Raising Legal Drinking Age Unfair To Many

By MIKE HUGHES
Staff Writer

Though a joint resolution currently before the North Carolina state legislature proposes studying the results of raising the legal drinking age for beer and wine to 21, there are no proposals for reviewing the adverse effects of such a change.

When a similar proposal to raise the drinking age arose in Georgia in 1980, a group of universities in the state conducted its own study entitled "Arguments Against Raising the Legal Drinking Age (AARLDA)." This study cited facts in support of its proposal to keep the drinking age at 18.

"The whole idea is to try and keep alcohol out of the high schools," says Steve Koval, student body president of Atlanta's Emory University. "Raising the legal drinking age to 19 would accomplish this.

So why penalize the 19 and 20 year olds by raising it to 21?

"National research showed that raising the drinking age does not keep alcohol out of the high schools," Koval said.

The Georgia study points to eight states which have raised their legal drinking ages since 1979. "The trend of our sister states seems to favor raising the age to 19, not 21," the study revealed.

Not only would a raise in the drinking age affect persons aged 18 to 20, but the AARLDA reports that restaurants, package stores and bars would also suffer.

"Effects on these businesses will be significant," the report said, "with resulting loss of tax revenue to the state."

The Georgia study, which was presented to that state's General Assembly last year, also proposed alternative methods of battling teenage alcohol abuse, such as making alcohol education mandatory in the state's schools. Other suggestions were to encourage greater parental responsibility for teenage children, and to increase enforcement of current laws regarding the legal drinking age.

The AARLDA states that the major cause of increasing alcohol abuse is not the lowered drinking ages in many states but changes in social standards and increasing pressures.

"It is unfair and inconsistent that the law makes 18-to-20-year-olds responsible for their actions as adults in so many ways while this bill would say that they are incompetent to have a glass of beer," the study said.

ECU Students Attend Peace Assembly

By PATRICK O'NEILL
Staff Writer

Forty-five North Carolina residents, including five people from East Carolina, recently attended a "peace pilgrimage" in Richmond, Va. The event was the annual assembly of Pax Christi, an international organization that works on peace- and justice-oriented issues.

The possibility of a nuclear war was the major concern of most participants. "As far as focus on issues go, this one needs a solution and there's no solution anywhere in sight," said John Gardner, an administrator in the ECU division of Student Life who attended the meet. "I have yet to see a solution that would be acceptable to the American people."

"Given the current trends, it's basically inevitable — not because people are malicious — it's just that I don't think they perceive the end result of where we're headed," Gardner said.

Gardner's comments followed a similar line as those of peace activist Daniel Berrigan during his recent visit to North Carolina. Berrigan stated that the United States had five years to address the nuclear war issue or be confronted by such a war.

The Pax Christi assembly held workshops on disarmament strategies, "just world order," conscience and the draft and "non-violent conflict resolution."

"It was a very positive experience," noted ECU mass communications student Katty Kazar. "I liked the idea that so many people are involved in peace issues."

Concern about the nuclear weapons issue has been growing lately in many circles and across some political lines. "The recent developments in western Europe show that many other people around the world are also quite concerned about nuclear proliferation and the renewed arms race," Gardner said.

Gardner was referring to the series of anti-nuclear weapons demonstrations that have attracted almost one million people in numerous western European cities.

Kazar said she was skeptical of the views of the peace conference when she arrived in Richmond. "I felt that I held a different view — that we've got to protect ourselves in any way possible — then I realized what the harm was," Kazar said.

"I asked questions and I got answers," she explained. "What I realized was that the Soviets were human beings, too. We wouldn't be bombing just another country — we'd be bombing other human beings just like us. When it comes right down to it, it's not going to matter who uses them (nuclear weapons). Nobody can win."

"It was real encouraging to see that many people out

(at the assembly)," Gardner said. "People from as far away as Nebraska and Minnesota — they all didn't come across like radicals."

The North Carolina contingent was also impressive to Gardner. "Getting 45 North Carolinians to give up a weekend for a cause shows a certain amount of dedication," he said. "It was educational. We learned a lot."

Recently statements concerning the possibilities of a limited nuclear war have been surfacing from officials in Washington. When asked for his opinion about limited nuclear war, Gardner said, "The more they (government officials) think it's possible, the more likely it is that we will have one."

Gardner said he saw a greater danger from nuclear war in other areas. "I see the biggest problem in poten-

Plan Developed To Strengthen Off-Campus Housing Program

By SAFARI MATHENGE
Staff Writer

Plans are being developed to strengthen the existing off-campus housing program, according to the office in charge of off-campus housing, non-traditional and foreign students and commuters.

The program was initiated this early this year by the division of Student Life to help non-resident students find suitable housing in Greenville and the surrounding areas.

"A lot of students don't know that this office exists and that they can come to us and get instant information on off-campus housing," said Dr. Lucie Wright in an interview with The East Carolinian.

Wright is the assistant to the vice chancellor for Student Life.

"There is a lot of information on housing that can be found here," Wright said. "Landlords and people looking for roommates come here and tell us about their houses. We have listings of vacant houses and rooms, plus we offer request forms for those who are looking for preferential roommates (non-smokers, non-drinkers, etc.)."

East Carolina's residence halls only have a capacity of not more than 5,582 students. At present, of the 13,264 students that enrolled at ECU this fall, only 5,447 student live in the dormitories.

"The rest live in Greenville and surrounding areas," Wright adds. "If we knew what their needs were and can identify them, then this office could more effectively help them in their search," Wright says.

Plans are also underway that will develop activity programs for the non-traditional students. These are students age 25 or older who return after discontinuing their college education. Last year the student body had 2600 such students, one of them 72 years old, according to Wright.

"Sometimes these students come to school feeling awkward or a little out of place," Wright says. "We like to help them meet each other."

ROSE (Returning Older Students in Education) is a student organization geared to provide the special attention that non-traditional students may need.

Security Relocating This Week

By GREG RIDEOUT
Staff Writer

The Campus Security and Traffic Office will close at 4 p.m. this afternoon. It will reopen at its new location, 1001 East Fifth Street, on November 2.

Police operations will continue at the present location until October 30. Traffic tickets given out after this date will not be able to be paid until November 2.

The 72 hour-grace period, which enables the traffic violator to pay a half-price fine, will be excluded during this period. It will begin again on Monday, November 2.

The new offices are located in Howard House across from the Spilman Building.

UNC President William C. Friday

Anniversary For President

Friday Celebrates 25 Years

CHAPEL HILL (UPI) — William C. Friday celebrated his 25th anniversary Monday as president of the University of North Carolina system, a milestone symbolizing his status as one of the nation's premier educators and one of the state's master politicians.

Friday, now 61, took office as the youngest state university president in the nation. He has lasted longer than anyone else, masterminding a 16-campus system with 117,000 students and a $950 million budget.

To do that, he has had to please and sometimes soothe what he calls the eight publics: the alumni, parents, Legislature, students, faculty, administrators, staff and press, all constituencies that must be dealt with separately — and successfully.

His only equal in stature in UNC's history is Frank Porter Graham, the fiery liberal who ran the university in the 1930s and 1940s and championed causes such as integration and labor unions.

