom was still nailed shut.

"The only thing we found was that the screens were off the windows," said Hinton.

Hinton and Lamm requested that their lock be changed, and according to Don Joyner, Aycock Director, since Hinton and Lamm had been burglarized, ECU should pick up the tab for the new lock.

"Dan Wooten and the Housing Office have been very happy to change locks on the rooms that were broken into, if requested," said Joyner.

If a resident loses a key and wants to have the lock changed, he must pay a fee of $12, according to Joyner.

Hinton said that many people don't turn in their keys as is required at the end of the year. "Some guys still have their room keys from the previous year," said Hinton.

Don Joyner admitted that it was impossible to tell if a resident has actually lost his key or not. If a resident does not turn in his key for whatever reason, he is required to pay a small fine.

When asked about the possibility of a pass key being used to gain entrance into the dorm over Thanksgiving, Joyner replied that none of his resident advisors in Aycock are allowed to have pass keys.

The head resident, the programming assistant, the head janitor and the director are the only ones who have pass keys according to Joyner.

"We have not lost any keys, but I can't speak for the rest of the dorms. Some of the dorms allow their advisors to have pass keys in order to let residents in when they have forgotten their keys."

Joyner felt that security would be tighter if all advisors did not have pass keys.

When Lt. Rose of campus security was asked about progress in finding the stolen goods and those responsible for the break-in, he said that all their leads had been exhausted. They have no suspects or witnesses, according to Rose.

Rose confirmed that the outside locks on the men's dorms had been changed but that the inside room locks had not.

Rose also added that the men's dorms were old and that the locks and keys of the rooms were probably worn down.

Don Joyner said that he put up posters reminding residents to take their valuables home at Christmas.

"I put up so many reminders to the guys, that if anyone were to have broken in over Christmas he would have been discouraged."

Seventeen separate incidents of theft were reported as the result of a crime wave that hit College Hill during the Thanksgiving break.

Sherrod To Visit Education Secretary

By PAUL COLLINS
News Editor

SGA President Charlie Sherrod will travel to Washington Friday for a conference with Secretary of Education Terrel Bell.

Sherrod is one of approximately 80 student leaders from around the country that will be meeting with the secretary to discuss the issues related to higher education.

According to Sherrod, one of the main topics of discussion will be the Reagan administration's proposed cutbacks in financial aid.

"My big concern is the cutting off of financial aid," he said. "I just want to hear first hand some of Bell's plans for education. If they're not the kind of thing that students want to hear I think he's going to get his ear bent."

The agenda for the conference will include a keynote address by Bell, in which he will discuss his plans for the Department of Education. Financial aid will be among the topics discussed.

The Reagan administration has announced plans to reduce financial aid 20 percent by 1982 as part of its budget cutting plan.

The conference was originally scheduled last year by the Carter White House.

Sherrod indicated that the new administration had seemed intent on cancelling the conference. As a result plans for the conference still have not been finalized.

Other activities at the conference will include workshops and lectures on such topics as the future of minorities in education and counseling skills.

In an interview Wednesday afternoon Sherrod also discussed the upcoming meeting of the board of trustees.

Among the topics the trustees will be discussing on March 16 will be possible increases in student fees and the proposed seat for the president of SOULS on the Media Board.

Sherrod felt that the trustees would take a hard look before granting any increases in student fees.

According to Sherrod, "The board of trustees is very sensitive to the students at the university. They won't pass any fees that aren't greatly needed."

A group of work study students has taken steps to begin legal action against East Carolina regarding the termination of the program.

"Our purpose is to organize students so that we have backing to hire attorneys to represent us," said Nancy League, a work study student who is coordinating the effort.

The group has begun to circulate nine petitions on campus among work study students.

Students signing the petition will be asked to contribute $5 to help obtain legal services.

League said that the group had already contacted the law firm of Howard and Duffus but that $200 would be needed to retain the firm's services.

The group's goal is to have the program reinstated.

League said she hoped the matter could be settled through negotiation with the university. "We would be happy if the matter were settled by the time we get back from spring break."

"But if we are forced, our lawyers are prepared to take other legal action," she added.

According to League, many work study students were upset that they were not given more notice that the program was being terminated.

"The delay in letting us know wasn't handled well. They knew last fall there was a problem with funds. They should have given us some more notice of the termination."

Students were notified Thursday that the program would be terminated as of Sunday, March 1.

Financial Aid Director Robert Boudreaux said that his office was continuing its efforts to place students in jobs through the Self Help program.

"We have identified about 175 students who are on Self Help," he said. "These students won't lose their jobs, but they would have to work shorter hours."

He added that students will know after spring break whether or not they will be employed by Self Help.

Richard Poole, of Howard and Duffus, said, "If students come up with a retainer, we will investigate the case. We will negotiate to come up with a suitable agreement for

Fall Break

Faculty May Approve For 1983

Our SGA has proven that campaign promises do not necessarily always go unkept. This year, with the perseverance of the president and other officers, the Student Government was successful in scheduling a two day fall break, tentatively to begin in the Fall Semester, 1983.

The first step they took in securing this break was to print survey forms and have them handed out to the students during the elections last fall. According to Charlie Sherrod, the 1980-81 SGA President, the percentages were overwhelming. The majority of the students surveyed, 93.5 percent were in favor of a two day break in October.

With the help of some students from Chapel Hill, Mr. Sherrod then devised a survey to use in polling the faculty. The results of this survey were also encouraging. Sixty percent of the faculty were in favor of a fall break on a Thursday and Friday in October. Sixty-five percent said yes and 31 percent disapproved of beginning classes two days early; 55 percent approved and 42 percent said no when asked if the exam period should be extended to facilitate the fall break.

The break has been tentatively accepted by the Faculty Senate Calendar Committee. The plan in its present form has scheduled the first fall break on October 17 and 18, 1983. The next meeting will be held on March 17, 1981, and at this time the full Faculty Senate will vote to approve or disapprove this schedule.

The statistics indicate that both the students and faculty are in favor of a fall break, and there is little doubt that the new schedule will be adopted for 1983 by the Faculty Senate at their next meeting.

Since the majority of faculty and students are in favor of the break, why wait for two years to bring the new schedule into effect? Next week's spring break, for example, is a good time to unwind from the books for a short while, and get mentally prepared for the second half of the semester. This same kind of break is also needed in the fall.

It should not always be necessary for the implementation of new procedures to be delayed for a couple of years. Let's hope to not only see the approval of a two day fall break, but also have it scheduled to be in effect for the Fall Semester, 1981. Since the elections yesterday, let this be an encouragement to our new SGA officers as well, for their diligent efforts in the year to come to see their campaign promises fulfilled.

Sketchy Election Results

Well, the Student Government Association elections are behind us now and we have a new administration to rally our support behind. Right? WRONG!!

