Draft Listing Linked To Aid Forms

By DARRYL BROWN
Assistant News Editor

Proposed rules requiring all students to verify registration for the selective service in order to receive federal financial aid should take effect next month, putting additional responsibilities on both students and school administrators.

According to the Federal Register of Jan. 27, Secretary of Education Terrel H. Bell and Director of the Selective Service Thomas K. Turnage proposed the rules making students responsible for providing written proof of draft registration and forcing universities to make students verify registration before awarding aid.

The action comes after debate on how to enforce a federal law insisting that any student required to register for the draft do so before receiving any Title IV federal aid funds. The rule was signed into law by President Reagan in September as part of the Defense Department Authorization Act.

Under the new rules, all students will be required to complete a "Statement of Registration Compliance as a criterion for receipt of aid," according to a letter from the Department of Education. The registration rule takes effect in the 1983-84 school year.

Even students not required to register must complete the form, including females, students under 18, active members in the armed services or those born before 1960. "Each student certifies the reason why he or she is not required to be registered or that he is registered," the letter said.

The new compliance form will be added to the standard statement of educational purpose, in which all students requesting aid certify that they will use the funds for expenses at a specific school.

Students will have to show a registration acknowledgement letter to prove their compliance with federal requirements. The letter should be received by the student after he has registered, but if he no longer has it, he must request another copy from Selective Service System in Chicago. Forms to request a copy of the letter are available at the ECU Financial Aid Office, said Robert Boudreaux, director of the office.

Boudreaux said that no aid checks would be awarded until the written verification of registration is given to his office. He added, however, that the office could probably avoid delays caused by the new rule by processing all forms and making awards of financial aid even if the letter of acknowledgement isn't given to the office.

When the letter is received, the check can be given to the student. No checks can be given to students who are required to register if they do not provide the acknowledgement letter as proof of compliance, even if they otherwise would receive an award.

Boudreaux said that one problem with the new regulation would be with students who could not turn in the written proof on time to receive aid. The federal government will allow a two or three month deferment of registration proof in special circumstances so students can enter school even if they do not have their acknowledgement letter yet.

However, Boudreaux said, his office staff probably isn't large enough to follow up students and get verification later, so the reprieve probably won't be available to ECU students.

Radiation Therapy Center

Medical School Facility Started

By PATRICK O'NEILL
Staff Writer

Official ground-breaking ceremonies were held Saturday as construction started on the School of Medicine's new Radiation Therapy Center.

The $5.2 million project, which was part of the original plan for ECU's Science Medical Center, will bring up-to-date cancer treatment capabilities to eastern North Carolina. The original funds for the therapy center had been cut because of money problems.

"We're just delighted," said Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of ECU's medical school. "The architects have come up with a very beautiful and functional building." The building is ideal for providing both in-patient and out-patient care.

Laupus joined Chancellor John M. Howell, ECU Board of Trustees Chairman C. Ralph Kinsey Jr., Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board Chairman G. Henry Leslie, Pitt County Commission Chairman Charles P. Gaskins, UNC Board of Governors member David J. Whichard II and hospital president Jack W. Richardson as speakers during the ceremony.

"We have been developing a full range of therapeutic programs for cancer treatment," Laupus told The East Carolinian. These include both diagnostic studies and surgical and chemotherapy treatments, he said.

Laupus said the addition of the new therapy center would mean citizens of eastern North Carolina could now obtain "the full range of cancer care close to home... with the latest, most modern up-to-date equipment."

Radiation therapy is an established treatment against many forms of cancer.

Laupus said that because of inflation, more money was needed than originally budgeted for the medical complex. The funds for the radiation therapy building were reapropriated by the N.C. General Assembly last July.

Nearly half of the budget for the 24,000-square-foot building will be spent for two linear accelerators along with a computer, a radiation therapy simulator and other equipment.

"The 20-million-electron-volt (accelerator) will enable us to function on the cutting edge of accommodate a larger accelerator unit."

Laupus said ECU's medical program would be on-going and keep up with the latest advances in medical technology. An expansion of the facility's services is planned by Laupus and the medical school in the future until it fully meets the needs of the citizens of North Carolina.

Laupus said a search for a director of the new program will be conducted during the next year.

Comparable therapy centers are now located at Duke University, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the Medical College of Virginia.

SGA Legislature Awards School Of Music Grant

SGA Speaker Gary Williams

The SGA Legislature voted 28-10 with one abstention to override president Eric Henderson's veto of a bill to give $350 to the School of Art. The two-thirds required vote came after an explanation of the veto by Henderson in which he said the administration of the art school was taking advantage of the legislature.

Henderson said the money, which will now be used to make the last payment on an already-constructed showcase in the Joyner Fine Arts building, was demanded by the art faculty after budget cuts had taken the money originally planned to fund the project. He said they should have planned for the cuts and not come to the SGA when their money ran out.

The legislators in favor of the vetoed bill stated the bill was for the art students to display their projects, and was therefore a worthwhile cause. The margin of victory was two votes.

Another veto by Henderson failed to be overridden. The Financial Management Act, passed by the legislature three weeks ago, was sent back to committee after a dispute over how much money was to be left in reserve after the SGA's annual appropriations.

The management act vetoed by Henderson required that 25 percent of SGA money not be given out during the budgeting process. It called for the funds to be saved for the next year's legislature to use as it sees fit.

Henderson's apprehension about the bill centered around the 25 percent to be held back. He said that such a large reserve would hamper the SGA's budget process.

Speaker of the House Gary Williams supported Henderson, saying the whole purpose of having a budget was to appropriate funds in advance.

Those opposed to the veto, saying this year's legislature had no right to use next year's funds, were defeated by a voice vote.

Speaker of the House Williams also announced that the '83-'84 elections of executive officers will be held March 30. He said anyone wishing to file to run for president, vice president, secretary and treasurer can do so between Feb. 28 and March 18. Deadline for elections chairman is March 4. Williams said the candidate's meeting will be held March 21.

Williams said groups requesting SGA funds for the next year should submit a budget by March 21.

Legislature To Vote On Weapons Freeze

By PATRICK O'NEILL
Staff Writer

A proposal for a joint resolution urging the U.S. government to seek a bilateral, verifiable freeze and reduction in nuclear weapons was introduced into the N.C. General Assembly Wednesday.

If passed, North Carolina would become the 18th state to pass a nuclear freeze resolution in at least one chamber of the state legislature. Freeze referendums passed in nine of 10 state in last November's elections.

The N.C. freeze resolution was introduced Wednesday by Rep. H. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, and Sen. W. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham. Thirty-three of the state's 50 senators and 54 of 120 state representatives co-sponsored the resolution.

"Last week, I joined other legislators at the Governor's mansion, where we discussed North Carolina in the year 2000," Helms said in a news release. "During that discussion, I couldn't help thinking of the fragility of our assumption that North Carolina, as we know it today, will still be here in the year 2000."

"In our hearts, we all fear that one day these terrible machines of destruction will be put to use, as all of mankind's (machines) eventually are, resulting in a final, universal holocaust; sparing no one and no nation," Sen. Hancock said.

The 200 word-resolution says that in 1949 the N.C. General Assembly adopted a resolution expressing North Carolina's desire for world peace. Because of the nuclear arms race, which has continued for the past 37 years, that desire is still unfulfilled, the bill said.

"Whereas, the General Assembly of North Carolina in adopting Resolution 37, Session Laws of 1949 recognized that 'war is now a threat to the very existence of our civilization, because modern science has produced weapons of war which are overwhelmingly destructive and against which there is no sure defense,' ...we further memorialize the president and the Congress of the United States, proceeding from the adoption of a nuclear weapons freeze by the United States and the Soviet Union," the resolution states.

If passed, the resolution would be sent by N.C. Secretary of State Thad Eure to President Reagan, members of the N.C. Congressional delegation and Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr.

"The state is being asked to pass a resolution addressed to the United States government," said ECU English instructor Edith Webber.

"The ultimate aim is to cut down nuclear stockpiles, but the first thing you have to do is quit building up... in order to reduce, you've got to stop production." Webber is one of the 1st Congressional District coordinators lobbying in support of nuclear freeze proposals both locally and nationally.

Webber called "ridiculous" statements made by President Reagan and some of his advisors charging that the Soviet Union and the KGB were behind the nuclear freeze movement.

Several city and town councils in North Carolina have passed freeze resolutions.