But Graham's style won him the kind of enemies Friday has avoided through an unwillingness to take sides until necessary and a thorough knowledge of the state's political climate.

"Bill Friday is extremely conscious of the pulse of the political leaders of North Carolina," said William Aycock, a law professor and former chancellor of UNC's Chapel Hill campus. "He's not going to alienate the leadership."

To gain that knowledge, Friday has built what many believe is the best intelligence network in North Carolina.

"He knows what is politically feasible at any given time," said John L. Sanders, director of the Institute of Government and a former UNC vice president.

Friday also is talented at stroking egos and making all feel important.

"If he gave you two minutes, you felt like he had given you an hour," said the Rev. Robert Summey, a Baptist minister in Gastonia who grew up with Friday.

Born in 1920 in his mother's hometown of Raphine, Va., Friday grew up in the Gaston County town of Dallas. His father was vice president of a textile manufacturing firm in the county.

Friday worked well with people, winning the presidency of his high school class. He also excelled in debate and athletics.

He started his college education at Wake Forest College, but soon transferred to what is now North Carolina State University to major in textile engineering and win the senior class presidency by one vote.

After serving in World War II as a Navy lieutenant loading ammunition in Virginia, he went to Law School in Chapel Hill. In 1948, while his wife worked on a master's degree, he was hired as assistant dean of students.

Friday befriended Graham and rose quickly through the ranks. In 1956 he succeeded Gordon Gray as president of UNC.

Friday said he never intended to remain president of UNC for a quarter of a century.

"I think it's too long, I really do, for the health of an institution," he said. But then he mentioned several struggles he became involved in over the years and ended it by saying: "There just was never an appropriate time to walk away."

Oktoberfest Is Celebrated On Wednesday

By KRISTINA VASQUEZ Staff Writer

East Carolina's International Language Organization is sponsoring an Oktoberfest which will be held in the Mendenhall Multipurpose Room Wednesday from 6:30 p.m. until 10:30 p.m.

The Oktoberfest began in the early 19th century, and it was a surprise birthday party for a young princess who was the wife of the reigning monarch. It has been tradition ever since, and it is celebrated in Bavaria and Munich, Germany.

The celebration consists of two parts; the first of these is held in large tents, and is attended by thousands of people. Inside the tents everyone socializes while drinking beer and eating various wursts. This acts as a prelude to the second part — the carnival. This second part is enjoyed as much by the older people as it is by the young children.

Much like the Oktoberfest held annually in Germany, there will be food and music Wednesday night. A few of the foods that will be served are knockwurst, german rolls, potato salad, and creamy deserts. The "Schmutzgies" will provide the music vital to good drinking songs, and they will play from 7:30 p.m. until 10:30 p.m.

Tickets must be presented at the door. If you do not have your ticket, they may be picked up for free at the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall, the Foreign Language Department in Brewster A-431, or any member of ILO.

Tickets are going quickly.

Artworks Presented

The watercolor works of Walter Anderson, twentieth-century Mississippi painter, will be the focus of a slide presentation and interpretive talk by Susan V. Donaldson on Thursday, Oct. 29, at 4 p.m. in room 244 of the Mendenhall Student Center. Donaldson's slide-talk is the first of a series of programs sponsored by the English Department's Quality of Instruction Committee.

Walter Anderson, a reclusive painter of astonishingly prolific power, is well known in the New Orleans area and in Mississippi and Tennessee. His approximately 8,000 watercolors, many of which were discovered only after his death, are drawing increasing notice from critics and scholars outside his native Mississippi.

Trained at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in the 1920's, Anderson studied briefly in France, where he was strongly drawn to the prehistoric cave paintings at Las Eyzies. Eventually, he produced murals, block prints, sculpture and drawings, as well as watercolors, and was associated with the family-owned Shearwater Pottery in Ocean Springs, Mississippi.

Anderson is best known for his incandescence, representational watercolors of the landscapes, seascapes, flora and fauna of the Mississippi Gulf coast and the barrier islands, especially Horn Island, where he worked from 1948 until his death in 1965. Professor Donaldson will include passages from Anderson's Horn Island Logs in her talk.

Professor Donaldson, a Georgia native and a specialist in American Studies, is one of six scholar-consultants to the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts for the Painting in the South exhibition which will open in Richmond in 1983. Two of her recent presentations are: "The Pastoral Vision of Walter I. Anderson," delivered at the College Art Association meeting in New Orleans, 1980, and "Meditations by the Sea: Seascapes by Walt Whitman and Martin Johnson Heade," delivered at the Southern College Art Conference in Oxford, Mississippi, 1981. Her dissertation on romanticism and pastoralism in twentieth-century Southern literature and painting is in preparation for the American Civilization Program at Brown University.

There will be a discussion period following the presentation and Donaldson will provide a browsing library of exhibition catalogues and other materials relating to Anderson.

tial for an accidental nuclear war or being sucked into a third-party war that could escalate to the nuclear level."

The Pentagon's MAD (Mutually Assured Destruction) policy, which states that no reasonable nation would consider a nuclear first strike because the result would be suicide, does not reassure Gardner. "At some point one of the countries will see their deterrence as inadequate. If we lose faith in our deterrence we may decide to successfully mount a first strike," he says.

I really don't believe you can trust the Russians," Gardner adds. "That's why it's such a nasty problem." "Our only option is disarmament and trying to get the government to realize this (is our only option)," Kazar says. "I feel it's a sad situation when people don't know what's going on around them," she added.

Gardner hopes that non-violent alternatives will be studied and considered. "There's lots of money available for figuring out how to build more weapons, but we sure don't pay enough people to work for peace," he says. "The coward's way out is to build more and bigger nuclear weapons."

Both Gardner and Kazar suggested concrete steps they believed should be taken to resolve the buildup of nuclear arms. "I plan on getting involved in the Greenville Peace Committee and working with a state-level disarmament group," Kazar said.

"I want to study this more," Gardner added. "But we need to go ahead and unilaterally start a freeze in the production of new nuclear weapons." Gardner has also laid the groundwork for a local chapter of Pax Christi to work on the nuclear weapons issue.

"More interest in stopping the arms race or alleviating world hunger — than in swallowing goldfish — would be an improvement around here."

"I would like to see more students get actively involved in con-

AWACS

U.S. Arms Sales Unnecessary

Should the United States sell five AWACS surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia?

The debate over this question has now stretched over two months while politicians, Pentagon officials and editorial writers have argued for and against the sale from almost every conceivable angle.

President Reagan and others who support the sale argue that it is necessary to maintain friendly relations with the Saudis. Most opponents argue that the United States should not sell strategic weaponry to such an unstable nation.

Rarely, though, do we hear the argument that the United States should not be in the business of selling arms to anybody. But this has become a pressing question now that the world, with the help of the superpowers, has armed itself to the teeth.

Since 1970 the United States has sold more than $5.3 billion worth of major weapons systems to Third World countries, and the Soviets are not far behind with almost $4 billion in sales.

In the past three years Zambia, a typically poor African nation, has spent $100 million buying fighters and tanks from the Soviet Union. Military experts estimate that the Palestine Liberation Organization, still considered a terrorist group by many nations, received at least $100 million worth of arms last year. And even tiny Brunei, with a population of 212,000, recently bought 17 helicopters and two sets of missiles.