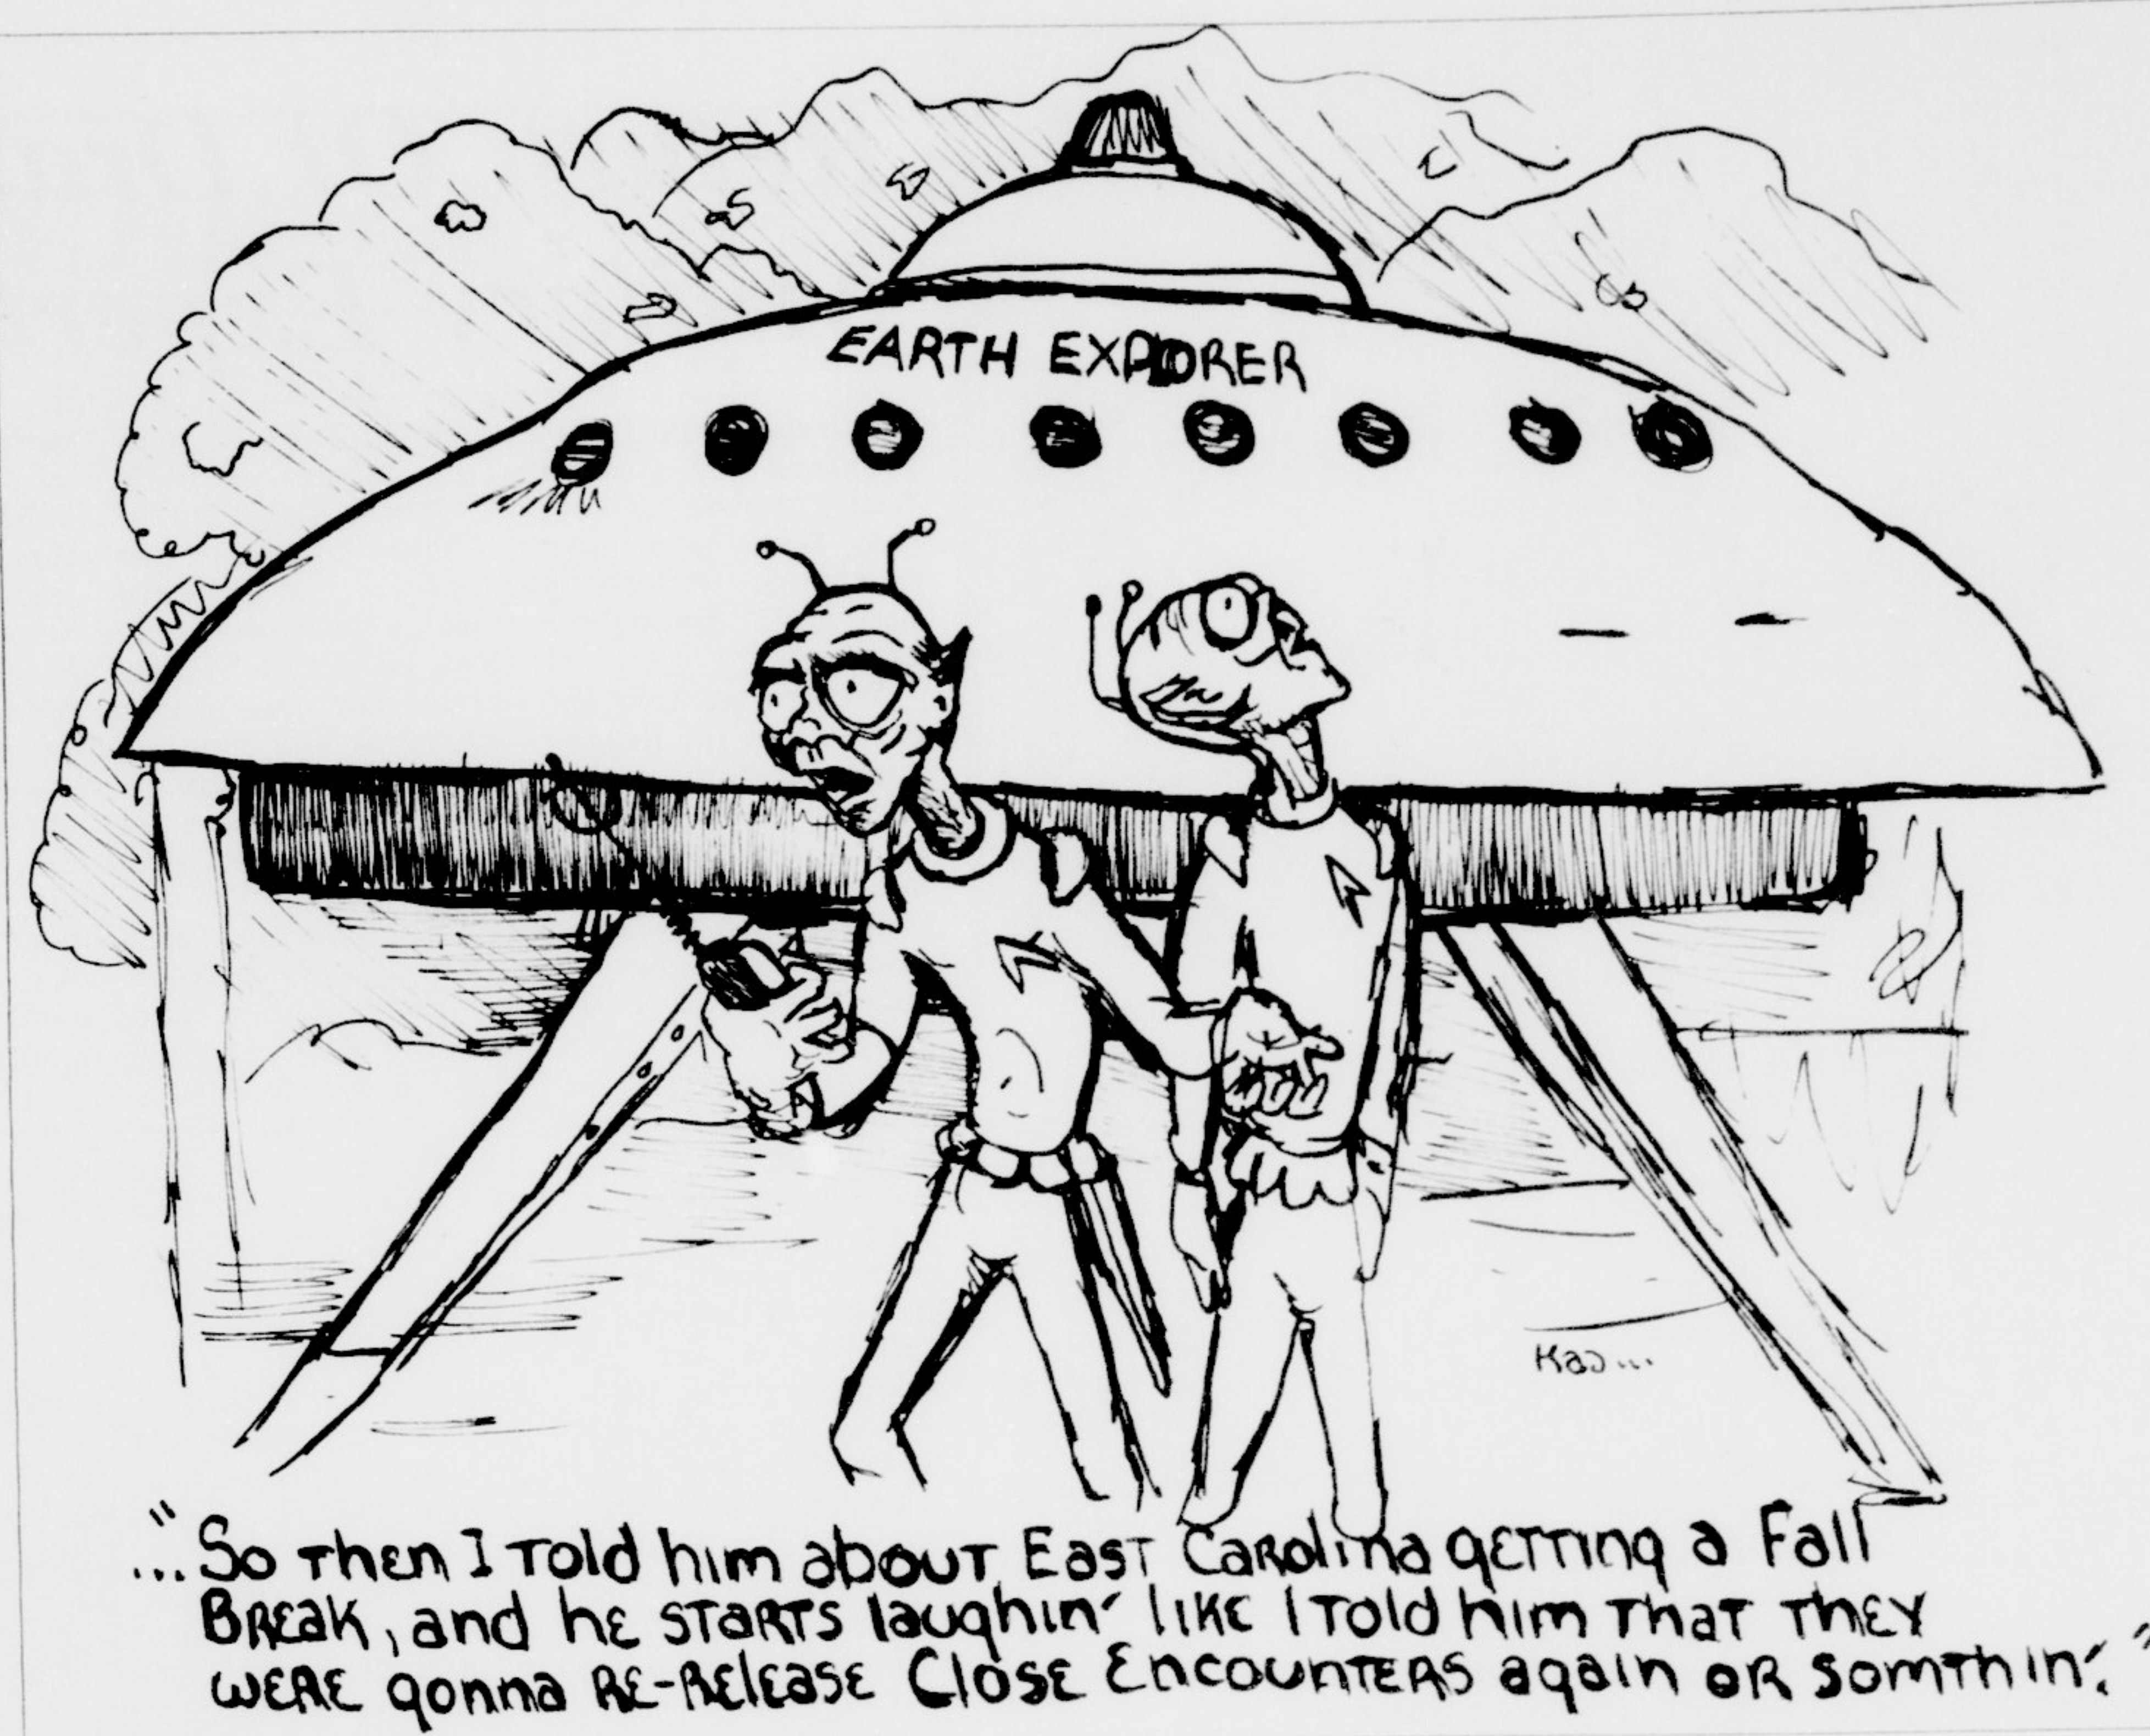

With only about 2,800 out of 13,000 student at East Carolina voting in the 1981-82 cabinet elections, the only race which was decidedly tallied was that of SGA secretary. Denise Phthisic managed to out-distance Lou Ann Forbes in that race by a margin of 1,086 votes.

Beyond that, only Lester Nail could manage to establish a margin of more than 20 votes, as he forged a 58 vote lead over Russell Overman.

Without a doubt, the decision on the vice-president and treasurer races will have to wait until a recount is performed. Even then it is probable that at least one office will have to be decided by a run-off election.

With less than 22 percent of the student body participating in the original election, how many people may be expected to return to the polls for yet another try at deciding these offices?

Tax Proposals Meet Same Protests

WASHINGTON — It has been fascinating to observe the reaction to President Reagan's proposals to reduce both federal spending and federal taxes. There have been the same old protests, from the same old sources, that "the poor" are being hardest hit, while "the rich" are being scarcely touched.

This is demagoguery. Several important questions need to be borne in mind as the debate proceeds. Among them:

1. Who is hardest hit by inflation?
2. What has caused our inflation and unemployment?
3. How can we reverse these conditions?

ANSWERS — The answers to those questions should be obvious. First of all, everybody agrees that the poor are hardest hit by inflation — and especially the unemployed poor.

What caused the inflation that today threatens to paralyze our economy? The answer to that is simple: Deficit spending by the federal government has been the greatest single cause. The federal debt today stands at almost one trillion dollars. The interest on that federal debt will cost the taxpayers, this year alone, in the neighborhood of 90 billion dollars. Just two decades ago, the total cost of operating the entire federal government cost approximately the same amount that it today costs merely to pay the interest on money already borrowed and spent by the federal government.

And, if we are ever to turn the country around, we must stop this federal waste and extravagance, balance the federal budget, and begin to reduce the federal debt.

REAGAN — And that is precisely what President Reagan has proposed. If the American people have the national will to insist that it be done, we can avoid economic collapse. But if we, as Americans, are unwilling to make the necessary sacrifices, disaster lies ahead.

Many political attacks are being made on Mr. Reagan's proposals to cut taxes. I have been gratified, however, that the vast majority of North Carolinians from whom I have heard have expressed support for the President's proposals, both as to cutting federal spending and cutting taxes.

