College Presidents Rate Universities

ECU Ranks Top 10 In South

By DOUG ROBERSON
Staff Writer

East Carolina University ranks as one of the top 10 comprehensive institutions of higher learning in the southeastern United States, according to a U.S. News & World Report survey.

ECU tied for seventh place with Rollins College, a prestigious Florida institution.

For their poll, USN&WR asked chancellors of colleges and universities to select the top five undergraduate institutions in the Southeast. The chancellors picked the top schools from a list of institutions similar to their own in size and academic offerings.

In choosing the top five institutions, the chancellors were asked to consider factors such as strength of curriculum, quality of teaching, relationship between faculty and students, and the atmosphere for learning at the school.

ECU Chancellor John Howell told the ECU News Bureau, "We've been telling people for some time that ECU was a good university. It's good to know that recognition of the institution extends beyond eastern North Carolina."

ECU was the largest comprehensive institution among the 158 considered in the southern and border states. A comprehensive institution is one that grants more than half their bachelors degrees in occupations such as business, education, technology, nursing, music and art.

The University of North Carolina at Charlotte and Appalachian State University also ranked in the top 10 in the same category. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill ranked ninth in the national university category.

Volpe

"In North Carolina, where Chapel Hill has long been the jewel in the crown, successful restructuring of the state university system brings the Charlotte campus, East Carolina and Appalachian State to the forefront," stated the article.

Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs at ECU Angelo Volpe said everyone at ECU can take pride in the survey results. "Faculty, alumni and current students deserve the credit — we're all very pleased."

According to Volpe, the survey results are a recognition of ECU's commitment to a "firm" general education foundation for all students.

"Irrespective of the students major, everyone at ECU has a strong foundation in humanities, social sciences and fine arts — basic education," he said.

The results of the survey are significant, Volpe said, because the "people polled are in academia and know what they're talking about." He added the University will use the survey results in future recruiting.

It's a kiosk. Kiosks are popular in Europe and are found on street corners on which advertisements are posted. For more details see related story below.

ECU's Kiosk Makes Debut On Campus

By BETH WHICKER
Staff Writer

East Carolina's first kiosk, a cylindrical structure common on European sidewalks on which advertisements and announcements are posted, stands between Joyner Library and Mendenhall Student Center.

The idea evolved when Rudolph Alexander, director of University Unions, sketched a kiosk he saw when traveling in Europe. "I remember seeing the kiosks in Europe and liked the design," he said. The Maintenance Shop took the design, and a kiosk (a la ECU) resulted.

"I liked the kiosk because it was attractive and didn't take up much space. The kiosk is eye-catching and, therefore, receives a lot of comments and attention," said Alexander.

"If the idea catches on, we might put more of them on campus. New kiosks would be in high traffic areas on campus. The kiosk at Mendenhall is visible to students going to Mendenhall, residence halls and parking lots. It's available to on-campus and off-campus students," Alexander said.

"The main objective to using the kiosk is to help boost attendance at university functions. I guess I want them (university activities) to be overly successful. I want a full house every time," said Alexander.

"I think another kiosk should be in front of the old library by the sidewalk. Many students walk by that area every day on their way to class," according to David Brown, SGA president at ECU.

"We need a more informed

Teachers Need Community Support

ECU News Bureau

Teaching in the public schools should be encouraged among professionals in other fields—to relieve teacher shortages and to strengthen programs, the lieutenant governor of Vermont told an audience of educators and business leaders here Friday.

Addressing an ECU Rural Education Institute conference on math and science education held at Ayden-Gritton High School, Lt. Gov. Peter Smith of Montpelier, Vt., said, "We must build bridges between business, the community and the teaching profession so that gifted practitioners can work in our classrooms even if they are not traditionally trained teachers."

In addition, Smith, the former president of a New England education consultant firm, said the state should consider using an incentive plan to reward teachers financially for superior work. He also proposed a program to allow teachers to travel between schools to share their expertise with their colleagues in other classrooms. And he encouraged the state to study a plan to link existing voice, data and telecommunications systems to carry information to schools in rural areas.

Smith said his proposals could strengthen the math and sciences curricula especially in rural areas and could help the state relieve a shortage of teachers in these fields.

The conference was part of a three-state project initiated by the Institute for Educational Leadership and funded by the Standard Oil Company (SOHIO). It has been scheduled for Sept. 27 but had to be postponed due to Hurricane Gloria. Business, industry and education representatives from 51 counties attended.

"There is simply a scarcity of teachers," Smith said. "And it is a scarcity which will increase dramatically over the next several years unless major changes occur," he said.

"We know that almost 50 percent of the existing teaching force will leave the classroom during the next 7-10 years as the post-war teacher boom comes to a halt," Smith said. Also, he said "higher aspirations for women has eroded the once reliable and high quality feminine base for the teaching profession in America" while the private sector, with better working conditions and salaries, is "gobbling qualified candidates" from math and sciences.

Included in Smith's proposal is the suggestion that the business community develop a "lend-lease" program with school districts to allow industry people to come into schools to teach subjects.

"We should create bridges into the profession of education for people who aspire to teaching at a later period in their lives," he said. He also recommended scouring communities for the gifted people, retired and senior citizens who can help in our school programs where resources are short.

As for teachers' salaries, Smith proposed creating "an incentive plan for local districts to reward teachers financially for superior work with both pay increments

Dorm Decision Delayed By Committee's Action

By ELIZABETH PAGE
Staff Writer

Further investigation by the Residence Life Committee caused a delay in the Scott dorm decision, which is whether the newly air-conditioned wing will house members of the football team or not.

