Barwick: "No one knew we had the STL."

License 'Apparently Misplaced'

WZMB Approaching Airtime

By MIKE HUGHES
Assistant News Editor

Believe it or not, the ECU radio station, WZMB, may be ready to begin broadcasting within two weeks.

For all the skeptics who think they've heard this one before, they are undoubtedly correct.

However, following yet another license mixup at WZMB, Sam Barwick, the general manager, estimates that — barring technical problems — the station will go on the air in the next 10 days to two weeks.

In the Jan. 14 issue of The East Carolinian, Barwick said that the station lacked a studio-to-transmitter-link license (STL), which is necessary for WZMB to begin broadcasting. According to Barwick, the STL license had been applied for but was being delayed.

However, according to Van Brown of the WZMB Petitioning Committee, the STL license was granted in July 1980. Brown claimed, in a letter to the editor, that he had spoken with representatives of the Federal Communications Commission who assured him the STL had been granted.

"When I took this job in April," Barwick explained, "no one told me we'd had the STL for nearly a year."

Barwick claimed he found out about the error on Jan. 14, after spending much of the day telephoning the FCC.

"Everything Van Brown said in his letter was true," Barwick admitted. "The problem arose because no one knew we had the STL. We still don't have any physical proof that it was granted."

According to Barwick, the station's copy of the license was "apparently misplaced," causing the misunderstanding.

Likewise, no copy of the license could be found in the files of Dean Rudolph Alexander, a member of the Media Board.

"What we actually have," Barwick said, "is a construction permit." This permit enables the station to place the transmitter atop Tyler residence hall.

Replacing the transmitter should not pose any problem, according to Barwick, as the process merely involves "connecting two or three wires."

"Sometime this week," he continued, "we'll turn on the transmitter and iron out the bugs. Then we'll resume program testing. As soon as I can meet with the staff, and as soon as they feel comfortable, we'll go on the air."

What remains to be done before WZMB may begin broadcasting is to obtain a Program Test Authorization (PTA). This is done simply by notifying the FCC that the station is ready to commence programming.

According to Barwick, if no further problems surface, the station will obtain the PTA and will be on the air by the end of the month.

Nail: 'Representing All The Students'

By PATRICK O'NEILL
Staff Writer

"Do you know the name of the Student Government Association president?" was the question.

"No, not for sure."

"I have no idea."

"Isn't it Marvin somebody?" were the responses.

"What are the functions of his job?" was the next question.

"I really couldn't tell you," was a typical reply. One student, biology major Mary Kendrick, thought the SGA president should "mainly represent the students and their best interests."

Lester Nail, the 1981-82 SGA president, sees his role as "representing the students, all students, as best I can" — one of his campaign promises. He is constantly on the go, keeping appointments, sitting on committees, being a liaison with the local community (as a representative on the Greenville City Council) and even maintaining good enough grades to warrant acceptance to Campbell University law school for the fall 1982 semester.

Nail is a basically quiet man. He considers himself a Christian as well as a conservative, yet at times he admits to seeing "flaws" in a system that doesn't always work as it should. When asked to comment on the job performance of President Reagan and his administration, Nail hesitates a little and says "I feel like he's doing what he believes in."

Nail grew up in the rural setting of Cherryville (near Gastonia), but after four years at ECU he calls Greenville home. "When I visit my family and I say it's about time for me to go home, I mean Greenville, but my mother doesn't always appreciate it."

Among the responsibilities of his job are four major committees of which Nail is a member — the Board of Trustees, Media Board, Student Union Board of Directors, and the ECU Alumni Board of Directors. "Some days I'll have three meetings in a row... and they always seem to fall on a night before I have a test," he says.

All this plus lots more, such as making a tough moral decision of whether to veto the medical emergency loan fund because it earmarks funds to pay for student abortions, are the functions of a president. The president "still has to be a student first — he still has to go to classes and study," continues Nail.

The job doesn't go without controversy. A veto decision on the medical emergency loan for a $1 surcharge. Ample time is given for repayment, Nail says.

Being SGA president was "something that I always wanted to do," said Nail. "I felt I was qualified to do it."

Nail calls his four years in student government service "a tremendous learning experience." He was freshman class president, SGA public defender in his sophomore year, and the SGA attorney general last year.

"I really love this university," Nail says. "There's no way I'd go to any other school than East Carolina if I had to do it over. I want the students to get proud of East Carolina. Quit comparing us to Carolina or State. We've done a good job in our 75 years. We're the third school in the state."

First of all he is a student, second he is SGA President, and third he is a trustee, Nail says. "I consider it an than 20 minutes from my office," Nail says.

Students can fill out a simple application, present their identification and activity cards and receive a no-questions-asked loan for a $1 surcharge. Ample time is given for repayment, Nail says.

ECU Hosting NCSL Council

By DIANE ANDERSON
Staff Writer

East Carolina University will host the North Carolina Student Legislature Interim Council on Jan. 23 and 24.

Gary Williams, speaker of the ECU legislature and an active member of the NCSL, urged all interested students to attend, "those who are interested in politics, government, or just for those who are interested as an average citizen in the future."

NCSL, founded in 1937, is currently the oldest active student legislature in the country. The issues dealt with are timely and controversial and offer students an opportunity to get involved in the legislative process and express their opinions.

The monthly Interim Council is organized like a model general assembly. All legislation adopted at the meetings is published in a yearly Compendium, which is distributed to the North Carolina General Assembly, Council of State, and other interested parties.

Williams stated that hosting this month's Interim Council will allow ECU students the opportunity "to see how other students feel about timely issues facing the state, to see how important it is to speak out, and to see how important it is to 'rock the boat,' because you don't make progress by sitting on your hands and doing nothing. You make progress by rocking the boat, by expressing your opinions, by expressing your ideas."

Among the bills being presented at this weekend's meetings is a resolution concerning the consent decree issued to settle the desegregation controversy between UNC and the Department of Education. Virginia Carlton, president of the ECU chapter of the NAACP is scheduled to speak on this issue.

The NCSL will also take a position on the proposed amendment to the N.C. Constitution to extend legislators term of office to four years. Representative Lancaster or Senator Barnes from Wayne County in Goldsboro, sponsors for the bill, will be debating in favor of the bill. Tom Gilmore, former deputy secretary of the Department of Human Resources, and currently chairman of the "Keep the Two Year Legislative Term Committee," is tentatively scheduled to attend.

Williams says the NCSL has always had a "volatile history. A lot of the things we discussed back in the 50's and 60's were way ahead of their time. We were kicked out of the capital for a number of years because we were accused of being everything from communists...."

"We take this very seriously. This is a chance to see that a group of students are serious and concerned, and really do care about what happens in the future in this country and state," he said.

The Interim Council convenes at 12 p.m. on Saturday, and adjourns at 5:30 p.m. The meeting recovers at 9 a.m. Sunday, and adjourns at 12:45 p.m. The main meeting will be held in room 244, Mendenhall Student Center. All interested students are invited to attend.

Campus Security Blotter Shows Fewer Break-Ins During Holidays

By GREG RIDEOUT
Staff Writer

The University Police Department had fewer than the normal reports of break-ins during the holidays, according to police records.

Joe Calder, director of security, commented that dorm larcenies were "way, way down" due to the tighter security put on the most vulnerable dorms — Belk and Scott.

These reports and other dorm-related incidents are included in the following police blotter for the period of Jan. 6 until Jan. 19.

Jan. 6, 12:05 p.m. — Sandra Gayle Wentz of 312-A Belk reported the breaking and entering of her room and larceny of property belonging to her and her roommate.

