Parent's Day Success

By HAROLD JOYNER

"Parent's Day was a success!" said SGA Vice President Chris Tomasic. "We couldn't have pulled it off without the help all the hard work of the committee and Dean (Ronald) Speier."

More than 1,300 parents came to ECU last weekend to find out what their sons and daughters are doing here, as well as talking to ECU Chancellor John Howell and other campus administrators. A noon picnic lunch occurred on the Mall, and parents were entertained by the ECU Dance Theatre, as well as the ECU Choir and a local band, The Untouchables. Lunches were sold by Servomation.

"We've heard nothing but good things about ECU from the parents," Howell said. "I am also really pleased to see that so many parents are taking an interest in what their children are doing."

Panhellenic Council President Lisa Whitfield said all the sorority houses were open to the parents, "making it especially nice for parents to see what kind of house their daughter may be living in." All the fraternity houses were also open for inspection, said Inter Fraternity Council President Todd Patton.

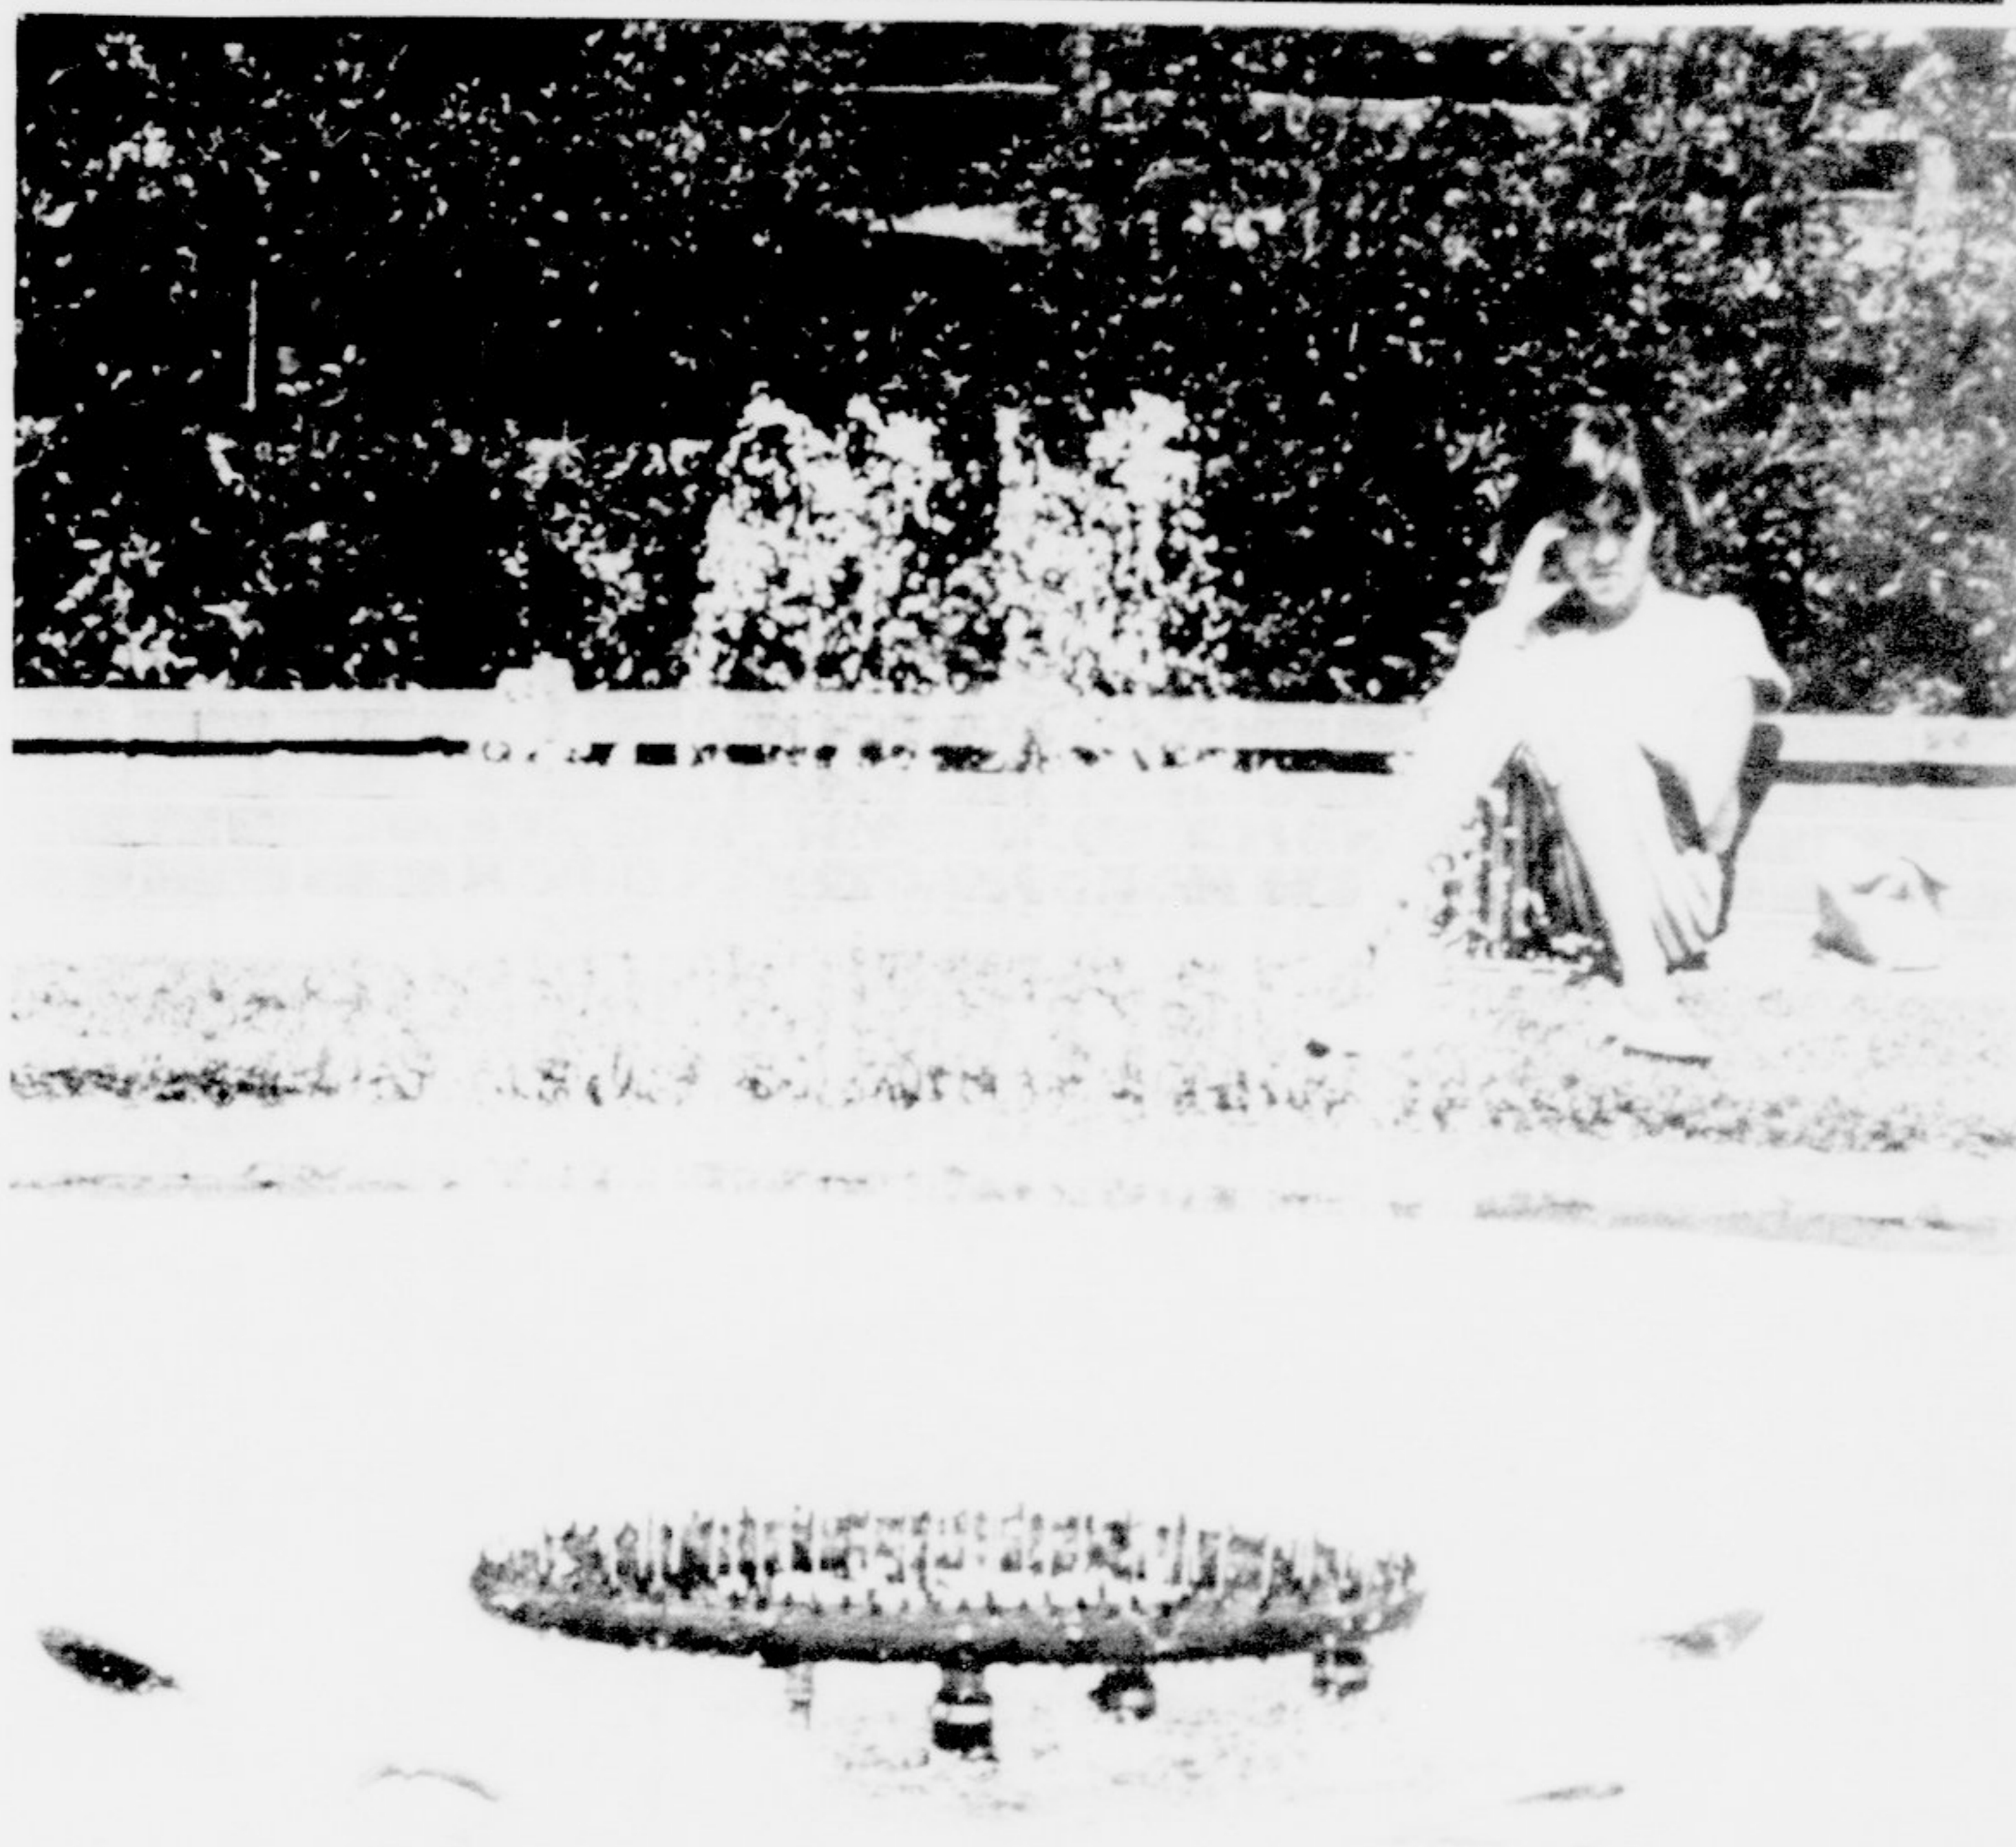

"All the credit for the success of Parent's Day goes to Dean Speier," said Student Union President Mike Smith. "Everything has gone really well. Next year, I hope more people become involved in Parent's Day activities, as well as putting a little more emphasis on academics."