These statistics are evidence of a trend in which the sale of weapons has replaced economic aid as the primary diplomatic tool for dealing with poor nations. You're people may be starving, but you're navy's sure in great shape.

The world has gone weapons mad, and conventional weapons are doing a good job of keeping up with their nuclear counterparts as a threat to the future of humanity.

But what can be done? As Time magazine said in a recent story, "The first step toward a solution has to be a realization, by each country involved in the trade, that pursuing what it sees as its own best interest creates a monster that is in no country's best interest."

We can only hope that the rest of the world is not far behind in coming to this realization.

Internal Chancellor Search Desired

By ROBERT M. SWAIM

For the second time in less than four years we find ourselves in the midst of a search for a chancellor.

There is a need to re-open old wounds here concerning the resignation of Thomas Brewer, no use in beating a dead horse. However, one cannot begin to discuss the present chancellor selection process without a review of some of the failures of the current administration. This is primarily because a majority of the members of the university family (alumni, students, and local supporters) want a chancellor who will reverse some of the trends that have taken place in the Brewer administration.

Anyone who was present at last week's public hearing of the Chancellor Search Committee could read between the lines of most of the speeches and conclude that the people want someone entirely different from Brewer and his associates. Some 17 people spoke at the hearing, including myself. Although there were some different ideas about what kind of chancellor we should have, a majority of those who spoke did seem to agree on several points.

Among the traits mentioned that would be desirable in a chancellor were:

- A proven record of teaching ability and administrative experience.
- The ability to tap outside resources and raise money.
- Strong political connections.
- A dedication to a growing and quality athletic program.
- The ability to muster support for the university from alumni and local citizens.
- Close ties to ECU and the state of North Carolina.

These were characteristics that most of the speakers advocated. Strong indications have already come from the committee that the next chancellor will indeed be a North Carolinian. Sources close to the committee have also indicated that candidates from within the university will be given very strong consideration. Someone noted at that meeting that Dr. Jenkins, Chancellor from 1960 to 1978, was from New Jersey, not North Carolina. This is true. However one must realize that Dr. Jenkins did not come to East Carolina

Campus Spectrum

University as Chancellor. He came here as dean of the college when we were still ECTC (East Carolina Teachers College). From there he worked his way up the ladder to become president of ECC (East Carolina College) in 1960 after 13 years as dean and vice president. He was promoted from within.

So when those like myself advocate filling the slot with "one of our own," we don't necessarily mean that the person has to have been born in this state. Rather, we are saying the next chancellor should be someone who has been here for a while. Former U.S. Senator Robert Morgan once remarked that "Leo Jenkins was not born in North Carolina, but no one is more of a North Carolinian than he."

This is a wise path for the committee to follow, for several reasons. The overwhelming factor in the downfall of the Brewer administration was their absolute lack of loyalty to ECU and North Carolina. At times it appeared that Brewer and his people had nothing but contempt for North Carolinians and especially for anybody who had been around during the Jenkins years. After Brewer's resignation Vice Chancellor Elmer Meyer remarked that Brewer "was a man of integrity, but evidently integrity doesn't mean very much in Eastern North Carolina." How wrong Dr. Meyer was. Indeed it was our belief in integrity and loyalty to ECU that led to Brewer's downfall.

I am greatly reminded of the now famous headline that ran in Time magazine after President Keagan's election: "How about a little class this time around." This same thought is in the minds of many people as we enter the search for our new chancellor.

The people, especially the students, want the door to the chancellors office to open up again as it was during tenure of Dr. Leo Jenkins. For three years now we have been cut off from our chancellor who locked himself in an ivory tower. Our next chancellor cannot make that same fatal mistake.

In talking with literally a couple of hundred people the overwhelming consensus seems to be that we need one of our own to guide this institution, someone who, in the words of our distinguished board of trustees chairman Mr. Ashley B. Futrell, will "sweat purple and bleed gold."

There has been little growth in the last three years in the realm of academic programs and athletics as compared to the Jenkins years, one need only check the statistics available at the department of institutional research. The athletic department is a monument to the ineffectiveness and indifference of the Brewer administration. When Dr. Jenkins retired there was a surplus of about $280,000. We now face a deficit of over $300,000 according to sources in the university business office.

A strong case can be made for promoting from within the university. Who better could serve ECU than someone who has toiled in the trenches already for ten to twenty years? That in itself is a testimonial to their loyalty and devotion.

Let us take note of the fact that last year when Dr. Ferebee Taylor, chancellor at UNC-CH, retired he was succeeded by Dr. Fordham who was the dean of the UNC-CH medical school and also an alumnus of Carolina. If its good enough for Chapel Hill, then its good enough for Greenville, Carolina made a wise choice. Who could possibly be more dedicated to that school than an alumnus who had taught there and served as dean of its more prestigious professional school.

I believe that the students here at ECU and especially the alumni would like to see our search committee follow the path of their Chapel Hill counterparts and choose someone from within our own school.

Perhaps our best days lie ahead of us if only we choose a leader who is dedicated to renewing the days of growth and glory that under Dr. Jenkins, brought us into the limelight as a great university.

(Robert Swaim is a senior business major from Greensboro.)

Free Enterprise Rewards Productive Members Of Society

Hooray for Kim Albin's article on the ECU Hunger Coalition! She was right on target when she said that we as Americans are tired of being blamed for problems we didn't create. Having a high standard of living doesn't mean we have an "obligation" to help others less fortunate than us.

America was founded on the premise that everybody had a right to receive exactly what he earned. Poor nations have not earned our support by supplying us with an equally valuable commodity. Of course, many people will argue that they cannot deal with us on a value for value basis. But that is irrelevant. What is relevant is that they don't offer us goods and services in exchange for money.

The free-enterprise system is not only the best system of exchange in the world, it is also unfair in that it is oblivious to what "should" be and deals only in what "is." That is neither good nor bad, it is simply a fact. I believe that everybody should have a happy marriage, that everybody should drive a Rolls-Royce, that everybody should live forever. Unfortunately, reality has a way of not cooperating with what should be.

I certainly have nothing against an individual helping the poor if he wants to — that's certainly his right. The problem starts when a group of people join together and decides that everybody should help the poor. Each individual has a right to decide for himself whether he should help the poor. And if a person does decide that he wants to help the poor, group action, such as that of the Hunger Coalition, would be a very inefficient way to do it. That is because each member of the group has a slightly different idea of who is poor and what should be done to help them, thus the group's platform is not truly representative of each individual member's beliefs.

Helping the poor would be much easier, faster and more effective by each person determining for himself who is poor, determining what should be done to help them, and then implementing his plan on his own without wasting time getting involved in the muddled bureaucracy of an organization, where he would have to confer with others over who qualifies as poor and what should be done for them.

Miss Albin's article did an excellent job of exposing the useless attempts of the Hunger Coalition to solve a problem that we, as Americans, are not responsible for. I look forward to more excellent reporting from her in the future.

Art Critic?

A funny thing happened to me the other day. I was walking along, minding my own business when Marvin Braxton, vice-president of Student Government, walked up to me and asked me if he could speak with me. I politely consented even though I had no idea what this conversation would lead to.