Jan. 7, 7:30 p.m. — Alan Keith Oliphant of 211-A Scott reported the breaking and entering of his residence as well as larceny of personal property. 10:30 p.m. — Maureen J. Obayl of 347 Cotten reported the loss of her room key and that someone had entered her room during the holidays.

Jan. 8, 12:30 p.m. — Phillip Ray Taylor of 335 Jones reported the breaking and entering of his residence and larceny of personal property.

Jan. 9, 1:58 a.m. — Lonnie C. Stafford of 132 Slay reported the larceny of a Realistic radio scanner from his room.

Jan. 10, 12:21 p.m. Keith Richard Marsil of 161 Jones reported the vandalism of his vehicle parked in the 14th and Berkeley freshman parking lot. 6:30 p.m. — Wanda Kay Bowman of 314 White reported the vandalism of her vehicle while it was parked in front of Clement Dorm.

Jan. 11, 7:30 a.m. — Hugh McGowan Jr. reported the theft of a News and Observer paper box from the main entrance of Brewster. 1:15 p.m. — William M. Lincoln of 377 Aycock reported the breaking and entering of his residence and larceny from same. 10:15 p.m. — Mitchell Alan Ivey and Mike Dwayne Blackwell, both of 137 Aycock, were observed discharging bottle rockets from their room window.

Jan. 12, 11 p.m. — Virgil Brian Mason of 307 Aycock was served with a warrant for assault inflicting serious injury.

Jan. 13, 1:35 p.m. — Kim Rackley of 203 Garrett reported the larceny of a Craig FM converter from her vehicle while it was parked in the lot at Fifth and Reade streets. 4:30 p.m. — Sylvia Harrison of the School of Medicine reported the theft of a pager from the psychiatry department. 11:30 p.m. — Virgil B. Mason was arrested for alleged forgery and uttering.

Jan. 14, 2:19 a.m. — Michael Shaw Biggers of 132 Jarvis and George Timmerman, a non-resident of the dorm, were arrested for

Tuition Costs Exceed Inflation

By MIKE HUGHES
Assistant News Editor

What goes up must come down.

That may be what students learn in physics on the first day of class, but the statement might not apply so well to inflation rates or, especially, to tuition rates.

In fact, the increase in tuition costs since the 1981-82 academic year exceed the 10.9-percent inflation rate reported in August 1981.

A survey of 229 state colleges throughout the country showed that out-of-state students are being charged an average of $2,021 per year for tuition, while in-state students pay an average of $818 annually.

Last year, out-of-state students paid an average of $1,795 in tuition costs, and the average price tag for in-state tuition totalled $712 yearly.

The study was sponsored by the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges and the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

In the last 10 years, tuition rates for all students have at least doubled. Annual costs for state residents have increased 101.9 percent, while tuition for non-residents has gone up 131.2 percent.

Another figure noted by the study showed that the total education costs for students of state colleges have also risen.

The average bill for one year of a college education, including tuition room and board, goods and services, is now $3,781 for out-of-state students, an 11.2-percent increase from last year.

In-state students now pay approximately $2,578 in total costs annually, an increase of $261, or 11.3 percent, from the 1980-81 year.

Universities Experiment With Differential Tuition Rates

(CPS) — As traditional sources of funding dry up, a number of colleges are now toying with a new concept in the ongoing quest for generating more income — differential tuition rates.

The idea of charging different tuition rates for different categories of students is in itself not that new. Some colleges have been making in- and out-of-state students, graduates and undergraduates, and professional school students pay different tuition rates for years.

What is new is that colleges are beginning to discriminate on bases like class level, cost of various courses, and even popularity of certain courses.

Students, in other words, would pay more to major in popular subjects — those theoretically most likely to lead to good jobs after graduation — than to major in topics with lesser enrollments. In today's market, for example, it would cost an English major more to transfer to a biology program, and even more to switch to engineering.

A wide variety of administrators at various campuses confess they are flirting with the idea in response to radical cuts in state and federal education funding. But critics warn of limiting low-income students' access to high-payoff majors, and forcing all students to choose their majors according to cost factors rather than to interest and aptitude.

The University of Minnesota, reports Vice President for Academic Affairs Kenneth Keller, has already implemented tuition rates "based primarily upon the cost of the program."

"We've been using the system for several years now, and there haven't been any major problems with it that I am aware of," Keller says. "The concept behind it is to have each student pay approximately the same percentage of his or her education costs."

A Minnesota biology major, for instance, will pay an average of $418 this quarter, compared to an English major's $351. Keller says the difference is found in material costs, lab expenses and departmental costs of providing the courses.

Keller carefully adds that such differential rates must "of course, be balanced by accessibility. We make sure there is sufficient financial aid available to students so that no one is locked out of a program and forced to major in something that has a lower tuition."

Keller is opposed to charging according to a course's popularity, which is exactly what Indiana University is considering.

IU administrators are now weighing a proposal to require students to pay more for courses that are in high demand.

"It's just a question that's been raised, but it's definitely a possibility that we'll go to some kind of differential type of tuition," says IU Vice President Kenneth Gros Louis.

Gros Louis says IU is studying a number of alternative fee plans that would base enrollment costs on factors like popularity, extra costs like lab and service fees, and "quality of programs that the university is particularly noted for."

He adds that while differential tuition could "make it difficult for students with limited funds" to get into high-payoff majors, IU would try to supply enough financial aid to remove cost as a factor in choosing a field of study.

"I'm not convinced that financial aid is as effective a vehicle in increasing access (to all majors) as is low tuition," argues R. Michael Berrier of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

awesome responsibility," he says of his position on the board of trustees. "The trustees are dedicated men and women and have the interest of the university at heart."

Recently Nail participated in the Martin Luther King birthday activities. Nail says he has tried to be sensitive to minority issues on campus.

"Discrimination is just something that is terrible," states Nail. "I just feel like we've got to improve relationships between all races."

"The outright obvious discrimination — how did people put up with it?" Nail asks. "A friend told me, 'you grow up with it, love with it, and you had to accept it.'"

He praises his family for his Christian values. "I've never heard my father swear," Nail says. "I was able to learn by observing, not by what someone told me to do."

For his work, Nail receives a salary of $200 per month. The only requirement for SGA president is a 2.0 GPA as well as being a full time student.

"There are a lot of people who can't get involved because they must work. You could not work at an outside job and be (SGA) president," Nail says flatly.

"Student involvement is one area I'm really disappointed in," he adds. Nail said he believes that student involvement is the only way change can take place. "Many committees need students to sit on them, but there aren't enough volunteers," Nail invites all interested students to see him or Dr. Elmer Meyer, the vice chancellor of Student Life, if interested.

Nail says he also wants the students to know he is here to serve their interests. "Everybody's here to help them," Nail states. He asks students to go to him or other available people when they have a problem. Usually students will only need some information or "they don't know where to go," says Nail.

Medical Loans

Legislature Broadens Narrow Issue

Government funding of abortion is one of the most volatile issues that politicians face today. People's attitudes about abortion range from religious and moral objection to scientific support. Then there are the pro-choice people who do not necessarily approve of abortion for themselves but accept an individual's right to decide for herself.

Therefore, when decisions are made about the funding of abortion they are sometimes based more on personal values and emotion than fact.

Such is the case with the SGA's debate over its $150 medical emergency loan fund.