According to Residence Life Committee Director Mary Fowler, the decision will be held up due to the need of further investigation in the issue. There was no hint as to the reasons for the delay, as Associate Dean of Residence Life Carolyn Fulgum declined to talk to reporters.

Members of the Residence Life Committee also declined to talk to reporters, pending further investigation in the issue.

After a meeting, the Residence Life Committee met for an executive session, which was closed. See COMMITTEE Page 3.

Thanksgiving Unique To Each Culture

By JENNIFER MYERS
Staff Writer

Turkey...food...Pilgrims...football...family...stuffing and a break from school...

All these are popular images of Thanksgiving, and people living in the United States associate food, family and football with this holiday. However, our ideas about how to celebrate Thanksgiving are only a few of many.

Thanksgiving began as a harvest festival over 2,000 years ago in honor of the abundant crops and in hopes of the more plentiful yields to come. It also marked the last big meal of the season and remains the oldest holiday celebrated in the U.S.

Thanksgiving began in 1578 with the English settlers in Newfoundland setting aside a day of thanks. Then, the Pilgrims established the day to give thanks to God for the colony's survival of the long, hard winter.

The Pilgrims' Thanksgiving was held in autumn 1621 when the crops had just been harvested and food abounded. The feast lasted three days. Later in American history, President Washington proclaimed Thanksgiving a national holiday to be celebrated by all religious groups, giving thanks.

Originally, Thanksgiving began in England with the Puritans, who had abolished Christmas because they felt it dealt with Roman Catholic beliefs to which they were opposed. Therefore, the Puritans wanted a day to replace Christmas, so the governors appointed a day in autumn, generally at the end of November, as a day of thanksgiving.

The American Indians also had their day of giving thanks. They hung three ears of corn and a gourd outside their teepees, from which the birds could eat.

This ritual was performed after a plentiful harvest, by thanking the gods for proper weather and the hope for good crops in the future. When the birds pecked at the corn and gourds, it was a sign that the gods were accepting their gift of thanks.

In Germany, Saint Martin's Festival is celebrated as a thanksgiving. The festival takes place Nov. 10 and 11 and honors St. Martin, a friend of children and patron saint of the poor and good harvests.

Feasts of geese, cranberries and new red wines will be shared with family and friends. At night, children form processions, sing and carry lanterns.

Israel, however, celebrates its Thanksgiving in September or October, with Succoth, or the Feast of the Tabernacles. Huts are built to represent the dwellings of the Jews during the 40 years of wandering after the exodus from Egypt. This commemorates the annual pilgrimage to Jerusalem, as is directed in The Bible, to give thanks for their people and for the harvest.

In Ireland, celebrants make huge bonfires in the autumn season to offer encouragement to the sun, for the days have gotten shorter, and harvest time is nearly over.

In every country, a unique Thanksgiving is held in some form, whether celebrating a plentiful harvest or giving thanks for what each has. Every festival or holiday holds a special meaning for that country or religion, as does ours.

This holiday should be remembered as a day of giving thanks for our loving family, the food we have on our table and the freedom in which to enjoy all that we have.

Ski Injuries

Health Column

I plan to go snow skiing during the holidays. What type of preparation should I do to avoid hurting myself on the slopes?

A physical conditioning program may help you gain strength and endurance, which in the long run, will benefit your skiing.

Also, make sure your ski equipment is in top shape. If you are planning to buy your equipment, invest in good boots and bindings to decrease the chance of ligament tears.

More important, plan to ski within your own ability. If you have never skied before, take a course in advance or at the slopes. Don't try to keep up with more advanced skiers — you'll be the one who ends up getting hurt. Moreover, learn how to fall correctly, because trying to catch yourself with your fingers, hands, or arms increases your chance of a break or strain. Consequently, wrist and finger fractures are among the most common types of injuries caused by skiing.

Finally, warm up before you hit the slopes by doing light aerobic exercise and stretching.

What types of injuries or problems can occur and how can I prevent them?

- Hypothermia — drink lots of water and juice; wear ski suits or woolen clothing.
- Frostbite — wear a hood or hat and water-proof gloves.

• Fatigue — don't tire yourself out; rest when you feel like you're getting weak or tired. Fatigue can slow your reaction time and increase your chance of injury.

• Glare — wear sunglasses. Be especially careful if you ski at twilight; your depth perception may not be as good as it was during the day and you could misjudge distances or fail to see falls or mounds.

• Chairlift injuries — don't lean over too far in the seat and get out of the chair correctly to avoid unnecessary injuries.

• Remember to use the ski etiquette on your runs downhill. Also, be on the lookout for chair turns and debris that might be lying on the slope. Afterward, take a warm bath and do some stretching exercises to relax your muscles.

Merry Christmas Object Of Show

By LANCE SEARL
Staff Writer

Most children dream of having a "merry Christmas." For some, however, the dreams can turn to nightmares, festered by lack of money and an unfortunate homelife.

That may all change due to the efforts of the library staff at Joyner Library. Last Saturday at Fletcher Auditorium, the staff put on their third annual variety show to raise money for the Pitt County Foster Children Christmas Fund.

According to Bette Carr, a librarian at Joyner, many people from the community donated not only their money but also their time, talent and work for the show.

"Putting on a show like this takes a lot out of you," Carr said. "But working for such a good cause makes all our efforts worth while. The more money we raise for the children, the better we feel about our work; every dollar counts."