It turns out that Mr. Braxton felt offended on behalf of the student body by the art show that the Art Exhibition Committee had hung in the Mendenhall Gallery. Marvin, who obviously knows nothing about art, felt that the show was in bad taste. I naturally refused to remove the show.

For those who are not aware of the exhibit it is titled "Silver Interactions" and was obtained from the Southern Arts Federation. The exhibit is composed of about 50 photographs from nationally and internationally known photographers. Many art professionals have expressed their delight with this exhibit about societal interaction!

Since my original talk with Marvin he has tried to go over my head and have the show removed from the gallery wall. Of course, no one will perform this task because that act would constitute censorship! Several days ago I approached Mr. Braxton and asked him if his opinion about the show had changed and he quickly replied, "I think it sucks!"

Well, so much for the vice-president of Student Government. Obviously, he is just trying to round up votes for this spring's election and he does not know art from a tasteful vocabulary.

Nudity

What ever happened to censorship in journalism? I, along with several other of my friends were appalled at the photograph of the girl from the wet tee-shirt contest in the October 22, 1981 edition of The East Carolinian. If the campus community wanted to see girls in wet tee-shirts they could have gone to Chapter X. I think The East Carolinian could have found a more appropriate means of illustration. A nude woman can be a beautiful form of art, but The East Carolinian did not tastefully exhibit a form of art. A photograph of a girl with a wet tee-shirt on is definitely not appropriate in a newspaper, especially under a subtitle called "STYLE".

Honored 'Tess' Plays Hendrix On Wednesday

Tomorrow night, October 28, at 8 p.m. in Mendenhall Student Center's Hendrix Theatre, the Student Union Films Committee will present one of the finest films of the year, Roman Polanski's breathtaking Tess.

Following the film in room 221 of the student center, Dr. Erwin Hester, chairman of the English Department, will lead a short, informal discussion of Tess. Coffee and doughnuts will be served and any interested students, faculty or staff are welcome to attend.

The following excerpt, from an article by Harlan Kennedy, originally appeared in American Film Magazine shortly before the release of Tess. Reprinted by permission. All rights reserved.

Roman Polanski opened the door. Morning sunlight poured through the window walls of his Paris apartment. The aroma of freshly ground coffee scented the air. He asked me to join him at breakfast, and seated at a bleached oak table, he broke a crisp croissant, and we began to talk of his new film Tess. The film stars Nastassia Kinski and Peter Firth.

What drew a director noted for his surreal, macabre, and absurdist touch — in movies like Repulsion, Rosemary's Baby, and Chinatown — to Thomas Hardy's nineteenth-century tragic novel Tess of the D'Urbervilles?

"I have been influenced a great deal by surrealism and the theatre of the absurd," Polanski said. "But now that the world itself has become absurd and almost surreal, I want to go back to the simplicity and essence of human relationships."

In this scene from Polanski's film, the fleeing Tess, played by Nastassia Kinski, seeks refuge for the night at Stonehenge.

Artists Series Begins Big Season This Monday

For less than the cost of movie tickets, East Carolina University's 1981-82 Artists Series offers performances by six of the nation's most talented musicians and music ensembles.

The series opens this Monday, November 2, with the Piedmont Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Nicholas Harsanyi. Established in 1968 by the Rockefeller and N.C. School of the Arts Foundations, the orchestra has toured widely throughout the eastern U.S.

Its performances have included concerts at Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., Lincoln Center in New York and major concert series from Detroit to Miami. In addition, the ensemble has appeared with soloists of such note as Claude Fran, Lili Krauss and Jorge Bolet and has a new Vox recording of rare works for small orchestra by Haydn.

Conductor Harsanyi, formerly music director of the Interlochen Arts Academy Orchestra and conductor of the Bach Aria Group, has won critical acclaim throughout the U.S., Canada and Europe.

Second on the series is the Norman Luboff Choir, a choral ensemble whose range is unparalleled. Its program, set for November 19, will include works by such great masters as Bach and Mozart, contemporary compositions and Luboff's own arrangements of popular show tunes and folk songs.

The choir, composed of highly versatile singers, generally performs as many as 100 concerts per season. Its distinctive choral interpretations have been heard on more than 75 recordings during the past two decades.

The six-year-old Manhattan Woodwind Quintet will appear at ECU January 19. Winner of the 1978 Artists

International Competition, the group is in great demand and is recognized for its special audience rapport as well as its musical integrity.

Its members, all graduates of the Juilliard and Manhattan Schools of Music, are Susan Deaver, flute; Jessica Murrow, oboe; Richard Shapiro, clarinet; David Granger, bassoon; and William Barnowitz, horn. The Quintet's repertoire is wide-ranging, stretching from Renaissance music through contemporary chamber works.

Dutch soprano Emily Ameling, performing at ECU February 23, has been recognized as the world's foremost female singer of German lieder. Since her American debut at Lincoln Center in 1968, she has performed with most of the leading symphonies and appeared as guest artist at several major music festivals.

Her current season will include performances with the Cincinnati and San Francisco Symphony Orchestras and three appearances with The Hague Philharmonic during its American tour. Celebrating 200 years of uninterrupted friendship between the U.S. and Holland, these concerts are sponsored by Queen Beatrix of The Netherlands.

Ameling has recorded for 14 European and American record companies, and several of her recorded performances have won major awards.

Guitarist Michael Lorimer, a protege of Andres Segovia, will perform March 18 at ECU. Consistently rated among the world's top classical guitarists, he is the first American guitarist invited to perform in the Soviet Union, which he toured in 1975 and 1977.

Lorimer has presented the American premieres of several guitar concerti and solo guitar works, including compositions by Andre Previn and William Bolcom.

He is featured in a PBS special, "The Artistry of Michael Lorimer" and writes a classical guitar column in "Guitar Player Magazine."