The student legislature voted Monday to reinstate the fund but only after heated, divisive debate, and an amendment to prevent use of the fund for abortions was given serious and lengthy consideration. Now SGA President Lester Nail has indicated that he plans to veto the bill. When asked about the fund, Nail said, "I wanted the medical fund (suspended) strictly because I am against abortion."

Those who oppose the fund for abortions strike out on all counts.

First, there is no proof that the fund has been used primarily — or even widely — to pay for abortions. Since the use of the money is a confidential matter between doctor and patient, there are no statistics available to the SGA concerning what the loans have been used for. Of course rumors persist, but they are no substitute for fact.

Further, no polls have been taken to indicate how students feel about their money being used to support such a program. And yet the legislature spent a great deal of time debating the morality of abortion while trying to decide whether or not to reinstate the loan which supposedly had been suspended so that an investigation into its usefulness could be conducted.

Finally, the question remains of whether or not the SGA should base its decision on members' personal feelings about abortion.

The answer is a simple yet emphatic no. The Supreme Court has ruled that abortion is a matter to be decided by a woman and her doctor — not by politicians.

If, despite all this, the SGA decides that abortion is evil and that students cannot use the fund for such purposes, why shouldn't they go one step further and say that snorting cocaine is wrong and therefore no one can use a medical loan to have his nose cauterized? Where do you draw the line, where do you end the limitations?