Even ECU's Athletic Director Ken Karr was impressed with ECU's first Parent's Day. "I think it's just another opportunity to get the parents involved on campus and to develop an awareness of what's happening. I'm very pleased at the large turnout," he said.

And what did ECU's first family think about the weekend. "Parent's Day has given everyone a better impression of the University. Everyone has done a fine job in planning for this day," said Gladys Brown, mother of SGA President David Brown. His father, Walter, added, "Parents want to see what their children are doing. This is the best way possible to show them."

Freshman Theatre Arts student David Blanchard said his parents, Carol and Ty, came from Washington, D.C. to see what ECU is all about. "We are very impressed. We've noticed the campus is very spread out, but yet, compact," Mr. Blanchard said.

Tomasic's parents, George and Fran, both said the program was a success. "We hope ECU continues the Parent's Day tradition."

Lethargy Affects Students

By BETH WHICKER

Exhaustion is one of the main complaints of college students. For some of us, it takes all of our energy just to get through the day, while others of us find ourselves sleeping through afternoon classes.

"Even fun things can be stressful and cause fatigue. Graduation from college can be extremely stressful," according to Mary Elesha-Adams, Health Educator — Student Health Services.

Sometimes the cause of fatigue is obvious — you are studying all night, or you are just coping with pressure of personal problems. "Stress will always cause some tiredness," said Elesha-Adams.

Fatigue that cannot be readily explained is more severe, especially if it continues for weeks or months. "Anyone that is exhausted for a long period of time should see a physician to rule out the possibility of illness," according to Elesha-Adams.

In general, fatigue due to depression or emotional stress is present when you awaken, while fatigue related to organic illness mounts during the course of the day, she added.

Elesha-Adams said that fatigue that has been present for more than four months without any physical problems is usually psychological, while shorter bouts stem from physical problems.

She also added that some of the illnesses that cause exhaustion are mononucleosis, low thyroid production and hypoglycemia.

Eating habits are also related to exhaustion. "Students have irregular habits, and eat lots of junk food. Eating a well-balanced diet is essential to feeling healthy," said Elesha-Adams.

Drugs are also related to exhaustion. "Those who use birth control pills for the first time may experience tiredness. Those who use caffeine often feel exhausted since caffeine ups their metabolism. Their metabolism drops when they don't have caffeine and makes them tired," Elesha-Adams said.

Daytime fatigue may also be related to nighttime sleeping habits. The most common disturbance is to stay up late on weekends, sleeping until noon, and going back to a normal school schedule.

Compulsive overwork often causes fatigue. Staying up late to study for an exam, drinking coffee or taking pep pills may upset one's stomach. "Taking pep pills only makes you feel worse. It increases the possibility of vomiting and blood pressure goes up. Temporarily, you may stay up, but generally you're not going to feel very good," said Elesha-Adams.

"Instead of taking pep pills, you should try to exercise in the evening," said Elesha-Adams.

"To avoid exhaustion try to keep yourself in the best shape possible. If you are in good shape then you may not feel as tired easily. Try to get regular exercise and do something each day that relaxes you," says Elesha-Adams.

New N.C. Seat Belt Law Effective, Practical, Police Say

By MIKE LUDWICK

North Carolina's new seat belt law went into effect. The new law states, "Each front seat occupant who is 16 years of age or older and each driver of a passenger motor vehicle...shall have such a safety belt properly fastened about his body at all times when the vehicle is in forward motion..."

Director of Public Safety Joseph Calder said in a phone interview, "We have no intention here at Campus Police to set up any road blocks to check for compliance." Calder added, "However, if you get in an accident and you do not have your seat belt on, then we will write you a citation. In my frank opinion, I don't think it will be enforced unless you are in an accident."

According to Lt. D.R. Bullock of the Greenville Police Department, the Greenville police will enforce the new law just like any other law. "We will brief the men on the new law, then if they see an infraction it is just like any other law. We will enforce it," Bullock said.

The new seat belt law stipulates that between Oct. 1, 1985, and Dec. 31, 1986, only warning tickets shall be issued. However, after Dec. 31, 1986, a violation of the law will carry a $25 fine. The law also stated that no license or insurance points will be assessed on a driver on account of a violation of the law.

Sgt. Stevens of the North Carolina Highway Patrol said, "As long as we write warning citations, people won't wear their seat belts - not until we write citations that carry a $25 fine will people begin to comply."

Stevens added that the new law may seem an inconvenience but it will save lives. "A seat belt will save your life 80 percent of the time. The fine is a small one, but the intent (of the law) is to save a life," said Stevens.

Stevens clarified a few technicalities of the new law. He said that it is the responsibility of the driver to make sure the front seat riders wear their seat belt. He also added that if there are more passengers than seat belts, it is an infraction of the new law.

Clarifying his position on enforcement of the new law, Stevens said that he would probably not stop a violator on a superhighway. However, he added, "If I saw a new model car on a rural road and the driver wasn't wearing his seat belt, sure I will stop them."

Finally, Stevens helped to distinguish between fact and fiction as far as some popular beliefs dealing with seat belts. A popular myth, said Stevens, is that if you wear your seat belt you will be trapped in a submerged or burning car.