For my part, I believe that federal spending can be cut beyond what has been proposed by the President — without harming the truly needy of our society.

TAX CUT — Many North Carolinians, most of them average wage earners, have told me that they would be willing to forego a tax cut if it would help stabilize our economy and stop inflation. But they insist that federal spending must be reduced — and they are right.

If inflation is allowed to continue to climb, the tax cut won't help the average citizen. The real benefit that any tax cut should provide lies in whether small businesses — in fact, businesses in general — will be allowed to retain enough money to increase productivity and create additional jobs.

Any tax cut that doesn't do those two things will do more harm than good.

TRY — It is certainly worth a try. One thing is for sure: The old policy of ever-increasing federal spending and federal debt hasn't worked. It never will. The free enterprise system needs a shot in the arm if it is to survive.

So when you hear political rhetoric about "the poor," just bear in mind that the poor people of our nation have the most to gain if our economy is revitalized and strengthened. If we don't do the job now, we may not get another chance.

Mistake Prompts Withdrawl

I am writing this letter as a caution to all students before preregistration because no one should have to suffer the hardship that I have just experienced.

As a result of one single clerical error in the transfer of my records from General College to the School of Nursing, I have had to withdraw from school. Now I realize this appears to be a severe response to a simple problem, but by no means is this at all elementary. Allow me to clarify the situation.

When I preregistered last semester for spring semester 1981, I was advised to take chemistry 2620 and 2621, and I was advised correctly according to the information in my transcript. However, in the transfer of my records from one department to the other, my credits for CHEM 1160 and 1161 somehow failed to follow. Because of that, I began this semester taking four hours of what I thought were required chemistry courses.

After completing 4 and one-half weeks of school (and 2 chemistry tests), I received a note from the Veteran's Administration office on campus stating that there was a conflict in my courses, and that they needed to see me immediately. Further investigation revealed that I was taking a chemistry course which I had now been given credit for. The disturbing fact about the change in my chemistry status was that it occurred without my knowledge of it.