The show included many ECU departmental acts from the School of Music and Theatre Arts. Elvis Presley impersonations, singing, dancing and dramatic and comic routines were all part of the festivities. The show also had local sponsors who donated door prizes to lucky recipients in attendance.

As for next year, the staff plans to move the show from Fletcher to a bigger auditorium. "The more tickets we can sell, the more money we can make, the more gifts we can buy, the more 'Merry Christmas' there will be," Carr said.

Tickets were at least $2, and many people donated more. As of 2 p.m. Monday, the show has raised more than $700 for Pitt County foster children.

Anyone interested in donating to this fund, which is tax deductible, can do so at Joyner's main circulation desk. After Dec. 4, contact Becky Starkey at 758-2167 or go to the Social Services Office on 1901 West Fifth Street.

Tickets for next year's show go on sale on Nov. 1, 1986.

Professional Latitude Needed

and greater professional latitude in the classroom."

"We simply must address the forces which discourage gifted professionals from staying in the classroom. They include financial as well as motivational and professional disincentives," he said.

To create additional resources especially in rural areas, he proposed a study of the state's existing voice, data and telecommunications capacity in both the public and private sectors. Citing Vermont as a state where such a study is being made, he said, "Our goal is to assess the current combined capacity of our communications system and its potential to aid the educational system in our rural areas as well as their economic development."

With a linking telecommunications system "you would then have the ability to connect the resources of your universities and business communities with distant parts of the state," he said.

Finally, Smith proposed a teacher-assistance program similar to one already begun in Vermont called "Teachers Helping Teachers." Under the program, teachers share their needs and abilities through an in-service catalog. "There is a process for release time so that teachers can be invited between school and/or districts to help other teachers in their areas of expertise," he said.

"None of these solutions are neat and tidy," said Smith. "But I do not believe that there is a neat and tidy answer to this problem."

These proposals are "offered more to suggest directions in which you all might direct your thinking than in the belief that they are the absolute way North Carolina ought to go," he said. "But they suggest what I believe is a reality for all of us."

Lieutenant Governor since 1982, Smith holds a Doctor of Education degree from Harvard and before entering politics was president of a New England education consultant firm. He was recognized in 1984 as Esquire magazine's "Best of the New Generation."

student body. It is difficult for commuter students to keep up with campus events," said Brown.

"ECU needs larger bulletin boards on campus. We seriously need some boards where anyone can post an advertisement or message. Material on the kiosk has to be approved before it is posted," Brown said.

"In Chapel Hill there are large wooden bulletin boards, on which organizations paint their announcements. ECU needs something similar to this," Brown said. "I think it would be a fantastic idea if we could get bulletin boards at local apartment complexes to assist commuters in keeping up with campus events."

to reporters, as well as to Scott's president Hosea Cotten and Fleming president Jody Jameson.

Although the Fleming issue reportedly was never brought up in the closed session, Cotten said, "whatever happens to Scott will control what happens to Fleming."

According to Cotten, when he and Jameson asked for figures on the possibility of air conditioning

Bell as opposed to air conditioning Scott, there were no figures available. The Residence Life Committee said in an earlier session that it was cheaper to air condition the south wing of Scott dorm than any other dorm on campus.

No date has been set as to when the Committee will meet again to make a final decision concerning either of the two issues.

IRS Asked To Catch Student Defaulters

WASHINGTON, DC (CPS)—The Internal Revenue Service, recently signed up to help corral students who default on their student loans, may now get in the business of deciding if students are telling the truth on their aid applications.

To "catch errors" on student aid applications, the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) said last week it will ask Congress to give federal agencies access to IRS records.

Claiming student loans have the "highest error rate" of any federal benefit program, OMB spokesman Steve Tupper says the plan could save the government at least $1 billion.

But some student aid officials say the OMB insists on overestimating the error rate.

"There seems to be an attitude that there are a whole bunch of people out there cheating," says Dallas Martin, head of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

"But our experience has been that people are very, very honest," he notes.

Tupper is quick to say he doesn't believe students are "cheating," though he does call the measure "very necessary," and believes Martin "is very wrong."

Nineteen percent of all Pell Grant recipients, for example, are overpaid because of informational errors on the applications, Tupper maintains.

By verifying family income information with the IRS, institutions can make sure "everyone receives just the right amount of money they're entitled to," he adds.

Thanksgiving

Turkeys & Chow Mein

Thanksgiving is swiftly approaching and all across the land the righteous and the prosperous are anticipating a feast that is bound to manifest itself in as many forms as there are dietary preferences. Somewhere, I am certain, militant vegetarians are conspiring to loose a flock of gobblers from their stockades on an unsuspecting township. The fatted fowls will doubtless carry encircled drumsticks on flags with slashes drawn through them in their beaks and their liberators will issue an emancipation proclamation of sorts to the press after the birds are safely in hiding. After that, of course, they will settle down to a succulent feast of tofu casserole and miso soup.

In other places people will surely be hunkering down to pizza and beer in front of their T.V. sets and psyching themselves for a prolonged orgy of holiday football. Still other folks will decide to eat shrimp chow mein and tortilla chips and forget the whole thing. Hey, let Americans be Americans. We're a strange land made up of strange people. The Pilgrims, after all, did not come here to be like everybody who they left behind. They came here to break new ground and that is precisely what they did.

When they organized the first Thanksgiving feast, which lasted for three days, the purpose was to do more than make merry and thank God for a bountiful harvest. The Pilgrims also wanted to thank their new found friends the Indians, who could have been enemies but weren't, for their assistance in helping them to gain a toehold in the new world. And in a broader sense, they wanted to thank Providence for the fulfillment of their vision of founding a religious community that would serve as an example to all the world of how human beings should live together.