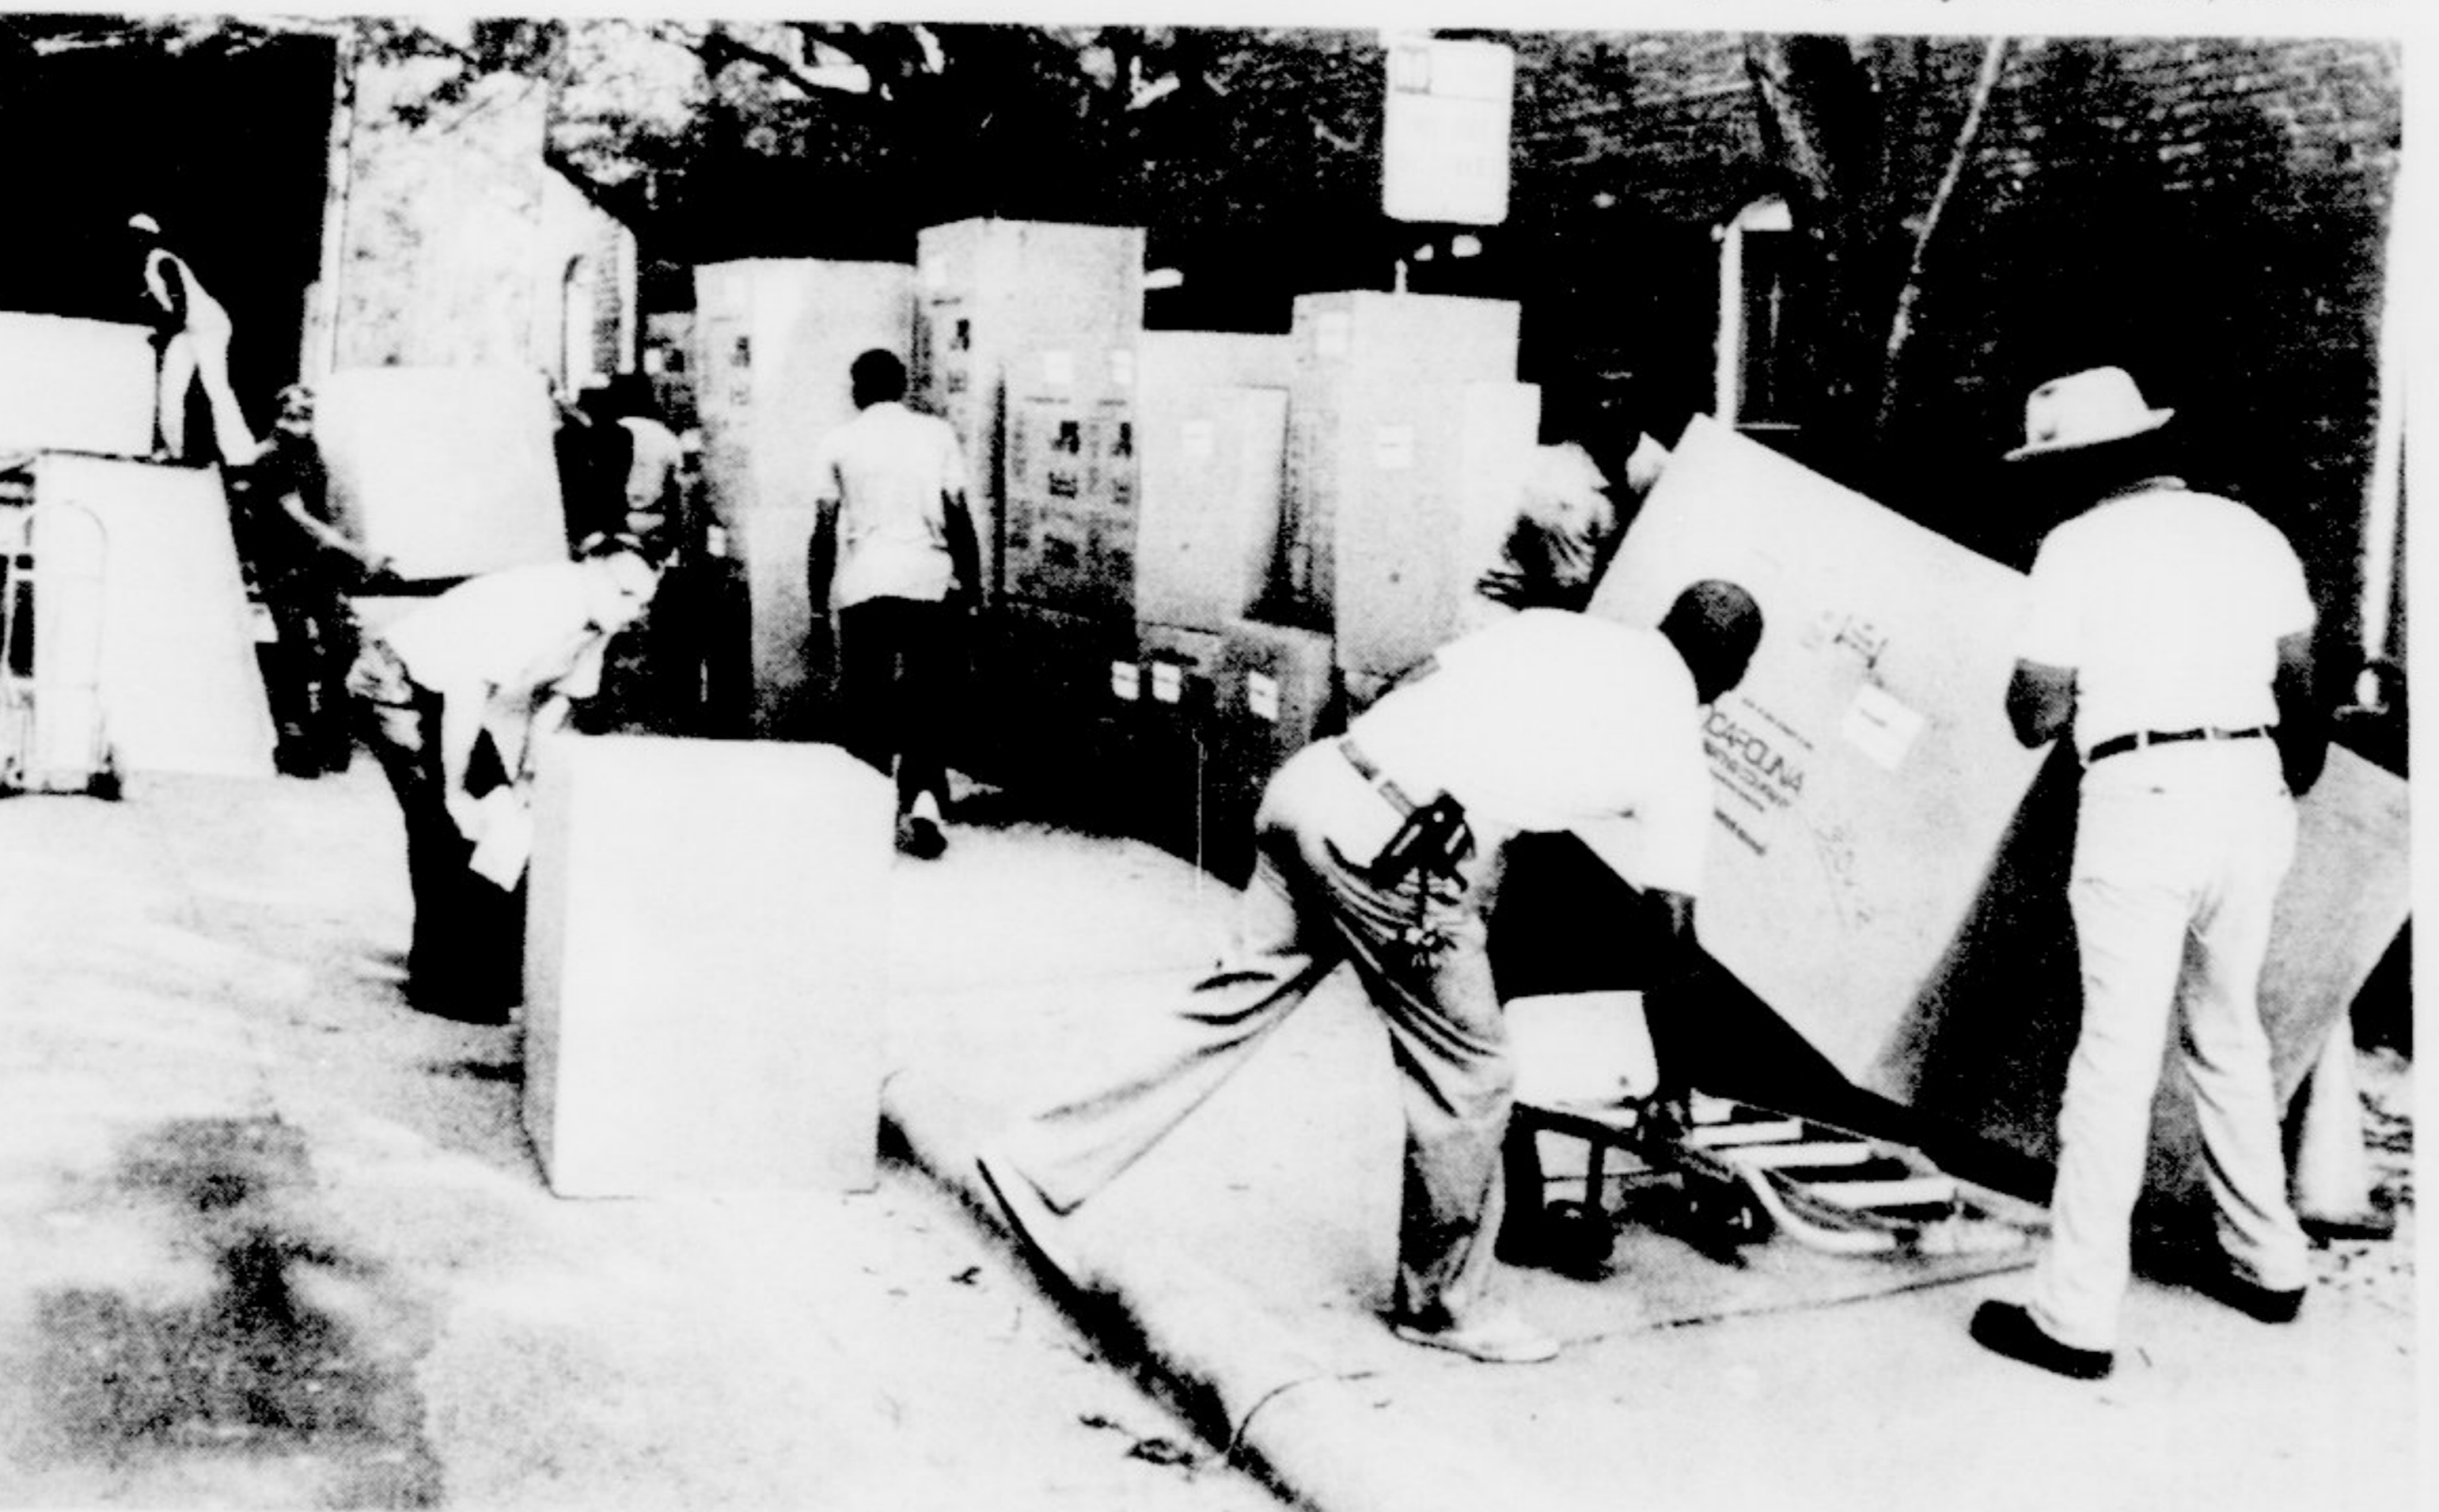

According to the N.C. Department of Transportation, Stevens said that less than one-half of 1 percent of all injury-producing collisions involve fire or submersion. However, wearing a seat belt could save your life in such a situation.

If you are involved in a crash without your seat belt, according to the N.C. Department of Transportation, you could be stunned or knocked unconscious and your chances of getting out of a submerged or burning car would be even less.

Stevens said a popular myth that gets many people hurt is the one that believes you don't need a seat belt on short trips or at slow speeds. According to the N.C. Department of Transportation, more than eighty percent of all accidents occur at speeds of 40 mph or less, and that 3 out of 4 accidents causing death occur within twenty-five miles of home.

Stevens said another popular myth is the one that believes that you could be saved if you are thrown from your car. In fact, according to the N.C. Department of Transportation, said Stevens, your chances of being killed are almost twenty-five times greater if you are thrown from the car.

Study?

BRYAN HUMBERT — The East Carolinian

Has that mid-semester fatigue hit you yet? It hasn't hit this co-ed, who is diligently studying for those tests before the last day to drop a class this Friday. Funny how tests always seem to come at the same time each semester. Avoid the fatigue and the rush of cramming for exams — study well in advance, and you're sure to be prepared to celebrate that 'A'.

Work, Work, Work

TONY RUMPLE — ECU News Bureau

Cotton Hall recently received new furniture during renovations last summer. It was the first time since the dorm was built in 1925 that any major renovations had been made to the structure. Another refurbishing project on campus was the rewiring and redecorating of ECU's International House. Future improvements to campus facilities include the addition of a new dining room wing to Mendenhall Student Center. See related story on page 3.

Fear Of AIDS Increases

By DOUG ROBERSON

(This is Part I of a two-part series dealing with the increasing problem and fears of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome. On Thursday, part II of the series will cover other sexually transmitted diseases, including chlamydia and gonorrhea.)

Fear of the unknown is part of the reason for the current escalation in public concern over Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, which is more commonly known as AIDS, said Mary Elesha-Adams, ECU Health Educator.

"Everyone has doubts and fears about AIDS, even in the medical profession. Doctors and researchers aren't certain about all the ways the disease may be transmitted. These uncertainties filter down to the public," Elesha-Adams said.

"Another reason for the increase in public concern about AIDS has to do with Rock Hudson having the disease. There's a tremendous increase in publicity when a famous movie star contracts a fatal disease," she said.

Currently, medical professionals believe intimate sexual contact is the primary way in which AIDS may be contracted.

"Sexual intercourse with an infected person is one way of contracting the disease," she said.

"Very intimate, passionate kissing is another way — anything involving an exchange of body fluids such as blood or semen can spread AIDS."

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, AIDS is nearing epidemic proportions. Since mid-1981, more than 13,000 cases of AIDS have been reported in the U.S. Approximately 500,000 cases of AIDS Related Complex (ARC) have also been reported.

"People who have ARC don't actually have AIDS," Elesha-Adams said, "but they do have the potential for developing the disease."

Ticket Rules Explained

Attendance at the ECU vs Temple game was a near sell out. The Temple game is a good indication of the attendance expected for this week's homecoming game and for the South Carolina game.

Both the Miami and South Carolina games are approaching sell out status. However, the athletic department is sensitive to the students needs for tickets, and is working to make every effort to notify all students of the standard policies for student ticket pick up. By following these policies, students will maximize their chances to get the tickets they desire. Remember all tickets are on a first come, first-serve basis.

Tickets are available at Mendenhall Ticket Office 11-6 Tues., Wed., Thur. and at Minges Coliseum 8-5 Mon.-Thur. Mon. is reserved for Student Group Pickups and Tues.-Thur. are general student pickups.

Students Have Travel Choice

By DOUG ROBERSON
Staff Writer

Before embarking on their next "road trip", ECU students should consider Piedmont Airlines' Commuter Service as an alternative to long-distance driving.

According to Customer Service Agent for Piedmont Commuter Matt Woodruff, students can fly from the Pitt-Greenville airport to many cities for about the same price as flights from larger airports.

"Price is one of the good things about Piedmont Commuter. A person can fly from Greenville to Newark, N.J., or to Washington, D.C., for basically the same price as flights from Raleigh-Durham," Woodruff said.

"It costs $60 to fly from Greenville to Newark. The fare from Raleigh is $59. Plus, people can save by not having to drive to Raleigh and back," he said.

Saving time is another reason passengers often choose to fly rather than drive.

"Flight time from Greenville to Raleigh is 25 minutes. Flights to Charlotte take about 55 minutes," Woodruff said.

"When you consider the time it takes to drive over 200 miles to Charlotte, the savings are pretty substantial," he said.

Currently, Piedmont has seven arrivals and seven departures from Greenville each day. The planes serving Greenville are a Beech 99, which seats 15 passengers and two crew members. A larger plane carrying 30 passengers, two crewmen and a flight attendant also flies to Charlotte each day.

Darlene Baker, a senior in ECU's School of Nursing, said she rode on the Piedmont commuter and added that the planes are "reasonably comfortable."

"The plane wasn't as luxurious as a large jet. The flight was bumpy and the engine noise was loud. But, basically, the plane was comfortable," she said.

Baker added that Piedmont's fares are reasonable when the savings in time and driving costs are considered.

"It's a pretty good deal. Especially if you have to drive to Charlotte or Asheville and back in one weekend. Not to mention the wear and tear on your car," she said.

Since Piedmont began serving Greenville in May, 1985, ridership has increased nearly 300 percent, Woodruff said.

"There's a possibility Piedmont will be offering full-time students a reduced fare in the future. We hope even more students will use the commuter service then," he said.

ECU Flu Season Commences

With Mary Elisha Adams

WHAT IS THE FLU AND HOW CAN IT BE PREVENTED?

Flu, or influenza, is a group of viruses that attack the respiratory tract. Most infections occur during winter when humidity is low so that mucous membranes are left dried out and are easily penetrated. One person can have repeated cases of the flu because there are so many different flu viruses already and new strains are being created naturally through genetic mutation. However, after exposure to one strain of flu virus that person becomes immune to that particular strain, but is still susceptible to other strains.

Prevention can take several forms. Since the flu virus is a respiratory "bug", it is spread by sneezing or coughing. The sneeze or cough contains microscopic moisture droplets of the virus. The droplets are then inhaled by unsuspecting victims. Therefore, simply avoiding other students with flu-like symptoms will help. Also, try to avoid stress because resistance to flu is due to the integrity of the immunological system. Eat and rest properly and avoid fatigue.