A poll conducted last October by the UNC School of Journalism indicated 52 percent of North Carolinians favor a bilateral freeze, while only 16.5 percent oppose it.

Board Urges Stricter Hazardous Waste Rules

The N.C. Governor's Waste Management Board outlined its plan Wednesday for state regulations that would be more stringent than current federal rules regarding the disposal of toxic hazardous waste. Department of Human Resources Secretary Sarah T. Morrow is one of a six member panel on waste management who attended the board's meeting in the Willis Building.

Morrow said the two overriding concerns of the board were the type of materials allowed in landfills and the number and kinds of liners required for landfills and surface impoundments.

"Under the new EPA regulations, some volatile and liquid wastes could be allowed in landfills," Morrow said. "We must not allow that to happen."

Although North Carolina presently does not have any active landfills for hazardous waste disposal, there are now requests before the General Assembly to allow them.

The board's presentation expressed opposition to the use of landfills as a primary waste disposal measure, but several citizens objected to even considering the use of landfills.

Claude "Buck" O'Shields, chairman of the board, said the panel was in favor of recovery, reprocessing and recycling of hazardous wastes and favors the use of landfills only if no alternative is available.

"The way the EPA is regulating toxic hazardous waste is not in the best interest of the general public," said ECU environmental health graduate student Larry Martin, who gave a presentation at the meeting on behalf of the Sierra Club, an environmentalist group.

Martin cited three main areas of concern: the imposition of strict liability insurance for companies that handle hazardous waste; the revocation of the Hardison amendment, called the handcuff amendment by environmentalists because it limits N.C. regulators to legislation no more strict than EPA standards; and annual reports to the public on the conditions of waste sites and disposal procedures.

Several local representatives from industry were present at the public meeting. Burroughs Wellcome manager John McConney told the board that his company believes all wastes, hazardous and otherwise, should be disposed of in a responsible and safe manner. "There is no manufacturing operation that doesn't produce some waste which is classified as hazardous," McConney said.

Martin accused the EPA of "walking hand in hand" with industry, saying the EPA's hazardous waste regulations were not adequate. Martin hopes the state will authorize matching funds needed for the state to be eligible for federal "superfund" grants for the purpose of cleaning up hazardous waste.

O'Shields said that the board would be submitting its recommendation that the board be allowed to toughen up EPA standards. Martin said that input from the public would be crucial during this time. "I hope we can get these recommendations through," Martin added.

Bill Wants Funds Cut To Schools Aiding Resisters

Boudreaux urged all students registered for the draft to secure their Registration Acknowledgement Letter as soon as possible. If they don't have one, they should write to the selective service as soon as possible, since it may take more than two to three weeks promised by the government to send a new copy of the acknowledgement letter.

On Capitol Hill, Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., recently proposed a bill in the House requiring that schools who give private funds to nonregistrants have all federal funds and grants withdrawn.

Several schools around the country have promised to replace federal financial aid not awarded to nonregistrants with private funds.

Boudreaux said ECU was proposing no such program because it does not have the private resources to replace federal funds.

Solomon admitted that the chances for the bill's passage were slim, but that it may have a better chance for passage as an amendment to a defense bill.

Vietnam Veteran Pleads Innocent To IBM Killing

DURHAM (UPI) — A Vietnam veteran accused of killing an IBM employee during a shooting spree last summer in the Research Triangle Park pleaded innocent Monday to murder and other charges.

A lawyer for

Leonard Avery entered the plea in Durham Superior Court after Judge Thomas Lee rejected defense efforts to delay Avery's arraignment.

Although defense attorney Thomas Loflin entered an innocent plea, he said he will present an insanity defense when Avery goes on trial for murder, assault and arson.

Loflin also requested court-ordered drug therapy to restore Avery's memory of the incident last Aug. 30 at an IBM facility.

Witnesses said a man dressed in military fatigues entered the plant and opened fire with a semi-automatic rifle, killing one worker and wounding several others. The man also threw several fire bombs before leaving.

O'Neill was arrested while taking part in a demonstration against U.S. aid to El Salvador.

O'Neill said he took part in civil disobedience as a last resort. He related that he had tried all other democratic means available to him. He faces a possible 90-day prison sentence.

The Aid Dilemma

Congress Oversteps Boundaries

If a bill recently introduced in Congress becomes law, colleges and universities that help out students who refuse to register for the draft may get in as much trouble as the students themselves.

Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., a congressional proponent of military registration who's alarmed by college administrators' promises to replace financial aid lost by nonregistrants, is trying to extend the link between colleges and the draft to private forms of financial aid.

As of July 1, college men will have to show proof they've registered for the draft in order to get federal financial aid.

But several institutions around the country, like Earlham College in Indiana and Haverford College in Pennsylvania, have pledged to get private aid for nonregistrants whose federal aid is cut off.

Thus, Solomon's bill proposes punishing colleges that lend money to draft resisters by withdrawing all federal funds and grants from the schools.

Once again, the dilemma is set. Questions arise as to the legalities involved in an institution's condoning felony violations, and by granting aid to draft registration resisters, that's just what these colleges will be doing — at least in the eyes of government officials, who view such assistance in the same light as aiding murderers and common criminals.

But universities, on the other hand, will undoubtedly argue that draft registration resisters who they deem worthy have just as much right to private financial assistance as anyone else. After all, private forms of educational aid are independent from federal control. Thus, administering these grants should and must be at the discretion of the institutions themselves, with no outside influence. And, without a doubt, the impending threat of losing all federal funding severely hampers an institution's options.

Despite admitting that survival without federal aid would be nothing short of impossible, most college officials who have pledged to support nonregistrants are not intimidated by the new proposal. "If a student is denied federal aid," contends Kathy Malutich, aid director at Earlham, "for whatever reason, and he still has an unmet need, then we feel we have a commitment to fill that need.

"These students wouldn't be denied an education because they resisted the draft per se," she explains. "It's a question of whether or not they have the money."

"We just don't have the money," says University of Minnesota aid Director Robert Misenko. "If a student who is already getting private funds turns out to be a nonregistrant, I would say to that person you might as well forget about pursuing a higher education. Virtually no one gets through school these days without some form of aid. What the government is denying these people isn't money. It's the right to an education."

But the major question at stake here is not the legality of draft registration. Rather, the focal point of this argument is the question of whether or not the federal government has the right to hamper an institution's options on how to issue its own private funds to whomever it chooses.

It would seem the purpose of private funding programs would be to enable an institution of higher learning to use its own discretion in doling out money.

Some may contend that nonregistrants deny themselves of federal rights and privileges when they take the option not to register. But whether or not this is a legitimate argument is beside the point, since accepting assistance from a private aid program has nothing to do whatsoever with any governmental benefits.

Proponents of the new bill have promised to fight for its passage in Congress and to re-introduce similar legislation if this particular bill does not pass.

But Congress would do well to divert its attention from this specific issue and re-focus on the issue of prosecution of all nonregistrants. The random prosecutions which have been carried out to date only exemplify the federal government's inadequacy at dealing with the problem of registration resisters. Punishing nonregistrants is the responsibility of the federal government, not financial aid offices. Congress passed the registration law; it's up to them to carry out its enforcement.

'Man's Inhumanity To Man'

By MIKE HUGHES

Man's inhumanity to man....

Unfortunately, this all-too-familiar tragic theme seems, now more than ever, destined to carry the world through the 80s. And now, more than ever, the concepts of peace and justice seem but distant ideals. The dream that history has shown to be always just beyond our grasp now seems further from realization than ever before.

Man's inhumanity to man....

First came the wanton executions of men, women and children in Iran. Because their beliefs dictated otherwise, because they could not bring it upon themselves to support a murderous Khomeini regime, hundreds of lives have been terminated by the "righteous" of Iran since 1979.

Then came the tragic mass slayings in the Palestinian refugee camps at Chatilla and Shabra. Possessed by hatred, determined at all costs not to understand the concepts of equality and peaceful co-existence, teams of Christian (the ultimate irony) militiamen, again "righteous" in their own twisted minds, rode through the bleak oases of the downtrodden refugees, the outcasts of the Middle East, killing every living being in sight.

But deny it as we would certainly like to, tragic events of this sort do offer a lesson. What's done is done. However, as if this act of senseless bloodshed weren't horrible and horrifying enough by itself, the initial reaction of leaders in the surrounding Middle East nations was not heart-felt sorrow. In fact, aside from affecting perverse finger-pointing accusations at one another, the slayings at Chatilla and Shabra seemed to have little effect on those whose negligence made the killings possible.