This is a dream that has not died in America. We have long thought of ourselves as a special people who had something to teach the world. And this has particularly been true since WWII. In fact, it has been this very theme that many presidents have sounded upon in order to strike a responsive chord with the people of our nation. That it served most recently as the basis of a campaign speech which helped elect Ronald Reagan to the White House is a testament to the fact that Americans still believe that we are a special people with something unique to teach the world.

This Thanksgiving maybe we ought to ponder what it is that we have to be thankful for and to offer the world as a nation. President Reagan and Secretary General Mikhail Gorbachev recently met in Geneva and promised that they would make a commitment to meeting regularly and working toward an end to the arms race, though they achieved no tangible arms control agreements. Clearly that is something that we can appreciate and there is nothing better that we can give the world in the present epoch than a reprieve from nuclear holocaust. We have also seen people in our country demonstrate their goodwill and generosity by sending millions of dollars in food, development aid and medical supplies to the famine victims in Africa. In fact, one of the best things to happen in recent memory was the Live Aid concert organized by rock musician Bob Geldorf to help feed the hungry. (Because of his efforts on behalf of hunger victims Geldorf became the first Rock musician ever to be nominated for a Nobel Peace Prize.) The Farm Aid concert, organized by country music legend Willy Nelson, was another initiative undertaken by entertainers to help out a group of people who are in trouble. In this case it was farmers. Small wonder then that many young people are once again looking to artists and rock stars for moral inspiration and insight.

It's not surprising then that the current era of involvement and the fervor to do something about the world's problems has caught hold among the young. College campuses have gotten involved with hunger issues and marching for peace, among other things. There is a renewed spirit in the air — the feeling that a few people with the right ideas can make a difference. Perhaps that, in the final analysis, is the best thing that we have going for us as a nation. For that is something that people all over the world hope is true and America has in the past often represented a vindication of a tentative faith in the power of people with ideas.

Jesus Was Authentic Lord Of All

After reading Tuesday's letter to the editor that criticized the anti-abortion piece, I was compelled to write this letter. I do not want to address the issue of abortion. The more significant issue is that of "religion". Mindy Machanic made some good points, but I feel her view toward Christianity is misconceived (as is by many others). She stated that people have the right to believe what they want to believe. This is true to a point, but one must be willing to accept the possible consequences of their belief. I would like to present some supportive facts-evidence for Christianity in hopes of clearing up some of these misconceptions and showing that it is based on more than opinion.

The center of Christianity is the person of Jesus Christ. Jesus made many claims. There is a misconception that Jesus' claims are similar to other religion's leaders. This is not the case. In major religions of the world, the teachings — not the teacher — are all-important. Confucianism is a set of teachings, Islam is the revelation of Allah, with Mohammed being the prophet, and Buddhism emphasizes the principles of the Buddha and not Buddha himself. This is especially true of Hinduism, where there is no historical founder.

What Jesus taught is not the important aspect of Christianity, but what is important is who Jesus was. Christ is the only religious leader who has ever claimed to have deity and the only individual who has convinced a great portion of the world that He is God. Was He God incarnate? Is He the only way a person can reach God? This was the claim He made for Himself. If He is God as He claimed, we must believe in Him, and if He is not, then we should have nothing to do with Him. Jesus is either Lord of all, or not Lord of all.

The claims Christ made are recorded in the Bible. Christianity teaches that the Bible is the revealed word of God. Even though it was written by men, the ultimate author was God Almighty. This is the claim the Bible makes for itself. I do not have room to present in depth evidence that the Bible is valid and reliable. I can only touch on it.

The Bible has been read by more people and written in more languages than any other book. Unlike mythological writings, the Christian Greek scriptures are built around people who actually lived and places that exist even to this day.

It was written by more than forty authors from all walks of life, was written on three different continents, and was written over a 1500 year span.

One thing that makes the Bible so unique is its unity. The authors of the various books wrote in different places, they came from different backgrounds. The contents deal with controversial subjects. But the Bible is unity. From beginning to end is the unfolding story of God's plan of salvation for mankind. This salvation is through the person of Jesus Christ.

The historical reliability of the Scripture should be tested by the same criteria that all historical documents are tested. Upon testing, the evidence reveals that the Bible is trustworthy and historically reliable in its witness about Jesus.

Christianity stands or falls on the resurrection of Jesus Christ (1 Corinthians 15:12-19). If Christ did not come back from the dead, then the Christian faith tumbles. The sign of resurrection was sent to set Jesus apart from anyone else who ever lived, and it would designate Him as the Son of God (Roman 1:4).

All but four of the major religions are based on mere philosophical propositions. Of the four that are based on personalities rather than a philosophical system, only Christianity claims an empty tomb for its founder. The resurrection is either the greatest miracle or the greatest delusion which history records. After examining the evidence for the resurrection from a judicial perspective, Lord Durling, former Chief of Justice of England concluded that "There exists such overwhelming evidence, positive and negative, factual and circumstantial, that no intellectual jury in the world could fail to bring in a verdict that the resurrection story is true."

If I were to ask you if you would like to know God in a personal way, what would be your response? If yes, then Christianity offers just that. How? Not by going to church every Sunday, or by being a good person, or by being Baptist, Catholic, or Protestant even. It's through a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. By placing your trust and faith in the person of Jesus Christ and what He did on the cross 2,000 years ago, and acknowledging that He died in your place to pay the penalty for your sin is the only way a person can know a personal relationship with God and experience His plan for your life.