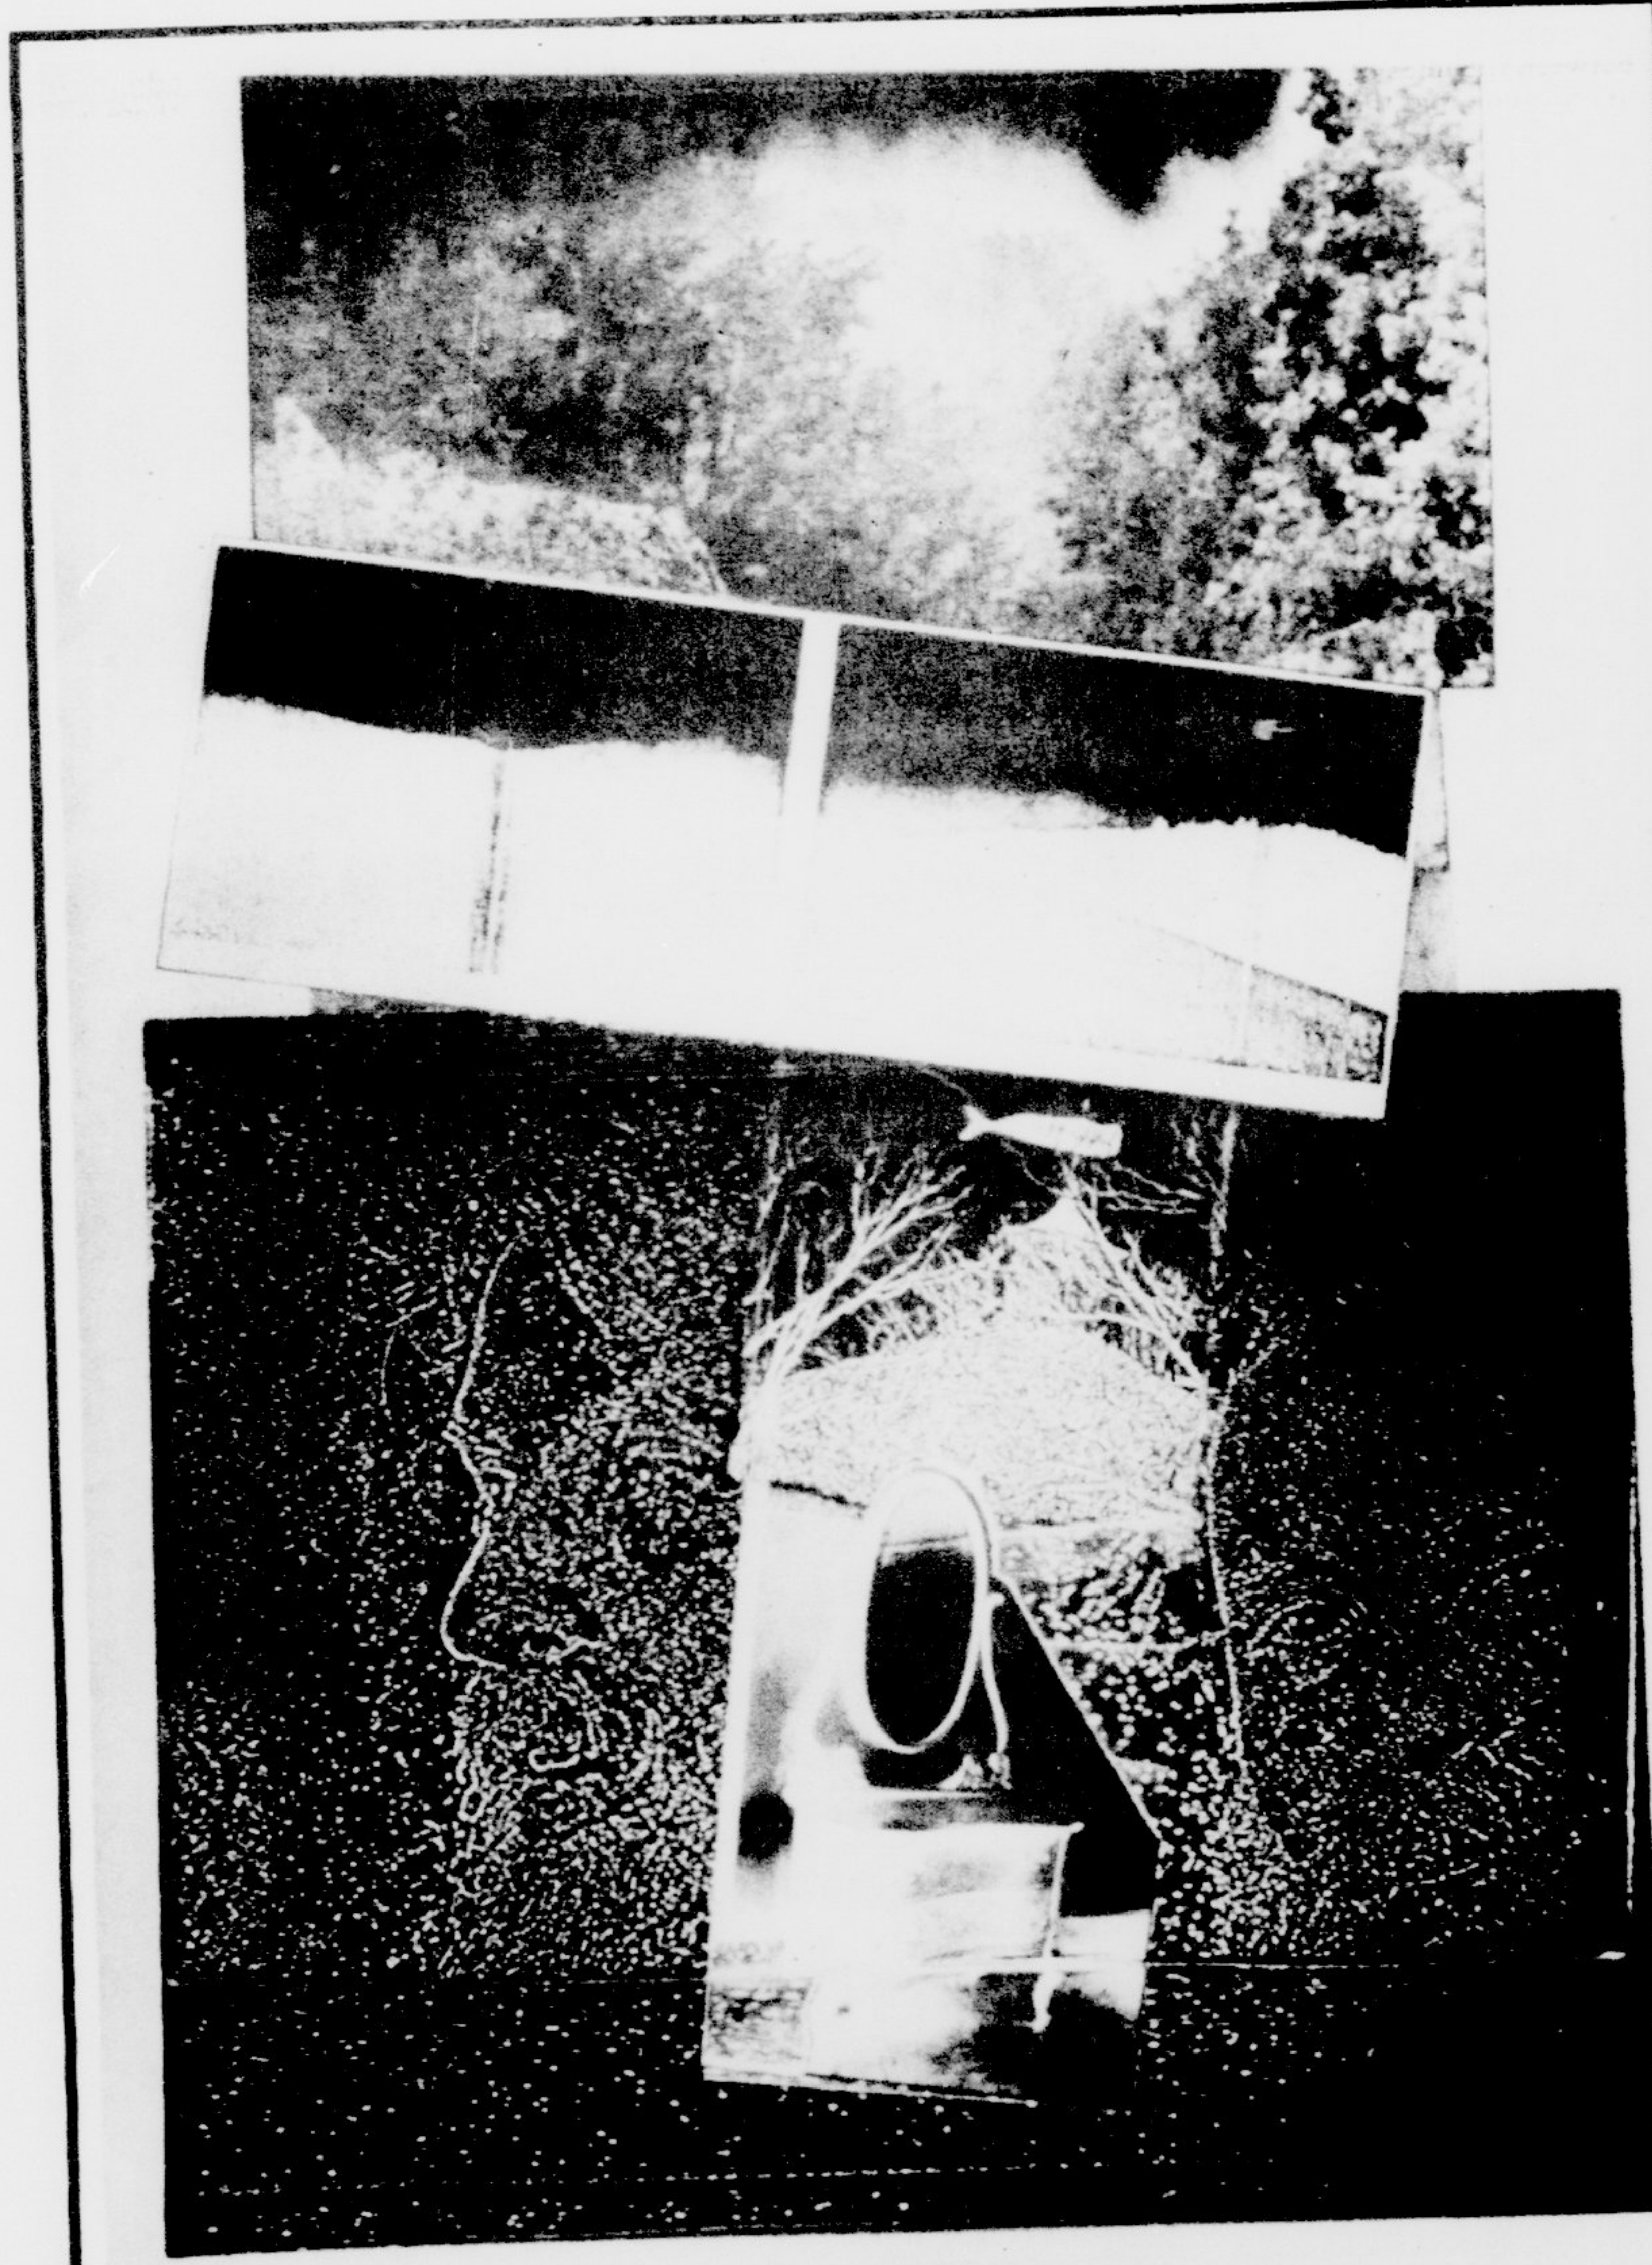

Pianist Shura Cherkassky will conclude the ECU Artists Series April 13. Acclaimed as one of the greatest pianists since the grand Romantic tradition, Cherkassky began his performing career with a 1923 debut tour and a command performance at the White House for President Harding.

A native of Russia who emigrated to the U.S. as a young man, the pianist has been an audience favorite throughout Europe where he has performed at prestigious music festivals. He has also toured in the Far East and in Australia, Africa and India.

Since returning to perform in Russia in 1976, he has been invited for three subsequent concert tours.

Cherkassky's interpretations of 19th century piano music have been recorded by six major record companies.

Public season tickets for all six concerts are available at the ECU Central Ticket Office at $20 each. All concerts are scheduled for 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theatre of ECU's Mendenhall Student Center.

"Silver Interactions" On Display In Mendenhall Gallery

"Silver Interactions" is the present exhibit on display in Mendenhall Student Center's upper gallery. The show is composed of 54 photographs by nationally and internationally known photographers and will run through this Friday, October 30. The traveling show is being sponsored by the Student Union Art Exhibition Committee and is on loan from the prestigious Southern Arts Federation.

Band 'Glissons'! Road Tough For Area Group

By JOHN WEYLER
Staff Writer

Editor's note: What is it like, being in a rock and roll band? To answer this all-important question, The East Carolinian coerced reporter John Weyler into conducting an exclusive interview with the local rock band Glisson. The group members requested that it be made clear that not all statements made during the somewhat incoherent interview be taken at face value, especially by girlfriends and parental units.

While going On The Road may have made Jack Kerouac famous, it has made Glisson semi-notorious and extremely nutty. At least, that is the impression made during the interview with the three-man combo. Audiences can judge for themselves whether their notoriety is justified, when Glisson performs at the Attic, Tuesday, October 27.

They call their energetic, original sound "hard rock fusion", a mixture of several different rock styles with a few jazz overtones. They perform both rock standards, and originals, which are written by The Brothers Glisson, Tom and Fred. Powerful percussion is supplied by Kyle McBride. Tom, Fred and Kyle are all ECU graduates, having studied management, biochemistry, and music education and therapy, respectively.