Here's what happened. The V.A. office received a list of required courses from the School of Nursing. CHEM 2620 and 2621 failed to appear on this list, thus, the conflict. Because I was on a V.A. scholarship, I needed to take a minimum of 12 hours of required courses. This mistake resulted in a drop to 8 hours. After further investigation I was dropped to 2 hours. Obviously I was no longer entitled to full V.A. benefits.

Upon the advice of counselors, and after several hours of tears and thought, I decided to withdraw.

Realize this fact: I acquired all this information in one afternoon. My total lifestyle changed within 24 hours, and I had no control over it.

I am angry at the university because of this mess, but I am also angry at myself. I cannot consciously impute full blame upon the university for my having to withdraw, but I do feel that the university should assume its share of the responsibility. I am paying a high price, both monetarily and emotionally, because of that clerical error. To say that I am devastated would be an understatement.

I'm not saying that the V.A. would not have found a conflict in my schedule if the error had not been made. Needless to say, the matter is complex. However, the principle of the matter is that all of this could have been avoided if the involved departments had their facts straight from the beginning. The university is to be justly condemned for its actions.

Gymnast Upset

The decision has been made, and nothing can be said or done to change the fact that gymnastics has been dropped from the athletic program at ECU. This letter will only serve as a vent for emotions inside of me, that would otherwise go unexpressed about by those people involved in the cutting of our program.

I just cannot believe it. I have been a member of the ECU Women's Gymnastics team for two years and I have watched Coach Jon Rose build a program that, though young, has become one of the strongest division II teams in North Carolina, Washington, D.C., Maryland, Virginia, South Carolina, and Kentucky. We began the 79-80 season with a team score of 103 points, and have developed, this season, into a consistent 120 point team. This weekend we hosted the NCAIAW State meet and won the Division II championship, scoring an all time high of 124.45.

Our seven competing freshmen have done an outstanding job. They comprise 3/4's of our competing team, and have the potential to further their gymnastics development, possibly into national caliber gymnasts. Next year, national competition was definitely within our reach. But now there won't be a next year.

Gymnastics is such a beautiful sport, combining athletics and art. It is such a shame that Mr. Karr did not have the chance to ever view any of our fine young gymnasts in action during our home meets. It is also sad that he couldn't find time to sit in on one of our practice sessions and see how much the sport means to all of those involved with the ECU team. Gymnastics has been a huge part of my life for the past 8 years, and I really cannot imagine what it will be like next year.

Coach Rose, all I can do is thank you for your devotion to our program. It will remain in my mind and the minds of all my teammates forever.

ECU Med School To Begin Genetic Testing

Shortly after she finished college, Vickie knew she wanted to establish herself in a career before she and her husband started a family. By the time she was 33, promotions had put her almost to the top of her corporate ladder, and she and her husband kept saying "maybe next year" when they discussed having a baby. At the back of their minds, however, was the realization that Vickie's biological time clock was ticking away and increasing her chances of having a baby with a congenital defect.

Vickie's name is fictitious, but her situation is similar to that of many couples today who are postponing pregnancy because of career goals and financial considerations. More effective birth control methods make this possible, and couples who are professionally ambitious appreciate being able to control the start of a family. But for women of advanced childbearing age, the stark reality is that pregnancy carries a higher incidence of chromosome abnormalities. The good news is that prenatal tests are available which provide physicians and parents with information on the health of the fetus.

The sophisticated tests are performed in a cytogenetics lab such as the one being established at the East Carolina University School of Medicine. Women in Eastern North Carolina requiring prenatal testing are presently referred to the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, but as early as this spring, many of the procedures will be conducted in the new cytogenetics lab here in the Developmental Evaluation Clinic, a division of the medical school's pediatrics department. The lab will enable ECU to provide advanced genetic services for the state's 33 eastern counties.

Genetic counseling and prenatal tests are routinely recommended for prospective mothers over 35 years old, according to Dr. Theodore Kushnick, professor of pediatrics and DEC director. Although researchers are unable to pinpoint why women over 35 are at an increased risk, statistics do show that they have a one to one and one-half percent risk of having a baby with a chromosome abnormality. After 40, the risk is two to five per cent. For example, the incidence of Down Syndrome increases dramatically for the women over 35 to one in 280, compared to one in 750 for women between 30 and 34 years old.

The main purpose of prenatal testing is to detect abnormalities early enough in gestation so that parents may make an informed decision on interrupting the pregnancy. Kushnick says 98 per cent of the tests show no abnormalities and thus relieve couples of undue anxiety. When a genetic disorder is identified, only 1.7 per cent of parents choose to end the pregnancy. For parents deciding to continue a pregnancy with a known fetal abnormality, the prenatal diagnosis helps them prepare for the arrival of the child and aids the physician in managing the pregnancy.

"When all the statistics are compiled, you realize that we mainly give parents good news," said Kushnick. "For every 100 pregnancies, 98 healthy children are born. For the other parents, we are able to provide them with information to make an informed decision regarding termination."

That information comes from tests conducted in a cytogenetics lab. Under the direction of Dr. Kathleen Rao, the new lab will eventually offer many of the tests that may be used to detect fetal defects. Of the 2,000 genetic abnormalities that have been identified, nearly 500 may be detected before birth.

Basic to testing of the fetus is amniocentesis, a technique for removing a sample of the fluid that surrounds the fetus. Although amniocentesis is not currently performed at ECU for genetic counseling, Dr. Jarlath MacKenna, assistant professor of obstetrics and gynecology, does about 600 procedures a year to evaluate fetal lung maturity. In the future, however, samples of the fluid he obtains will be hand-delivered to Rao and her technicians in the cytogenetics lab for genetic evaluation. The fluid is very delicate, and testing must begin immediately after it is removed.

In the lab the fluid will be spun in a centrifuge to isolate the cells, which are then put in an incubator for 10 to 14 days to encourage growth. From that stage the cells may be manipulated in several ways to aid the study of chromosomes. In preparing slides for the microscope, different stains are employed to assist the technician in counting the chromosomes and studying their shapes and sizes. Images of the chromosomes are cut and pasted into a karyotype, an arrangement of chromosomes that identifies causes of some birth defects.

For example, Down Syndrome, the most prevalent of chromosome abnormalities causing mental retardation, shows up as an extra chromosome in the 21st pair of a total of 47 chromosomes, rather than the normal 46. Edward Syndrome, or Trisomy 18, is identified by the presence of three number 18 chromosomes, a condition that usually causes death before the age of three months. Karyotypes also show balanced translocations of chromosomes in which the proper number is present but some of the genetic material is in the wrong place. In addition, the technique identifies missing pieces of chromosomes and inverted chromosome material.

Neural tube defects in the formation of the skull or spine may also be identified before birth. These defects, which occur about one month after conception, include spina bifida and meningocele, conditions which may be diagnosed by a biochemical test for alpha-fetoprotein. Other specialized laboratory procedures are applied to diagnose other rare genetic disorders.

Another technique is used to identify chromosome abnormalities in children with birth defects and adults with reproductive problems. A blood sample, a non-invasive and less expensive method of genetic screening, may also be used to do a karyotype. If the blood karyotype does not correlate with the symptoms described by the physician, a skin biopsy may be taken to identify suspected defects as well as diagnose metabolic disorders.

Rao and technicians in the cytogenetics lab will select a technique for studying the chromosomes

Occasionally, Insomnia Keeps Everyone Awake

By DAVID NORRIS
Features Editor

"Do you occasionally have trouble getting to sleep?" begins countless numbers TV commercials. Most people would answer yes, if they were one of those who are inclined to talk back to their television sets.