The most recent instance of man's inhumanity to man occurred last Friday, when Hindu tribesmen, wielding hatchets, spears, machetes and old firearms, killed 600 to 1,000 Moslem villagers for defying an election boycott in the violence-torn Assam state in northeast India. Reports coming from New Delhi said the tribesmen rampaged through 17 villages in the state's Nelli district, stabbing, shooting and mutilating helpless victims... "hacking them to death."

One journalist who visited the scene reported that in the remains, "There are women and children with disfigured faces... children hobbling about with gaping wounds in their stomachs. Paddy fields between Nelli and the affected villages are strewn with thirsty and exhausted wounded, their wounds smeared with mud."

These disgusting and senseless events lead to but one question: Why? To what possible end could such mutilation and hatred be aimed?

The answer, as always, makes as little sense, holds as little meaning, as the killings themselves. Spokesmen for those responsible for the slayings said the Hindus were angry that the Moslem villagers had defied a boycott of the scheduled elections.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi ordered elections in the state in January after talks collapsed with the powerful student-led Assamese native movement, which demanded that officials revise voter lists and expel the Bengali-speaking Moslem settlers.

Thus, most of the violence stems from a widespread movement among Assam's predominant Hindu population to disenfranchise and expel more than 1 million Moslem settlers who have immigrated since 1961 from Bangladesh, formerly East Pakistan. The Hindus want the Moslems out, so what do they do? They attempt their own version of a small-scale genocide.

And although these three isolated events of recent history have, indeed, attracted the greatest media attention, they are, by no means, to be misconstrued as unique. Mass murders continue to be carried out all over the world by fascist regimes and power-hungry juntas. And not all are so conveniently distant from the home front. In fact, logic and history tell us that the turmoil and bloodshed in El Salvador, Nicaragua and Guatemala, among other neighboring nations, has just begun.

Inherent in a column of this sort is the realization that mere words are practically worthless. And they are. After all, nothing ever written, even by the greatest of minds, has ever, will ever, reverse the professed hatred and injustice that have guided our planet throughout history.

But however worthless the words, however mental the essay, we must all be made aware of the fact that the world as it is, with man's continued inhumanity to man, is leading us down a one-way path... to destruction.

Afghan Rebels Call For American Support; But Military Aid Is A Dangerous Proposal

By PAT O'NEILL

"There is a tragedy going on in this world. I feel the people of the free world should know about it."

— Afghan Freedom Fighter Omar Samad

Since 1979, the Soviet Union has occupied, dominated and controlled the country of Afghanistan. The U.S.S.R. continues to spread its wrath of violence and murder on an innocent populace. The visit to ECU on Feb. 9 by the three Afghan freedom fighters gave me a broader perspective on the magnitude and dimension of the Soviets' actions.

Like Samad said, there is a tragedy going on... and indeed, something needs to be done. The three freedom fighters painted a grim picture of the situation in their homeland: one million people killed, many by excessively cruel and violent means; seven million refugees, and the possible use, by Soviet troops, of yellow rain, a chemical which causes severe burns, internal bleeding and ultimate death.

Whether or not their information was factual isn't really the issue. Maybe it's not a million dead, and there is still question as to the use of yellow rain, but the basic facts are clear. The Soviet troops have brought a reign of terror to a country which is struggling for its own right to self-determination. Clearly, the Soviet Union should get the hell out of Afghanistan.

Certainly the ECU College Republicans deserve credit for arranging the Afghans' visit. The information they had is important for all of us to know. If ever any single issue had the consensus support of almost all Americans, this is surely it. Republicans and Democrats alike abhor the Soviet actions. Where we differ, however, is on the subject of what actions the United States could take in response to the Afghanistan situation.

According to Samad, the three men are lecturing in the U.S. to "raise public awareness" about the Afghan situation, but that's not all they have in mind. "We only want — need — materials, arms and supplies for Afghan freedom fighters to strike against foreign forces in Afghanistan," Samad told the Daily Reflector in a recent interview. He did, however, state clearly that he does not want and is not suggesting that U.S. troops should directly intervene in the fighting. But his implication, which could be just as dangerous as intervention, was that he would like to see some U.S. military aid going to his country.

That's where I, and hopefully most Americans, would draw the line. I'm no political scientist, but it's not too difficult to realize that U.S. military aid to Afghan rebels would be, without a doubt, a dangerous folly. Imagine the reaction we would have if the Soviets started to ship full-scale military aid to El Salvadoran rebels.

The key point is that anytime a situation arises that potentially stands the chance of further polarizing U.S.-Soviet relations, it's too dangerous to risk. The possibility of such actions escalating into a U.S.-Soviet conflict are not unrealistic. In a nuclear age, such risks simply cannot be condoned.

It is, however, critical that the United States respond in as many ways possible to the Soviet policy of domination of its so-called "satellites." I suggest that we begin by setting a good example, by discontinuing our own questionable policies in some other countries, which, like Afghanistan, are also struggling for self-determination. Once we do this, we can begin a process to make our world a safer — freer — place to live.

The Risks Of Bestiality

She's Suffering From Delusions

More actual viewer mail:

Dear Stan Landers: After reading your column in Tuesday's East Carolinian, I decided that you are the only one who could solve my problem. I'm taking library science 1000 this semester, and I just noticed this very cute football player in my class. The only problem is that the class ends this month, and I have never seen this boy during the day except for that class. I need to do something quick to get his attention and his phone number. Got any suggestions? Signed: FRESHMAN FROM FLORIDA

STAN LANDERS

Like Wow, Man

Dear FROM: First of all, I want you to know that I understand. The college years can be very trying, and we've all experienced the same marred perspective you seem troubled with right now. But you're old enough to make decisions for yourself, so I'll hold back on my bestiality sermon for another time. Besides, you probably already know the risks involved. But let's see now, you say you're afraid that when the class ends later this month, he'll be out of your life for good. Personally, From, I fail to see the problem there. But if you're intent on getting his attention, as you say you are, the first step is to establish some interest on his part, some common ground, if you will. You've got to show him that you share at least some of the same likes and dislikes if you want to catch his eye. I suggest you bring several coloring books and pretty crayons to class, or perhaps a Dr. Seuss reader or two. I guarantee that when your offensive "pet" sees you with Horton Hears a Hoo, he'll be sure to come over and ask you to read it to him. About getting his phone number, though, be careful how you ask; you don't want to offend him. He may not know it right off hand. One final note: If all else fails, don't worry. All is not lost. Chances are you'll be able to find him right back in LIBS 1000 next fall! Good luck.

Dear Stan Landers: My roommate says your advice column sucks. She says you don't know anything about anything. She says you probably make up all the letters that you answer. She says you're probably just some fat, ugly creep who makes up for his own inadequacies by belittling others. She says you can't take criticism and you answer your critics with sharp, bitter truths aimed at diverting attention from your own shortcomings. I'm terribly confused. How do you plead? LADEN IN AYDEN

Dear LADEN: Boy, for someone who writes reasonably well, you sure are a moron. And you certainly listen to your roommate a lot, especially considering the fact that she's nothing but an overweight bulldozer-driving slut with all the looks and mental capabilities of a sub-par yak. Nevertheless, Laden, I can influence you but so much. And the decision's up to you as to who you're going to believe: An unsightly trollp roommate who I, personally, wouldn't even let near my dog? Or a nice guy like me?

Editor's Note: Stan Landers, who, by some unfortunate oversight, was not chosen to be featured in the 1983 "Men of ECU" calendar, is in a bad mood today. Mike Hughes, on the other hand, is in a bad mood today.

Stan's Rules

All letters to this column must be reasonably true. I maintain the right to make necessary corrections on subjects that I have a hard time believing or subjects that I have no answers for. Letters from buxom blondes must be accompanied by a glossy photo. Letters from male members of the species needn't be accompanied by anything at all, and letters from fat, unsightly slob needn't even be sent.

SRA Contest Sparks Energy-Saving Ingenuity

The stiff competition in the Student Residence Association Energy Contest has made many students think of new methods to save energy in their halls. The East Carolinian asked experts in the area of energy conservation for their suggestions on ways to conserve.

"The biggest consumer of energy in the dorm is the cooking," said ECU Plant Engineer Larry Snyder.