Glisson got together in the summer of 1980, specifically to enter a Battle of the Bands co-sponsored by a Jaycees chapter and radio station WSFL in Washington. They beat the other bands, but had to fight another battle when the co-sponsors refused to pay them. Glisson sued, the case was settled out of court, and the group was finally paid around $500, supposedly much less they were promised.

Despite winning another Battle of the Bands, such enterprises have left them feeling embittered. Such words as "rip off," "scam" and "set up" spice their conversation when referring to Band Battles. "They're either political or moneymaking for the people who set it up," says Kyle.

After their award-winning entry into the music and rip-off industry, Glisson began gigging, playing in small clubs covering most of eastern North Carolina, though they'll travel as far as funds and fans call for. Life on the road is exhilarating, exasperating and occasionally excrementing.

Common problems encountered "on the road" include mechanical failure in the middle of nowhere at midnight, club owners who short-change and cancel on short notice, bad motel rooms and food, and perhaps most painful, lack of good groupies. Regarding the latter, Tom wishes it to be known that "we have an opening for a full-time road masseuse, for those late-night back rubs."

Another problem is the low cultural/intellectual level in some of the bars they have performed. The group recalls one Saturday night at a club "somewhere in the boonies" when a huge brawl broke out among the patrons. The trio just sat and watched the improvised entertainment, giving the brutal ballet a standing ovation when no one was left standing. The following Saturday night, another near-riot occurred at a club they were playing. "We came to the conclusion that our music was driving people into a frenzy," says Tom.

Glisson has a unique method for arranging hotel accommodations, involving one person hiding in the back seat of the '68 Cadillac they travel in, while the other two rent a room. Once inside, they utilize a rotation system to overcome the obstacle of three (sometimes more) people sharing two beds. Despite the questionable morality in not fully paying for motel rooms (they once had 28 people in a room rented to two), Fred wants to make it clear that "we don't skip checks in restaurants... we're not that bad."