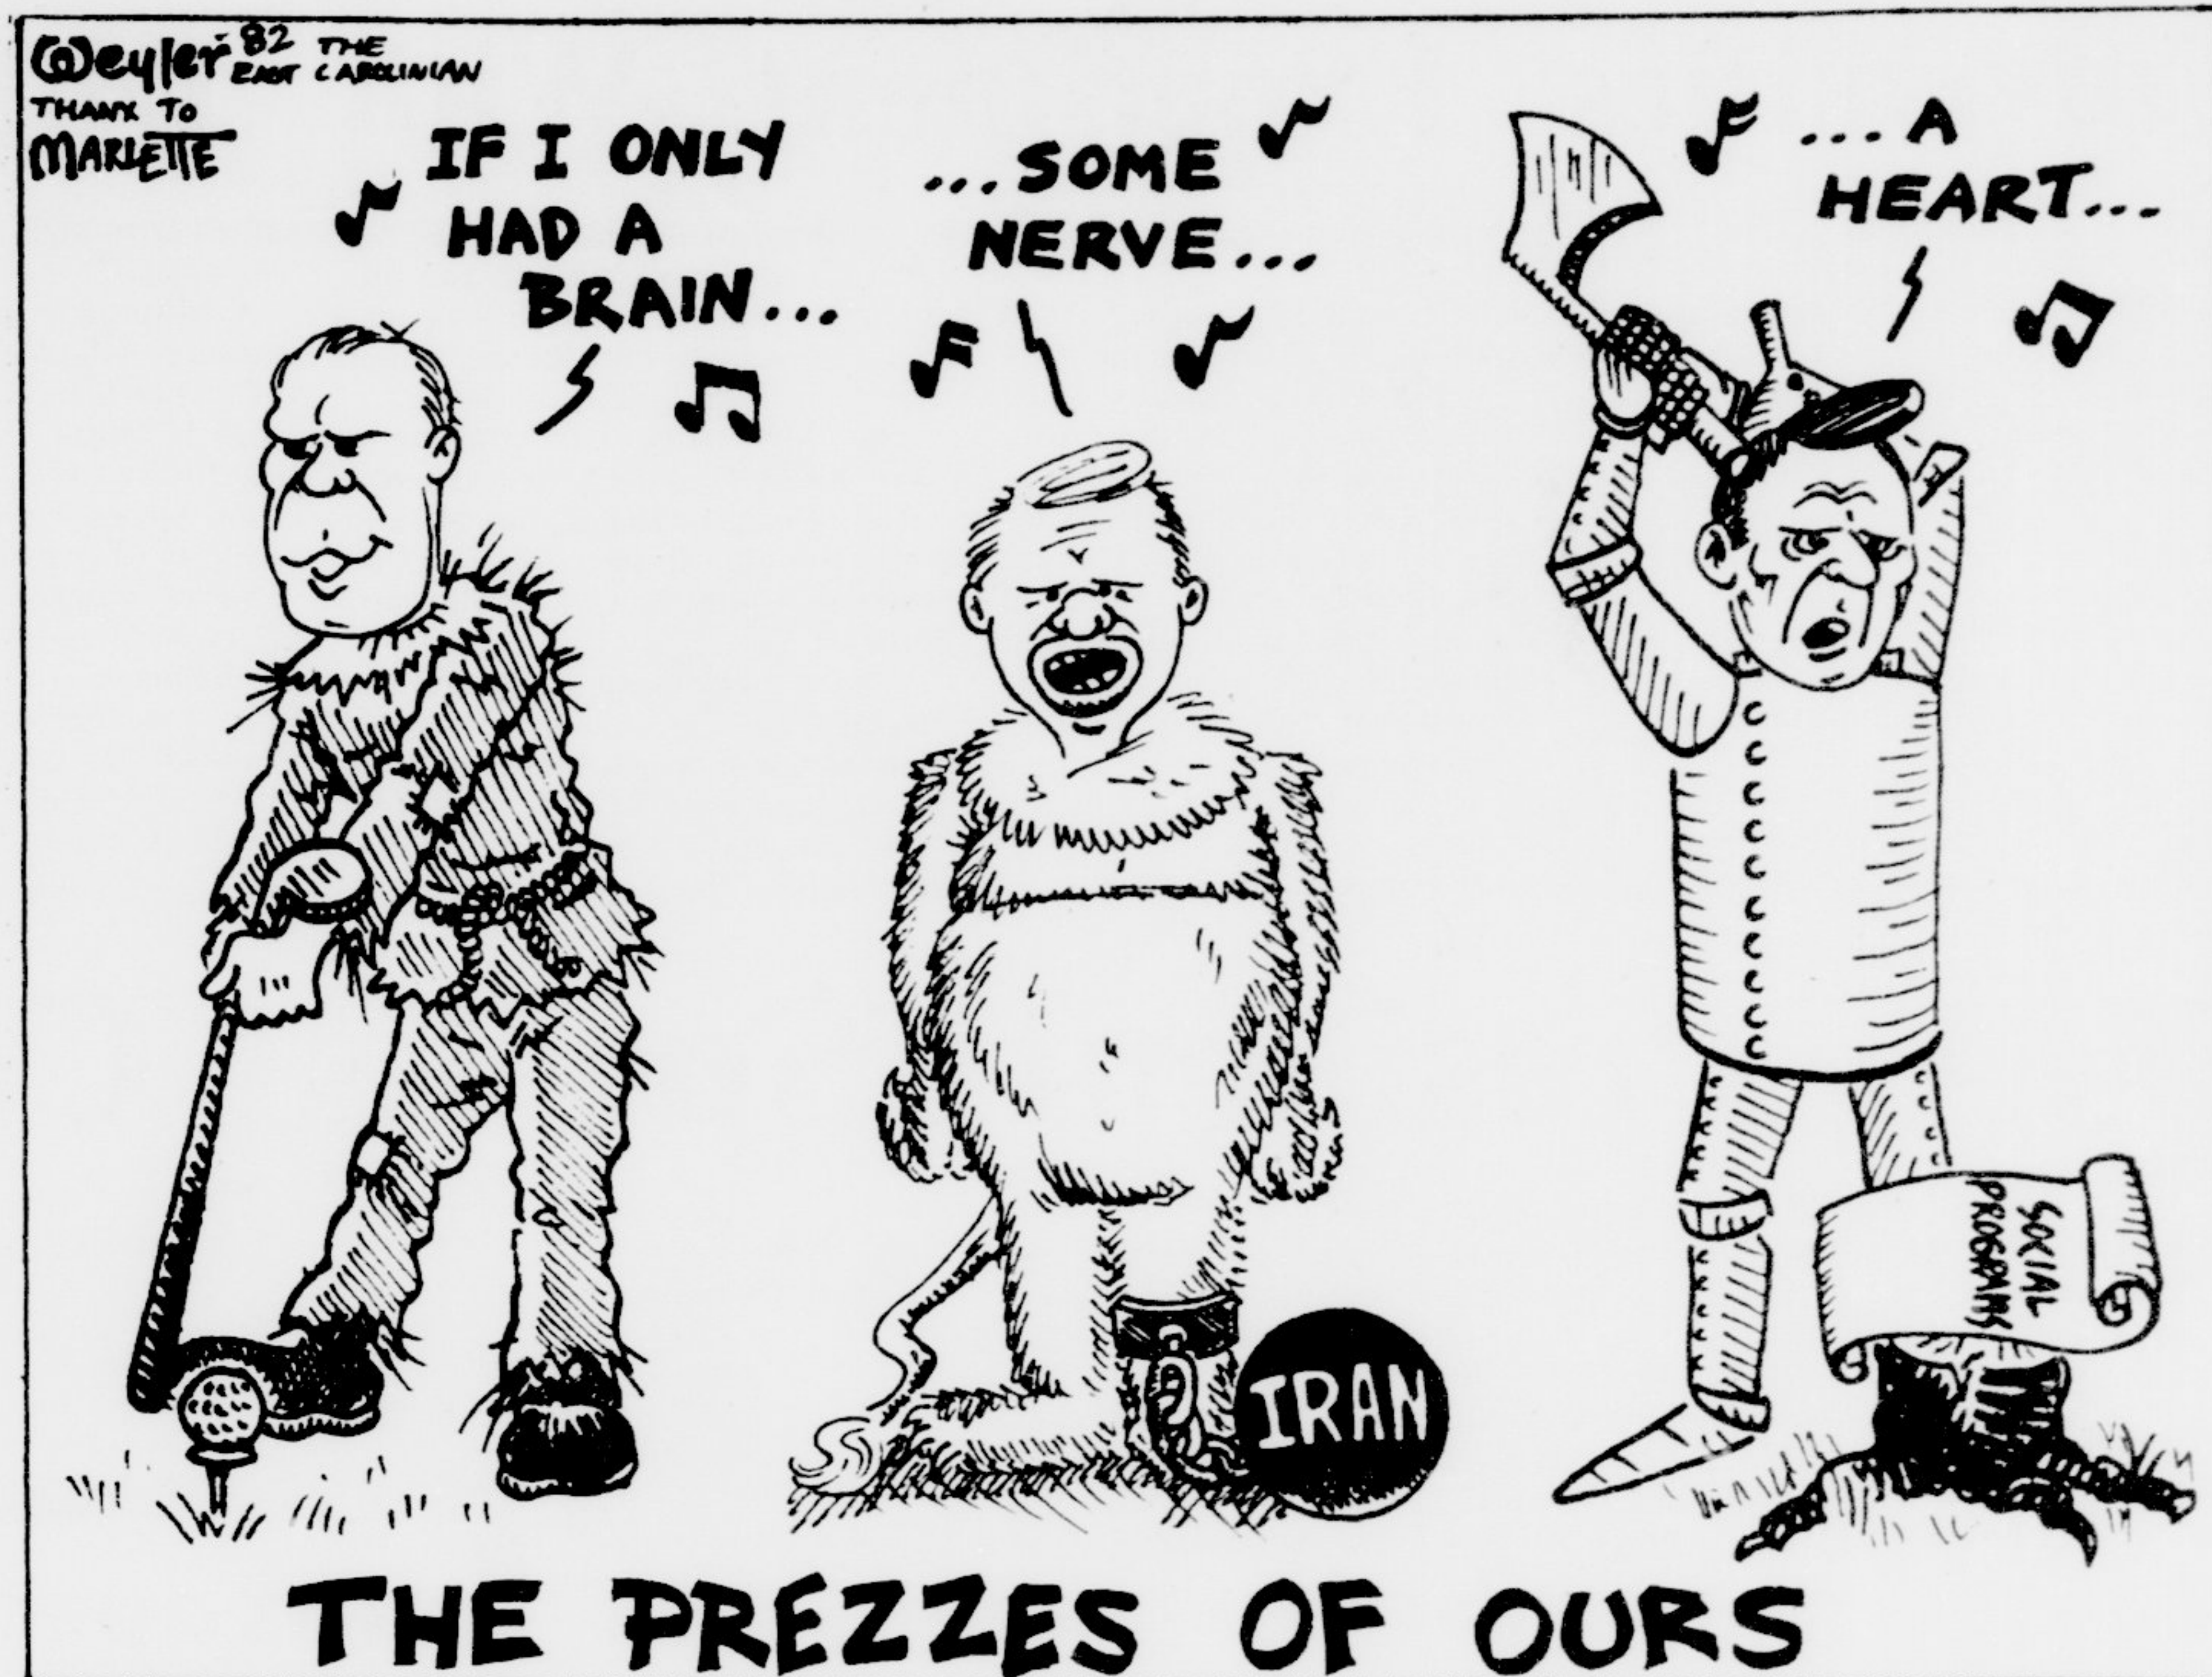

At the risk of repeating ourselves, let us emphasize that abortion is a medical decision that must be made by a woman with the help of her doctor. The decision to have an abortion is never easily reached; it is bound to be traumatic. The availability of an emergency medical loan fund can help ease the trauma.

Consider This...

We have a wonderful new traffic office. You can go in and pay $25 for a parking sticker and then miss half your class while waiting for a parking space.

Hold on a minute. Buying that coveted parking sticker isn't so easy. Might take a while. You might even miss your class.

Since there isn't anywhere to park at our new traffic office.

Loans 'Viable And Necessary'

Medical emergency loans to students in need is a viable and necessary program at ECU, and personal preferences should not influence such a program. I do not understand how Mr. Nail or Mr. Rogers, or men in general, feel they have any "right" to determine whether an abortion is proper or not. Both Nail and Rogers are out of line in attempting to force their attitudes and preferences in an area where they do not belong.

Abortion is strictly a woman's issue, and we as men should not legislate nor try to control the use of this medical operation. If a man has strong feelings about the issue personally then it should be handled on that level in the day-to-day practice of his life by not helping a woman become pregnant. Let women make the decisions on this issue and keep "the exact manner in which the money is used confidential between doctor and patient," as is set aside in the original bill.

'Get Off'

A judge in Arkansas has recently ruled that teaching creationism is a violation of the Constitutional principle of separation of church and state. However, Mitch Daub quotes scripture as a basis for his decisions on student welfare committee at a state owned and operated university. Lester Nail decides to veto the bill because he is personally opposed to abortion.

Where do these two men get off? A lot more can happen to your health at school than getting pregnant. I had three wisdom teeth removed in the first semester of my freshman year; a benign tumor just under my right breast was surgically removed in the second semester of my freshman year; and another lump was taken out in the fall of my junior year.

Fortunately my parents could afford these emergencies when they cropped up. However, if I had not had my folks to fall back on financially, I might have been forced to skip the treatment of all three problems, especially if Lester Nail's thinking had dominated school politics.