"It probably accounts for over half the power usage," SRA energy committee chairman Mark Niewald agreed with Snyder. Toaster ovens and hot plates are major users of electricity, he said. He advised students to shut-off their cooking appliances after using them and to get together with their roommate when cooking dinner.

Robbie Tugwell, energy services officer with the Greenville Utilities Commission, said energy could be saved in three areas: cooking, hot water usage and lighting. Tugwell said all students can save electricity by taking shorter showers and turning off lights when leaving a room.

Snyder complained that many students were using the shower stalls as steamrooms by turning on all the showers at once to build up steam. Besides wasting large amounts of energy, Snyder noted that the building's hot water supply would decrease more quickly.

Snyder said lighting was not a big energy consumer. He did caution, however, that frequent use of the light switch would shorten the bulb's life. He said more energy is needed to turn a light or appliance on because of the initial surge.

Snyder said televisions, stereos, radios and small, absorption-unit refrigerators were not big power users. He said most students have a absorption-unit refrigerators while others have a compressor-driven unit that requires more energy. Snyder said there is a wattage limit on refrigerators.

Tugwell advised students to check their refrigerator door to see if it is closing properly. If it's not sealing properly, the gasket should be replaced. He said to keep compressor coils free of dust. He advised vacuuming the coils to keep them clean.

Niewald asked students to shut off lights, televisions and stereos when leaving their rooms.

Snyder said that larger televisions consume more energy.

Tugwell had additional advice for off-campus students. He said small electric space heaters were good as an auxiliary heat source.

Tugwell said resistance heaters, which warm the air first, and quartz heaters, which warm objects first, were two most common types of space heaters. Both cost about the same, nine cents per hour, to operate, Tugwell said.

Tugwell said that kerosene heaters were economical to operate, but they could be dangerous if used in an unventilated area.

"They could cause carbon-monoxide poisoning," Tugwell said. "If you run a kerosene heater, it's recommended you run it in a room with door open where you have plenty of air."

Space heaters and kerosene heaters are not permitted in the dorms.

Tugwell said plastic placed over the outside of windows would help insulate the dwelling.

Herpes In The Hot Tub Is Hoax

(CPS) — A fraudulent letter in the University of California Santa Barbara student newspaper from someone claiming to have caught herpes in a hot tub caused "a pretty significant decline" in business at a nearby spa, and nearly boiled into a libel suit against the paper.

The letter, supposedly written by a female student who said she'd been infected with herpes at the spa, "had a pretty big influence on business," recalls Richard Weiss, owner of the Shibuki Gardens Spa and Sauna.

"It's a total malarkey," Weiss says. "Scientifically, this isn't possible. There's no way you're going to catch herpes sitting in a body of chlorinated water."

Alarmed, Weiss complained to the Daily Nexus, the student paper that had printed the letter. The Nexus subsequently found out the letter was a fake. There was no woman with the name on the letter enrolled at UCSB at the time, and no one with the name lived at the address on the letter.

Weiss says the letter was eventually traced to "this 43-year-old (male) dropout who lives across the street" from the spa, who was "apparently bothered by the people coming in and out and the music and everything."

He hasn't confronted the "dropout," however. "What good would it do?" he asks.

He has confronted the Nexus, though. "We came so close to suing. The fact is the Nexus failed to verify the letter. They were negligent. The only reason we didn't sue was the court time. It would have taken three or four years before it was settled."

Instead, the paper has now agreed to print

"a series of front page retractions," and to give Shibuki Gardens "a substantial amount of free advertising," Weiss says.

Business, he says, "is picking up again" after slumping for several months following the letter's appearance in the fall.

"It was pretty amazing. You realize how vulnerable you are to rumors."

Wier's Latest Par With His Other Efforts

By JULIANA FAHRBACH
Style Editor

The Year of Living Dangerously (now playing at Greenville's Plaza Cinema) is yet another brilliant achievement of Australian director Peter Wier. It is a story set during the cultural and political upheaval of Indonesia in 1965.

Mel Gibson, the acclaimed Australian actor who has been previously seen in Tim, Mad Max, The Road Warrior (the sequel to Mad Max) and Gallipoli, plays an eager and ambitious journalist, Guy Hamilton, sent to this hot bed of political unrest.

Sigourney Weaver, known for Alien and Eyewitness, is a British attaché, Jill Bryant, who at the beginning of the film is due to leave Indonesia in three weeks.

Of course, a torrid romance develops between these two characters and this is basically what the film is centered around. The chemistry between Gibson and Weaver is present and the few scenes of them together are almost too personal to watch.

The film is carried by Linda Hunt who plays the cameraman Billy Kwan, a Chinese/Australian dwarf who uses his camera to see the absolute poverty that exists in Indonesia and whose heart is torn with despair for these people. Kwan is the narrator for the film and also the joining factor between Jill Bryant and Guy Hamilton.

The Year of Living Dangerously, based on the novel by C.J. Koch, is another exercise in vivid cinematography, but it fails to really touch on the true situation in Indonesia and the outcome.

Review

This film seems only concerned with the relationship between Hamilton and Bryant. This is not necessarily a condemnation because Peter Wier has never truly covered any factual situation thoroughly. He tells the story with the camera and lets the viewer interpret it. We have seen this in two of his past films, Picnic At Hanging Rock and Gallipoli. These films were both based on factual situations, but Wier managed to introduce a sense of time suspension through the use of the camera and the concentration on a particular group of people.

In The Year of Living Dangerously, the objectivity is seen and felt. The overwhelming reality of this country and its situation is screamed to the viewers.

David Williamson wrote the screenplay for The Year of Living Dangerously, as he has previously for Wier's Gallipoli.

The film is not for everybody. It is not what I would deem "entertaining" but possibly could be labeled an exercise in thought and feeling. For those who admire Peter Wier, as I do, it is a must.

Angelic Smith Rages In Role

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Jaclyn Smith didn't think too much of it when author Sidney Sheldon suggested at a party that she was right for the lead in Rage of Angels.

"I was pregnant at the time and I forgot about it," she says. "But after the baby was born the script arrived. I'd turned down about 20 scripts. I knew I wanted to do this. I've had such a constant fight not being Charlie's Angels again. Not being that slick character. This role is certainly not that."

Miss Smith starred as Jennifer Parker in the NBC miniseries adapted from Sheldon's best-selling novel, which aired Sunday and Monday nights at 9 p.m. She played a beautiful young woman lawyer who's fired from the district attorney's office in a scandal and rises to become one of New York's top trial lawyers.

"It's the best role I've ever done, the most in-depth character," she says. "There are so many changes in this girl. She starts out wide-eyed and innocent and ends up cynical. But it's understandable after what she's been through. She has affairs with two men at opposite extremes.

"She's vulnerable and spunky. People like her. When I read the book I thought she would make a nice friend."

Sheldon, disappointed with prior translations of his books to film, took personal charge of the production. He says it is the "first of my novels that has been adapted for the screen where I've been pleased with the final product."

The miniseries also starred Ken Howard as the lawyer who becomes a U.S. senator and one of Jennifer's lovers; Armand Assante as the suave underworld attorney who pursues her, and Kevin Conway as the struggling, hard-drinking private investigator who takes her in and becomes her partner after she's fired from the D.A.'s office.

Coincidentally, the movie pitted Miss Smith against another former member of Charlie's Angels. Cheryl Ladd starred in the title role of Grace Kelly last night on ABC.

Miss Smith, who is married to cinematographer-director Tony Richmond, starred in the television movie Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy before she was pregnant. Her son, Gaston Anthony Richmond, is now 9 months old. He was named after Miss Smith's grandfather, who was a Methodist minister in Texas.

She is in the sitting area of her upstairs bedroom of her home in Bel Air. The Pacific Ocean can be seen in the distance. She says her next project will be a commercial directed and photographed by her husband.

"It's very important that it be perfect," she says. "He's a British Academy Award winner for Don't Look Now, so I feel in good hands. We met when he did Night Kill. It's the best I've ever been photographed."

Miss Smith was the only actress to stick with Charlie's Angels during its entire tenure. "I had a contract," she says. "I watched the pitfalls of leaving. I had a commitment and I felt it was right to stay. I had offers like everyone else, but I'm happy I stayed."