I encourage each of you to look at the claims of Christ for yourself. It is a choice each individual must make. Christianity relies on the person of Jesus Christ. If He is not who He claimed to be, then He can be ignored, but, if His claims are true, to ignore Him would mean the loss of eternal salvation.

Problems In Philippines Require New Policies

By STEPHEN R. SHALOM
In These Times

As the crisis in the Philippines intensifies, the controversy over how best to respond to that crisis grows sharper. But both sides of the intra-governmental debate share basic premises that are antithetical both to peace and to the well-being of the Philippine people.

The still-dominant view, backed by Reagan personally and the right-wing ideologues in his administration, is that Ferdinand Marcos, who has ruled the Philippines with an iron hand for 13 years, should be kept in power — though pressure may be necessary to get him to enact reforms. Marcos has favored the two huge military bases in the country, Subic and Clark, has protected American capital and has been hostile to the left. These credentials have convinced Reagan to support Marcos until the end.

The alternative view, increasingly championed by some in the State Department and many in Congress, is that Marcos is a liability. His authoritarian rule and corruption have devastated the economy, alienated even the church and much of the business class and converted a communist insurgency of minor dimensions into a powerful force active in all of the country's 73 provinces and capable — according to U.S. officials — of fighting the government to a standstill in as little as three years. Too close an identification of Marcos with Washington, the argument goes, might lead to the loss of U.S. interests in the country when Marcos falls.

Accordingly, measures are needed to dissociate the U.S. from the Philippine dictator — a change in the mix of military and economic aid or even calls for Marcos to step down.

Although the two views differ in their perception of Marcos, their backers have the same goals. As liberal Rep. Steven Solarz (D-NM) explained on the floor of the House, he shares the conservative view of the strategic importance of the U.S. bases in the Philippines and the need to protect them; he differs only on the question of how these assets might best be preserved.

But the bases shouldn't be retained at all. The bases do not protect Filipinos from foreign attack, for as every U.S. official for 40 years has acknowledged, the Philippines does not face a credible external threat. Indeed, the presence of the bases may well be a magnet for attack, for any rational Soviet military planner would surely want to target the important U.S. facilities located at Clark and Subic.

If the bases do not protect the Philippines, do they protect the U.S., or otherwise promote world peace? Historically, the bases have served as springboards from which Washington has been able to project power in the Pacific. From these bases, Washington was able to supply Dien Bien Phu, airlift arms to rebels in Indonesia and deploy forces in the Quemoy-Matsu area. More importantly, during the Vietnam war, the bases provided the principal logistical support for the U.S. Air Force and were the chief supply and repair depot for the Seventh Fleet. Today, the bases play an even broader role, for they are an essential part of a nexus that allows the U.S. to project military force all the way from Korea to the Arabian Sea. An aggressive and interventionist foreign policy needs the Philippine bases; a non-interventionist one does not.

U.S. officials point to the Soviet access to military facilities at Cam Ranh Bay in Vietnam and argue that Clark and Subic are needed to counter this Soviet presence. But one should be skeptical of a justification for U.S. bases that materializes 30 years after the U.S. bases have been established. And one might plausibly conclude that the Soviet bases in Vietnam are more a partial attempt to balance the U.S. bases in the Philippines than the other way around. Certainly Clark and Subic are vastly more important facilities than Cam Ranh Bay. In any event, if the Soviets are a genuine concern, the U.S. government should welcome the call of the Philippine Anti-Bases Coalition for the elimination of all foreign bases from the Western Pacific.

Before martial law in 1972, the Philippines had the formal trappings of democracy, with regular elections, a congress and independent judiciary. But the elections pitted one elite party against another. The parties did not differ in ideology but shared a commitment to the status quo; indeed, politicians routinely switched from one party to the other. Elections reflected not the popular will but the results of massive vote-buying, fraud and widespread violence. The human costs of this political system were immense; abysmal real wages were falling and income distribution — already among the worst in the world — was growing even more skewed. Popular pressure, organized by the left, began to be felt in the early '70s. But then Marcos declared martial law, crushing all dissent.

To return to the elite politics of the '50s and '60s will not meet the desperate needs of Filipinos. Only a politics that is democratic economically and socially can offer hope to the urban poor or the landless peasants — though this will inevitably challenge Washington's military and economic interests. Is such an option possible? Vigorous debate on post-Marcos alternatives is taking place on the Philippine left. Father Balweg, a commander with the communist New People's Army, has recently called for a multi-party socialist system. The outcome of this debate cannot be predicted, but surely it is a matter for Filipinos to determine for themselves. It will certainly not be aided by the counterinsurgency efforts that Reagan favors.

Unfortunately, no one in Washington challenges the U.S. right to intervene in the Philippines. Protecting "Western interests" is the goal shared by all factions in the government. Reagan would do it in the context of toughing it out with Marcos; Solarz would prefer to return to the elite pseudo-democracy of the past.

It is important to explain to Americans that this is a false choice. With or without Marcos, we don't want to preserve the bases or even move them elsewhere. And we don't want the U.S. to intervene in the Philippines to smash the left, whether in collaboration with Marcos or with some new champion of the status quo.

Baryshnikov, Hines In Political Drama

By CAPPY IVEY
Staff Writer

In the Arctic Circle, day and night are each theoretically six months long, producing one 24-hour period of daylight and one 24-hour night each year. The phenomenon is commonly called "Midnight Sun," but is also referred to as "White Night." The movie White Nights is a phenomenon in itself, bringing together two great dancers to create a spectacular event.