And where does Mike Rogers get the right to splash gory pictures of abortions all over an SGA meeting? In the United States, abortions are still legal, in the world of Daub, Nail and Rogers it is an ill that must be obliterated. And none of them have proof that the SGA medical loan is used exclusively for abortions. How many male students have applied for the medical loan in the past? That would be a first, a pregnant man.

I hope Lester Nail, Mitch Daub and Mike Rogers have to pay for every child they ever conceive, from diapers to diploma.

Thank you for publishing Mrs. Greene's letter (Campus Forum, Jan. 14). First, the Jazz Bones wish to express our appreciation to Mrs. Greene and everyone who has attended any of our performances. Feedback of this type is deeply gratifying!

Secondly, the ensemble is "alive and well." Since that evening (Mendenhall Student Center's Coffee House) we have been busy. The group has performed for the N.C. Association of School Music Dealers, the N.C. Music Educators Convention in Winston-Salem, the Dinston Arts Council, the Greenville Arts Council, the Phi Mu Alpha Jazz Festival at ECU and the Eastern Trombone Workshop at Florida State University (Feb., 1981). We will be performing as part of the Raleigh Jazz Festival (Jan. 28 at the Deja Vu, Cameron Village) and the Roberson County Friends of the Library Concert Series (Lumberton, Feb. 7).

Again, thanks to Mrs. Greene and to those who have supported us through the years.

'Private' Conversations: Not Always

By KIM ALBIN

It has come to my attention that, for the record, a distinction needs to be drawn between the two types of individuals on this campus: those who hold conversations in public and those who listen in on those conversations.

I realize that those of you who happen to fall into the latter category may suffer great embarrassment over the publicity about to be given to your pastime: that is my intention. I wish to break you of the habit since it is, in my opinion not just annoying but also uncouth.

It happens all the time: while standing in the Croatan or the soda shop or Mendenhall you notice a person inching ever closer, straining to hear your conversation while pretending to read the newspaper, study his notes or examine the wallpaper.

I happen to know how irritating this is because it happens to me all the time, too. When I notice someone listening to a private conversation of mine, I, like most people, usually turn my back and begin to whisper. But this solution to the problem is temporary at best and does nothing to teach the eavesdropper a lesson.

By the way, a friend of mine who gets particularly annoyed by eavesdropping handles the situation in this manner: as soon as he begins to suspect that someone is eavesdropping he tells a few filthy jokes. This will always evoke either laughter or a withering glance — both of which give away the listener. He even encountered one eavesdropper who had the nerve to ask him to watch his language, though my friend was talking at a very low volume.

What could be the matter with these people? How could a lively, intelligent student be so bored and idle that he needs to eavesdrop on strangers? It is one thing to be within "earshot" of a conversation; it is another thing entirely to strain one's ears just to be nosey.

Let I sound harsh, let me assure you that I do not mind at all when someone approaches me and begins a conversation — that is my favorite way to meet people. But my interlocution is usually directed exclusively to the new person whom I know is listening, and it is distracting to discover an extra listener who is unaccounted for and strange, no less.

I hope that these few words will take care of the problem without a great deal of hoopla. Any further mention could and should cause more embarrassment for the eavesdroppers, and I do not want to spoil anyone's day. It just stands to reason, though, that those people who have nothing to say can be very annoying to those of us who have something to say...privately. A little mutual respect would be nice.

Skin Calendars New Fad

(CPS) — A number of campuses are marking the new year on a new, somewhat libidinous form of entrepreneurial spirit: pin-up style calendars featuring full color photos of scantily-clad campus beauties, available in both male and female versions.

Ambitious students at various campuses are making a nifty profit from the new calendar craze, with sales running into the thousands of dollars for several of the publications. But not everyone is rushing out to buy the timely novelties, and one college has even issued a resolution condemning the calendars as "sexist."

Todd Headlee, a business major at Arizona State, takes credit for starting the fad when he debuted his "1981 Men of ASU" calendar last January. Headlee says he sold over 3000 calendars the first week they were released.

"For 21 years at ASU there was a girls' calendar put out by one of the fraternities," Headlee recalls. "But it was never really marketed until last Christmas when they came out with the slogan 'Girls of ASU make great Christmas gifts.' That's when I came up with the idea of coming out with a men's calendar."

Headlee's 1981 calendar used pictures of "really attractive" male students at ASU, featuring a different model for each month of the year. "But they were all fully clothed," Headlee quickly adds, noting the photos were "done tastefully and professionally, in no way pornographic."

Since the ASU calendar hit the bookstores, dozens of other campuses have picked up the idea.

At Michigan State, students can choose "The Men of MSU Calendar," which features bare-chested, "clean-cut" male students in a variety of poses, or the newly-released "Women of MSU," which shows a "cross section" of attractive women clad in swimsuits and low-cut dresses.

Marty Karabees, an MSU senior in industrial design, concocted the "Men of MSU Calendar" after seeing Headlee's ASU calendar.

"The calendar is a product of the eighties," Karabees says, "not something that could have happened five years ago." The 13 students pictured are "a great group of guys, not just good-looking, but people too."

Soon after Karabees published his calendar, another student brought out a female version.

Both MSU calendars are reported to have sales in the thousands. University officials say there have been few complaints about them.

But the idea caused complaint at Iowa State. "The Women of Iowa State 1982 Calendar," released this fall by Des Moines businessman Barney Tabach, has been a center of controversy. Members of the ISU faculty and the Government of the Student Body (GSB) have denounced the calendar as stereotypical and unrepresentative.

The GBS recently passed a resolution asserting "the calendar reinforces the fallacy that women are objects of entertainment" and contributes to "the perpetuation of this stereotype."

"Some of the women's groups on campus were disgusted by the calendar," says GSB Vice President T.J. Hentges, who co-sponsored the resolution. "I would hope that in a college campus situation, people could find a variety of interesting things to view besides the beautiful people."

Faculty members are similarly critical. "The women are seen as sex objects," contends Dr. Jean Adams, economics professor and head of the University Committee on Women. She says the calendar doesn't represent ISU women, calling it "sexist."

"Sexism is a relative term," responds calendar publisher Tabach. "I don't think we misrepresented women at ISU. We were looking for women that would photograph well, and one of the criteria for calendar subjects is physical attractiveness."

Tabach claims he tried to get a "cross section" of women to feature, but admits "the calendar is promoting women and their beauty." He's now thinking of publishing a male version. "I don't create the demand. I just react to it."

Calendar magnate Headlee, for one, is reacting with two new calendars for 1982, one male and one female. Retailing at $4.95, the calendars are being sold nationally by B. Dalton Bookstores and Walden Bookstores, in addition to local Tempe stores.

Headlee has already sold over 5000 1982 "Women" calendars, but the "Men of ASU" remains his bestseller. He's already sold 20,000 of them.

"I think the men's calendar is selling because women haven't really been exposed to these type of things before," Headlee speculates. "All the pictures are tasteful and professional."

But the calendars may not lead to financial success on all campuses.

"I'd be surprised if one showed up here," says Dean Vetrus, general manager of the student union at the University of Idaho. There was an uproar in Moscow last year when the student yearbook came out featuring three photos of nude students. "It took a year to blow over," Vetrus says. "This is a very straight, conservative campus."

Event Raises Funds

More than $2000 was raised in the Greenville area last weekend for the Cerebral Palsy Foundation.

Volunteers from East Carolina's Phi Sigma Pi National Honor Fraternity manned the phones for the foundation's annual telethon, which began at 10:30 p.m. Jan. 16 and lasted until 7:30 p.m. the following night.