HOW DO I KNOW IF I HAVE THE FLU AND WHAT CAN I DO TO FEEL BETTER?

Fever, cough, sore throat, headache, muscle aches and fatigue are some of the symptoms that let everyone know a "bug" is going around. Having these means you may already have the flu; the only treatment is symptomatic. Avoid exertion for 24-48 hours after your temperature has returned to normal. Aspirin helps for muscle aches and headaches, and salt water gargles are useful for a sore throat. Also, steam inhalation, from a vaporizer, prevents mucous secretions from drying out, and decongestants can be helpful for sinus symptoms.

Usually, complete recovery occurs in uncomplicated cases. However, complications can result; the most common are secondary bacterial infections. Which cause a persistent fever and cough for more than 5 days. If those symptoms persist, come to the Student Health Service because antibiotics are needed to cure this infection.

I LIVE IN A DORM. ARE THERE ANY SPECIAL THINGS I CAN DO WHEN I FEEL SO LOUSY I DON'T EVEN WANT TO GET OUT OF BED?

Your roommate can be a key person. Ask him/her to make sure you have water and other drinks and ice within your reach. Also, you may want to ask him/her to keep an eye on you when you walk to the bathroom or shower in case you become weaker or get dizzy.

Your resident advisor on your hall can also be helpful to you. Your advisor can check on you to see if you need any assistance.

Each dorm has a first aid box that has aspirin, and other medications that can provide some relief from flu symptoms. Don't feel guilty about asking your roommate and friends for assistance.

Greenpeace

French Bomb Ship

Recent revelations regarding the French Secret Service's involvement in the bombing of the Rainbow Warrior have embarrassed the Mitterand government before the world community. The bombing of the ship, which belonged to the American based environmental group Greenpeace, was apparently carried out by French Secret Service agents in order to prevent the Rainbow Warrior from engaging in anti-nuclear protests against French nuclear testing in the South Pacific.

While no one is alleging that Mitterand personally gave the order for the Rainbow Warrior to be bombed, it is clear that remarks made by him before the incident encouraged French officials to go to extremes to stop Greenpeace from interfering in the tests. Mitterand told the French armed forces "to ban by force if necessary, all unauthorized entry into French territorial waters." Subsequent efforts to prevent a full investigation into the matter by officials within the Mitterand administration have cast further suspicion upon the highest levels of the French government.

As is the case with most scandals involving the higher levels of government, however, one of the most damaging aspects of the Greenpeace affair has been the Mitterand Administration's attempts to cover up evidence which might prove politically damaging to it. Only last week the French government filed charges alleging a breach of national security against five military officers suspected of leaking information to journalists about the French secret service's role in the bombing. The charges came only a day after Prime Minister Laurent Fabius went before the nation in a television broadcast and placed responsibility for the bombing on the defense minister and chief of intelligence, both of whom were fired from their jobs.

The move was obviously an attempt by the Mitterand administration to silence those who would implicate the higher tiers of the French government. The Mitterand government's duplicity becomes all the more apparent in light of the fact that it was the New Zealand government, (the Rainbow Warrior was docked in New Zealand) after carrying out its own investigation, which charged the French Secret Service with the bombing. New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange has himself accused the French government of attempting to do a whitewash job in carrying out its own internal investigations.

Yet, as In These Times newspaper pointed out in its September 11 issue, "the scandal is that in France there is no scandal." Though a man, photographer Fernando Pereira, was killed in the bombing, most of the French press and political class have treated the whole episode as a farce. The first Louis Harris poll conducted on the affair in France showed only 50 percent agreeing that "a country like France doesn't have the right to use methods such as were employed against the Greenpeace boat." Much larger majorities were opposed to making anyone resign even though 70 percent said they expected the government to hide part of the truth. And 19 percent said the Secret Services were right to use force to prevent the Greenpeace campaign but "shouldn't have got caught."

Something which does not make French politicians appear any nobler in the eyes of the world community is the fact that many accused Greenpeace of having Communist ties. Brice Lalond, French chairman of Friends of the Earth, has correctly characterized these allegations as "absurd." He added that he was "ashamed of France."

For those who are familiar with Greenpeace's campaign's to save whales and seals from slaughter such allegations are an affront. We urge the Mitterand Administration to clean its house.

Rebel Yell For State

Concerning the article, "N.C. Sucks!" in last Thursday's East Carolinian; it is my understanding that the East Carolinian regards itself as a liberal newspaper. I applaud this fact as I consider myself liberal as well. My family has called North Carolina home for many years, including those spent under the flag of the Confederate States of America, and yes, I am very proud of my Southern heritage. It appalls me that the management of this newspaper would allow such an article to be printed anywhere other than in the "Opinion" column. In reference to your decision to print "N.C. Sucks!" as well as to the article itself, I would like to quote from Mr. Dunhill's article, "Finger in throat, please — Tacky! Tacky! Tacky!" Furthermore, if the pompous Mr. W. Bernard Dunhill, III (or is it the turd?) does not like the politics, attire, female population, dialect, economy, or social life offered by North Carolina, someone should remind him that our borders are not closed and I would personally like to drop-kick him over it. As I recall, the article also mentioned something about his having been "led to the brink of resignation". Whatever post is held by Mr. Dunhill, be it staff writer or human being (very doubtful), such a move would be greatly applauded by myself and other contingents of "the North Carolina mentality". Long live the Confederacy!

Forum Rules

The East Carolinian welcomes letters expressing all points of view. Mail or drop them by our office in the Publications Building, across from the entrance of Joyner Library.

For purposes of verification, all letters must include the name, major and classification, address, phone number and signature of the author(s). Letters are limited to two typewritten pages, double-spaced or neatly printed. All letters are subject to editing for brevity, obscenity and libel, and no personal attacks will be permitted. Students, faculty and staff writing letters for this page are reminded that they are limited to one every five issues.

Urban Enterprise Zones

Congressman Jack Kemp, a Republican from Buffalo, New York and a presidential candidate for 1988, has made a magnanimous proposal to solve inner city decay and unemployment. He wants to continue the Reagan revolution which has brought America a less than four percent inflation rate and a less than six percent unemployment rate. If we are losing jobs to the so-called "trade deficit," then why is unemployment lower than ever?

The Right View

SANDY HARDY

Some areas of the country that may be losing jobs overseas, such as North Carolina with textiles, have a lower unemployment rate than the national average. Some areas, however, have a higher rate of unemployment. Inner cities are a good example.

Blacks and Hispanics have a much higher rate of unemployment, even though unemployment has recently dropped for them. Many ethnics live in depressed urban areas that need revitalization. Discrimination is not the cause of unemployment among urban ethnics, as the Democrats would have the minority poor believe, so the Democrats can keep minorities where they want them—on a leash. The real cause has been the migration of capital out of the cities.

Capital migrated to the suburbs along with the middle class. Middle America left the cities as a result of government housing subsidies which encouraged building and buying on cheap real estate in the suburbs.

Republicans want to free the inner-city poor from destitution to become upwardly mobile. We will do this through economic stimulation triggered by an Urban Enterprise Zone Act and not by the Democrats' typical panacea of throwing your tax dollars at the problem, a practice which promotes graft and corruption.

The Urban Enterprise Zone Act is based upon the theory that a more laissez-faire type attitude can increase business investment in a depressed area and entrepreneurship will follow. This will be done through the relaxation of regulations and taxes. Certain tax refunds will be paid also. Proponents say jobs will increase, possibly exponentially, along with an increased tax base resulting from increased productivity.

The urban problem stems from cities that own many inner city areas, caused by a failure of the former owners to pay taxes on the property. It is cheaper for owners to give up their property than to keep it. The property has become less valuable than the taxes assessed on it. The property cannot be sold because it is not worth buying. Cities and states have offered to give the property to anyone willing to pay assessed taxes on the property. There has been little response to this proposal.

The reluctance to continue upkeep on inner city property causes the depressed and decaying area to grow. The property does not attract enough rent money from business or residents so it is abandoned. When the depressed area has a building close down because the rent doesn't produce enough money for taxes and upkeep, the rent value of neighboring buildings increases and the problem spreads.

As businesses and buildings close, jobs and residences decrease. Thus a population is stranded and must collect welfare pensions. This decreases tax revenue and increases spending of collected taxes. Many people choose to become squatters in the dilapidated buildings. Shops and stores close and the area becomes an urban desert.

Suburban sprawl has been accredited with causing inner city decay. People move up in the world and they move out of the city into a nice neighborhood with single-family dwellings on big lots. It is considered a sign of status to make it out of the rat race or ghetto. As the people have moved out, so have taxes, businesses, jobs and property value. Only the poor are left, having been given a ghetto and then an urban desert out of what once was an economically viable area.

There are many causes attributed to suburban sprawl. One is the Federal Housing Act of 1949. Also other laws created to help people buy homes are at the root of the problem. These acts include the Veteran's Administration loan program, the Federal Housing Act mentioned above, and some Great Society programs of the Johnson era. These successfully put more people into the category of being financially able to buy homes. This sped up the spread of suburban areas and left only the poor and destitute in the urban areas.

It is cheaper for owners to give up their property than to keep it. The property has become less valuable than the taxes assessed on it. The property cannot be sold because it is not worth buying. Cities and states have offered to give the property to anyone willing to pay assessed taxes on the property. There has been little response to this proposal.

Revenue sharing introduced city governments to using federal money to build sewage and water lines, electrical lines, and gas pipes in suburban areas. The Urban Development Action Grants helped to improve the infrastructure of dilapidated areas, but it was still unprofitable to conduct business in these areas.

The current enterprise zone proposal demands cooperation between the city and the affected area concerning licensing regulations, taxes, infrastructure construction and Urban Development Grants being used in the area. Also, low income housing construction would be eligible for these grants and other regulatory and tax proposals. The capital gains tax on investments would be eliminated. This would encourage investments from all types of investors such as multinational corporations down to small service businesses. Also, the area would be declared a Free Trade Zone. This would allow elimination of import duties, tariffs, and other import and export regulations. This would encourage warehousing and high technology industries to locate in the enterprise zones, but other industries would profit from this also because of duty-free resources from abroad.

There would be tax refunds for employers and employees; a five percent refund for employees in the zones would be enacted. However, it would be limited to $1500 in order to prevent high salaried employees from abusing the zone. Also a five percent refund would be given to employers from the amount they spend for Comprehensive Employment Training Act employees. This would encourage employers to hire unskilled workers in need of training. The funds from CETA would help offset the training costs as would the refunds.

Various other regulations would be eliminated from state and local governments as long as they wouldn't harm the environment or the residents. Inner cities being surrounded by all socio-economic classes have the potential to attract capital back into the inner city.

To fight the argument that the poor would be kicked out and would be left wondering, "Where are we to go?" I would say that they will disappear into the lower and middle working classes and some eventually will become quite successful. However, some people will always be poor and also poor people will always be around no matter how prosperous an economy there is. America, being the great country that she is, should care for her truly destitute; yet we should not guarantee a middle-class lifestyle to everyone by a free unearned check. We should provide ample opportunity instead by promoting the general welfare.

When an Urban Enterprise Zone begins, the poor will be used for unskilled labor. These jobs generally pay less so few people are willing to commute for these jobs; therefore local poor will be hired. With experience many laborers will turn into skilled workers. Therefore, these poor will disappear. Service industries will hire and train, through apprenticeship, various numbers of unskilled local workers. These would include mechanics, plumbers, electricians, cooks, waiters, bakers and appliance repairmen.

Other jobs would appear also through initiative and entrepreneurship. There would be an increase in employment. These stores would also increase employment. Stores would be set up for commuters to do some quick shopping before and after work. Restaurants would cater to locals while some would specifically cater to upper classes, mainly commuters.

Education in these areas would definitely improve with prosperity and socio-economic levels. Taxes will fund the schools, and parents with jobs will provide better role models for children. City and private construction projects will provide many jobs early after the establishment of the enterprise zone and would continue with prosperity as it does in other prosperous areas. There will be a need for more buildings for offices, factories, warehouses, housing and stores.