There are all kinds of reasons that keep people from falling asleep when they want to. Some teachers talk so loud in class that they keep everybody awake the whole period. Drinking stuff with caffeine in it all day is a good way to stay up all night, even if you don't want to. Sometimes, for no particular reason, you get one of those nights when you just can't sleep.

To get to sleep, lots of folks have their own personal methods. (Some of these, unfortunately, keep others from getting to sleep).

Some people like to turn up their radio loud when they go to bed, and this lulls them right into dreamland. For everyone else within a hundred-yard radius, though, it lulls them into profanity and threats of violence. It's especially bad in the dorms if one roommate can't stand the music and the other can't sleep with it.

My personal preference is to run an electric fan, letting its pleasant drone put me to sleep. This also serves to drown out whatever noise is around that night keep me awake.

There are problems with using the fan as a form of sedation. It is seasonal, since you can't use it in the winter without freezing yourself. Also, I had a fan once that squeaked so loudly that the noise neutralized the beneficial effects of the fan's hum.

Room temperature is another factor in getting to sleep quickly. Some people like a hot, stuffy room while others like a brisk flow of Arctic air blowing in through an open window. (Some cold air fanatics add an electric fan for both the pleasant hum and the added chill factor of its breeze.) If a cold-air person and a stuffy-room person room together in the dorm, it can cause a lot of trouble.

I find it easier to sleep when I'm not supposed to, like during the afternoons. (I always have liked the Latin American custom of the siesta.) The time I sleep best is in the mornings when I need to be getting up and going to a class or doing some work that I had put off from the day before. It seems like I never toss and turn before getting to sleep again after the alarm clock goes off. It's rough when you have an early exam or important class and spend nearly the entire night staring at the ceiling trying to fall asleep. Two hours of sleep and six hours of fluffing pillows and fidgeting uncomfortably is not the same as eight hours of sleep.

When I was in high school, I was so addicted to westerns that I'd stay up watching them on the late show, even though I had to get up at 7 a.m. for school the next day. I got to see a lot of good westerns that way, but I was in pretty bad shape for most of my classes. It was a common thing for me to doze off frequently during geometry class, even though I sat in the front row right by the teacher's desk.

People have all kinds of remedies for curing insomnia, not the least widespread is excessive drinking before going to bed. Many exponents of this technique reason that, while passing out is not quite that same thing as going to sleep, it's close enough.

UCLA Shirts Selling Big In Japan

UCLA is number one in Japan, in sales of sports clothing and equipment bearing the U. of California-Los Angeles logo is any indication. While American campuswear in general is big abroad, jogging shoes, T-shirts and other items bearing the UCLA symbol are by far the biggest sellers. In fact, sales of Bruin gear in Japan reached $17 million last year.

Underwater Archaeology To Be Studied

Submerged cultural resources in New Bern harbor will be studied this summer during a specialized field school in maritime history and underwater archaeology sponsored by East Carolina University and the N.C. Division of Archives and History.

The five-week program, set to begin May 18, will provide students with an introduction to historical research, American maritime history, and scientific research methods and techniques used in recovering underwater historical data.

Field school survey activities will result in the collection of data for the cultural resource management program administered by the state division's Underwater Archaeology Branch.

According to Dr. William Still of the ECU history faculty, the harbor may hold historic cultural material from the earliest periods of European settlement in North Carolina, since the Craven County town was settled early in the 18th century.

Of particular interest is the possibility that shipwrecks and vessel remains may be "well preserved" beneath the mud and silt of the harbor bottom, he said.

Still, a maritime historian, and underwater archaeologist Gordon Watts will direct the field school. Students participating will attend lectures and workshops to gain practical instruction in such aspects of underwater archaeology as photography, marine architecture, mapping, artifact preservation and cultural resource management.

They will also learn the use of electronic remote sensing equipment and techniques of underwater site testing. Each student who completes the program will receive six hours of graduate or undergraduate level credit.

Tuition and fees for in-state residents will be approximately $387, while non-resident fees will be $673. Included are lab fees and expenses of room rental and meals.

Further information about the field school is available from Dr. William Still Jr., Department of History, ECU, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Rocking The Coliseum Springsteen Dazzles Greensboro Audience

By MIKE HIGHSMITH
Staff Writer

The Boss came, he saw, and he conquered. That is the only way I can describe what happened in Greensboro last Saturday night. Playing to a packed house of psyched-up, hell-raising fans, Bruce Springsteen jammed through two sets of high energy rock and roll for a total of over three and a half hours of music.

He opened the show with his well known rocker "Prove It All Night", and followed that with "When I'm Out On The Streets", and then his ever popular "10th Avenue Freeze Out" where he went out into the audience and played for a few minutes.

Bruce's singing was true to form, and the quality of his music that night sounded as good (if not better) than the music on his albums. One thing that I noticed about Bruce during his performance was the respect he had for each individual member of his audience. He would jump on one of the speakers at the rear of the stage and play for a few minutes for the people behind the stage who couldn't see too well.

I've only seen one other performer do something like that, and that was Stephen Stills with Neil Young, and then he did it again when he came back with Crosby and Nash. This shows me that they enjoy playing to every member of the audience.

Along with showing us what a fine musician he is, Springsteen also displayed the control he had over his audience and his compassion for those people sitting in the back of the auditorium by asking us to sit down and get comfortable for the long show ahead. Everyone followed his suggestion and sat down as he made a short speech about his relations with his father, and then went into the song "Independence Day".

Springsteen didn't stick to just songs he had written himself, but he played an old tune by Creedence Clearwater Revival and a Woody Guthrie song, "This Land Was Made For You And Me", after saying a few things about patriotism. He also played such classic tunes as "CC Rider" and "Good Golly Miss Molly", and he ended the concert with an old Beatle tune, "Twist and Shout".

One of the highlights of the evening came when the whole audience sang the entire first verse to "Hungry Heart", which sent chills up my spine. All Bruce did while we sang was stick the microphone out to the audience so that we could hear ourselves. I have not seen audience participation of that magnitude since every person in the auditorium helped Crosby, Stills, and Nash sing every word to "Teach Your Children", which brought tears to my eyes.

Another highlight came when a young girl made her way onto the stage, gave Bruce a big kiss, and danced with him on stage for a couple of minutes. Another girl tried that very same thing but she was pulled off stage by a roadie.

Bruce ended his first set with "Thunder Road", took a 25 minute break, and came back to start his second set with "Cadillac Ranch", "Sherri Darling", "Hungry Heart", "Fire", "Look But You Better Not Touch", "Sandy" and "I Came For You", as well as his other classic tunes, "Wreck On The Highway", "Racing In The Streets", "Candy's Room", and "Rosalita".

I had always heard that Springsteen put some energy into his performances, but I didn't expect him to almost kill himself for us. At one point during an encore song, he collapsed on stage as the whole audience went wild. He laid there spread eagle on stage for a minute, then Clarence Clemmons picked him back up to finish the song.

For his first encore he did "I'm A Rocker", and then went into "Jungle Land". His second (and last) encore lasted over thirty minutes, starting with one of his most famous songs, "Born To Run". He then went into a five song medley starting with "Devil With The Blue Dress" and ended the show with "Twist And Shout".

The last 20 minutes of the show was played with the house lights on. It was then that the entire crowd could see how much everyone was into the show. After that last song, when everyone knew it was over, I could hardly move. My body was drained of every bit of strength. I can imagine how Bruce felt. I am looking forward to the next time he comes to North Carolina, you can bet that I'll be the first one in the ticket line, because it is worth every penny.