White Nights is the story of Kolya Radchenko, played by Mikhail Baryshnikov, a ballet dancer who defected from Russia. On his return from Tokyo, his plane is forced into an emergency landing at a Soviet military air base in Siberia.

Rodchenko, sustaining minor injuries, is considered a criminal in the Soviet Union because of his defection, and he is forced to remain in the country.

Gregory Hines portrays Raymond Greenwood, an American tap dancer who fled to Russia in a protest against America's involvement in Vietnam. He and his wife, Darya (Isabella Rossellini), are assigned to convince Kolya to remain in Russia and dance.

Adventure, romance, and intrigue result as Kolya attempts to flee the Soviet Union again. Pressure from the KGB sparks a conflict between Kolya and Raymond, but it eventually leads to an everlasting friendship and a daring escape, which gives Kolya, Raymond and Darya their freedom.

The movie is sporadically reminiscent of Baryshnikov's life. He is considered by many to be one of the greatest of modern dancers and proves this in the film. Baryshnikov has had cameo roles in several films, but White Nights is his first true acting role. He definitely deserves recognition as both a dancer and as an actor.

Gregory Hines has several films to his credit; two of the most noted are History of the World—Part I and Cotton Club. He has been nominated for a Tony Award for his work on Broadway and has contributed to the new awareness of tap dance among young people today.

New to the American screen is Isabella Rossellini, a veteran of Italian films but perhaps most recognized for her modeling career. She is the daughter of Ingmar Bergman, yet may lack her mother's great talent. Her performance is overshadowed by the dance sequences.

The movie not only has a great plot, but it can boast of fantastic dance routines, as can be expected with the cast it carries. Baryshnikov brings to the stage his fine talent. His movements often resemble those of a gymnast; he leaps about the stage with the grace and professionalism of a well-trained performer. Hines needs no music and provides sheer entertainment for anyone watching.

When the two join forces for a jazz-ballet combo routine, the show's energy and magic soars. Each conveys his own style to present a brilliant spectacle.

The movie White Nights is a thoroughly enjoyable event. Baryshnikov and Hines combine to perform some of the best dancing captured on film. The director, Taylor Hackford, has definitely added a hit to his list, which includes An Officer and a Gentleman and Against All Odds. White Nights should be a box-office smash and should be seen by everyone.

Mikhail Baryshnikov and Gregory Hines star in Columbia Pictures' White Nights, a story of international adventure, suspense and romance. Directed by Taylor Hackford, the film also stars Isabella Rossellini, Geraldine Page, Helen Mirren and Jerzy Skolimowski.

Additional traditional foods to go with the turkey and stuffing:

Greenbean bean supreme.

- 2 tablespoons margarine
- 1 medium chopped onion
- 1 tablespoon parsley

- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- one-half teaspoon grated or finely chopped lemon peel
- 1 large package frozen french style green beans
- one-half cup grated cheddar cheese

Brown the margarine, onion and parsley over medium heat. Stir in everyone to the best they have ever eaten.

Pumpkin Pie

Preheat oven to 375 degrees and bake on a cookie sheet 70 minutes. Purchase a deep dish, 9-inch pie shell.

Combine the ingredients in the order given:

Roast Stuffed Turkey

- 1 6-8 lb turkey
- 1 large yellow onion, chopped
- 1-3 cups chopped celery (4-6 stalks)
- 12 pieces of wheat or oat bread, toasted and cubed
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, or dried parsley
- three-fourths teaspoon salt
- one-half teaspoon marjoram
- one-half teaspoon thyme
- one-fourth teaspoon pepper
- one-half cup broth from cooked giblets, or one-half cup chicken broth, instant
- 3 tablespoons shortening

Thaw the turkey according to package directions, or better yet, purchase a fresh one at the supermarket. Remove the giblets from the cavity and simmer them in water for a few hours. In a large frying pan, melt the shortening over medium heat and add the onion and celery. Stir and cook until tender, about 15 minutes. To the toasted bread cubes, add in a large bowl all the spices, tossing to mix well. All the above may be done a day ahead of cooking time.

On the day of the feast, preheat oven to 325 degrees, grease a shallow baking pan large enough for the turkey and bring turkey to room temperature.

Toss the vegetables together with the bread cubes and spices and add the half cup broth to moisten. Lightly stuff the turkey in both the wish bone cavity and the large cavity. Close the openings by overlapping the skin if possible. Pop into the preheated oven for approximately 20 minutes per pound, making sure you have covered with aluminum foil without touching the bird.

Remove the foil to check for doneness by pressing the thick part of the drumstick between fingers or by moving the drumstick up and down — it should move easily or twist out of joint.

the flour, mixing until smooth. Add the salt, lemon peel and the green beans. Mix well.

Turn into a casserole dish; add cheese to the top; cover and bake in a 350 degree oven for about 30 minutes. Delicious...

Cranberries are a wonderful accompaniment to turkey. Purchase them whole, frozen or canned at your favorite supermarket.

Dessert cannot be left out on this important day. Fix a pumpkin pie in no time at all and treat

Brown the turkey for 20 minutes or until golden by basting with the pan drippings every five minutes after returning to the oven.

The ECU women ousted UNC-C 64-38, winning 11 of 12 events including the one- and three-meter diving.

In the 200 medley relay, the team of Lori Livingston, Susan Wentink, Jill Gorenflo and Jenni Pierson took first with a time of 1:57.6.

Scotia Miller's first-place time of 11:11.6 in the 1,000 freestyle gave her an 11-second advantage over teammate Patricia Grand.