"Charlie's Angels got so much media hype. So many stories were exaggerated or untrue. We were just three girls on the screen in a slick, glamorous show. I'm not putting it down. It had an audience and it was a training ground. But people say there was no reality to it. So that

Cheryl As Grace Another 'Angel' Still Acting

By LAWRENCE EISENBERG
New York

NEW YORK — The backstage story had all the elements of Greek tragedy, though nobody would have guessed it at the beginning: Cheryl Ladd and her husband, producer Brian Russell, were invited to Monaco's annual TV festival a couple of years ago.

"It was like a fairy-tale town ... beautiful, clean, with tons of flowers, like no place else in the world," Miss Ladd says. "And Princess Grace was gorgeous and sweet and — her name was so appropriate."

While they were still basking in the glow of the experience, Russell had an idea for Miss Ladd: Why not star in a movie about Princess Grace?

"Did I relate to her?" Miss Ladd says. "Oh, God, yes. I began to read her life story and was fascinated by her courage. She came from a family of three daughters and was the middle child who was kind of overlooked. They were all athletic and she wasn't. And she went against her family's wishes to become an actress. I was surprised to find that in her early years she did toothpaste commercials and soap ads. She didn't need the money, but wanted to do it on her own because she needed a sense of self-worth."

Miss Ladd says her own life was not much different. "Coming from a family in South Dakota and being a middle child, I felt stifled and I wanted to become someone on my own term, be my own person." She adds wryly, "And, it only took me seven years to become an overnight sensation."

Faded-in to the offices of Embassy Television, a division of Norman Lear's entertainment complex. Cheryl Ladd and Brian Russell are in a meeting with executives to negotiate a development deal. Miss Ladd says the first project she wants to do is a movie about Grace Kelly.

"It didn't take us long to get a deal at ABC," says Michael L. Weisbarth, co-executive producer (with Russell) of the film. An announcement hit the media: Grace Kelly, a two-hour film, was going to be presented by ABC-TV. (It aired last night at 9 p.m.)

Off in Monaco, the press reported subsequently, Princess Grace was sitting at breakfast, scanning her morning paper when she dropped her croissant. Why, she wanted to know, didn't anybody ask her permission? Invasion of privacy came to mind, exploitation next, legal action third.

A scene planned for the private zoo at the palace was scrapped and later reproduced on the grounds of a Los Angeles convent.

Even the Riviera hill town of St. Paul, which is the setting for romantic moments between Grace Kelly and Oleg Cassini, couldn't be used — the town of Villefranche played the part of St. Paul, says Miss Ladd, who adds, "This is a television movie. It's not David Lean."

A spokesman for the Monaco government comments, "They were very careful that week. Because the mourning period was not over and because they were so close to Monaco, they were asked to be very discreet and they requested that the press stay away." That's like locking Elizabeth Taylor in Cartier's overnight and asking her to stay in the silver department.

Most of the rest of the film was shot in Hollywood (though some of the action is also set in Philadelphia and New York), always cautiously, with a press blackout. But the initial controversy, compounded by the death of Princess Grace, cast a pall over the production and the public's perception of it.

Miss Ladd says the public need not worry. She has told other reporters that before Princess Grace died, the princess said: "It's really a nice script. I wish my life had been as nice as this."

Book Defines CIA's Role In Guatemala

By EMILY CASEY
Staff Writer

The CIA in Guatemala, by Richard H. Immerman, University of Texas Press, 1982, call number: n.p. (DS 481.G23.5188.1932), 200 pages

Immerman, a young history professor at the University of Colorado, holds the United States government responsible for the military overthrow of Guatemala's government in 1954. He documents his case with 672 footnotes. His 19 page bibliography includes unpublished archival papers, personal interviews, correspondence, articles, speeches and two TV transcripts — as well as the usual newspaper, primary and secondary sources. His main line of argument concludes that "The CIA's 1954 coup has made moderation impossible" in the decades since.

He makes other damning contentions. He says the coup's replacement of the elected president Arbenz with the invader Castillo Armas led to the growth of Communism in Guatemala and the region. He says it returned the economy to United Fruit control, again draining Guatemala. He says the Mayan majority, which had been gaining increasing liberation since the tyrant Ubico's overthrow in 1944, was again brutally repressed, with forty thousand murdered since the coup. He says the 1954 Guatemalan coup led to thinking which was directly responsible for the Bay of Pigs disaster in 1961.

Just as the 1953 CIA coup in Iran directed by Kermit Roosevelt was a step leading to the Ayatollah, so he foresees a Central American whirlwind coming.

The case is strong. I'm not competent to make technical criticisms. However, some general counter points can be made. There is no gain from fixing blame unless we have the power of acting differently and better in a coming, similar situation; but the book does not analyze the current situation. There is an ignoring of deeper causation: behind the CIA was Allen Dulles, in turn directed by his brother John Foster and by Eisenhower. But behind them as behind United Fruit and its management and its stockholders, pressed the legitimating, blind, hydraulic force of the United States electorate, inexorably insisting on its material way of life, of which whosever backs it is built on.

A third counter point is the competence of the haves to keep society's machinery running. More broadly, The CIA in Guatemala doesn't treat the complex net of intangibles that constrain possibility, including the ideologies of the actors (especially Catholicism and Marxisms), their education (moral and fraternal as well as scientific and technical), and their organizations (unions, army, corps, etc.).

So other books should be written. With this solid 200-page building block of professor Immerman's, we can then support U.S. policymakers as they set about building a sane and honorable policy in Central America.

puts up a barrier. "The whole thing was so overanalyzed. We did get into bathing suits, but I hardly ever kissed a guy. Granted, it wasn't Shakespeare, but we got a lot of putdown. I had to prove myself. "But that show taught me discipline in my work. Still, the image of that show detracts from the part of you that is a serious actress."

She says she has no interest in a Charlie's Angels reunion movie, should one ever come up. "I've done it," she says. "I'm thankful for the five years. It opened a lot of doors, but I wouldn't go back. Each thing I've done since then has been well thought out and a step away."

"Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy was a departure. It was a character role, with the makeup and the dialect. Rage of Angels is another departure. The role has so much to it. It's an in-depth character study of a girl who goes to New York with stars in her eyes and watches her dream fade."

Miss Smith's production company has several films in development, including a remake of Sentimental Journey.

"I'm reading several scripts and there's talk of a series based on Rage of Angels," she says. "I'm really looking forward to working with Tony in a film, either as cinematographer or director. I'd love for him to direct me. Who knows me better?"

Is she interested in a series? "I don't know. I'd have to think about it long and hard. I have a little boy — I was recently shooting something and I had to run home for his bath. But if I had to do a series, this would be it."

Pirates Capture Big Conference Win

By MIKE HUGHES
Managing Editor

PORT OF CALL: GREENVILLE — If Coach Charlie Harrison was "emotionally drained" after Saturday night's come-from-behind victory over the Naval Academy — and beyond a shadow of a doubt, he was drained — he certainly had good reason to be.

Emotionally drained because his Pirates almost blew an 11-point halftime lead. Emotionally drained because a pace ECU controlled for the first 30 minutes began to slip away. Emotionally drained because Navy was proving that his job, too, could be an adventure. Emotionally drained because a contest that in the first half seemed like a shoe-in for the Pirates came down — like so many others this season — to one final shot.

"We just got sloppy," Harrison commented after the game. "We missed the easy shots. That's the story of our season. But our kids had patience; they don't ever give up."

And give up, they didn't. Behind excellent first-half performances by Charles Green, Barry Wright and Johnny Edwards, the Pirates built a 39-28 lead at the end of the first half, only to see it dwindle in the game's waning minutes.

Trailing Navy by three with 1:38 remaining, ECU guard Tony Robinson rallied the Pirates to within one with a 15-foot jumper at the 1:12 mark. With the score now 67-66 Navy, Harrison called a characteristic calm-down timeout.

"You know," Harrison reflected, "I think I've used every timeout in every game, except maybe against South Carolina (one of the Pirates' few games this season that hasn't gone down to the wire)."

And, indeed, the timeout proved a worthwhile tactic with just over a minute to play. Harrison called for full-court pressure on Navy's inbounds play. And when play resumed, the Middies found the Pirates harder to shake than a flock of dock-side hussies.

But a 10-second back-court violation, which would have turned the ball over to the Pirates with 1:03 remaining, went sour. Referee Eddie Laws, who called the 10-second violation, reversed the verdict after learning that only nine seconds had elapsed in the back court. Navy got the ball in the front court.