In this era of concern for tax rates and budget deficits, Congress must be careful with how it spends its money from tax revenue. An Urban Enterprise Zone Act will save taxpayers money because it depends on private funding of economic growth by entrepreneurs rather than government funding by a bloated bureaucracy. Ultimately, it is the only solution that we have to the problem of urban blight.

Campus Renovation

By BETH WHICKER

ECU's newest renovation project aside from the new classroom building is a proposal to add a $3 million dining wing to Mendenhall Student Center. Mendenhall Student Center was occupied first in 1973 and has not been renovated in any form since that time.

"We have 14,000 students on campus and a cafeteria that only seats 350; the dining facility is far from adequate. Students living on West campus and Central campus have to go to College Hill to dine," said Rudolph Alexander, director of University Unions, and associate director for Student Activities.

"We have had a food service consultant to advise us on equipment and the size of the cafeteria. Meeting rooms are needed since Mendenhall's meeting rooms are usually booked. The staff has planned a great room to be used for banquets, additional meeting rooms and offices," according to Alexander. The project is slated to start July 1, 1986.

Another of ECU's oldest buildings, Cotten Hall, received a complete overhaul over the summer. The operation is the first major renovation since Cotten was constructed in 1925.

During the summer, the building was rewired, repainted, and a new lighting system was in-

Foreign Teacher Fights To Teach At School

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (CPS) — University of New Mexico assistant professor Margaret Randall is a native of the U.S. with a husband, parents and a brother who are U.S. citizens.

But now she thinks the government may force her off campus and out of the country, primarily because she has associated with leftists.

Randall became a naturalized Mexican in 1966, and last summer, after she applied for permanent resident alien status in the U.S., an Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) officer grilled her about her friends, activities and writings during her 23 years in Latin America.

"It was a political inquiry," says Randall's attorney, Michael Maggio, who, like Randall, now expects the INS to reject Randall's application for permission to stay in the U.S. sometime this fall.

If that happens, Maggio says Randall will appeal.

And that battle, Maggio predicts, will become "a focal point of national attention" because he says few people challenge those rulings.

"Margaret Randall is being told that even though she lives in the land of her birth, has parents and a husband who are American and teaches at an American university, she can't stay here because of what she thinks," Maggio says.

"The higher education community ought to be concerned if the INS is going to be a brain police."

U.S. immigration law allows the INS to reject visa applications from applicants who have joined or affiliated with communist, Marxist or "subversive" organizations.

The INS also can reject applicants who have advocated communism, anarchism or opposition to organized government, or applicants who may engage in activities that would be "prejudicial to the public interest."

Rejecting applications for permanent resident status — as opposed to turning down requests to visit the U.S. — on political grounds are more rare.

"Both categories are equally politically obnoxious," says American Civil Liberties Union attorney Steve Shapiro.

"But in terms of the consequences for building a life, rejections of permanent residency status are much more devastating. The human dimension involved is greater."

However, Joshua Koltun, a legislative aide to Rep. Barney Frank (D-Mass.), argues Randall's case probably wouldn't affect many other people.

But Frank has sponsored a bill to narrow the number of political exclusions from the U.S.

In the year ending Sept. 30, 1984, 253 applications for permanent residency status were rejected for political reasons, ac-ording to figures compiled by the State Department's Bureau of Consular Affairs.

The State Dept. rejected about 600 potential visitors for political reasons during the same period.

Prominent academicians like South African poet Dennis Brutus and Latin American literature professor Angel Rama are among those denied permanent residency for political reasons in the past.

Rama, who was teaching at the University of Maryland, was killed in a plane crash before the final outcome of his case was determined.

Brutus eventually received political asylum, after which the government dropped objections to his request for permanent residency status. He is now an English professor at Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania.

As in the Brutus case, Randall has attracted the support of prominent U.S. writers in her anticipated battle with the INS.

Randall, an American studies professor, has written about 40 books. Leaders of PEN, an international writers' organization, have petitioned the INS in Randall's support.

Norman Mailer, Gay Talese and Kurt Vonnegut Jr., among others, have signed the petition.

The International House, a building used to house foreign students, was also renovated this summer.

"It was desperately needed; we'd had some wiring problems. To my knowledge no major renovations had taken place since ECU obtained the building 10 or 12 years ago," said Dan Wooten, ECU director of Housing Operations.

During the summer the building was rewired; the kitchen was redecorated, and new carpet, paint and furniture was added to the structure.

REACHING OUT TO SERVE YOU

Legislators Begin Year With Debate

By HAROLD JOYNER
City News Editor

Legislators packed in Mendenhall 221 Monday night as the near-capacity crowd gradually learned the ropes of SGA legislative action.

Major debate centered around allowing a graduating senior to serve on the Honor Board. The legislators agreed to strike the candidate's name off the list, and search for another person. All 10 members of the Review Board were approved, as well as the other nine on the Honor Board.

Some legislators argued that the person should be allowed to serve, giving newer members some guidance. However, legislator Mark Simon said the candidate did not have any experience anyway, and therefore the position should be filled by an underclassman.

Speaker of the Legislature Kirk Sholey stepped down from the floor and said the selection of the committee members were made last spring by the Executive Committee and the Class Presidents.

Sholey, who was junior class president last year, also told the legislators that he was not informed of the screening committee and "knew of some interested freshmen and sophomores who weren't even told of the meeting, nor interviewed."

At this writing, no Executive Council spokesman was available for comment.

The Executive Council consists of the SGA President, vice president and treasurer, as well as each class president.

A new legislative procedure change in presenting bills was announced at the meeting by Shelley. Instead of each legislator presenting a bill to the legislature, "all new bills, except those that the author intends on suspending the rules on, must be given to the Speaker by 4:45 p.m. on Mondays," the announcement read.

Legislator Coralie Patterson said she didn't like the bill, as it would "lose the identity of the legislator" in presenting bills. "SGA representatives are just that — representatives. People know who you are and know who to go to if they want to get a bill introduced. This change has come about because a lot of the legislators are lazy and don't want take the trouble to find out about a bill."

"It is my sincere hope," Shelley said, "that this new procedure will insure that no bills are lost and that student groups will know who to contact about a bill they are interested in. Bills have gotten lost before, and I don't want it to happen again."

Committee members and chairmen were also selected. Heading up the Rules and Judiciary Committee is Stuart Teeter; Appropriations Committee is Dwayne Wiseman; Screenings and Appointments is Jonathan Withington.

A scream shatters the stillness of the night. The convent comes to life and rushes to the scene. In a small, bare room on the third floor lies a man. In uniform, he is a black and white figure. A crimson cloak of life's blood

This opening may seem common, but the story that follows anything but ordinary. Agnes of God is a landmark film that is destined to be a heavyweight contender at this year's Academy Awards.

It is the story of an innocent young nun, Agnes, who has a birth in a cloistered convent in Quebec.

The child is found dead, and Agnes, played by Meg Tilly, claims to have knowledge of neither the pregnancy nor the birth.

Jane Fonda portrays Dr. Martha Livingston, the court-appointed forensic psychiatrist dispatched to St. Mary's Magdalene convent to determine if Agnes is mentally fit to stand trial for manslaughter.

Anne Bancroft is Mother Superior Miriam Ruth, the head of the convent, and self-appointed defendant of the fate of Agnes' soul. Not only does the Mother Superior insist on Agnes' innocence, she also suggests the possibility of a miracle birth.

Thus, a conflict arises between Dr. Livingston and the Mother

AIDS Causes Public Fear

"Scientists are hopeful that a vaccine will be developed that will prevent people with ARC from developing AIDS," she added.

Adams said she emphasizes the need for persons in certain "high risk" groups to be selective in choosing their sex partners. "Homosexual and bisexual males should be very careful."

She added that the growing public concern over AIDS may also affect the way people think about sexually transmitted diseases.

"I would hope that people would be thinking a little bit more about all STD's, not just AIDS," Elisha Adams said.

The U.S. Public Health Service has established a toll-free AIDS hotline. The number is 1-800-42-AIDS.

N.C. Smokers Smoke More Than Average

By BETH WHICKER
Staff Writer

Thirty-nine percent of North Carolinians smoke as compared to the 29 percent national average.

"Smoking is a little more accepted in North Carolina because the economy depends on the tobacco industry. Research shows that doctors in North Carolina do not perceive the health hazards as severe as doctors in other parts of the United States. When doctors in North Carolina criticize smoking they find they are criticizing others in the industry," said Elbert Glover, assistant professor of the Community Health Department.

"Smoking on a national level is definitely less, all age groups are dropping. For the first time the national average is below the 30 percent level," said Glover.

"People are becoming more health conscious. The American Cancer Society, The Heart Association, and The Lung Association have put the word out. Ninety-nine to 97 percent of the population know the dangers of smoking," said Glover.

"What the public doesn't know is the danger of smokeless tobacco. There has been a 41 percent increase in its use per year since 1972. The public doesn't know of the dangers because it is a recent phenomenon and fairly new," said Glover.

"Some students smoke because of the new freedoms they experience when leaving home. Students feel smoking makes them feel like more of an adult and they feel like they are breaking away from home and experimenting on their own," said Glover.

In The Habit Of Sex? Not Agnes Of God!

By STEPHEN SHERBIN
Lifestyle Editor

A scream shatters the stillness of the night. The convent comes to life and rushes to the source. In a small, bare room on the third floor lies a nun. In violent contrast to the black and white habit is a crimson cloak of life's blood.

This opening may seem common, but the story that follows is anything but ordinary. Agnes of God is a landmark film that is destined to be a heavyweight contender at this year's Academy Awards.

It is the story of an innocent, young nun, Agnes, who gives birth in a cloistered convent in Quebec.

The child is found dead, and Agnes, played by Meg Tilly, claims to have knowledge of neither the pregnancy nor the birth.

Jane Fonda portrays Dr. Martha Livingston, the court-appointed forensic psychiatrist dispatched to St. Mary Magdalene convent to determine if Agnes is mentally fit to stand trial for manslaughter.

Anne Bancroft is Mother Superior Miriam Ruth, the head of the convent, and self-appointed defendant of the fate of Agnes' soul. Not only does the Mother Superior insist on Agnes' innocence, she also suggests the possibility of a miracle birth.

Thus, a conflict arises between Dr. Livingston and the Mother

Superior over the future of the young nun.

Agnes of God is directed by Norman Jewison and adapted from screenwriter John Pielmeier's controversial, Tony Award-winning Broadway play of the same name.

The play has been translated into seven languages and performed in 14 countries, and was originally written for three actresses on a bare stage.

"With the exception of two chairs and an ashtay," remarks Pielmeier, "there was no set. All the scenes took place in the doctor's office, and the piece depended completely on the three actresses. It was a very bare-essential kind of play."

"The most exciting aspect of adapting the screenplay for Agnes of God," says Jewison, "was dealing with this conflict between faith and logic in the scenes with Jane and Anne. Since one represents the secular world and the other represents the religious world, you have these battles where the two of them are slugging out their respective points of view. Pielmeier has also thought to bestow a sense of humor on both of the characters, so in the midst of this powerful struggle, there are some wonderful light moments."

Agnes of God is the first film in several years to have women playing all the lead characters. "It's not often that you find a film with women in all the leading roles," Jewison points out.

When speaking of the casting of Jane Fonda, Anne Bancroft and Meg Tilly, the director remarks, "We have three of the most exciting actresses working today." It's the power of John Pielmeier's story that attracted these three actresses.

"What it forces you to do is to begin to probe how you feel about miracles, faith, innocence — about the human need to believe in things that can't be explained," says actress Jane Fonda. "These are very fundamental questions that have been debated for centuries. This film isn't going to answer them, but I think it's a good time to re-examine them in an artistic context."

Bancroft was also intrigued by the spiritual aspect of the screenplay. "After seeing Agnes of God," she urges, "I would like people who believe in God to think again and people who don't believe in God to think again, a well."

The film is set in an old Ontario boys' school, Academy Award-winning production designer Ken Adams was enlisted to transform the historic Rockwood Academy into the convent.