In the 200 freestyle, Susan Augustus beat out another Blue swimmer, Nancy Ludwig, 2:04.3 to 2:05.1 respectively.

Pierson nabbed first in the 50 freestyle with a 26.6-second time.

Just .02 seconds separated first from second in the 200 individual medley, with Jill Gorenflo topping Ellen McPherson's 2:22.07.

The ECU basketball team opened its '85-86 season in grand style last night with a 69-62 defeat of the Campbell Camels.

Although early Pirate shots were not finding the range, a tenacious defense kept ECU in command.

"Our defense was pretty dog-gone good," coach Charlie Harrison said after the game. "We didn't get beat defensively. For the most part, we kept them outside."

"It (the win) wasn't very pretty," Harrison added, "but I'm really pleased with the way we played."

The Pirates, who were led by Marchell Henry's 21 points, took some time before getting on track offensively. A Henry free throw with 17:07 left in the first period, gave ECU its first point as they trailed 6-1. However, the Bucs managed to outscore Campbell 9-4 over the next five minutes to tie the game, 10-10.

Al Clark's three-point play with 10:47 remaining in the opening period gave the Bucs a 13-12 lead that they never relinquished. After a pair of Curt Vanderhorst free throws with 10:16 remaining, the Pirate performed well, but didn't capitalize on certain situations.

"We were struggling a bit in the first half. At one time we had four freshmen in the game..." Harrison remarked. "We had some problems with our offensive execution. We were awfully impatient and didn't take advantage of some opportunities."

At the half, the 3,900 fans saw the infamous Bud Light Daredevils put on a fine display of dunking. The Daredevils displayed their gymnastic ability with various flips, tumbles and flying dunks. They will be touring other North Carolina schools like UNC, N.C. State and Wake Forest.

The Pirates came out in the second half where they had left off in the first. With the Camels in a full-court pressing defense, Scott Hardy broke the pressure and fed Henry at the foul line for a 15-foot jumper. This gave ECU a 32-25 lead with 17:59 left to play.

Campbell retaliated by scoring the next six points, cutting the Pirate lead to 32-31 with 16:42 re-defense came alive as the 3,900 fans got vocal. From this point on, ECU built as much as a six-point lead (27-21, with 2:58 left), before going into the locker room with a 27-23 advantage.

Swimmers Topple UNC-C; Look To Navy

By DAVID MCGINNESS
Sports Editor

The ECU tankers dispatched of intrastate rival UNC-Charlotte last Saturday, winning both meets handily against the hosting Forty-Niners.

The ECU women ousted UNC-C 64-38, winning 11 of 12 events including the one- and three-meter diving.

In the 200 medley relay, the team of Lori Livingston, Susie Wentink, Jill Gorenflo and Jenni Pierson took first with a time of 1:57.6.

Scotia Miller's first-place time of 11:11.6 in the 1,000 freestyle gave her an 11-second advantage over teammate Patricia Grand.

In the 200 freestyle, Susan Augustus beat out another Buc swimmer, Nancy Ludwig, 2:04.3 to 2:05.1 respectively.

Pierson nabbed first in the 50 freestyle with a 26.6-second time. Just .02 seconds separated first from second in the 200 individual medley, with Jill Gorenflo topping Ellen McPherson's 2:22.07.

ECU swept the women's one-meter diving. Sherry Campbell took first with 247 points. Denise Poff was second with 225 and Becky Kerber third with 196.

Gorenflo won again in the 100 butterfly with a 1:04.0. Ludwig was close behind in second, losing by only .4 seconds.

Pirate women Pierson and Grand fell to their UNC-C opponents in the 100 freestyle. Pierson took second with a 57.2, and Grand was third with a 60.3.

Caycee Poust won in the 100 backstroke, topping fellow Lady Buc Livingston 1:03.8 to 1:05.0.

ECU one-two'd UNC-C in the 500 freestyle also, Scotia Miller winning with a 5:30.5 over Augustus' 5:35.3.

In the three-meter diving it was all ECU once again. Campbell, Poff and Kerber were again one, two, and three with scores of 245, 220 and 202 respectively.

Wentink took the 100 backstroke by 4.8 seconds, topping teammate Jennie Halstead's time of 1:15.6.

Finally, in the 200 freestyle relay, ECU's team of Miller, Augustus, Wilson and Poust was first with a 1:49.3 time.

The UNC-C men did not find ECU any easier than their women, losing by a 42-71 margin.

David Killen was nearly 40 seconds ahead of teammate Eric Hawkins with his first-place time of 10:09.2 in the 1000 freestyle.

Kevin Hidalgo won in the 200 freestyle in 1:57.5.

butterfly with a 54.4, dawning teammate Brown by 1.1 seconds.

Killen was forced to take second in the 100 freestyle with a time of 49.8, followed by Ronald Flemming in third with a 50.6.

Bruce Brockschmidt was first in the 100 backstroke with a time of 55.1. Stratton Smith took Durkin took first with 274.3 points, and Stevens nabbed third with 199.6.

Flemming led the Bucs to a win in the 100 breast stroke with a 1:01.9. Lee Hicks was third, just 2.4 seconds out of first place.

Finally, in the 200 freestyle relay, the team of Brockschmidt, Cook, Killen and S. Smith took first with a time of 1:33.2.

Swimming against UNC-Charlotte served as something of a break for the Buc swimmers. UNC-C is a young team and the Pirates' overall superiority allowed them to make the contest a "fun meet."