According to Margaret Milliken, chairman of the local telethon operation, the $2100 raised was a marked increase from last year's total of $743.

Milliken thanked Larry Land for the use of the Coastal Chemical Corporation on Evans Street for the local telethon headquarters, and Domino's for the donation of three large pizzas Sunday afternoon.

FONDA

The Legend Still Thrives Late In Life

By WILLIAM YELVERTON
Style Editor

For the thousands and thousands of unfortunate people who have never had a grandfather to love or hug or converse with, Henry Jaynes Fonda is the perfect choice. He is a man who has endured the toughest profession of all for 56 years, including more than 80 films, dozens of plays, two television series and five wives.

He is a man who is in the latter stages of life, weakening because of a dangerous heart condition. But he continues to work and moves us again in his latest film, On Golden Pond, released in late December. It is in this film that he may deliver his greatest performance in a career that has spanned six decades. The film will be successful not because of Katharine Hepburn's stirring portrayal as Fonda's wife, Ethel Thayer, who has lovingly endured 46 years with a man who is now preparing for death. It is successful because Henry Fonda is Norman Thayer, an honory old sonuvabitch who tries his damndest to show his love for his children — reflections of his relationship with his real children, Peter and Jane, who have followed him into his profession. There will never be another Norman Thayer on the screen. Or another Henry Fonda — off it.

He is a man who is followed by a full-time male nurse wherever he goes. He moves with the aid of a walker from room to room in his Bel-Air home. A hospital bed has been installed in a small room adjacent to his kitchen. Cylindrical oxygen tanks are delivered weekly and stored in a corner of his bedroom. Yet he made and makes On Golden Pond in the year his autobiography has been published. "It could only be done last summer," Fonda said. "If it weren't, who's to know if Katharine Hepburn and I are still alive next summer?" Death will overcome Henry Fonda but sickness will not.

Fonda was born in Grand Island, Nebraska, in 1905 to a pleasant family. As a boy, he admitted "walking across the street to avoid meeting a girl." He is a young man who was taken by his father to see a black man being lynched in the center of town. He is the young man whose most cherished childhood memory is the time he was awakened by his mother to see Haley's Comedy because "it only comes around only once every 76 years."

He began acting 21 years later when Dorothy Brando (Marlon Brando's mother) suggested he take a small part in a town production. The play sold him on the acting profession.

He is the young actor who travelled to New York and auditioned for every play he could, unsuccessfully. But he ventured to Cape Cod where he joined some Ivy Leaguers and became a member of the University Players, befriended James Stewart, Myron McCormick, Joshua Logan and Margaret Sullivan — making her his first wife in 1931. He is the young man who, at age 26, stood painfully outside as his wife made love to producer Jed Harris.

They were divorced a few months later. She married Fonda's close friend, agent Leland Hayward — something that Fonda never spoke with him about.

During the Depression, Fonda, Stewart, Logan and McCormick shared an apartment in New York, depending mostly on rice, but they eventually found work. In 1934, Fonda appeared in New Faces, a comedy review with Imogene Coca. Hayward saw him and became his agent, flying him to Hollywood to meet with producer Walter Wanger, who offered him $1000 a week for two pictures a year. It was a very big step for a Nebraska farm boy.

His first film was Farmer Takes A Wife, based on the play he starred in while in New York. Five pictures later, he met Frances Seymour Brokaw while on location in France. In 1936, she became his second wife and mother of Jane and Peter.

From the time he enlisted in the Navy in 1942 — he was a quartermaster in the Pacific, later becoming a lieutenant and receiving the Bronze Star and a Presidential citation — he made 28 films. In 1945, he returned to Hollywood and made six more films in a three-year span. The best of these include My Darling Clementine, The Fugitive and Fort Apache.

He decided to take a leave from the movies for seven years and returned to the East where he portrayed Mister Roberts, his longest-running and most memorable stage

Conflicts Within

Gil Carter (Henry Fonda), left, and his sidekick Art Croft (Henry Morgan) have a shot of whiskey after the long spring roundup in The Ox-Bow Incident, a film about inner reasons that drive men to lawless killings. It is not a wild emotional shocker that displays mobs storming a jail, whipped up to a frenzy, killing in anger. Instead, quietly, inexorably, it moves by small stages to a triple hanging in the lonely Ox-Bow Valley.

Tom Joad says farewell to his mother in the motion picture classic, The Grapes of Wrath.

Mister Roberts after his wife committed suicide after a mental breakdown in 1950. "I don't like to be reminded of what happened," Fonda said. "It was a tragedy." The two had agreed to divorce before the suicide.

Fonda had befriended 21-year-old Susan Blanchard and married her in 1950. They adopted a baby girl, Amy, but were divorced five years afterward.

After the film version of Mister Roberts, Fonda went to Rome to work on War and Peace. He met Aldera Franchetti during the filming, and they were married in March of 1957. That was the year of 12 Angry Men, the only film Fonda ever produced, and The Wrong Man, an Alfred Hitchcock picture.

He divorced Aldera in 1962 and met Shirlee Adams, a stewardess, making her his last wife in 1965 — despite saying he would never marry again.

Fonda's Tom Joad, Wyatt Earp, Young Mr. Lincoln and Mister Roberts are popular, but some of his most wonderful moments have come on the stage in The Caine Mutiny Court Martial, Two for the Seesaw, A Gift of Time (Paul Newman said this was "just the goddamnest, greatest performance I've ever seen"), Clarence Darrow, First Monday in October and the most recent, Showdown at the Adobe Motel.

Fonda is a rare breed of actor who has never had bad reviews. Critic Manny Farber wrote in 1966 that Fonda "seems to be vouchsafing his emotion and talent to the audience in tiny blips...Fonda's entry into a scene is that of a man walking backward, slanting himself away from the public eye." He played many types of characters early in his career, which he seemed to do with ease; he was, in fact, one of us — a part of his audience. In Young Mr. Lincoln he won debates because he made fun of his opponent's laissez-faire. In The Grapes of Wrath and Jesse James, he is forced to be a political activist — a corrupt legal system has slapped him but he comes out a hero.

He was a brilliant comic in The Lady Eve, where he falls for con woman Barbara Stanwyck and she, in turn, falls for him — head over heels in love.

He is an avid deep-sea fisherman, beekeeper, kiteflier and organic gardener. He was rumored to be the inspiration for Al Capp's L'il Abner. Eugene O'Neill is his favorite playwright, and he likes Woody Allen comedy.

He has never been the recipient of an Academy Award, even though he received an honorary Oscar last year for his contribution to the world of films. He says if he is nominated for an award this year he will not attend. "I never think about an Oscar," he says. Why? "I will not be there and put up with that shit," he told Playboy contributing editor Lawrence Grobel. "I watch it on TV and five contenders for Best Actor are all out there and at various times the camera will go to them for close-ups...The idea of the camera coming to me while they're naming the other actors, then whoever wins kisses their wife or girl or husband and runs up there and takes it and makes a speech...No way!"

But he did attend the American Film Institute life-achievement awards, presented at the Kennedy Center, and we did see the emotional side of Henry Jaynes Fonda. "The Kennedy Center was," he says, "particularly at the end when they had a Navy choral group on stage and they started singing 'Anchors Away' and then sang 'The Red River Valley' which is Grapes of Wrath. I cried like a baby, tears just streaming out of my eyes. I just couldn't stop crying. The Navy group came up both aisles in line and they saluted, 'Good night, Mr. Fonda.' It just broke me up."