Other road experiences include running into a deer late one night; seeing their names scrawled on restroom walls ("That's when you know you're good"); performing without a qualified sound man (which they're currently in the market for), and encountering the Lynrd Skynyrd syndrome (the most popular music in this area is southern rock, which Glisson ain't).

Sex-and-drugs-and-rock-and-roll are the foundations of modern society, and no one can accuse Glisson of being anti-social. They usually have a little party after a gig, but "we play straight. We don't advocate drug use — it limits you, your sensitivity, if you're high on anything", says one band member who should know. Glisson's plan for the future is to keep playing mostly small clubs, concentrating on giving the best performance possible, till they can afford to upgrade their equipment and show. Meantime, the bars are slowly getting bigger and better: "at one time our audiences were into Quaaludes and falling down — now they just fall down drunk, with occasionally some 'caine (cocaine) to lift them back up."

Animation Lives

Animation Sale Slated

If you are a fan of Bugs Bunny, Wile E. Coyote, Winnie the Pooh, or a hundred other cartoon characters, there's an exhibit that's sure to win you over.

Hundreds of animation cel paintings from Hollywood cartoons are the subject of a special Exhibit and Sale to be held Thurs. thru Fri., October 29-30, 1981 from 10 a.m. until 7 p.m. in Mendenhall Student Center. The public is invited.

Animation cel paintings, called "cels", are the paintings actually filmed in making the animated cartoon. Each character is painted by hand on a clear sheet of acetate, usually 11" X 14" or larger, then placed against a background and photographed one-by-one to produce a reel of motion picture film.

Cels are one-of-a-kind, not prints or reproductions. They are the culmination of the artistic process — the final image that is photographed by the camera.

This Exhibit was authenticated by Gallery Lainzberg of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the nation's best-known specialist in this unique art form. A representative of Gallery Lainzberg will be on hand to answer questions.

The Exhibit/Sale will feature a selection of cels from feature-length Walt Disney films, including The Jungle Book, Robin Hood, Winnie the Pooh, The Rescuers, The Aristocats, and the recently-released, The Fox and the Hound. Original pencil animation drawings from some of Disney's early films of the 1930's and 1940's will also be offered.

Original Disney art work has long appealed to a broad range of collectors. In reporting an auction of Disney animation cels at Sotheby Parke Bernet Galleries in L.A., the L.A. Times (7/3/81) wrote, "The cels commanded stiff prices, reflecting the rising demand for Disney memorabilia by art dealers and Disney collectors. And the value seemed to have little to do with the age of the pieces."

Today many people are investing in animation cel paintings of all kinds, especially signed pieces. Of particular importance at this Exhibit is a collection of cel paintings featuring the popular Warner Bros. characters — Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck, Wile E. Coyote, the Roadrunner, Pepe Le Pew, and the Tasmanian Devil. Some of these paintings bear the signature of Chuck Jones, widely regarded as one of America's foremost animators.

Competing for the collector's attention are animation cels from Ralph Bakshi's best-known productions: American Pop and Wizards. Some of these cels have been signed by Ralph Bakshi.

Another highlight of this Exhibit/Sale is the artwork from Gnomes, an imaginative and popular fantasy film based on the best-selling book.

Finally, the Exhibit/Sale will include cels from dozens of other cartoons from vintage Krazy Kats and Betty Boops to cels from current television shows.

The interest in animation art work as a collectible and as Fine Art has burgeoned in recent years. Part of this growth has to do with the generally reasonable prices for original art work. Writing in Rarities (Summer 1981), a magazine devoted to Collectibles, Leonard Shannon explains, "... animation art is still affordable. All kinds of paintings can be bought for less than $50.00. But, regardless of price, any artwork created for an animated film is, by its very nature, unique and collectible."

Permanent collections of animation art may be found in major museums across the country such as the Museum of Modern Art, the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the San Francisco Museum of Art. Original animation art was the subject of a two-month Exhibit at the Library of Congress in Nov. 1978 and this summer, an elaborate Exhibit was held at the prestigious Whitney Museum of Art in New York City, attracting enormous interest.

ECU Student Lands Key Role Production Of Glass Menagerie

Gregory A. Watkins, currently a student in the Writing Program at ECU, was recently cast as the gentleman caller in Stephen B. Finnan's production of The Glass Menagerie. This will be Greg's initial acting assignment. His experience as a writer, however, gives him an unusual perspective on acting and he has found the transition a difficult, yet interesting, challenge.

"My first impression was that acting and writing have a lot in common. Each is a creative process, and each is primarily concerned with story-telling. But there are as many differences as similarities."

"Writing is essentially a personal process. An author creates a reality in his mind, re-creates it on paper, then submits it to the reader. The communication that takes place as a result, if it takes place at all, does so over a great distance, and in emotional isolation."

"In acting, on the other hand, that communication takes place in an emotional context created by the actors and the audience. Where the writer has condensed a reality into words, an actor must expand words into a reality, by re-creating an experience of those words and sharing it with each member of the audience. The exchange between actor and audience is intense, direct, and immediate."

Stephen B. Finnan is very enthusiastic about Greg's progress. "Greg has a wonderful sensitivity and intelligence which he is actively applying to his work in this production. He possesses an interesting and rather profound stage presence and has provided us with a professional commitment to do his best. I am very pleased to be working with him."

The Glass Menagerie opens November 10 at the Methodist Student Center. Tickets are currently available through the Central Ticket Office at Mendenhall Student Center (757-6611, ext. 266) and the Methodist Student Center (758-2030).

Conductor and Artistic Director George Trautwein will conduct the Piedmont Chamber Orchestra on Monday, November 2 in the Hendrix Theatre. For more details about the Artists Series, see page 5.

LEARNING ABOUT COLLEGE... THE HARD WAY

BY DAVID NORRIS

Polanski's 'Tess' Playing

Polanski picked up a paperback copy of the novel. "Tess is above all a great love story," he said. "What happens to Tess in the story is very much the raw-bones of Victorian melodrama: She is seduced when young, bears a child who dies, is deserted by the man she later marries, and finally is sent to the gallows for the murder of her seducer. But the flesh Hardy puts on those bones is astonishing. He links the girl to the rhythm of nature, within a Victorian society at odds with everything spontaneous and natural." Polanski got up and walked to the window. He looked down reflectively into the busy turmoil and said, "Tess is regeneration and continuance. But the social times she lives in are out of joint. By contrasting her with her mother, Hardy points this up marvelously. Listen!" He walked back to the table, opened his well-thumbed copy of Tess, and found the passage: "Between the mother, with her fast-vanishing lumber of superstitions, folklore, dialect, and orally transmitted ballads, and the daughter, with her trained National teachings and Standard knowledge . . . there was a gap of two hundred years as ordinarily understood. When they were together the Jacobean and the Victorian ages were juxtaposed." "The contrast is all there," said Polanski triumphantly. "The mother belongs to the past. Tess belongs to the present, to the modern age, to you and me. She is the first truly modern heroine." "As for what you asked about my films," he said, putting the book on the table,

"yes, Tess is a new departure. It is, as I have said, the film of my mature years. I shall be sorry if people have such a limited idea of what my style as a director is like — and my preoccupations — that they cannot accept something different from me. In the cinema, directors can be typecast as well as actors. The point will undoubtedly be raised at the Cannes Film Festival . . .