But the Academy's James Kuzma, who apparently fancied himself a destroyer, plowed over Barry Wright on the inbounds play, turning the ball back over to ECU with 1:02 remaining.

Back-to-back timeouts and a last-second "Hail Mary" torpedo from mid-court by Navy's Rob Romaine fell short, and ECU emerged from the storm a 68-67 victor.

"(The play to Green) was the same play we had designed against George Mason. But this time, they came out after Tony, and we were able to get the ball inside to Charlie. They did a super job toward the end."

Despite sitting out the first 10 minutes, Edwards led all scorers with 23 points, all rebounders with 13. He made his presence known on defense as well, making two unassisted steals late in the game. Wright finished the game with 16 points and 6 rebounds, while holding Navy's starting forwards to a total of 10 points. A sore Charles Green pumped in 14 while hauling in 9 rebounds, and Bruce Peartree added 9 points to the Pirate attack.

Romaine led the Navy surge with 16 points and seven assists. He was followed by Clifford Maurer, Navy's 6'10" center, who added 14, and senior David Brooks (who averages 17.6 points per game) with 12.

The 3,300 fans were obviously distraught at Harrison's benching Edwards in the first half, an action Harrison said reflected "nothing flagrant" between the two. "It's just something between me and Johnny and the team. It was a simple misunderstanding. He missed about a quarter of our practice (Saturday afternoon), so I sat him out a quarter. I love to coach him, but I'm a people person. They have to stay together as a group."

With the Pirates' ECAC-South record now at 3-6 and the conference tournament fast approaching, Harrison ventured little comment on ECU's upcoming game at James Madison.

"Right now," he said, "Madison's playing better than anyone else in the league. Their guys can all shoot. They can fill it up from anywhere on the court. They've been there before."

With three games remaining (Madison on the 23rd, UNC-Wilmington on the 26th and Penn State-Behrend on March 3), Coach Harrison needs but one victory to insure a winning season in his first year as head coach, a feat which signifies that the turnaround for ECU basketball has already begun. But, as he has emphasized from the start, "We're taking it one game at a time."

ECU's Charles Green goes up high for two of his 14 points in Saturday night's victory over Navy.

Lady Rats Split Pair

The ECU Lady Pirates evened their record at 11-11 Sunday afternoon with an 82-62 victory over Boston University.

The win helped the Lady Pirates avenge a Thursday night loss to the Morehead State Lady Eagles. Both games were played in Minges Coliseum.

The Sunday afternoon victory over the Terriers was made possible by an 11-0 spurt at the end of the first half.

With six minutes remaining and ECU winning 26-18, Mary Denkler and Sylvia Bragg made two baskets apiece from in close.

After a timeout by Boston, Bragg hit a free throw and Denkler added a 15-foot jumper to cap the spurt.

The two teams traded buckets for the rest of the half, and ECU went to the dressing room up 39-22 at halftime.

The Terriers pulled back to within 12 points three times during the second half, but were never able to get any closer. 12 of ECU's last 14 points were scored from the free throw line as Boston was forced to foul.

Denkler and Bragg both scored 22 points to pace the Lady Pirates. Bragg hit 11 of 16 free throws and handed out seven assists.

Denkler tied teammate Darlene Chaney for game-high rebound totals with 11. Senior co-captain Fran Hooks scored 12 points, grabbed nine rebounds, and dished out six assists.

The Terriers were led by Val DePaolo with 18 points, and Stephanie Rohming, who finished with 11 points and eight rebounds.

The Lady Pirates felt the effects of their depleted roster as only six ECU players saw action and four of them — Bragg, Denkler, Hooks, and Caren Truske — played the entire 40 minutes.

Thursday night's loss at the hands of Morehead State saw the Lady Pirates shoot a torrid 36.9 % (24 of 65) from the field.

The Lady Eagles, who are now 14-8, were led by Priscilla Blackford's 17 points and 18 rebounds. Rita Berry and Lynn Miley added 15 points apiece.

Morehead State worked to an 11-point advantage in the first half, but the Lady Pirates rallied to pull within 34-27 at halftime.