"The convent in the play is a very cloistered one," he says, "so it is almost completely separated from the outside world. What we were trying to do is to contrast the exterior, secular life in Montreal with the interior serenity of the actual convent. I tried to keep the design as simple as possible, at the same time giving a certain warmth to the interiors, as though the nuns live in a complete world of their own."

In order to portray both the settings and the characters authentically, the cast visited an actual convent. "We attended vespers with the Sisters of the Benedictine, whose convent was about 45 minutes outside of Montreal," recalls the director.

"They were always so giving and understanding and never asked us why we were there. I would take Anne, Meg, and Sven (the cinematography director) and several others. At five minutes to five, we would ring the little bell and ask if we could partake in vespers. They would sing the most beautiful songs in Latin. It was fascinating to get into that life as much as one was allowed."

The work of the Dutch painter Vermeer had the visual effect they were seeking. "When I think of Agnes of God, I think of Vermeer's rich dark tones and the way the light hits the faces and hands in his portraits," explains the director. "That's the look that we were looking for."

The cinematography director hired for the film was Sven Nykvist, whose credits include such films as One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich, Pretty Baby and The Postman Always Rings Twice. Nykvist approached the film as if it were shot in black and white. This was necessary, not only because of the lack of color in the nuns' costumes, but because of the lack of color in the Canadian landscape, which very much reminded him of Sweden.

"I try to simplify the lighting, composition, the movements," Nykvist explained. "The lighting is born during the rehearsals, where I have a silent collaboration with the actors. I'm not interested in science fiction and I don't have a technical background, which is why I love photographing faces so much — to try to find something of the soul in the human being."

Jane Fonda complimented, "I think it's going to be a very beautiful film to look at because of Sven Nykvist's work. He's a genius."

The crew for Agnes of God have turned out a marvelously impressive film.

Oct. 1, '85: The Day The New Music Died

By WARREN BAKER
Staff Writer

"You seem to be taking this rather calmly," I said.

Ben Berryhill, manager of Premiums, looked up at me with a smiling face and patted me on the back.

"I'll cry later," he said without skipping a beat.

Greenville's alternative music bar went under Monday night, and a few of the regulars came in to express their condolences. I was one of the mourners, clad in my dark U.Va. sweatshirt and deck shoes.

We talked a few minutes about the possibility of raising prices at the door and on the drinks, but Ben shook his head and mentioned that his current clientele would probably not be so current with a price hike.

Money was the issue at hand.

"I'm pissed off," he said angrily. "I feel like I've been ripped off...in a big way."

Rent and utilities took the bigger pieces of the pie away from Premiums, and Ben said he was sorry it worked out that way.

"It basically boils down to money," he added. "It sucks. It shouldn't boil down to money."

As the stout I was drinking became warmer, Ben continued. Many cigarettes found their way to the ashtray as the conversation continued.

"But this place is a great place for what I had it for, you know, because we had lots of fun. We had bands. We had inexpensive beer. And that's a good combination, but it just doesn't pay off."

He hopes for a next time. He hopes the lessons of the past will pay off...at a later date when the debts are paid off.

Overall, the new music brought in by the more progressive rockers of North Carolina was the mainstay of Premiums.

"I think the bands are great." He paused for a moment. "All of them."

A man dressed in a black jacket came over and pointed to a sticker pasted to his coat.

"R.I.P. Premiums, 1985-1985."

Ben grinned again. His eyes and hands moved back and forth.

We cut off our talk for a few minutes as an old friend of Ben's stopped by for a chat. I took a look around the premises...one more time. Beer lights adorn the wooden walls, as well as a flickering "Welcome to Miller Time" sign that graces the wall behind the bar. The sparse crowd became bigger as time wore on. The regulars exchanged their greetings, ordered their beer, and reminisced. The Guinness was finished and a wine cooler seemed like the next best bet.

I noticed a sign that hung just inside the doorway.

"He who drinks and drinks with grace is always welcome in this place."

I waited.

Ben finally returned and talked about his staff and how great they were to work with.

"Well," he finally said, "Do you have any more questions?" I again asked him about how he was taking everything so calmly. He rambled a little bit and finally said, "It's my own fault, really, for not being careful to begin with."

Careful, or not, Ben feels that he succeeded in making Premiums a cozy and "congenial" place. He admitted that he hated the so-called pickup bars, but added that if you got lucky at Premiums, well, that was good, too.

The grin was beginning to disappear for a second as he thought about what would happen as the bar's hours became numbered.

"I think that, uh, tonight I'm just gonna sit here and think about the good ol' times we had here," he laughed. "Maybe, later on, cry."

"Don't worry," he added.

"We'll be back again some day to move your soul on the dance floor with the wild and crazy little, small bands that love to come and play for you. That's why we were here...just to play for you."

Another friend of Ben's stopped by to talk, and I figured our brief conversation was over. The wine cooler was all but finished, and so was Premiums.

A girl sat next to me and glanced at the notes on my pad.

"What's that?" she asked.

"An article on Premiums," I answered. My pen continued to scrawl on the paper.

"They're closing, you know," she said with a frown.

"I know," I said.

"It's sad," she said. I finished the cooler and nodded my head. "I know."

The Dating Game

BERKELEY, CALIF. (UPI) —

If you have trouble finding dates and making friends, don't despair. With a little expert help, you can improve your social skills, a California researcher says.

"If you are not satisfied with your social life, you can make this an exciting adventure rather than a risky enterprise," said Eileen Gambrell, a psychologist and professor at the University of California, Berkeley, School of Social Welfare.

She offers a step-by-step approach to developing and maintaining relationships in a new book, "Taking Charge of Your Social Life."

She also teaches a course on "relationship ecology," which includes tips on recognizing people who are open to forming friendships, maintaining and ending conversations, interpreting verbal and nonverbal cues, handling difficult social situations and terminating unwanted relationships. Gambrell's formula for social success: "Clarify your social goals, plan how to achieve them, pursue them one small step at a time."

Before they are able to find that perfect friend or lover, she says, most people must first shed their unrealistic expectations about friendship and love.

"Many people make the frustrating mistake of expecting friendships or relationships to develop too quickly," Gambrell said. "Hoping to find the perfect friend tomorrow or the perfect love this week is guaranteed to make you miserable."

Relationship seekers should move slowly, first increasing their interactions with acquaintances and friends, then moving on to improving their love lives, she says.

"A satisfying social life is as much, if not more, related to developing friendships as to developing romantic relationships," Gambrell said.

Happenings On Campus

Due to its increasing success at commercial box offices, the surprise foreign comedy of the year, The Gods Must Be Crazy, has been pulled from distribution to non-commercial houses, such as Mendenhall's Hendrix Theatre.

Substitutions for The Gods Must Be Crazy, originally scheduled for this Wednesday at 8 p.m. have been made. Screening in its place are two other comedies, Pardon Mon Affaire and The Graduate, at 7 and 9 p.m.

Owls Topple Pirates

By RICK McCORMAC
Co-Sports Editor

ECU dropped its second consecutive football game Saturday night to Temple University 21-7, as the Pirate offense never solved the Owl defense.

Temple, using primarily an eight-man front on defense, forced the Pirates to throw the ball. Unfortunately, ECU was only able to complete four of 21 passes, which led to the loss.

"You're not going to have a good football team if you cannot throw and catch the ball," ECU head coach Art Baker said at the post game press conference. "We only had one good drive the entire game, and that was in the fourth quarter. We stopped that one ourselves by dropping a pass."

The game started on a good note for the Pirates, as senior cornerback Kevin Walker once again came up with a big play for the Pirate defense.

Temple tailback Robert Palmer fumbled on the Owl's 21 and Walker recovered. The scoring opportunity was wasted as the Pirate offense was unable to move the ball, and Jeff Heath came on to attempt a 35-yard field goal. Heath was wide to the right, for his first miss of the season, and the teams remained scoreless.

Temple wasted no time getting on the scoreboard. They marched 80 yards in 14 plays to take a 7-0 lead.

Tailback Robert Palmer, who rushed for 184 yards on the night, led the Owl drive. Palmer carried the ball for 50 of the 80 yards on eight carries. He scored the first of his three touchdowns from 11 yards out. Bill Wright converted on the extra point to make it 7-0 with 3:11 left in the first quarter.

ECU tied the score in the second quarter after Walker came up with another big defensive play. With Temple punting from its own 36, Walker busted through for his second blocked punt of the year and the Pirates took over at the Temple 28.

After a series of running plays by Tony Baker and Bobby Clair, the Pirates had first and goal from the Owl five.

After a run by Baker netted nothing, Jones kept the ball on the option around the right end for the score. Heath's PAT was prepared," Baker said. "They controlled the line of scrimmage. When you control the line of scrimmage for four quarters, you usually win."

Baker placed much of the blame for the Pirate loss on himself. "I don't think we played our best football," Baker said. "I don't think I had our players in the right positions for them to be successful. I have to take the blame for that myself. We didn't seem to play with a great deal of enthusiasm. We aren't a very good team when we don't play with enthusiasm."

While Baker was disappointed good and the game was tied 7-7 with 5:58 left in the opening half.

The score remained tied until near the end of the third quarter when a Pirate turnover set the Owls up deep in Pirate territory.

An attempted screen pass by Jones, thrown into a crowd, was tipped and picked off by Temple tackle Doug Davis. Davis returned the ball down to the Pirate six.

Palmer then carried the ball over from three yards out for his second score of the night. Wright's conversion made the score 14-7 with 5:21 left in the third period.

After the Pirate offense was unable to move the ball, Temple

Ron Jones (8) throws down field as the Pirate offensive line protects. For the Pirates to be successful, the ECU passing game will have to improve, according to coach Art Baker.

by the play of his team, there were a couple of bright spots for the Pirate faithful.

Kevin Walker continued his amazing play with a blocked punt, a fumble recovery and an interception. Tailback Tony Baker also played well, rushing for 80 yards on 18 carries, moving him past Tony Collins into fourth place on the all-time rushing list.

"If we had 20 other players performing like K.K. (Kevin Walker) and Tony Baker we would be a lot closer to 4-0," Baker commented.

Overall, Baker was disappointed in the offense, defense and kicking game.

"I don't want to take anything away from Temple," the coach said. "But, I was embarrassed with our performance, especially the offense."

The Pirates will have a chance this weekend to redeem themselves this weekend as highly touted Miami (Fla.) comes to Ficklen.

Men Netters Fall; Women Win Tournament

By DAVID McGINNESS
Staff Writer

After a strong win against UNC-Wilmington last Wednesday, the men's team came up short in Spider Invitational Tennis Tournament this weekend. The Spider Invitational is a Quad or four team round robin style tournament. The Richmond Spiders hosted William and Mary, East Carolina and Radford University in the two day competition.

Top seed Dave Shell, who came off a big win against his UNCW opponent last week, lost to Harvie of William and Mary 7-5, 6-1. Shell defeated Goodall of Richmond 6-2, 7-6 in the round two consolation bracket.

In round three of the same bracket Shell was defeated by Chaney of Richmond 6-3, 6-3 to finish seventh in his flight.

Jon Melhorn was the top finisher for the men with a 6-0, 6-3 victory over Tierney of William and Mary. Melhorn finished fourth in the "C" flight.

In doubles ECU's best results came from John Anthony and Pat Campanero. After a three set first round loss to Policastro and Slobin of Richmond, the two came back for a 6-2, 6-3 win over Jones and Reed of Radford University. They went on to win again in a comeback victory over Nease and Waggoner also of Radford, 3-6, 7-5, 7-5.

The men are now 2-5 and will host Campbell University tomorrow at the varsity tennis courts at 3:00 p.m.

The ECU women's tennis team emerged victorious this weekend at the Eastern Collegiate Invitational Tournament at Meredith College.

"I was very pleased with the women's play this weekend," Coach Pat Sherman said. "Their play in the doubles is really coming along, and it shows."

The Pirate women swept the doubles events while capturing the number four and six flights in the singles competition.