"This was a good chance to relieve some of the pressure on the kids," said coach Rick Kobe. "We swam everybody in different events just to see how they would do. They might not get to swim these events (which are not their specialties) again in competition."

The Pirates' following meet will be against the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

Navy is one of the strongest teams on the Bucs' schedule, a team that beat the Pirate men by only three points in last year's contest. The Navy men are ranked in the top 10 on the East Coast, and will be looking to maintain their streak against the Pirates. But the Buc men are psyched for this one, according to one Pirate swimmer.

"If there's one meet that I really want, it's Navy," said senior Buc swimmer Andy Cook.

The navy women are no slouches either, but the Lady Tankers have edged them out the last four years in a row.

"The Navy girls are tough," said Kobe. "We have won the last four meets, but it has always come down to the last relay."

The meet will begin on Fri. Dec. 6 at 4 p.m. in Annapolis. On the following Sunday, the women will be back in Minges Natatorium to host the University of New Hampshire.

Jeff Brown took second in the 50 freestyle in 22.6 seconds.

Al Smith was second and Richard Wells third in the 200 individual medley. Their times were 2:09.4 and 2:13.4 respectively.

In the one-meter diving, Luke Durkin took first with 264 points. Greg Stevens was third with 211. Hidalgo won again in the 100 third with a 59.8.

Andy Cook and Patrick Brennan battled it out in the 500 freestyle, with Cook emerging the victor by .4 seconds over Brennan's 4:57.6 time. Wells was far back in third with a 5:16.0.

In the three-meter diving, the Pirate men repeated their performance in the one-meter event.

Pirates Skid In Season Opening Tourney

By TIM CHANDLER
Sports Writer

The Lady Pirate basketball team opened up its season this weekend with three games on the road in Tennessee. The women came out of the road trip with a 1-2 record, and a consolation trophy from the Tennessee Tech Tournament.

On Friday, the Lady Pirates opened up in the Tennessee Tech Tournament against the host team. Although the women led by as many as 19 points in the second half, they were unable to hold on as they dropped a 75-73 decision.

"We made some careless mistakes (turnovers) and they capitalized," said Sylvia Bragg of the Lady Pirates' second-half performance. "We learned a lot from that game."

About 2,000 fans attended the Lady Pirate contest and, according to Coach Manwaring, that made a difference. "A lot of our younger players have never had the opportunity to play in front of so many and took a 47-34 lead at the half. They ended up shooting less than 50 percent for the game as they made 31 out of 63 shots from the floor.

Leading the scoring for the Lady Pirates was Lorraine Foster with 19 points, followed by Lisa Squirewell with 18. Other players scoring in double figures were Delphine Mabry, with 14, and Sylvia Bragg, with 12. Rounding out the Lady Bucs' point totals were Alma Bethea, with 6, and Monique Pompili, who chipped in four. The leading rebounder for the game was Foster, who pulled down eight boards. Bragg handed out four assists from her guard position.

In the consolation game Saturday, the Lady Pirates faced Central Michigan. The Lady Bucs took advantage of their 60-percent shooting from the floor to hand Central Michigan a 77-71 defeat.

Leading the way for the women was Squirewell, who chipped in 26 points and pulled down a team high of eight rebounds for the game. She was followed in scoring by Foster, with 22 points.

The only other double figure scorer for the women was Bethea, with 10 points. Other scorers for the Lady Bucs included Pompili and Mabry, with eight points each; Linette Tucker, who added two points, and Crystal Grier, who rounded out the Lady Pirates' scores with one point.

On Sunday, the women traveled to Knoxville, Tenn., to play the ninth-ranked Lady Volunteers. Although the Lady Pirates stayed close during the first 20 minutes, only trailing 29-25 at half time, they had shooting problems in the second half and ended up dropping a 74-56 decision.

better team."

The next competition for the Lady Pirates will be Saturday when they play the Francis Marion College team at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Coach Manwaring expects a tough game from Francis Marion, which has returned two all-American's from last year's squad and has held the title of 1982 NCAA Division-II national champions.

Last year, Francis Marion had their best record ever, finishing with a record of 26-4. They averaged 93.5 points per game, which was the highest of any team (men's or women's) in the country. They led the NAIA in winning margin, with a 30.2 advantage per game.

11:17 left in regulation.

The Pirates began to work the ball inside and increased their lead to 48-39 on a pair of Leon Bass free throws. The Bucs extended their lead to double figures (53-43) on a Hardy free throw with 5:34 remaining.

Consecutive inside baskets by Bass, coupled with the Pirates shooting 10 of 15 free throws in the last four minutes of play, were enough to give ECU a 69-62 victory and a season-opening win.

As a team, the Pirates connected on 56.4 (26-39) percent of their field goals, while the Buc defense forced a 41.3 (26-63) percentage for the visiting Camels. The Pirates went to the foul line 36 times, connecting on 25.

Vanderhorst was second for the Bucs with 17 points while Bass was third with 10. The Pirate freshmen added 14 points for ECU.

Campbell was led by junior guard John Huffstetler with 16 points. Senior guard Juan Austin added 12, while forward Williams chipped in 10.

"It was a fairly close game," Harrison said. "Bill's (Lee, Campbell coach) kids played hard, they did a nice job."

"I was pleased by the way our young kids played, I'm not afraid to use any of them," Harrison added. "They're going to get better and better as the season goes on."

The Pirates have a week off as their next game is Dec. 2 in Durham, when they battle the highly touted Duke Blue Devils.

"Our kids are looking forward to it, I'm looking forward to it," Harrison said. "They're deserving of their ranking, they've proven it in the past."