Last Saturday night, Bruce Springsteen dazzled a sell-out crowd in the Greensboro Coliseum with a over three and a half hours of rock and roll.

Art News: Senior Show, Lecture

Art work in various media by Ann Davis of Raleigh, senior student in the East Carolina University School of Art, is on display in Mendenhall Student Center through March 8.

Her exhibition, which includes graphic designs, photographs, and batik and tie-dyed fabric works, is entitled "The Brass Ring."

Miss Davis is a candidate for the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in communication arts with a minor concentration in fabric design. She is president of Design Associates, an ECU School of Art student organization, and a member of the art school's Visual Arts Forum.

Upon graduation she plans to pursue a career in graphic design and advertising.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Davis of 5040 Kaplan Drive, Raleigh.

Color—its use in historical interiors, its modern applications and its psychological effects—were discussed by writer-editor Margaret Walch of Albuquerque, N.C., at an East Carolina University interior design program Feb. 21.

Ms. Walch was the featured speaker at the 1981 Rally of the Carolinas Chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers.

She is a former London correspondent and current associate editor of "American Fabrics and Fashions" and author of "The Color Source Book" (Scribner's, 1979).

Other speakers were Don McKerron and Judith Marsh from the Atlanta design firm McKerron, Walker and Graham, discussing the variety of materials and furnishings available today. The annual rally included a chapter board meeting, discussion sessions, an address by ECU School of Art faculty member Melvin Stanforth and a reception at the home of ECU Chancellor and Mrs. Thomas Brewer.

One hundred interior design professionals and students from the Carolinas attended.

ECU Med School To Begin Genetic Testing

based on the physician's diagnosis and description of the patient's family history. "The major thrust of genetic counseling is diagnosis," said Rao during an interview in the lab. "We can't tell parents the risk of having a child with a genetic defect until we know the cause of the problem. Usually in prenatal diagnosis we look for everything, but there are still many problems that can't be identified by the tests."

"This is extremely specialized work, and we have to place a lot of emphasis on detail because some deletions may be so tiny. Because of the important consequences of error, our equipment must be working perfectly and strict quality control standards must be maintained."

Rao said blood samples and skin biopsies will be the first tests performed in the lab, and she noted that amniotic fluid studies will begin when the lab is fully staffed. In addition to Kishnick, Rao and MacKenna, the ECU genetics team also includes Dr. Sudesh Kataria, assistant professor of pediatrics and primary genetic counselor, and Dr. Charles E. Boklage, an assistant professor of microbiology and genetics who is responsible for statistical risk assessment. Boklage, an internationally known expert on genetic characteristics of twins, coordinated the development of the lab.

The Miller Reclamation Program scheduled during the Fall Semester of 1980 was rewarding for the registered organizations who competed in our Pick 'Em Up program.

The Alpha Zeta Delta Sorority qualified for the Grand Prize in the open division and selected the cash sum of $1,000.00.

Points were awarded for Miller cans and bottles (where legal) turned in each week. Bottles were awarded one (1) point per pound, and aluminum cans were awarded ten (10) points per pound.

In addition, each organization could have received the current cash market value per pound of all aluminum cans turned in each week.

In the fraternity division, the Sigma Tau Gamma fraternity qualified for the Grand Prize and selected the cash sum of $1,000.00. The Kappa Alpha fraternity and the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity qualified for the Runners-Up Prizes and both selected the cash sum of $500.00.

Prizes were awarded in January 1981 to the winning organizations. The Miller Brewing Company would like to thank all the organizations who competed in our Fall 1980 Miller Reclamation Contest.

NEW MILLER COLLEGE RECLAMATION PROGRAM

Here's how your campus organization could have won exciting prizes, such as stereos, wide screen TV's, and other valuable prizes. Not only that, but cash could have been collected on a weekly basis. Any recognized campus organization was eligible to participate (NO PURCHASE NECESSARY).

Groups competed in two divisions for grand prize: the Fraternity (included all Fraternities) and the Open Division (included all Sororities, dormitories, and other campus organizations). The top finisher in each division won a choice of a grand prize (eligible for a super grand prize if the point requirement is met). Regardless of division, the next three top groups with the highest point totals won an exciting runner-up prize.

To be eligible to have won a prize, a group must have reached a pre-determined minimum point level as follows: Super Grand — 7,500 points; Grand — 3,000 points; and Runner-Up — 1,500 points.

The Miller Pick 'Em Up Program ended one week before final exams commence and winners were notified immediately thereafter.

Prizes were awarded at the beginning of January 1981.

Lady Bucs Take 3rd After Upset

By CHARLES CHANDLER

CHAPEL HILL — East Carolina's 17th-ranked women's basketball team came back from a heartbreaking loss Tuesday night to North Carolina in the semi-finals of the NCAA championship tournament to annihilate Appalachian State Wednesday in the consolation round to keep its hopes of a regional berth alive.

The Lady Bucs watched a first-half 11-point lead fade away Tuesday as UNC used some strong inside play to down ECU, 89-83.

The Lady Pirates got back on track against the Lady Apps, though, in rolling to a 103-40 consolation win.

N.C. State's 16th-ranked Lady Wolfpack won the tourney, the team's sixth straight state championship, by defeating Carolina 70-50 in Wednesday's title game.

State's Trudi Lacey was named the tourney's most valuable player and headed up an all-tourney team that included two Pack teammates, Ginger Rouse and Angie Armstrong, along with UNC's Henrietta Walls and ECU's Kathy Riely.

Riely had a fantastic tourney, scoring 62 points despite playing a total of only 44 minutes in the two games combined. The latter figure is only four minutes over the regulation 40 minutes that make up a single contest.

The senior all-state performer was the big star in last night's rout of ASU, scoring 35 points in only 20 minutes of action. During one stretch early in the second-half Riely scored 13 points in two and a half minutes.

The Lady Pirates took third place in the tournament with aggressive defense and consistent offense.

It was the defense, though, that was most impressive. ECU held the Lady Apps to but two field goals in the entire second half. During the second period Appalachian an incredibly pitiful 8.3 percent from the floor.

On the other hand, the Lady Bucs were fancying their way to their 23rd win against six defeats. One school record was set and another tied in the process while two others

Four Pirates Chosen

Seniors Kathy Riely of East Carolina and Trudi Lacey of N.C. State the only unanimous choices to the 1980-81 NCAA Division I first team, as voted by the six coaches.

Joining Riely and Lacey on the first team were ECU senior center Marcia Girven, Duke senior forward Barb Krause and North Carolina sophomore forward Kathy Crawford.

The second team was composed of Pirate senior guards Laurie Sikes and Lydia Rountree, Appalachian State junior forward Muriel Higginbotham, N.C. State sophomore guard Angie Armstrong and North Carolina senior guard Aprille Shaffer.

Senior point guard Laurie Sikes equalled her own school record for assists in a single game, dishing out 14. Lydia Rountree had four steals in the win to eclipse Rosie Thompson's career mark of 176. Rountree now has 177.

Riely's 35 points are only four shy of Thompson's single game mark of 39, set on two different occasions.

Following the contest Lady Buc coach Cathy Andruzzi said she was very proud of her club's efforts, especially since the win came after such a disappointing loss as the one to UNC.

"I thought we played an absolutely great game," she said. "We showed a lot of class, poise and want after losing in the semi-finals."

Andruzzi said the club had been very upset following the Tuesday loss.

"We were all very hurt," she claimed. "The girls were really out of it. Nobody was talking. Everybody was just real silent. After seeing the way we played tonight, though, I have to be very proud. This was really a great comeback from the loss."