The number one doubles team of Ann Manderfield and Lisa Eichholz maintained their perfect record this season, stretching their record to 8-0. In the first round they pummeled the Winston-Salem College team of Degroot and Monaghan 6-1, 6-1.

In the semi-finals they scored another straight set victory over Carawan and Hatfield of Mars Hill College 6-1, 6-2.

In the finals Mukerjee and Smith of Atlantic Christian College fell to the Lady Pirates in another straight set victory for ECU.

The number two doubles team of Maria Swain and Tyraina Myers defeated Messich and Hornthal of Mars Hill in the semi-finals after receiving a bye in the first round. Swain and Myers squeaked by in the second set tiebreaker after shutting out their opponents 6-0 in the first set. In the finals the two defeated Van Meter and Riley of Campbell College 7-5, 6-4.

The number three doubles team of Holly Murray and Becky Clements also emerged as flight champions. In the first round they were forced to play three sets as Cochrane and Gore of Mars Hill won the second set 6-3 before losing by the same score in the final set. In the semi-finals the Lady Pirates trounced Gregory and Haneline of Winston-Salem College 6-0, 6-0. In the finals the two were again straight set victors against Mattock and May of Campbell College, 6-2, 6-3. With their wins in this weekend's tournament Clements and Murray post a 5-0 record in dual matches. Ms. Clements is 6-1 in dual and tourney play at the number two singles spot.

In number one singles play Ann Manderfield lost to Sonali Mukerjee of ACC 6-4, 6-1 in the semi-finals after receiving a bye in the first round.

In the number two flight Becky Clements rolled over first round opponent Sandy Carawan of Mars Hill 6-0, 6-0. However, she lost to Susan Maxwell of ACC 6-4, 1-6, 4-6 in the semi-finals. Maxwell went on to win the flight.

Amy Ziemer lost in the finals of the number three flight to Wendy Smith after giving up only five games in her first two matches.

Lisa Eichholz controlled the number four flight with straight set victories in the semis and finals. Eichholz shut out Karen Eikeland of Mars Hill in the second set after winning the first 7-5. In the finals she topped Kathy Riley of Campbell 6-3, 6-3.

In the number five flight Lady Pirate Holly Murray lost 6-1, 6-1 to Susan Mattocks of Campbell in the semi-finals after receiving a bye in the first round.

After a first round bye Maria Swain went on to capture the flight six championship. Maria defeated Buffy Kirby of Mars Hill 6-4, 6-2 in the semi-finals and Laura May of Campbell 6-2, 6-3 in the championship match.

In the final breakdown of team point standings, ECU won the tournament with 18, Campbell was second with 12, ACC third with 11, Meredith fourth with 7, Mars Hill fifth with 3 and Winston-Salem last with 2.

Dan Lamont hits a forehand in a match played at the Minges Coliseum tennis courts, where ECU will host Campbell University tomorrow.

Lady Buc Volleyballers Troubled With Schedule

By JANET SIMPSON
Staff Writer

The Lady Pirate Volleyball team had a little trouble this past week as they managed to win only one of their six matches.

The Lady Pirates started the week on Wednesday by traveling to Durham to face the Lady Blue Devils. Duke, who is one of the better teams in collegiate volleyball, was considered by Coach Turner as the toughest team they would face all season. Despite a good effort by ECU, the Lady Blue Devils won in three games, 15-6, 15-10, 15-1.