"Tess, you must remember," he continued, "was a pure woman. It was Hardy's subtitle to the book. She broke Victorian moral codes, but she responded to natural law, to nature, her nature. That's what the whole book is about. The film is an accusation of the hypocrisy and injustice of that rigid society — and by extension of any rigid and repressive society."

Late Surge Pushes Miami By ECU, 31-6

By CHARLES CHANDLER

Miami (4-1) took two quick touchdowns in the fourth quarter to clinch a 31-6 victory over East Carolina in Ficken Field Saturday.

The Hurricanes, now 4-2, were the first team to have put Miami back in the top 25 in the United States college football poll.

Miami's defense held the Pirates to only 28 yards in the first half, but the Hurricanes' offense was held to only 28 yards in the first half.

Miami's offense placed the Pirates in a 3rd and 10 situation, but the Hurricanes' defense held them to only 28 yards in the first half.

When the brain force of the Miami Hurricane wasn't enough to subdue gritty East Carolina, the rain came.

In the torrent of rain, the Hurricanes' offense was held to only 28 yards in the first half, but the Hurricanes' defense held them to only 28 yards in the first half.

Schnellenberger explained, "I tried to play some power football."

"I wasn't pleased with the running game. We just didn't do things as well as we needed to do against the teams down the line. We were interested in having all our running game, but field position had a lot to do with the outcome." (Miami rushed 52 times for 143 yards.)

The Miami coach bowed his head as the East Carolina contest improved a questionable running area. "We were trying our damndest to win, but we wanted to work on it (running). We had two good drives in the first half, but some drives in the second half were killed by penalties."

"Miami turned a game 17:10 halftime lead into a more comfortable margin behind the arms of Richt and Kelly. "We did what we wanted to do," Kelly said. "We were successful a few times, but we weren't as organized as we usually are. We didn't do as well as we thought we were going to do. If we want to beat the big teams, we're going to have to have a better running game."

The All-American candidate seemed surprised by the play of the Pirates. "East Carolina was tough. We probably underestimated them a bit. We were lucky to put 30 points on the scoreboard."

Richt said some changes were made at halftime. "We noticed some things East Carolina was doing, so we decided to open up a bit."

PIRATES

A.C. Dances, Jukes Around Redskins

Former East Carolina star running back Anthony "Tony" Collins brought back memories of his Pirate days by breaking the 100-yard barrier for the first time in his professional career Sunday.

Collins, starting for New England, carried the ball 22 times for 103 yards against the Washington Redskins. However, the Patriots lost the contest, 24-22, when John Smith's 53-yard field goal attempt with 57 seconds remaining fell short.

The loss put New England in fourth place of the American Conference Eastern Division with a 2-6 record, one game ahead of Baltimore.

Collins now has 563 yards this season, good enough for fourth place unofficially among American Football Conference rushers. San Diego's Chuck Muncie was the conference's fourth best rusher, but he only managed 21 yards on 12 attempts against Chicago.

Overall, again unofficially, Collins bypassed Muncie and St. Louis' Otis Anderson to move into 11th place among 1981 NFL rushers. Anderson carried the ball three times for 77 yards against Minnesota, running his total to 556 yards, seven less than Collins.

Buffalo's Joe Cribbs is in third place in the AFC with a total of 613 yards after a 113-yard performance against Denver Sunday.

Collins showed why New England picked him so high in the second round on the first play from scrimmage. He took a handoff for a sweep around the right end and was cut off but reversed his field and picked up 10 yards.

New Orleans' George Rogers, with 859 yards is the top first-year rusher in the league. However, Collins has moved close to the number two position after Kansas City's Joe Delaney managed only five yards in 11 carries against Oakland. Delaney now has 572 yards.

Inconsistent Play Plagues Pirates At Duke Tournament

By THOMAS BRAME
Staff Writer

The young Pirate golf team had a disappointing showing the Durham last weekend. Inconsistent play plagued ECU in the Eighth Annual Duke Invitational and Golf Tournament.

As a team, East Carolina finished 18th out of 20 teams. A balanced North Carolina State University team captured the team honors. Wolfpack coach Sykes described his squad as a "good experienced team with the ability to be among the top in every tournament."

Wake Forest coach Jesse Haddock was disappointed in his team's second-place finish, as was East Carolina coach Bob Helmick in his team's poor showing in the overall totals.

Jodie Mudd of Georgia Southern ran away with individual honors shooting an 8-under par for the tournament. Don Sweeting and Don Gafner lead the high-spirited Pirates with 229. Freshman Chris Czaja followed with a 231 and continued to improve with each tournament.

The Pirates travel to Greensboro for the Guilford Invitational Tournament this Thursday and Friday (Oct. 29-30) at the Cardinal Country Club. Eighteen teams will be competing.

Anthony Collins displays some of his old collegiate moves that are dazzling professional teams this season. He has dashed, slashed and danced his way to 563 yards in his first professional season with eight games to go.

Indians Blank Pirates, 4-0

By WILLIAM FELVERTON
Assistant Sports Editor

East Carolina coach Brad Smith made no excuses when asked about his team's 4-0 loss to the Indians of William and Mary last Wednesday afternoon. "They were ready to play, and we weren't. They came out fired up and beat us to the ball in the second half." The loss dropped the Pirate's record to 5-8-1 this season. To have that important winning season, the Pirates must win their last four matches. The Pirates were outshot by William and Mary, 20-10. Goalie Steve Brown had five saves in the first half, and freshman defender

Danny Curtis added five more in the second period. The William and Mary goalies accounted for six saves. East Carolina hosts the Paladins of Old Dominion University at Minges Field Wednesday afternoon. Old Dominion has been ranked as high as fifth in the nation this season. "It'll be a good, physical match," Smith said and added that the Paladins "have had about the same problem as we have in that they haven't been scoring as much as they'd like."

The match is set for 4 p.m.

ECU Downs Duke

By THOMAS BRAME
Staff Writer

The Lady Pirates of East Carolina clearly dominated Duke's Racquet Club, 8-1, Saturday afternoon.

The Pirate men had a more exciting match against the Camels of Campbell. After a 3-3 tie in the single matches, the Pirates took two out of the three double matches for the victory.

"I'm excited about the teams' ability to win their three-set matches," coach Carolina

Brown gleamed afterwards.

The Pirate women concluded their season with this victory. Atlantic Christian plays host to the men Thursday, Oct. 29 for the season finale.

Following a 31-6 win over East Carolina Saturday, the Miami (Fla.) Hurricanes moved into the 19th position in this week's United Press International's Top Twenty ranking of Division I college football teams.

The Hurricanes, 4-2, had been ranked as high as 11th but fell out of the poll last week after a tough 14-10 loss to Mississippi State, a club that is ranked eighth this week.

Another team that has downed the Pirates, North Carolina, fell from third to 11th this week following a 31-13 upset at the hands of unranked South Carolina.

Penn State, following a victory last week over West Virginia — the Pirates' opponent this Saturday — remains the number one team in the nation with a perfect 6-0 mark.

Pittsburgh, Penn State's arch-rival, is at number two. Southern Cal moved into the number three position following the defeat of North Carolina. Atlantic Coast Conference member Clemson is fourth, while defending national champ Georgia rounds out the top five.