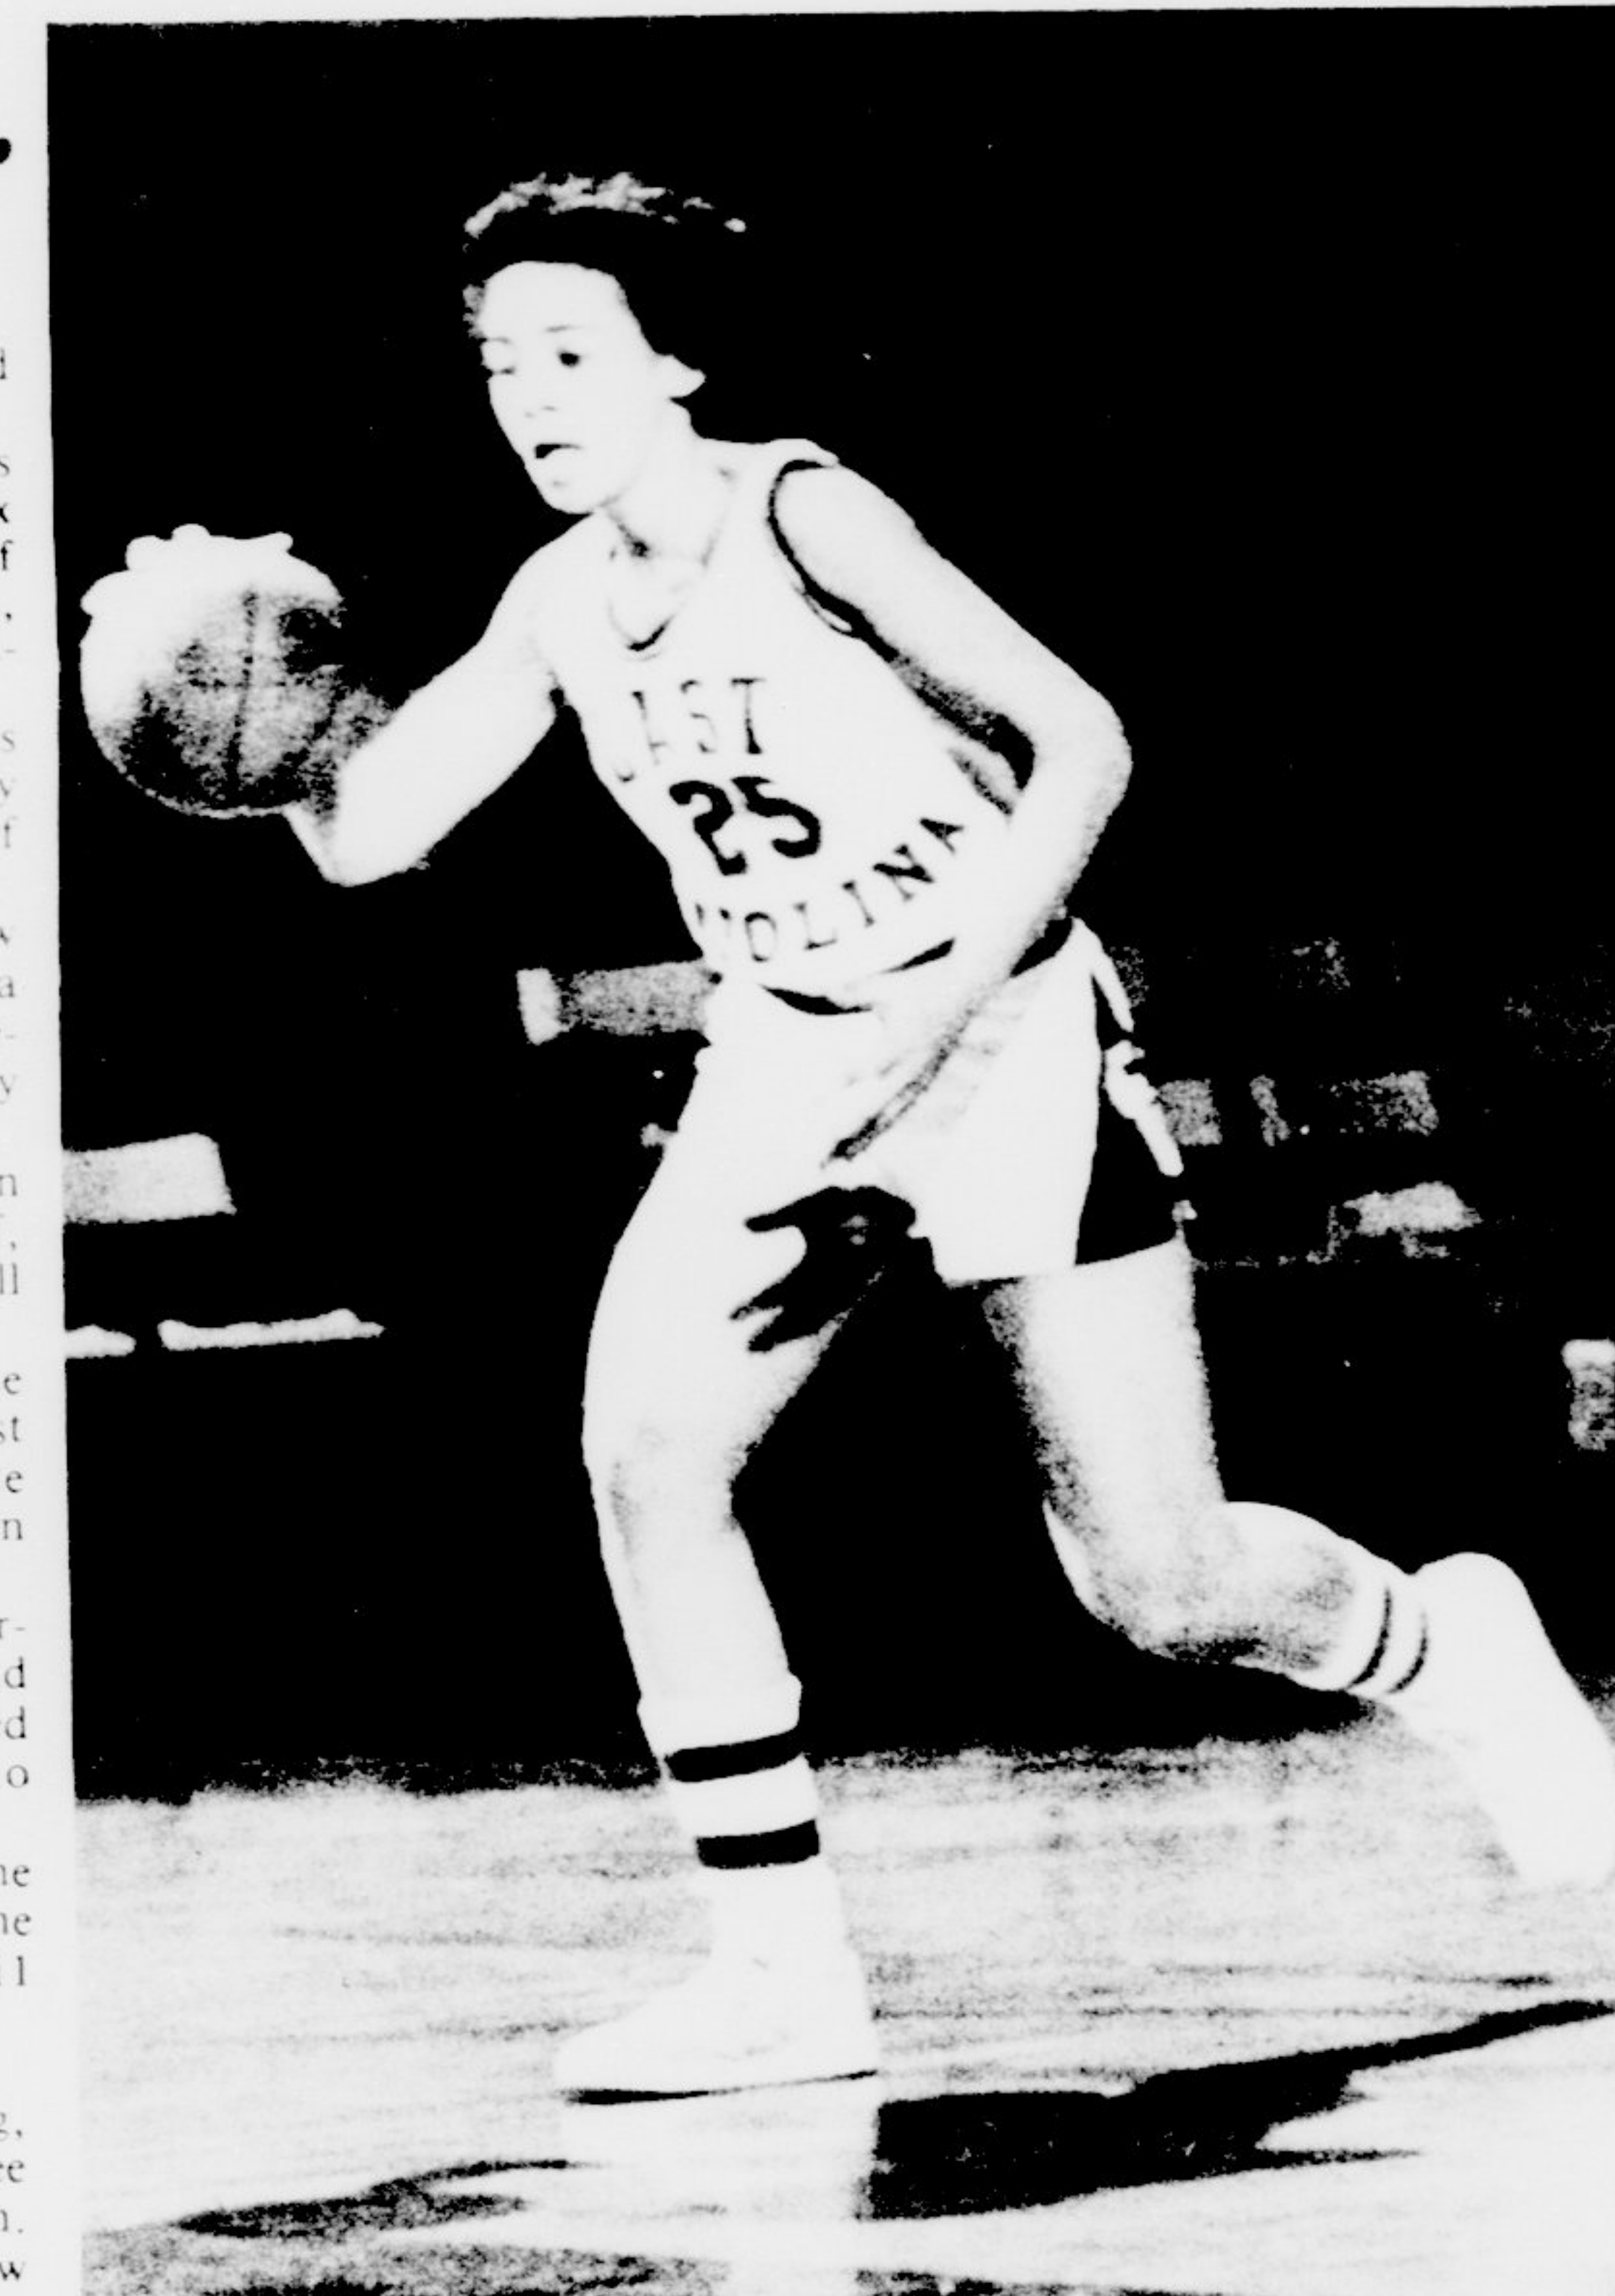

ECU was able to hang fairly close with the Lady Eagles until the last two minutes, when Morehead State scored the last seven points to widen the final margin to 75-59.

The Lady Pirates were led in scoring by Denkler and Hooks, who had 14 points each. Denkler also pulled down 11 rebounds, second only to Blackford's 18.

ECU was as ineffective from the free throw line as they were from the field. The Lady Pirates hit only 11 of 21 from the charity stripe.

With only four games remaining, the Lady Pirates need to win three of them to assure a winning season.

ECU's next game is tomorrow night when they travel to Wilmington to take on the UNC-W Seahawks. Gametime is 7:30 p.m.

ECU freshman Sylvia Bragg pumped in 22 points Sunday to lead the Lady Pirates to a 82-62 victory over Boston University.