Fonda is sick now with a bad heart, but he has had a new pacemaker put in and is home recovering today — only five years before Halley's Comet makes its next pass.

Festival A Cultural Blessing For City

CHARLESTON, S.C. (UPI) — The sixth annual Spoleto Festival U.S.A., a world renowned potpourri of the performing and visual arts, has turned into a financial and cultural blessing for the city, Mayor Joseph P. Riley said Wednesday.

"Spoleto has become an economic and cultural treasure for the Charleston community that has far exceeded our fondest hopes," said Riley, who has supported the festival since its inception.

The festival has drawn the world's best performers and whetted the appetite of local citizens for more cultural events in the city, Riley told reporters at a news conference called to announce part of the 1982 Spoleto program.

It attracts thousands of visitors to the historic city and is directly responsible for more than $40 million being spent in South Carolina, he said.

John W. Kessler, president of the Spoleto board, who described this year's diversified program as "well balanced," said ticket sales, which will account for almost half of the $2.1 million budget, are ahead of schedule.

Actual monies raised or pledges received from the recently concluded subscription series mailing amounted to $650,000, a $250,000 increase over the same period a year ago, he said.

"The quality of this year's program should help assure us of strong ticket sales and the most successful Spoleto ever," said General Manager James T. Kearney.

Spoleto has made a slight profit for three years after going over its budget the first two seasons. While $60,000 is still owed from previous years, this year's budget is currently in the black, Kessler said.

Some of the program which includes Erich Leinsdorf conducting three performances of the New York Philharmonic; founder and artistic director Gian Carlo Menotti directing his only play, "The Leper;" and a major production of Shostakovich's opera "Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District" was announced earlier. The festival begins May 21 and concludes June 6.

The Oakland Ballet Company; the Jose Limon Dance Company; the Laura Dean Dancers and Musicians, who will perform a new work commissioned by festival officials; and Senta Driver's group Harry are the featured dance programs.

The fireworks-laced finale at Middleton Place plantation near Charleston will feature an all-Ravel program by the festival orchestra.

Pirates Lose To Campbell

RALEIGH — Campbell University jumped to an 11-point halftime lead and built it to 18 early in the second half, then held on for a narrow 62-60 win over East Carolina Wednesday night.

The Pirates, playing without injured guard Tony Byles, shot just 34 percent from the field in the first half and 36 percent for the game.

The Camels wasted little time jumping ahead, owning a 17-4 lead with 9:33 remaining in the first period. The club went into the lockerroom ahead at halftime 37-26.

Campbell's first-half advantage runs parallel with its action on the free throw line. The Camels made 17 of 21 from the charity stripe, while the Pirates had just five free throws and made four.

Campbell built the advantage to 48-30 with 15:38 remaining in the game before the Pirates made an amazing comeback that fell just short of fulfillment.

ECU outscored Campbell 25-6 over a nine-minute span and took a 55-54 lead with 6:11 remaining on a jumper by Charles Watkins.

After relinquishing the lead, ECU regained the advantage with 47 seconds remaining when Thom Brown connected from ten, putting the Bucs ahead 60-59.

Harvey Smith fired a jumper in with ten seconds remaining to give Campbell a one-point advantage, 61-60. The Pirates were unable to score on their next possession and were forced to foul. Ron Curtis made one of two free throws to bring the final score to 62-60.

Curtis, a senior playing in his last collegiate game against the Pirates, led the Camels with 21 points. Center Tony Britto was close behind with 15.

Forwards Al Mack and Charles Green each pumped in 12 points to pace the Pirates. Guard Mike Fox was ECU's only other player scoring in double figures, tallying ten.

The Pirates fell to 6-8 with the loss and now face the unenviable task of traveling to again on Saturday. The opponent then will be 15th-ranked N.C. State.

CAMPBELL 62:
Curtis 5-11 (20-21), Britto 5-5 (15-15), Smith 1-0 (1-2), Newton 3-6 (12-32), Spain 1-2 (3-4), Elbaum 1-0 (1-2), Griffin 3-0 (5-6).
ECU 60:
Hargrove 0-1 (2-1), Green 5-2 (12-12), Gibson 0-0 (0-0), McLendon 0-1 (2-4), Golden 0-0 (0-0), Fox 4-2 (2-10), Mack 5-2 (6-12), McNair 2-2 (2-6), Brown 1-0 (1-2), Rest 0-0 (0-0), Watkins 2-0 (4-4).
Halftime—Campbell 38, ECU 27. Fouled out—Green, Hargrove.

Trying For A Tap

ECU forwards Charles Green (34) and Thom Brown (42) try for a tap in during an early-season game. The two and their teammates tried to no avail last night to defeat a fired-up Campbell squad in Raleigh. Nevitt, Zone Defense Have Keyed State Start

By CHARLES CHANDLER
Sports Editor

Assistant coach Ray Martin says there is one big reason why the N.C. State basketball team has come from last year's 14-13 record to its current standing of 15th-ranked in the nation.

That reason will certainly play a big factor when East Carolina invades Reynolds Coliseum Saturday night to play its second ranked team of the year, the other being now-second-ranked Missouri.

No, the reason Martin mentioned is not the superb guard play the Wolfpack has been getting from Sidney Lowe and Thurl Bailey.

"There have been a lot of things that have helped us improve," Martin said Wednesday via telephone from Raleigh. "But if you have to single out one person, it's got to be Chuck Nevitt."

The 7-5 senior center has, indeed, come a long way. Four years ago he stumbled his way into games, but only if they were decided. Never did Nevitt play when the game was at stake.

That changed somewhat last season, the big guy maturing somewhat and coming into his own in last year's ACC Tournament.

This year, though, Nevitt is a starter and a real force in the State attack. He has neither great scoring or rebounding statistics. It is the things that don't make the stat sheets that Nevitt does best, Martin said.

"Chuck makes it very hard for people to score on us inside," said the Wolfpack assistant coach. "We've had a lot of success with the zone defense and Chuck is the main reason. When Chuck is in the game, and not in foul trouble, it is very hard for people to get the ball inside on us."

Alongside Nevitt on the State starting frontline is 6-7 Scott Parzych and 6-11 Thurl Bailey. The tallest ECU starter is 6-8 center Michael Gibson.

Could the big size differential plus ECU's 6-7 record (prior to Wednesday night's game with Campbell) mean the Wolfpack might be emotionally down following consecutive games against Big Four opponents UNC, Wake Forest and Duke?

"This time of year you never want a let-down," Martin said.

"Our kids realize the importance of conference games and the importance of non-conference games. We need to play just as well against East Carolina Saturday as we have against the ACC teams. We know that Dave Odom (ECU coach) does a great job, so I think we'll be just as up for the ECU game as any other."

Something the Pirates will no doubt have to deal with is the State zone defense that has held opponents to but 49.3 points per game and 40.4 percent field goal shooting.

The big front line is the core of that defense. The one game the Wolfpack lost badly, by 20 points to top-ranked North Carolina, they were forced out of the zone, Martin says, though, that the State coaching staff has confidence in its man-to-man defense as well.

"Certainly the zone has become our forte this year," he said. "You stay with what has been successful. But we don't think we're at a big disadvantage when we're in the man. We just make some adjustments."

When the Wolfpack switches to the man-to-man coverage, head coach Valvano usually sends forward Harold Thompson and freshman Center Cozell McQueen into the game for Nevitt and Parzych.