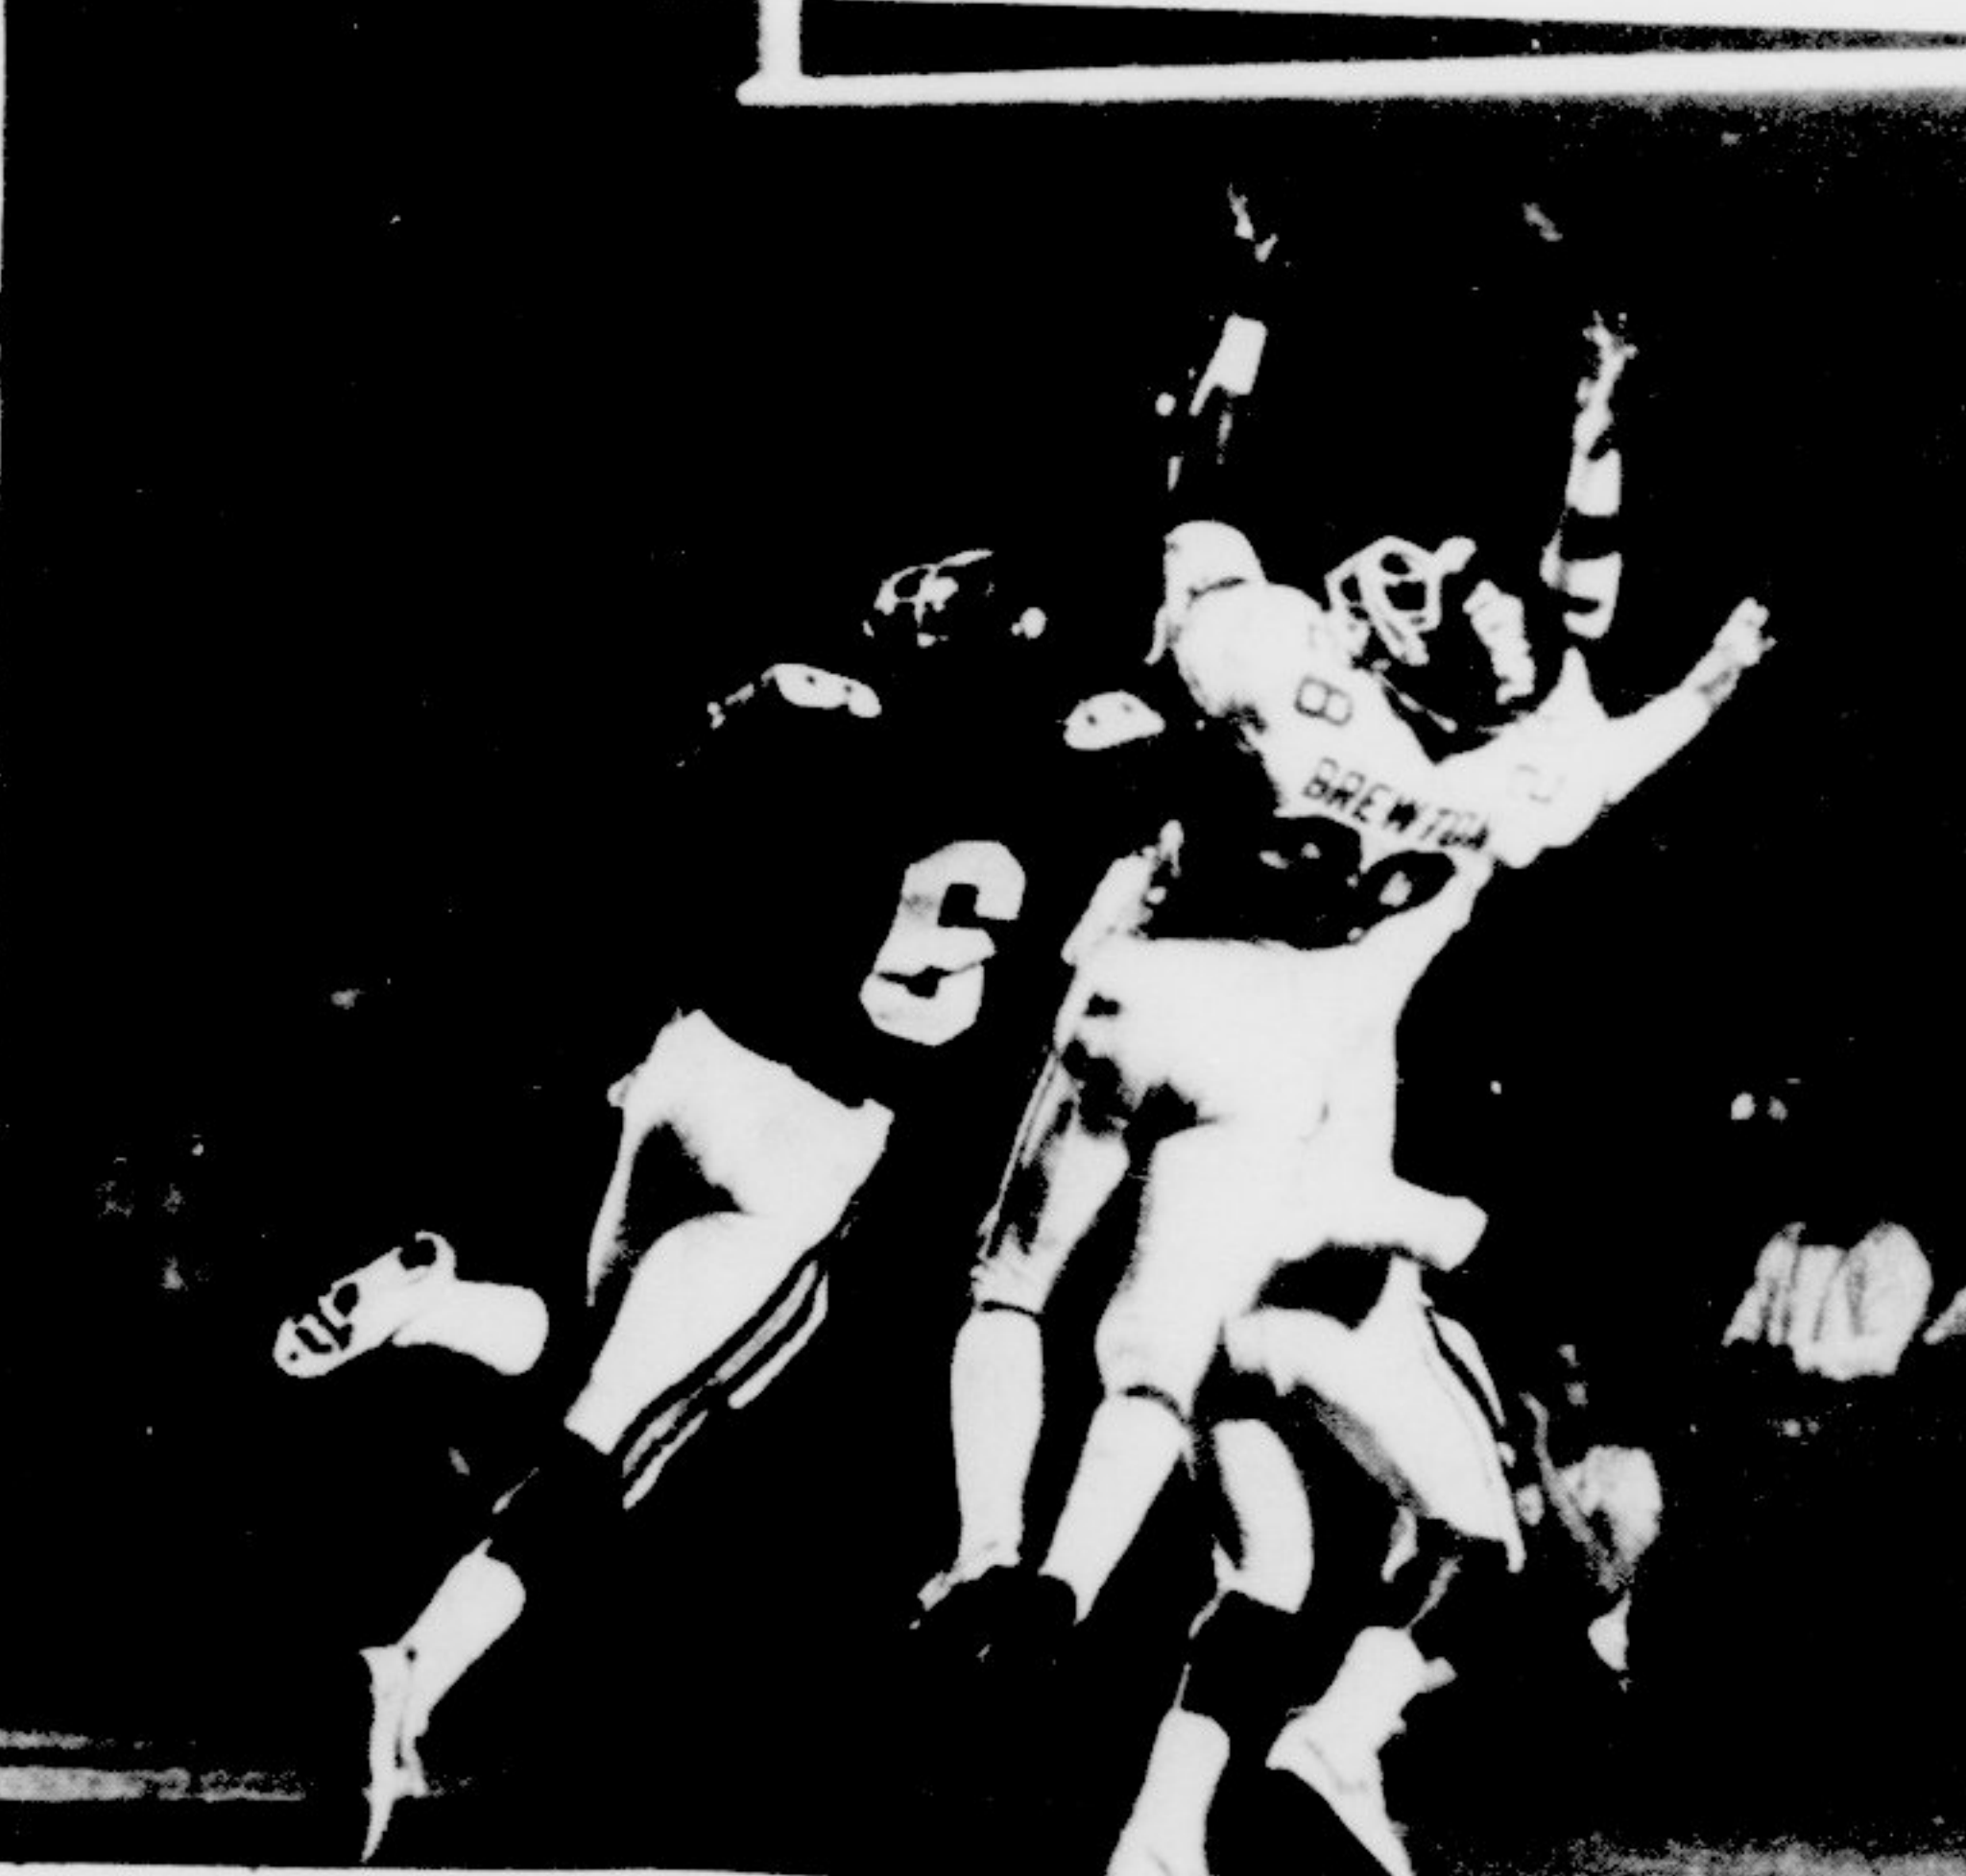

Friday and Saturday were spent in Winston-Salem at the Wake Forest University Invitational. Even though the Lady Bucs came up short, losing four of their five matches, they got to avenge an earlier loss to the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Friday, the Lady Pirates fell to host team Wake Forest, 15-4, 15-11, 15-13. Later in the day, ECU battled Stetson University before losing, 15-10, 16-14, 15-7. The Lady Bucs took the opening game from Western Carolina University, before dropping to the Catamounts, 11-15, 15-1, 15-7, 15-10.

Saturday started out bright for ECU as they handled UNCC in three consecutive games, 15-11, 15-8, 15-9. However Furman was victorious in the Bucs final match, 15-12, 15-9, 15-11.

The Lady Pirates, who are 2-8 overall, will face Methodist College Wednesday night, Oct. 3 at 6:30 in Minges Coliseum.

Just as Amos Adams (6) draws a crowd, so will Ficklen Stadium. So be sure to get your tickets before it is too late!

Athletic Department Outlines Ticket Policy

Only a limited number of the half price student guest tickets are available, and they will be issued on a first come, first-serve basis on Tues., Wed. and Thur., until the student guest tickets are exhausted. Once the half price student guest tickets are gone, only full price ($14) tickets will be available.

Because of the past demands on student tickets, students have been able to pick up tickets on Friday. However, if students wait until Friday to pick up tickets, the tickets may not be available. Therefore, we urge all students to take advantage of, and follow the student pickup days of Tues., Wed., and Thur. in order to have a chance to get good seats.

For the South Carolina game, because of fall break, the Athletic Department will cater to the student needs and student pickup days will be: group pickup—Thur. Oct. 17, regular student pickup Fri. Oct. 18, Tues. Oct. 22, Wed. Oct. 23, Thur. Oct. 24. Consequently, if the students do not pick up all of their tickets for South Carolina on Thur., Fri., Tues., Wed. and Thur. (Oct. 17, 18, 22, 23, 24) all the remaining tickets will go on sale at the full price of $14 for everyone. This policy will be strictly enforced for the South Carolina game.

Nevertheless, no tickets from the student allotment will be sold to the general public until the students have had their opportunity to pick up student tickets on the days mentioned above.

ECU SPORTS INFORMATION

BAKER MOVES INTO NO. 4 SPOT: With his 80 yards rushing against Temple last week, senior tailback Tony Baker moved into fourth place on ECU's all-time rushing list.

The 5-11, 176-pound High Point, NC native now owns 2,262 career rushing yards as he passed former ECU great Anthony Collins (2,207), now with the New England Patriots. Baker needs 628 yards in the Pirates' remaining seven games to become the school's all-time leading rusher. Baker needs just 251 yards to jump into the No. 3 spot, now held by Butch Colson (1967-69) with 2,512 career rushing yards.

The school's all-time rushing record belongs to Carlester Crumpler, who rushed for 2,889 yards in three seasons (1971-73).

ECU AND HOMECOMING: Miami-Florida is without a doubt the most notable Homecoming opponent in ECU's history.

The Hurricanes, 1983 national champions, were ranked in several pre-season Top-20 polls, and come into Greenville fresh off an impressive 45-10 victory over Boston College in Foxboro, Mass.

The Pirates sport an impressive 20-5 record in Homecoming games since 1960, with their last defeat coming in 1970 when Southern Illinois handed ECU a 14-12 defeat. The current streak is at 14 straight Homecoming victories. ECU's five Homecoming losses since 1960 are as follows:

- 1966: Richmond 28-16
- 1967: The Citadel 21-19
- 1968: Tampa 28-21
- 1969: Davidson 42-27
- 1970: Southern Illinois 14-12

All five Homecoming losses since 1960 were consecutive defeats. This will be only the second time ECU plays host to a Florida school for Homecoming. Tampa no longer plays collegiate football.

ECU-MIAMI (FLA.): This young series has the Pirates on the short side as Miami-Florida holds a 3-0 series edge.

The last time the two teams met was in 1983 when the Hurricanes defeated the Pirates by a slim 12-7 margin on their way to an 11-1 record, Orange Bowl victory over Nebraska and national championship. That 1983 season ranks as most successful in Miami football history, and ironically ECU's 8-3 1983 record also ranks as one of the school's most successful since becoming a major independent in 1977.

This will be only the second time Miami-Florida has ever visited Greenville, NC, and Ficklen. The 1981 season saw the Hurricanes, led by quarterback Jim Kelley, now with the USFL's New Jersey Generals, beat the Pirates 31-6. At that time, the Hurricanes were also coached by Howard Schnellenberger.

Below is the series breakdown: 1980: Miami-Florida 23, ECU 10
1981: Miami-Florida 31, ECU 6
1983: Miami-Florida 12, ECU 7
That 1983 game saw the Pirates come within one pass of upsetting the No. 5 ranked Hurricanes but quarterback Kevin Ingram's pass to split end Stefan Adams at the goal line was knocked loose by ECU tight end Norwood Vann as time expired.

ECU VERSUS THE SUNSHINE STATE: This will be the sixth straight season the Pirates will play a Division-IA team from the state of Florida, and the Pirates are still looking for victory No. 1.

Entering Saturday's game against Miami-Florida, the Pirates have found themselves on the short side of the score against Sunshine State schools eight times since 1980, the first season ECU began upgrading its schedule to compete with the other Southern Independents.

The Pirates are 0-3 vs the Hurricanes of Miami-Florida, 0-1 vs the Gators of Florida and 0-4 vs the Seminoles of Florida State. The Pirates were outscored 214 to 87 in the four-game Florida State series, 24-17 in the one game Florida series and 66-23 in the Miami-Florida series. As a whole, the three Florida schools have outscored ECU 304 to 127, an average of 38 points per game to ECU's 16.

Tampa is the only other Florida school to appear on ECU's all-time opponent list, with that six-game series taking place from 1953-55, 1963, 1968 and 1971. Tampa, which no longer plays college football, held a 5-1 series advantage.

KEVIN K.K. WALKER: Senior cornerback Kevin Walker has enjoyed a season's worth of success in just four games.

The 5-11, 185-pound Greensboro, NC native has now picked off five opponent passes in four games, with two coming against Southwest Texas State. Also he has blocked two punts, returning one 43 yards for a touchdown against Southwest Texas State. His blocked punt against Temple set up ECU's only touchdown.

Walker was fourth in the nation in interceptions entering the Temple game with his 1.33 average, and is now averaging 1.25 a game through four games. Walker is also just five interceptions shy of the single season ECU record of 10, held by Jim Bolding during the 1975 season. Walker also owns 14 career interceptions, which leaves him eight shy of Bolding's career record of 22, which he achieved from 1973 through 1976. Walker also shares with seven others the ECU single-game record of three interceptions, which he accomplished against Temple in 1983.

LOOKING LIKE 1983: Through three games of the 1985 college football season it is looking a lot like 1983 for the Miami Hurricanes.

That 1983 national championship season saw the Hurricanes open with a disappointing 28-3 loss to Florida, then rolled to 11 straight victories, including a thrilling 31-30 win over Nebraska in the Orange Bowl. This season saw the Hurricanes drop their opener to Florida 38-23, but have since rolled to victories over Rice (48-20) and Boston College (45-10), with both games on the road. This week's game against the Pirates will be Miami's third straight road game.

Somewhere, somehow,
someone's going to pay.

McGarret Five-0 Leads IRS Football Action

By JEANNETTE ROTH

Intramural flag football continues to dominate the fall activity schedule with two teams in particular raising havoc across the men's independent division. McGarret Five-0 and the Lake Boys continue their assault as both earned overwhelming victories in last week's action.

McGarret Five-0, led by Jeff Konecke's three touchdowns and Kevin Camper's two scores, flagged Sigma Phi Epsilon 'D', 42-6. The Lake Boys drowned Tau Kappa Epsilon 'C', 64-6 with the help of Vern Holmes, who managed to single-handedly add 24 points to his squad's scoresheet. Sigma Phi Epsilon bounced back from their upsetting loss to TKE by going past Pi Kappa Phi 28-25. The 'Y team' slipped by Terminators II, 27-26 and the Untouchables blitzed Sigma Phi Epsilon 'C', 39-0.

Intramural team putt-putt continues to putt along at Greenville's Highway 33 course. In the men's residence hall division, three foursomes remain undefeated going into this week's play. Scott dorm's P.W.'s and the Golden Bears I of Belk boast 3-0 records. Guess Who, also favored in the fight for first, holds a 3-0 lead over their fellow linksters.

In the men's independent league, it looks as though the 'green jackets' may be going to The Masters who remain undefeated after two rounds. The Hole Busters are not far behind however and could come out on top of the men's independent division.

Goldenhearts 'B' and the Kappa Sigma Stardusters are leading the women's independent division with 2-0 records. Three priority teams are battling it out for the top honor as Alpha Phi, Sigma Sigma Sigma and Delta Zeta remain undefeated.

The Department of Intramural-Recreational Services facilities will be closed Saturday, October 5. This includes Memorial Gym, pool, equipment room and weight room. All the facilities will resume operation Sunday, October 6 following the regularly scheduled times.