Golfers Open Season

ECU SPORTS INFO

The ECU golf team opens its 1983 spring season this weekend at the Seminole Classic at Tallahassee, Fla.

First-year coach Jerry Lee is looking forward to this year. "I'm really optimistic," Lee said. "Last year was the best team we've ever had and this year should be even better. We have more balance this year, which is necessary to do well."

The two top golfers for the Pirates will be Don Sweeting, a junior, and Chris Czaja, a sophomore. Sweeting, last year's most valuable golfer, should be the top man for ECU, according to Lee. "Sweeting has the most potential on the team," he said. "He's got all the shots; he's got leadership and he's a smart player. Last year he won a tournament (the 1982 Old Dominion Seaside Invitational) and that should help him."

Czaja, from Old Greenwich, Conn., will probably fill the number two spot. "Chris is a very consistent player and should help steady us," Lee stated.

With Sweeting and Czaja filling the top positions, six other golfers will be competing for the remaining three slots for each tournament. John Riddle, the lone senior on the team, should provide needed leadership, along with juniors Mike Helms, who returns to the team after not playing last year, and New Bern's David Woodard.

Roger Newsom, from Portsmouth, Va., and David Dooley, of Charlotte, are freshmen who gained experience in the fall. Kelly Stimart, also of Charlotte, is playing this season after being redshirted his freshman year.

"All of these are capable of playing par golf or better," said Lee. "On any given day, anyone of them can beat anyone else. It just depends on who's playing well at a given time. I am looking to find a solid fifth man, though."

The Pirate schedule includes seven tournaments, with trips to the Iron Duke Invitational March 11-13, the UNC Invitational April 8-10 and the Old Dominion Invitational at Nags Head April 17-19. The golfers will travel to South Carolina for three additional tournaments. East Carolina will also host the third annual East Carolina Invitational, to be held at the Brook Valley Country Club in Greenville on March 8-10.

It's a competitive schedule, according to Lee. "We'll probably meet at least 30 of the top 50 ranked teams in the nation," added Lee. "Our main competition in our division will come from UNC Chapel Hill, whose team is currently ranked eighth in the United States and the North Carolina State squad, who finished eighth in the NCAA Nationals last year and are rated 20th this year. Wake Forest and Clemson will also be tough."

"Our goals are to finish in the top ten in the big tournaments (where 18-27 teams enter), and in the top five in the smaller tournaments (with 12-15 teams), and maybe win one or two tournaments," Lee said. "If we do that, we have a chance at a bid to the NCAA finals. As individuals, Don Sweeting has the potential to go to the NCAA finals as does Chris Czaja."

White, McCorkle Pace Pirates

By RANDY MEWS

The ECU men's track team placed runners in almost every event this weekend at the Carolina Invitational track meet in Chapel Hill.

Craig White broke the ECU record for the 55-meter hurdles in 7.28. He finished second overall and his time qualified him for the nationals. Verner Wynn placed fifth in the same event in 7.41.

Nathan McCorkle broke another school record in the 55-meter dash finishing third in 6.28. Jerry Brown came in fifth with a 6.41 and Henry Williams finished sixth in 6.42.

In the 440-meter dash, Wayne Miller took second in 49.8, Eddie Bradley finished third in 50.5 and Rueben Pierce came in sixth at 50.8.

The mile relay team of Bradley Miller, Keith Clarke and Pierce placed second in 3:22.8 behind a nationally ranked South Carolina team. "If our mile-relay team runs like it did Saturday, it has a good chance of placing in the IC4A's," said Head Coach Bill Carson.

Lone competitors in their events for ECU were Ray Dickerson and Verner Wynn. Dickerson finished third in the 600-meters in 1:13.6, while in the 55-meter high hurdles Wynn placed sixth in 7.41.

In the long jump, Chris McGlashorn and Chris Brooks finished fifth and sixth respectively.

McGlashorn's leap was 23'3", while Brooks was close behind, jumping 23'1".

"We did better than any team in North Carolina at this meet," commented Carson. "Our freshman really turned it out against some good people, and we were able to score in every event we entered."

The Pirates will be in action again next weekend when they participate in the George Mason Tri-Meet in Fairfax, Virginia.

ECU Women Impressive In Last Meet

By RANDY MEWS
Staff Writer

The Lady Pirate track team traveled to Chapel Hill this weekend and turned in their finest performance of the season.

"We did fantastic," exclaimed Coach Pat McGugan. "It was the best performance by the ECU women since I've been coaching here."

In the 60-yard dash, Regina Kent took first in 7.08 and just missed qualifying for the nationals. Teressa Hudson finished fifth in the event in 7.42, and Robin Cremedy took sixth in 7.44.

Renee Felder, who walked on to the team this fall, placed fourth in the mile run in 5:34.7.

In the 440-meter dash Kathy Leeper finished fifth in 62.3, while also taking third in the long jump with a leap of 17'3".

In a down-to-the-wire race, Jamie Cathcart edged out her opponent to capture first place in the 600 yard run.

The mile relay team of Kent, Cathcart, Leeper and Cremedy posted their best time of the year, taking record in 4:11.5.

The ECU women will have approximately a month off until they begin their outdoor season which opens with The Virginia Invitational.

Pirate Sprinter Reuben Pierce blows it out against Wolfpack and Tar Heel runners. Pierce placed sixth in the 440-meter dash with a time of 50.8.

Students Place In ACU-I Tournament

12 East Carolina University students qualified to attend the Association of College Unions-International Regional Tournaments that were held at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville on February 10, 11, and 12. Teams representing universities from five states competed in Bowling, Table Tennis, Backgammon, Chess and College Bowl.

In order to qualify for these events, the students had to first defeat competitors in dorm, day-student, or intramural events. They also had to be a full-time student with at least a 2.0 GPA. Then, they had to win the All-Campus Competition in their event. The Department of University Unions sponsored the fully paid trip for these 12 students to Knoxville, Tennessee.

Dr. Lawrence Hough, Associate Professor of Political Science coached the College Bowl Team consisting of Joel Argent, Jeff Jones, Ken Hopper, Mike Swaim, and Joel Mauger.

Linda Barkand, Mendenhall Student Center Crafts and Recreation Director accompanied the recreation participants. Tim Merck, Mark Klumpp, and Trent Rackley represented ECU in the Men's Bowling events. Rackley brought home a second place plaque in the Men's High Series competition.

Frank Necci and Stuart Long won a point for ECU in the team chess competition. They finished first in the state and 5th in the region beating out or drawing Masters and Grand Masters in the process.

DeAnne Cates, Backgammon and Tommie Douglas, Table Tennis held their own before being knocked out of their double elimination competitions.

Women Booters Lose

The ECU Women's Soccer Club dropped its first game of the spring season to N.C. State on Saturday. The Wolfpack won easily by the score of 5-0.

"Considering it was our first game we did real well," said club President Tonya Goldsmith. "This was the first time we really played together as a team."

The Pirates had several strong drives, but none paid off as numerous shots on goal were stopped or went wide.

The Women's Soccer Club, which is under the supervision of the ECU Intramural program, currently has 16 members. "They (Intramurals) provide us with funds and transportation," added Goldsmith.

The Club's first game of the season against Duke was cancelled due to snow two weeks ago. Rico Piva is the coach.

East Carolina football coach Ed Emory announced the completion of his staff yesterday with the appointment of Charles Elmquist to a fulltime job. Elmquist has served as a volunteer coach for the past two years. He will work with the tight ends. A graduate of Eastern Michigan, Elmquist served as an assistant coach at the University of Minnesota and Eastern Michigan University.

Cale Relishes Victory

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Winning the Daytona 500 was just what the doctor ordered for Cale Yarborough.

The victim of a spectacular crash during qualifying last week — less than a lap after surpassing the 200-mph mark — Yarborough had a stiff neck, a variety of bruises and an injured psyche all week.

But he felt a lot better after Sunday's race. As his Pontiac zipped across the finish line safely ahead of a trio of chasers, the three-time 500 winner pumped his hands on the steering wheel and cracked an ear-to-ear grin that was firmly in place more than an hour later.

"I was happy," said Yarborough, who claimed the winner's purse of $119,600 at NASCAR's first $1 million affair. "I still am."

Others weren't so thrilled. Buddy Baker, who lost the lead to Yarborough a mile from the finish, was mad at himself. Joe Ruttman, who dogged Yarborough but fell into a race with Baker at the finish and off the pace, was mad at Baker.