"That adds another dimension to our defense," Martin said. "But Cozell and Harold are very quick and agile on defense. They are better suited for the man-to-man and have done a great job for us."

Most of the season the Wolfpack has tried to play a slower-than-average half-court game, choosing not to run against quicker teams. Martin says, though, that State — if allowed — can run.

"Our team more or less counter punches," said Martin. "We react to what other teams give us and see what happens."

The State attack is led by sharp-shooting Derrick Whittenburg, who is the owner of a 15.4 average. Bailey is next at 14.0, while Parzych averages 9.7 points per game and Lowe 9.0.

The ECU-State matchup gets underway Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available in the Minges ticket office, selling for $6 to students. The game will be broadcast on the radio by WOOW-AM (1460) and WTTN-FM (93.0).

Tony Byles To Sit Out 2-3 Weeks

A stress fracture in Tony Byles' left hand will keep the East Carolina basketball player out of action for at least two weeks, officials said Wednesday.

Byles, the team's starting point guard and floor leader, will have his hand in a cast for two to three weeks. The university's Sports Medicine Division predicts he will need a gradual recuperation period after the cast is removed.

Byles apparently broke his hand during a Sunday practice, but did not have it examined for a fracture until Tuesday when it continued to bother him.

The 6-4 senior is the team's leading scorer with an average of 10.8 points per game.

Sophomore Herbert Gilchrist got the starting call last night against Campbell as Byles' replacement. Also expected to see time at the point position are freshman Bruce Peartree and junior Charles Watkins.

Super Bowl Features Two Cinderella Stories

Everyone knows all about Cinderella in the fairy tales who wore the glass slipper. What everyone wants to know now is who will wear that slipper Sunday night.

That's right — Sunday night. You know, after the big game. The BIG game. THE big game.

The two participants in Super Bowl XVI, to be played Sunday in Pontiac, Michigan, are both longtime also-rans.

Just imagine: the time is one year ago. Your best friend walks up to you and tells you that the Cincinnati Bengals and San Francisco 49ers will be playing in the Super Bowl in one year. You'd probably have sent for a doctor.

But that is exactly what has happened. The two clubs won but a total of 11 games between them in 1980. Both made remarkable turn-arounds in combining for 25 regular season wins in 1981.

Both, despite leading their respective conferences in regular season wins, were not really the favorites to go to Pontiac heading into the playoffs.

In Cincinnati's AFC, the betting man put his money on Miami and San Diego. In San Francisco's NFC, nearly everyone looked for Dallas to steal the show.

Both the Bengals and 49ers could have said, like Rodney Dangerfield, "We get no respect." The solution to that problem, they found, was simple — go out and earn that much-wanted respect.

And that they did. The Bengals beat a very good Buffalo team and then annihilated the explosive San Diego Chargers. San Francisco got by the New York Giants easily enough, then surprised everyone with a remarkable comeback win over the Cowboys.

Why the sudden resurgence in the two teams? The answer to that coaching lies somewhat in the coaching. Both Cincinnati's Forrest Gregg and San Francisco's Bill Walsh have the utmost respect of their players.

Gregg, the tough disciplinarian, and Walsh, with the innovative mind, have turned in two of the best single-season coaching jobs in NFL history.

But both have had a good amount of talent to work with, and both have used that talent to the utmost.

The pre-game attention Cincinnati has received has centered in great part around All-Pro quarterback Ken Anderson, who was recently named the league's Most Valuable Player. There is much more to the Bengals, though.

Cincinnati is loaded with former number one draft picks. Among them are three big weapons that Anderson has at his disposal on offense — receivers Chris Collinsworth and Isaac Hayes, as well as fullback Pete Johnson.

The Bengal defense is hefty up-front with three youngsters that are just coming into their own.

The 49er defense, on the other hand, is made up of a blend of youth and experience. Veterans like Fred Dean and Jack Reynolds have combined with rookies like Ronnie Lott to make the SF defense quite formidable.

Offensively, the key for San Francisco is quarterback Joe Montana. "The Comeback Kid," as he has come to be known, has had a remarkable season.

Montana can throw to a pair of crafty receivers in Freddie Solomon and Dwight Clark.

Clark is one of three former Clemson players that start for the 49ers, the other two being defensive linemen Archie Reese and Jim Stuckey.

So, know we have the two Cinderella teams, and have noted their strengths. The question is — who will win Sunday?

The two squads played a couple of months ago and the 49ers got the best of it, 21-3. You can bet things will be different on Super Sunday.

Neither club will be lacking in desire. Both are new to the Super Sunday aura and will be pumped up higher than Dean Martin on a Saturday night.

The edge here goes to San Francisco. As 49er Coach Walsh said before the Dallas game, "I don't know why we're so successful. There's just a bunch of young guys on this team who don't know how to lose."

The pick is San Francisco, 31-28.

Swimming Has Become Her Forte

By CYNTHIA PLEASANTS
Staff Writer

How many athletes do you know who can switch from one sport to another and end up breaking varsity records? Nan George, a member of the East Carolina swim team, has done just that.

George, a sophomore from Manassas, Virginia, participated on the Pirate gymnastics team until the program was dropped last year. Having been a competitive swimmer in high school, George decided to talk with ECU's swim coach, Ray Scharf, about the prospect of taking to the waters again.

Scharf said he knew early that the versatile George had potential because her try-out times were so good.

"She's a gifted individual," Scharf said. "She has a lot of natural ability."

The swimming season just halfway over, George has already broken individual varsity records in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle competition. In addition, she has been a member of the 200- and 400-yard relay teams, which have both established new school marks.

"Nan is a super kid and a hard worker," Scharf said. "She is a tremendous asset to our team. I wish we had ten more like her."

Scharf cited George's positive attitude and determination as reasons for her recent success.

Mollie DeLozier, an assistant swim coach, agrees wholeheartedly with Scharf.

"She is one of the most dedicated swimmers on the team — a very responsible individual and a tough competitor."

Her coaches say she has handled the transition from gymnastics to swimming well, but George disagrees.

"It takes longer to get into condition for competitive swimming and I've been out of practice for two years," she added, however, that being a gymnast helped her to stay flexible, making the conditioning for swimming easier.

George also had to adjust to her new teammates, which she described as rowdier than her former cohorts. "Gymnasts," she said, "are quiet because they have to concentrate

"I wouldn't want to feel that I had ever let my teammates down / I want to finish as one of the top three in the nation."

— Nan George

George described herself as a true competitor, but not against others.

"I don't worry about the person swimming next to me," she said. "They're only pushing me to do better."

Though she holds records in both individual and relay events, George said she enjoys going solo better. She said relay competition carries too much pressure.

"I wouldn't want to feel that I had ever let my teammates down," she said.

George admitted, despite her struggles to adjust, that she has been pleased with her accomplishments. "I'm right on schedule. I have set goals and, so far, I have achieved them."

George believes her strong religious faith has contributed to her success.

She and her teammates are looking forward to their meet tonight (Thursday) with UNC-Chapel Hill. George feels the meet will be a tough one, one that will give her a chance to improve her time.

Coach Scharf said he is looking for big things from George come the national finals, which will be held at the end of the season in Moscow, Idaho. George has already decided on her goal for the nationals.

Swimming Showdown Set Tonight

Powerful North Carolina invades the Minges Natatorium this evening to take on the East Carolina men's and women's swimming teams.

Highlighting the two meets is the matchup of two very strong 200-yard relay among the women. The Tar Heel relay squad is ranked number one in the nation, while the Lady Pirates are ranked fourth.

The double dual meet is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.