The third-year ECU coach said she feels confident of her team's chances of receiving a bid to the regionals of the AIAW championship tournament. She refused to believe that the loss to UNC eliminated those chances.

"Our regional chances are like this," she said just prior to the UNC-NCSU title game. "If State beats Carolina tonight they are real good."

Of course, the Pack did go on to down the Tar Heels rather impressively.

"We've been ranked for four weeks," Andruzzi said. "and have the best record in the state. We're the only team with 20 wins in North Carolina."

"I we don't go to the regionals," she continued, "it would be like N.C. State beating North Carolina in the ACC (men's) tournament and Carolina not getting a bid to the NCAA's. The reason they have at-large bids is in case of upsets like ours last night."

Regional bids are announced Sunday at 7 p.m.

The Lady Bucs started off the semi-final matchup with the Heels in fine fashion, their lead reaching a peak of 11 points when Lydia Rountree hit a jumper to put ECU up 29-18 with 6:32 remaining before intermission.

Carolina fought back, though, and narrowed the Buc margin to 42-38 by the half.

ECU's lead was back up to ten, at 50-40, in the second half when Rountree connected on another jumper with 16:01 remaining.

The Heels outscored the Bucs 19-7 over the next four and a half minutes, though, to take a 59-57 lead.

ECU came back and regained the lead when Riely canned a bank shot with 3:50 remaining to put her team up, 78-77.

Riely fouled out seconds later, though, as UNC began to smell victory. With Riely out, the Bucs lost momentum as UNC rode on to victory.

Compete In Florida Invitational

Softball Team Set For Opener

By WILLIAM YELVERTON
Assistant Sports Editor

Okay, sports fans, get out your pencils and paper, and get ready for Spring Sports Quiz No. 1.

Question No. 1: What is the winning team in the history of East Carolina sports?

Question 2: What team won the State Division I Crown, the State Open Division championship and the Region II tournament, only to be stopped because there was no national tournament to participate in?

Question 3: What team defeated N.C. State six times in the same season?

If you answered all the above questions with the 1980 East Carolina Women's Softball team, you get an A.

Last season was a great one for the Lady Pirates. The team finished the season with a 37-5 record, and capped off the record-breaking year by defeating Northern Kentucky to win the Region II tournament held at Graham, N.C. The only thing that stopped the Lady Bucs receiving national attention was the fact that there was no national tournament to participate in.

The Lady Pirates will work very hard to equal last year's accomplishments, says head coach Alita Dillon. "There will be no excuse for not performing well," she insists.

The team opens the season tomorrow when they travel to Florida to participate in the Florida Invitational with Auburn, Florida State, Florida, South Florida and Central Florida.

Dillon has high hopes for the season. "I'm super optimistic about this year," she says. "Our girls have more confidence this year because everyone knows we are the team to beat. The talent is tremendous."

Indeed it is. Returning this year are five All-State performers: left fielder Kathy Riely, first baseman Shirley Brown, short fielder Yvonne Williams, shortstop Mary Powell and second baseman Ginger Rothermel.

Riely led last year's squad in hitting with a .588 average, a club record, and also set school marks with 59 RBIs and 12 homers. Catcher Fran Hooks was another outstanding performer, as she hit .414 and had a fielding percentage of .900 compared to Riely's .996.

Riely and Hooks, as well as outfielders Lillian Barnes and Lydia Rountree, will not be with the team for a couple of more weeks because of basketball. Rountree is in her first season with the team.

Dillon said that basketball season should be a definite advantage for these players. "They'll probably be out another three weeks, but when they return they'll be in good shape. For them, playing softball will be a slow-down compared to what they were doing. Riely and Hooks are excellent players."

The Lady Bucs face a big challenge in replacing hurler Mary Bryan Carlyle, who pitched every game in state and regional tournament competition. "No one is going to do a mirror job on Mary," Dillon said, "but we have two pitchers in freshman Jeanette Roth and sophomore Angie Humphrey who both have done well in the preseason. Angie will benefit from the experience she gained last season."

The entire outfield returns for the Lady Bucs this season. Center fielder Mitzi Davis, Williams and right fielder Cynthia Shephard give the team a heavy-hitting threesome to go along with the all-everything Riely.

This year's squad has a good mixture of veteran and younger players. According to Dillon, freshman Jo Landa Clayton will see action in the infield, probably at third or short. "We have a whole lot of talent, but we also have some real good freshman recruits," Dillon said. "Rountree has never played here before, but she will get some playing time this year."

Dillon looks for the defense to hold this year's squad together. "The infield and outfield are intact," she said, "and Clayton will make us even stronger when she plays third."

Last season's team set a ton of school records, such as hitting at a .355 clip, belting 28 home runs and having a .903 fielding percentage. The team may be hitting better in the preseason this year than last, Dillon pointed out.

Speed is another important area for this year's squad. Speed merchants include freshman Melody Ham and Williams, whose nickname is "Flea." Dillon said that Shephard has good speed, as does most of the outfield.

The veteran infield consists of Brown, Rothermel, Maureen Buck at third and Powell. Brown set a school record with her 191 putouts, as did Powell with her 85 assists.

Dillon said that this season's schedule is a tough one. "We're cutting down on playing Division II teams," she pointed out, "and we also are playing a round robin tournament at N.C. State."

The round robin is one of the reasons the Lady Bucs only have four games. Dillon said that the tournament takes care of some of the home and away games.

The only reason the team's season ended early last year was because there was no national tournament. Well, this year there is, and that will probably mean trouble for any team that tries to get in the Lady Pirates' way if they have a season compared to last year's.

Veteran Clowar Fights Adversity

By BOB BENSON
ECU Sports Information

He went from competing in the Cherry Bowl to competing in the NCAA finals. He's East Carolina University's ace sprinter, Jack Clowar.

The Cherry Bowl, for those who are not familiar with it, is a swim meet held in Cherry Hill, NJ for the youth of the town.

At the ripening age of 12, Clowar was already turning heads, as he was crowned champion of the 100 yard freestyle and 200 yard individual medley at the Cherry Bowl swim meet.

From that level of competition, Clowar moved up a talent notch and joined the AAU affiliated Jersey Wahos. While with the Jersey Wahos, Clowar kept heads turning as he placed second in the state in both the 200 and 500 yard freestyle. Along with his swimming honors, Clowar also collected the South Jersey Diving Championship.

At this point, Clowar really began to make waves on the swimming scene. His swimming talent was churning up questions: Who is this Clowar kid? Is he worth recruiting?

These questions were quickly answered as Clowar enrolled at North Carolina State University and started swimming for the Wolfpack. Once involved in collegiate swimming, Clowar's times dropped considerably. He became an important element on the Wolfpack swim team.

Although his times were steadily improving, Clowar was still not receiving any scholarship money. Dissatisfied with NCSU, he began looking for a collegiate team that would offer a scholarship.

Clowar approached East Carolina University head coach Ray Scharf in 1977, and presented a record of times he had compiled while at NCSU.

Scharf offered grant money in return for Clowar's swimming abilities. When the head coach at NCSU heard of the grant offer made by the Pirates, he confronted Clowar with a grant offer of his own. A decision had to be made.

"I was faced with a tough decision," explains Clowar. "I wasn't sure whether to stay at NCSU or should I transfer and swim at East Carolina."

Clowar's decision was not easy, but two factors played a big role in his decision.

"My brother was coming to East Carolina, and I also knew ECU had a lot of good sprinters," he states.

While at NCSU, his times had dropped considerably in the shorter distances, and Clowar thought he could add to ECU's already impressive team of sprinters.

Not only was Clowar academically pleased with his decision to transfer, but he also got the chance to team up with such exceptional swimmers as John Tudor, Bill Fehling and Ted Nieman. Clowar teamed with these three in the 400 yard freestyle relay in the NCAA Nationals in 1979.

"It was great being on that relay team," explains Clowar. "We just blew people out of the pool."

The following summer, Clowar traveled to southern California to work out with Olympic coach Peter Daland.

"The height of my really being in shape was when I swam out in southern California in the summer," he says.

While in California, Clowar missed Olympic swimming cutoff times by nine-tenths of a second. Upon returning from that adventure, Clowar began to notice a pain in his shoulders.

"The pain became so intense I couldn't even get my arm in my jacket," said Clowar. He visited many doctors looking for the answer to his problem. All the doctors prescribed the same thing: 'stay out of the water.'

"I went through all kinds of treatments: ultrasound, ice treatment and anti-inflammation drugs, but nothing seemed to work," he states.

Clowar, following doctors orders, sat out until Jan. 12, 1980.

"I became fed up with things. Things were not getting any better," he explains. "Finally I decided I'd rather have my arm fall off than not swim."

Clowar worked hard for seven weeks before the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships.

"I had to drop my best event, the 200 yard individual medley, which I was first in by two seconds, and pick up the 50 yard freestyle which I was seeded 15th in," said Clowar.

As the results in the 50 yard freestyle came in Jack Clowar's name emerged in the number one spot. Clowar had won the 50 yard freestyle. It was some comeback year, but 1981 is the year for Clowar to shine.

He is now six-tenths of a second away from the NCAA National Championship cutoff times. With two meets left to prove himself, Clowar is confident he will make the cutoff times.

"At Easterns I'll shave, so that should give me the boost I need to get the cutoff times," he explains.

Scharf is confident that Clowar will make the cut. "Jack is an outstanding swimmer," says Scharf. He is a member of all the record holding relay teams. He holds varsity records in the 100 yard backstroke (53.7), 100 yard butterfly (50.7), and the 200 yard individual medley (1:54.00)."

Scharf expressed a feeling of reliability in Clowar both in and out of the pool.

"If I put him in a race and tell him we need the points, he comes through for us," the veteran ECU coach states.

"He is the kind of swimmer you need to go to the top. If he puts it all together, he could be our first Division I All-America."

Booters Get Mixed Results

North Carolina Soccer League
Both Greenville teams traveled to Wilson last Sunday to play Mid-East Division matches, but they came home with opposite results.

The ECU Varsity Soccer Team, which picked up the sponsorship of the American Defender Insurance Co., soundly defeated the Wilson Soccer Club 3-0.

The Defender's tallied once in the first half as they worked the ball down the field with the final pass coming from Brad Winchell to his twin brother Brian who pushed the ball in to the net.

In the second half,

David Hayes beat the goalie with a left-footed shot from 18 yards out. Shawn Berry booted in the other goal as the American Defender's remained undefeated with a 3-0 record.

The Stroh's Aliens played Atlantic Christian, the only other undefeated team in the Mid-East Division, and were defeated by a 3-1 margin. The Aliens played a tough match against last season's District 29 (NAIA) champions with their goal coming on a well-placed penalty kick by Rico Piva.

Men's Rugby

The ECU Men's Rugby Club played two

Club Sport Review

BY TIM WILLIAMS

matches last Saturday against the tough, well-established Cape Fear Rugby Club. Both matches, held in Wilmington, yielded comparative results. The A-team lost by a 30-6 margin while the B-team was defeated 16-7.

The ECU Rugby Club is one of only three clubs in the state made up totally of college students, and there is usually a high turnover of players each season. Even so, four players (Keith Dixon, Omar Rafei, Pete Dockery, and Doug Reid) have been chosen to compete for the Collegiate Select Side in a match in Winston-Salem March 15. They were chosen in tryouts at Duke University by the N.C. Rugby Union Select Side Committee.

Women's Rugby

The ECU Women's Rugby Club won a "clinic" game against the Appalachian State Women's Rugby Club by a 28-8 margin. They played 30 minute halves instead of the regular 40 minutes.

The girls next play in a double match on March 21 in Greensboro against UNC-G and Reedy Creek Rugby Club of Raleigh. The next home match is April 11 against UNC-G.

Field Hockey

The Field Hockey Club has completed fund-raising activities with the selling of basketball programs at women's basketball games. There will be a Field Hockey Club meeting after spring break. All interested persons are encouraged to attend or contact Debbie Harrison at 756-5181.

Women's Soccer

Practice has begun in the spring season. Practice is held at the ECU soccer field on Monday and Thursday at 4:30 p.m. All interested girls are urged to attend. The team is registered in the North Carolina Women's Soccer League and their first match is against Wilmington on March 28.

Team Handball

The men's and women's Team Handball Clubs are now preparing for the West Point Tournament scheduled for March 28-29 at the U.S. Military Academy. Interested students should contact Bob Fox in the Intramural Office or Stuart Briley.

KENTUCKY:

Young And Strong

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Louisiana State's basketball team better make the most of this year's opportunities because one gets the feeling that the Bengals next year are going to be back playing second-fiddle to Kentucky.

Dale Brown, the Bengals coach, may disagree. But it's hard to see how LSU can lose four of its top six players — including All-Southeastern Conference performers Durand Macklin and Ethan Martin — and still keep pace with the Wildcats who have been playing their only senior, Fred Cowan, about half the time. Brown has said all along that this should be LSU's year and the Bengals current 27-2 record (which included a 26-game winning streak) and No. 3 national ranking supports that claim.

"This team has given me hope in youth again," said Brown who has seen LSU's cage record improve in all but one of the eight years he's been at Baton Rouge. "This is the most fun I've had all along. This is a team totally without problems. They aren't statistic seekers, but winners."

Martin, recognized

as one of the best playmaking guards in college basketball today, says this LSU team is better than the one that won the Southeastern Conference regular-season championship in 1979 and better than last year when the Bengals were ranked No. 2 in the nation.

"We're more together this year," said Martin. "We're not concerned with who's the leading scorer, who's the leading rebounder, who's getting the most publicity. We're just in the game to win."

But next season, LSU will be playing without Macklin, voted the SEC player of the year; without Martin; without center Greg Cook who ranks among the best big defensive players in the league; and without Willie Sims, billed as "the best sixth man in college basketball."

On the other hand, Kentucky, ranked No. 8 and 22-4 after beating

LSU (73-71) this past Sunday in Lexington, returns virtually intact and Wildcats Coach Joe Hall sees even better days ahead.

"Our young squad (eight of the top 10 are sophomores or freshmen) has greatly improved over the season," said Hall. "The improvement came with experience. The younger players have a season behind them now and are beginning to learn what it's all about."

Hall wanted to use Bowie and 7-foot freshman Melvin Turpin in a double post this season — just like he did with Rick Robey and Mike Phillips three seasons ago when the Wildcats won their fifth NCAA championship.

Golf Event Taking Entries

The A. R. Conley of the American Marketing Association is inviting ECU students and faculty to play in the Four-Man Captain's Choice Superball Golf Tournament at the Brook Valley Country Club on Thursday April 16.

To be eligible, you must be an ECU student or part of the ECU staff or faculty.

Applications can be picked up at the Department of Marketing and Management at the School of Business and must be turned in to that department before the March 20 deadline. The tournament is limited to the first 80 entries.

There is an entry fee of $20.

Teams will be chose by handicaps. The top three teams will receive gift certificates from the pro shop at Brook Valley.
